County eyes Five Points improvement

By MATHEW PELLEGRINO
393-3669 | @SRPG_Mat
mpellegrino@srpressgazette.com

Santa Rosa County plans to fix a dangerous intersection it has talked about for years, the Five Points intersection in Pace.

County administrator Hunter Walker said the county has been considering putting another traffic light up at Berryhill Road and Chumuckla Highway and moving Berryhill Road north about 500 feet.

"The interchange does not function for current vehicular numbers, nor would it function in the future. I think it's in the level of service 'F' right now."

Roger Blaylock, Santa Rosa County engineer

The county purchased property shifting traffic away from the other points of the intersection. Santa Rosa County engineer Roger Blaylock said creating a safer intersection at Five Points has been on the front burner for the county for a number of years.

"The shifting of Berryhill is predicated on us," Blaylock said. "We anticipate this will be a safer and more efficient interchange here in Santa Rosa County (once the project is complete)."

The project already has gone out to bid, and the results of the bid should be back to the county by June.

A BETTER WAY TO BOAT

WORD ON THE STREET

Capt. John Reble with U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 01-08 in Milton, the Guardians of the Blackwater, dedicates a new marker last year outside of the Santa Rosa County Veterans' Memorial Plaza in Milton. On Saturday, the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary will kick off National Safe Boating Week along the Blackwater River.

Members of Flotilla 01-08, "Guardians of the Blackwater," and others will participate in the 9 a.m. event.

"We are planning for a big event," said John Reble, flotilla commander.

"The Blackwater Pyrates, Santa Rosa Pipe and Drums, U.S. Coast Guard Station Pensacola, U.S. Navy Sea Cadets, Knights of Columbus, law enforcement agencies, Lifeguard Ambulance and several other organizations will be there."

The day will start at 9 a.m. with the Blessing of the Fleet by Monsignor Steven Bosso, pastor of St. Rosa of Lima.

"Boaters can pass by along the Riverwalk or bring their boat on its trailer to the Riverwalk area for it to be blessed by Monsignor Bosso," Reble said. "We will also have a kids boater safety academy."

According to the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission,

How would you feel if Santa Rosa County Commissioners passed an ordinance against texting and driving?

They should definitely do it. People ought not to do it, and myself, I feel they should not talk on their cellphones while driving.

Shelia Dunn

They should pass an ordinance and make it a $500 fine. Texting and driving kills people. They need to make sure the law has a very stiff fine.

Sunday, 2:04 p.m.

Yes, I'd like to know what's going on with the fellow that killed another man in the jail a few months ago. Nothing has been said about it. I'd like to know what happened or if it's been swept under the rug. Thank you.

Sunday, 1:56 p.m.

Hey it's Milton. I wish the people coming off the south of Airport to get on U.S. Highway 90 going west would realize that coming off of north airport going west have the right of way. That is a stop sign, they don't have a yield sign. Maybe they can't read. Thank you.

Sunday, 12:12 p.m.

Yeah, this is Bobby talking about all these businesses people want in Milton. A lot of people moved to Milton and live here because it's small, slow and less crowded. But then they want all these big businesses, and the only way you can have that is to have more people. Pretty soon it's going to be like Pensacola. I say leave us alone, lock the gate and don't let anyone else in. The first thing they want to do is build us up. Leave it different and enjoy it. Thank you.

Saturday 9:03 p.m.

Hey, this is Ed. Me and my aunt would like to thank Milton High School for sending roses to the nursing home. I appreciate that, and they did too. Thank you very much.

Saturday, 5:55 p.m.

Yes, this is Sandy. I'm commenting on your Word on the Street for the 12th of May. I like this addition to the Gazette, and the question says "Do you think there is bullying in the schools?" As a volunteer for the schools here in the county, I would like to say there definitely is. But there's an aspect of it that needs to be added. The schools, the teachers and the staff at the schools are teaching the kids at the schools as well as the parents how to handle this bullying. I just wanted to let you know that the teachers and the schools also work with this, as well as the parents. That was left out. Thank you.

Friday, 10:39 p.m.

I was just riding in downtown Milton along Willing Street and I remember what the lady said the other day. She said she wished businesses would come to this area. And I would just like to say, if you would like them to come, you need to patronize them. And go do your business there, and don't go to Pensacola all the time.

I remember the day when we had to go to Pensacola if we needed something, but that's no longer the case. Let's get involved and support the historical foundation. We don't need any more places to eat. We need museums for our children and things like that. Thank you.

Friday, 8:44 a.m.

People are not spending their money in Santa Rosa County. Why do the proms from Santa Rosa County always go to Pensacola? My grandson is going to the Central High School prom and its supposed to be in downtown Pensacola somewhere. It's going to be on Saturday when it's supposed to storm and all those kids have to go over there. All the schools had it in the school gym. But surely we have country clubs or something a little closer to home for the kids to have a prom. Thank you.

Friday, 8:06 a.m.

Hi, my name is Pat. I just want to complain about the lack of interest in Santa Rosa County particularly Milton about the speeders in town. Particularly the idiots that speed through the school zones. Specifically the one individual this morning that was driving a gray Dodge Minivan. He put kids in danger, not only himself, weaving in and out of traffic. I wish they had an officer down there to monitor this because this is our children's lives at stake. Thank you.

FBI probes charitable organization

By MATHEW PELLEGRINO

393-3669 | @SRPG_Mat
mpellegrino@srpressgazette.com

The FBI was back in Santa Rosa County on Monday, but this visit involved a local charitable organization.

FBI investigators visited Children's Charitable Services, on the second floor of the building that houses Beyond the Beach Tanning Salon in Milton.

Alyssa Wozynski, who used to work for Children's Charitable Services and now works for the tanning salon, said she was not surprised by Monday's visit by the FBI.

She was downstairs at her current job when officers arrived.

"I thought, 'Oh man it's going down, they are going to get busted,'" Wozynski said.

Wozynski said when she worked at Children's Charitable Service for 4 months, she would call households and ask for donations to the non-profit. When she saw FBI investigators on the second-story balcony, she said she knew something was fishy.

John LaLiberte, another former employee with the company, said on the Press Gazette Facebook page he was a telemarketer with the company and called various states asking for donations for needy children as well. He went on to say the donations ranged from $10 to $500.

According to the Children's Charitable Services website, the organization collects donations to help children and families in the local area.

The website indicated they cover Alabama, Florida, Indiana, Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee.

The FBI declined to give out any information on the case to the Press Gazette. Calls to Children's Charitable Services indicated the number was temporarily unavailable.

As one of Santa Rosa County's most recently opened business ventures, (or adventures they like to say) Local Color, a high-end art gallery, boutique, and gift shop, brings with it a breath of fresh air and a cultural awareness that some say is nothing less than exciting.

Not since Joe Patti (The Artist) closed his Pace art gallery, which many will remember from the mid 1970s, has there been a business in this area that caters so heavily to the cultural enrichment of its people.

Housed in two buildings at 4537 Chumuckla Highway in Pace (between Pace Veterinary Clinic and B&C Nursery) Local Color has approximately 1200 square feet dedicated to the display and distribution of art and artifacts to the general public. Opened in early December, the shop has already attracted a good number of customers who appreciate the availability of art and other quality merchandise that isn't available anywhere else in the area, according to co-owners Donna Chastang and Sharon Myers-Mongue.

Friends for more than two decades, Donna and Sharon are Milton "hometown" individuals who think a lot alike, and who share a great many things in common. "We met 22 years ago barrel racing and have been best friends ever since," Sharon said. Sharon has been affiliated with the Santa Rosa County School District for more than 30 years, and Donna has a background in mental health/social work, and is currently working in a related social work agency for the State.

Donna is also a licensed Realtor with Southland Real Estate Sales, Inc. "We continue to ride horses together and in 2011 began a shared interest in growing fresh cut zinnias and sunflowers," Sharon said.

The two women agreed that creating a business together would be fun and entertaining and provide opportunities for others in the process. Deciding on what to feature in their business was the next question. It didn't take them long to figure that out.

"It had to be something we both loved," Sharon said, "and since we both enjoyed flowers and had brothers who were artists, we decided on Local Color!" They both recognized Pace did not have a place to purchase art and unique gifts and set out to create a shop where such art and gifts could be found available.

To nail down its reputation as that of a "high-end" art dealership as well as to deliver it from the "flea-market" ranks, Donna and Sharon were able to secure the services of art instructor Loren Miller, a reputable, professional artist to serve as "Artist in Residence"

Although Miller will not be in the shop at all times during business hours, he will be there meeting customers much of time. Loren will be offering art lessons to adults and youth through private and group instruction, in all different mediums such as watercolor, oils, acrylics, and others.

Miller is a fine arts graduate of Florida State University, and has already done a number of reputable works, some of which hang in the second building on the Local Color grounds dedicated exclusively to the exhibitions of oils, acrylics, and watercolors.

He can be reached through the Local Color telephone number and will be happy to make an appointment with anyone wishing to become a student or an art customer.

Hundreds of items are on display at Local Color where its various rooms are filled with fine art pieces, including hundreds of canvases and other framed artwork on display for sale.

Sharon makes an attempt to reel it all in by description. "Our shop features 'local artists' works in a variety of mediums such as watercolor and oil paintings, custom fit surfboards with commissioned art work, driftwood jewelry boxes, suspended creations, jewelry, wooden bowls, and cards made with love," she said.

There are commissioned oil pet portraits, tile art, hand knitted teems including baby clothes, wind chimes, Loren Miller, Local Color's Artist in Residence, looks forward to meeting those who wish to cultivate their artistic talent. With a baccalaureate degree in fine arts, he's ready to help and is available at the shop at random. Make an appointment to meet him at 994-3355.

Donna Chastang, co-owner of Local Color, is excited to be part of the organization that's making the fine arts more readily available to local residents. The shop is open from Noon to 6 p.m. Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, and from 11 a.m. until 6 on Saturday. They present all the fine arts.

decorative gourds, birdhouses, pottery, ornaments, glass and mental art, eclectic wall hangings, organically made body oils/soaps, candles, jellies, in-season fresh cut flowers, and more to come, she said.

Linda Koehler (oils); Joy Oxley (jewelry); PJ Hughes (photography, jewelry); Holy LHuillier (photography); Trish Kimmons (decorative gourds); Twisted Sisters (funky art); Dan Jones (oils); Erin Donohue (organic body oils, soaps); Robin White (jellies); Cathy Young (hand poured candles); and other local artists that will be displaying as activity at Local Color continues to evolve.

And their targeted market? Everyone, they say.

And they go on to suggest their value. Need to decorate your home? Need a custom designed surf board? Need a wine cork or a spoon rest? Need to get out of the doghouse? They're the place for you, they say.

The shop is open Wednesdays through Fridays from noon to 6 p.m. and on Saturdays from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. and there's plenty of parking. Their telephone number is 850-994-3355 if there are further questions concerning their terms, or service options.

The staff and management say that there's nothing like Local Color anywhere else, and that they're happy to have it that way. The only ingredient they say they don't have to make it perfect is you, the consumer. And they need your help with that.

Milton PD: Officer, deputy battered during riot

A Milton man and woman were arrested after allegedly battering a Milton police officer and a Santa Rosa County deputy when the departments were investigating a fight in Milton Friday evening.

The incident is believed to be gang-related.

According to an arrest report, 18-year-old Solomon Larkins of Milton was arrested on charges of battery on an officer and resisting an officer without violence. X'laodai Mack, 19, of Milton, who allegedly punched a Santa Rosa County deputy in the face, was charged with aggravated battery on an officer, firefighter or EMT and resisting an officer with violence.

SOLOMON LARKINS

Larkins remains lodged in the Santa Rosa County Jail on a $2,500 bond, while Mack was released after posting a $6,000 bond.

According to the report, officers responded to a fight on James Street, where about 70 to 100 people were gathered watching.

Officer Jermel Kidd questioned bystanders and learned that one of the people allegedly involved in the fight was with a group of people. Kidd later found the suspect and identified him as Larkins.

Kidd said when he asked Larkins to come talk to him, he complied and walked toward Kidd.

Larkins allegedly pushed Kidd with his shoulder and fled on foot.

When Larkins tried to jump over a guardrail during the pursuit, an officer tried to use a stun gun on him.

The sheriff's office later arrived to help Milton Police, who only had three patrolmen on duty.

As Kidd was escorting Larkins to his patrol car, he started yelling "G code, G code for life. When I get out, we are going to come up," according to the arrest report.

The report indicated "G Code" is a Milton gang composed primarily of teenagers.

As Kidd escorted Larkins to his patrol car, the report indicated an individual, later identified as Mack, was walking behind Kidd as he was escorting Larkins to his patrol car, and lunged at Kidd.

That was when Deputy Andrew Magdalany grabbed Mack's arms to keep her from harming the officer and grabbing anything from his duty belt. When Magdalany grabbed Mack, she swung around and punched the deputy in the nose.

While the deputy tried to arrest Mack, others in the area surrounded the officer. The report indicated the officer had to watch his back to make sure others would not attack him.

When Magdalany had Mack on the ground and tried to put her in handcuffs, she turned around and started punching and hitting Magdalany repeatedly, according to the report. Officers were able to get Mack under control and put her in the back of a patrol car.

Democrats announce delegates to Florida convention

Special to the Press Gazette

The Santa Rosa County Democrats have announced the results of the inaugural County Caucuses.

Elected to represent Santa Rosa County at the Florida Democratic Party Convention in Tampa June 1-3 are Susan Bleiler, Marion Parker, Margie Purkerson, Patricia Swanson, Daniel Paquette, Priestley Parker and Seegar Swanson Jr.

These delegates were elected at the county level on May 5 and will attend the Florida Democratic Party's state convention, which is the final step toward becoming a Florida delegate at the 2012 Democratic National Convention in Charlotte, N.C.

"Santa Rosa County Democrats are excited and energized heading into the 2012 election," said Deborah Nelson, chairperson of the Santa Rosa County Democrats. "We will harness the enthusiasm generated by Florida Democrats at our caucus and convention towards building one of the strongest grassroots organizations the state has ever seen so we can re-elect President (Barack) Obama, Sen. (Bill) Nelson and Democrats up and down the ticket."

Nelson said the Florida Democratic Party is committed to diversity in the delegation and has adopted goals to ensure Florida's delegates accurately reflect the electorate. More information about FDP's diversity policy is at www.fladems.com/timetoshine.

In 2012, Florida will send its largest delegation ever to the National Convention with a record 300 delegates, a majority of which will be elected in Congressional District caucuses at the state's Delegate Selection convention in Tampa.

Kenney crowned Ms. Northwest Florida

Special to the Press Gazette

Sally Kenney, a resident at UniHealth Post Acute Care of Santa Rosa, was crowned the 12th annual Ms. Northwest Florida at Sacred Heart Hospital.

This pageant, sponsored by health care organizations across the Panhandle, honors the inner beauty of the area's seniors, regardless of their physical limitations.

Kenney was accompanied by members of the UniHealth facilities activities department to Sacred Heart for the event.

Winners were chosen based on questions asked by the judges.

She was asked by the judges what was the most memorable moment in her life.

"The most memorable moment in my life was when I walked into my mother's room (as a child)," Kenney said. "She was in bed, sick, and she had a bundle by her side. I went over to look at it.

"It started to cry and that scared me, so I started to cry, too. That was the beginning of an 83-year friendship that started in tears and ended in tears when my sister, Anne Edwards, died three years ago this month."

Kenney was chosen from among 13 contestants from area skilled nursing facilities.

SALLY KENNEY

The judges included Sen. Greg Evers, APS Director Karl Martin, Pensacola Councilman Ronald Townsend, Jeff Nall from the Council on Aging and Tiffany Bates, assistant to U.S. Rep. Jeff Miller.

Kenney was awarded a $250 gift card, trophy and a bouquet of flowers.

Ask the Preacher

...a weekly column answering your questions with Biblical answers about life.

Dear Pastor Gallups,
I hear you all the time on the radio and I read many of your articles here in the Press Gazette. Is it really appropriate that you talk so much about politics and so little about the things of God? J.U. Milton

Dear J.U.,
First let me clear something up. The vast majority of my life is spent speaking directly to the "things of God." For over a quarter of a century of my life I have been in the full-time ministry. I have preached on 4 different continents and in several different countries to multiplied tens of thousands. My message is a clear presentation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the contextual teaching and preaching of the Bible.

Secondly, I do speak on political subjects quite a bit on the radio and in the newspaper. Here are my reasons why. I am a citizen of the U.S. as well as a pastor. I have a right to have political views and opinions and share them. I am blessed and honored to have two public venues in which to do that, WEBY here in Milton and this article in the Press Gazette. There are no laws, policies or rules prohibiting me from expressing those views. There are only readers and listeners who may choose to disagree or not read or listen.

Thirdly, many, many political topics are intricately interwoven with Biblical topics and specific prophecies and/or end-time events. Many people enjoy hearing or reading the opinions of a Pastor/Preacher as they relate to political/biblical topics. What I do in that arena is very unique, especially in our area. I know of no other Pastor in our area who does such a thing on a weekly basis year in and year out. I believe it offers somewhat of a service to the community of faith. There are obviously many listeners and readers who agree with my assessment, and of course - some who do not.

The bottom line to your question is this...Yes; I do believe with all of my heart that it is appropriate to do what I do. That certainly does not mean that I am right all of the time, nor do I believe that I have "all truth" on these matters. I just have opinions that I enjoy sharing and that some, at least, enjoy hearing.

WORD from page A1

It would be good, but it wouldn't be good as well. I don't feel the younger people are as responsible, but I think it should be fine for older drivers because they have more responsibility.

Phillip Williams

I would be in favor of this. I wish they would outlaw talking on cellphones while driving, and I worked 31½ years with Bell Telephone.

David McDuffie

I think it is a great idea. I see people all the time texting and not watching what they are doing.

Bill Perry

I think it would be great. Santa Rosa County could start it and the rest of the state pick it up.

Ronald Wires Jr.

I think they should. There are too many 16- to 18-year-olds out there texting and playing games while driving.

Jennifer McAlister

They should do it. People don't pay enough attention while driving.

Lei Stapleton

OUR VIEW

When did driving get so out of control?

What did society do before cellphones?

Some use them to the point they have become part of their lives.

Ironically, these phones have only been around for a short time.

Growing up, many of us tried to call someone at their home. If they didn't answer, we simply had to try again later.

Now, we have the opportunity to not only call, but text as well.

As we watch people using this new technology, we wonder, have they forgotten how to communicate?

We've actually seen two people sitting in a room together texting to each other. It happens.

In many states, it is illegal to text and drive. Many would argue that texting and driving is almost as bad as drinking and driving.

When it comes to drinking and driving, here are some alarming facts:

- One person is killed every half-hour because of drunken driving.

- Each year, approximately 16,000 people are killed in alcohol-related crashes.

- Alcohol is a factor in almost half of all traffic fatalities.

Now when it comes to driving while texting and similar "distracted driving,"

- About 6,000 deaths and 500,000 injuries are caused by distracted driving each year.

- In 2009, more than 16 percent of all fatalities involved distracted drivers.

- A phone call or text can distract a driver long enough to cause a major accident.

Studies indicate it takes most people about five seconds to answer a text. During that time, a vehicle traveling at an average speed covers a distance equal to the length of a football field, 120 yards.

The most alarming fact is, it is so easy to find drivers doing distracting things: putting on makeup, eating, fixing their hair, talking on the phone, looking down for something in the floor or other such things.

We have several accidents each day on U.S. 90 and the various side streets in Santa Rosa County. How many are caused by distracted driving?

The numbers, no matter how big or small, should be cause for concern.

It is time we all take some responsibility, because the next life we save could be a friend or a loved one.

Share your opinion on this matter. Call us here at our Speak Out line (623-5887), email us at news@srpressgazette.com or leave a comment on our Facebook page.

Professed Christian vs. Bible-believing Christian

All true Christians will thank President Obama for taking a first stand for gay marriages.

Why?

Because this points out from one of the most visible sources on the planet, one of the differences between a professed Christian and a Bible-believing Christian.

Regardless of what you personally think, the President has professed to be a Christian.

So do I, and maybe so do you?

As Americans only, we can probably agree that the United States has the need to deal with the rights of all citizens, whether married, divorced, single, crippled, elderly, imprisoned, straight, gay, male, female, white, black, red, yellow or even cross-dressed or any other split you can devise.

And, if we are real Christian Americans, we can seek to love all those social dissections. Further, we can equally be of value to help all these dissections to legally achieve a better life, better liberty and the right to the pursuit of happiness. (Love your neighbor.)

But, as Bible-believing Christians only, we do have the great commission responsibility to point out that if any of society's laws are in conflict with God's laws, then you will come under God's laws and the Bible's truth ultimately. "For the wages of sin is death," (Romans 6:23).

So, if a professed Christian, in this case President Obama, doesn't know Christian truth (or care about its effect on you), it should push you to find the truth.

Christian truth includes, "Do you not know that the unrighteous will not inherit the kingdom of God? Do not be deceived. Neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor homosexuals, nor sodomites, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners will inherit the kingdom of God," (First Corinthians 6:6).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Christians will recognize this list as mentioning some of the 10 Commandments, the primary measure of sin. Heaven comes from repenting of sin and changing directions as opposed to marrying into it.

Jim Moore
Pace

return to honor God.

Guild says thank you

The Piecemakers Quilt Guild of Milton would like to thank members of the Milton/Pace area for donations of fabric the group has been able to turn into quilts for various groups in the local community.

During recent years, the Piecemakers have donated quilted items to child care centers, the Pregnancy Resource Center, Santa Rosa Kids' House, Family Promise, Milton Volunteer Fire Department, SRC Animal Services, preschoolers at East Milton Elementary School, Sandy Ridge Home, Santa Rosa Health and Rehabilitation Center and the United Methodist Girls Home.

If you or someone you know has fabric material you would like to donate, please let us know and we will be pleased to put it to good use.

The Piecemakers meet second Mondays in the community room of the Milton Library. In addition to working on community projects, they also have classes and share techniques for their own ongoing quilting projects.

A "sit and sew" is held fourth Mondays for working on projects and enjoying one another's company.

If you are interested in joining this friendly and energetic group, we would be happy to have you attend as a guest and get more information.

For details, contact membership chairman Kathy O'Donnell at 463-4103.

Just say 'no'

Thirty-one states said "no" to same sex marriages.

Flip-flopping Obama supports it. I heard him (2008) define for Rick Warren, "Marriage is between a man and a woman. As a Christian I believe it is sacred ..."

His actions and many statements reflect favoritism toward Muslims, not Christians, apologizing for America on occasions.

When will Christian bashers get it? Voting for Obama will grieve the Holy Spirit.

Some say we shouldn't be one-issue voters. I'm a two-issue voter because Obama is diametrically opposed to the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

God loves gays, hates their stance on marriage.

God loves pro-abortionists, hates their killing the unborn.

Wake up. America's only hope is God.

Where is America in the prophetic timeline?

Jonathan Cahn's best selling "Harbinger" parallels God-given warnings.

God gave Israel nine ancient omens before her destruction in ancient times.

Since Sept. 11, God's warning again: increased tornadoes, hurricanes, floods, disasters, two Wall Street collapses, etc.

Like Israel, we desperately need God's protection. Merciful God could restore America only if His people and our nation heed, repent and

Obama campaign takes one step 'forward'

The Obama campaign unveiled its latest slogan, "Forward," last week. As we know, in 2008 Obama campaigned to lead the greatest country in the history of the planet, a country built on capitalism, limited government and personal responsibility, with the fuzzy mantra of "Change." That should have been our wake-up call. He did try (and is still trying) to change and transform independent, self-reliant Americans into an entitlement-minded, government-dependent populace inflamed by envy and empty rhetoric.

Obviously, when you have the best country ever, you want to change it by electing a guy with only community organizing experience who has never managed anything and whose wealth comes from two books he wrote about himself before he had hardly done anything.

Mitt Romney should run on "Hope," as in we "Hope" we don't re-elect Obama so America can go "Forward." Or even better, Obama's campaign slogan should now be "Forewarned!"

The slogan "Forward" was used by socialist Nazis (Hitler was the first to offer universal health care). It also has been used in many other communist/socialist propaganda campaigns over the years, unbeknownst to the Obama PR machine, or maybe knownst. Probably the latter, but it is telling, isn't it?

This is a perfect example of the importance of having a Word software program that runs a Hitler check on any position you want to espouse. The only tidbit I know about Adolf Hitler is that he did not drink, especially tequila, because he felt it just made him mean.

HART TALK
Ron Hart

Some have noted the stark contrast between George Bush's speech to the nation on Dec. 14, 2003, after Saddam Hussein's capture and Obama's self-aggrandizing, spike-the-football,

"Ding, dong, bin Laden's dead" speech on May 1, 2011. Nowhere in President Bush's speech did he claim credit for the capture of the evil Hussein. Instead, he heaped praise upon the intelligence analysts and the brave fighting forces who accomplished that remarkable feat. He thanked them and congratulated them, and did not use the words "I, me or my military."

On the other hand, our own Dear Leader Obama's speech reads like a fifth-grade homework assignment on how to use the first person. "My intelligence community ... my national security team ... I determined that I had enough intelligence to take action ... at my direction ..." on and on, ad nauseam. It is very clear that Obama never heard the definition of a "leader" as one who takes less of the credit than he should and more of the blame. Perhaps he should read the letter Eisenhower had in his back pocket in June 1944, taking sole blame if the D-Day invasion had failed. But then again, Ike was a true leader.

Bill Clinton breathlessly opined in a recent campaign ad that it would have been bad for Obama if things had gone wrong in the bin Laden raid. I'm sure Navy SEAL Team Six appreciated that perspective. The Dems also implied, in the same breath in which they accuse Romney of being trigger happy, that he would not have approved bin Laden raids in Pakistan. Of course he would have, but it's more likely he would have done a leveraged buyout of the mess that is Pakistan, fired the current al-Qaida management and turned the country into a profitable one.

Maybe the next move will be to imply that because bin Laden was rich, did not drink and had multiple wives, Romney would not have agreed to kill him because he was so Mormon-like.

By all accounts, the al-

Qaida business franchise long has been in decline (most believe because of poor customer service) and bin Laden had been demoted. Reports say bin Laden was living on past glory for a long time. He smoked weed, had four women living with him, took Viagra, colored his hair to appear younger and constantly watched films of himself on TV. Maybe it took so long to find him because he was hiding out in his first-row seats at every LA Lakers basketball game.

It is not like Obama would take political advantage of the killing of bin Laden to distract voters from his great record on the economy, or make the bin Laden takedown about himself, or use it to stoke liberal battle cries before the election. I am sure Obama would say "his" killing of bin Laden was not about him — he did it for Trayvon.

FIVE POINTS from page A1

Walker said the project will cul-de-sac off a portion of the old Berryhill Road, where it currently meets with Chumuckla Highway.

Pace resident Robert Hulmann said the intersection has been a nuisance for him and his family, who travel through it on a daily basis.

"I live off of Chumuckla Highway, so I have to pass through it twice a day on my way to work," Hulmann said. "I have had plenty of close calls at that intersection, and I don't even attempt to get onto Berryhill Road because traffic moves so fast at that intersection."

The shift of Berryhill Road would realign the road and make it run parallel to Ashmore Lane, which is just north of where the road sits now.

"Right now (that intersection) is so dysfunctional ... it doesn't even have a light," Walker said.

Blaylock said that would all change once construction is complete.

"In order to adequately realign the interchange, it will be a four-way and a three-way two-signal operating under one controller," Blaylock said. "As far as the road shifts, it will certainly affect motoring traffic during construction."

Melanie Fringer, who has been through the intersection on numerous occasions, said a traffic shift most likely would help out the traffic problem.

"I don't know one person who thinks that intersection is safe," Fringer said. "There have been so many close calls at that intersection, and I was involved in one of them."

Fringer said that close call has made her avoid Five Points as much as possible.

"I only take it when I know I have to," Fringer said. "People don't know how to slow down, and that's what makes it worse."

This week, the county is

The realignment would shift traffic away from the intersection where Chumuckla Highway, Woodbine Road and Quintette Road meet.

"This intersection is certainly a concern," Blaylock said. "The interchange does not function for current vehicular numbers, nor would it function in the future."

"I think it's in the level of service 'F' right now."

BOATING from page A1

Florida is No. 1 in the nation for reported boating accidents, but very few come from Santa Rosa County.

"We hear of things well after the fact," Reble said. "Many of them don't go reported, but we do have our fair share of mishaps on the Blackwater due to the amount of traffic."

"We are seeing a decline in the number of accidents that are reported, and that is due to boater education and the reduced number of registered boats, which is probably due to the economy."

Boater education classes are offered monthly by the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary in Milton at the Milton Fire Department. The classes are eight hours and are held the second Saturday of every month.

"We will have our next class in August," Reble said. "Due to the number of activities and events we are involved with, it is hard to schedule a class in June or July."

"It is mandatory for those young boaters born after Jan. 1, 1988, to have a hard Florida Boater Safety Card to operate a vessel with a 10 horsepower motor and up."

Reble, who has been involved with classes to educate groups like the Blackwater Pyrates, Santa Rosa Yacht Club and others, said many are saving on their boat insurance.

"An owner of a sailboat told me they saved $200 on their insurance after completing the class and presenting the paperwork to their insurance company," Reble said. "Once they do take the class, many experienced boaters tell us they didn't know as much about boater safety as they thought they did."

In addition to the Kids' Boating Safety Academy, there will be courtesy vessel safety checks conducted on Saturday.

winning the overall male athlete award for 2012, while Mary Kathryn Taylor was selected as the overall female scholar athlete.

"This is not just a testament to two outstanding athletes," said Pace athletic director Robert Freeman. "It is a testament to the students-athletes we have here in Santa Rosa County."

To even be nominated in a sport it is up to the student to get the application packet filled out and returned to the Pensacola Sports Association by the 1st of March.

Then the selection committee receives a packet with all discernible information to identify the school or athlete by name removed.

After studying the information, they meet as a committee and determine each sport winners.

The awards are not only based on academic achievements, but athletic success as well.

"The PSA banquet is a win-win situation for all student athletes," said Jay athletic director Lance Youngblood. "It is a way for all schools in Santa Rosa County to show our best.

"It is a reminder of what is important in developing a total person. It also gives young people a chance to attend college that some might not otherwise have the opportunity to do so."

The fact many in education stressed is the misnomer placed on the term student-athlete today.

"Looking at Pace's senior class three members of the baseball team alone are in the top 15," Shell said. "Brandon Peterson is the valedictorian, Zach Orr is the salutatorian, and Elliott Pearson is ranked No. 11.

"I think some of the negative feelings come from media coverage in the larger sports like football and basketball at the larger college schools. Many athletes as a whole I feel are high-achieving students."

This report represents some events the FWC Northwest Region handled May 4-10; however, it does not include all actions taken by the Division of Law Enforcement.

ESCAMBIA COUNTY

Officer Kenneth Manning was conducting Individual Fishing Quota inspections when he received an email alert of a local commercial boat landing IFQ species at an approved location/wholesale dealer. Manning was able to determine the commercial vessel's location in Gulf Breeze. He provided other FWC officers on vessel patrol with the latitude and longitude of the commercial boat. The other officers located and observed the boat tied to a private dock. Manning determined the location/docking of the commercial vessel was at an unapproved landing site. Manning contacted National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration agents, and charges will be filed for landing at an unapproved location.

ESCAMBIA COUNTY COPS

that fell out of a truck on U.S. 98 in Gulf Breeze. When he arrived on scene, he observed a live 7-foot alligator tied to a truck bed. The three young men present explained that the gator fell out of another truck in front of them and they stopped to protect the gator from the vehicle traffic. After gathering all the information, Hahr determined that the facts were not adding up and questioned the three subjects further. He obtained confessions from all three subjects describing how the gator was caught at another location and that it was being taken to a place where it would be killed and butchered by the three individuals. When the gator attempted its escape, they came up with the cover story. The three young men were issued notices to appear for taking/possession of an alligator without a permit. The alligator was successfully released alive back into the wild.

SANTA ROSA COUNTY COPS

Officer Randy Webb spoke to a group of students from Woodlawn Beach Middle School at a boating and fishing initiative. Webb spoke to approximately 300 students about boating safety and fishing laws.

OKALOOSA COUNTY

Officer Andy Maltais received a complaint from Jackson Guard about a vehicle being operated carelessly and damaging a road on Eglin Air Force Base Wildlife Management Area. A contracted worker provided a vehicle description and tag number. Lt.

Mark Hollinhead located the vehicle at a residence in Crestview. The driver was identified, interviewed and admitted to entering the property and driving carelessly. The driver was cited for not having an Eglin permit.

Investigator Eddie Gatlin and Officer Danny Arnette interviewed a subject about an alligator that was killed on a private lake. Two suspects were identified, and additional interviews and charges are pending.

FWC officers assigned to Escambia, Okaloosa and Walton counties participated in a special detail of charter vessel dockside inspections at Destin Harbor. During the detail, 42 vessels were inspected, 268 users contacted, three expired vessel charter licenses were discovered, two resource citations were issued for possession of red snapper and gag grouper during closed season, one uniform boating citation (boating accident) was issued and one resource written warning was issued.

Officer Andy Maltais responded to a boating accident involving rented personal watercraft from a local livery in the Fort Walton area. The PWC operators involved were father and daughter. The initial investigation revealed the livery allowed an under-age individual to operate a PWC with no boater safety card. The male operator sustained a laceration under the chin requiring stitches. The male operator drove himself to a local hospital, where he was treated and released. The investigation is ongoing, and charges are pending.

UWF grabs No. 4 seed in tourney

Special to the Press Gazette

For the third straight year and for the fourth time in program history the West Florida baseball team is headed to the NCAA South Region Tournament.

The Argonauts, who are the defending Division II National Champions, finished the 2012 season 34-17 and look to defend their 2011 NCAA South Region Championship, taking on Nova Southeastern in round one.

UWF grabbed the No. 4 seed in this year's NCAA South Region Tournament and will face Sunshine State Conference opponent Nova Southeastern, who enters the match up 33-13. This will mark the first ever match up between the Argos and the Sharks.

Last season UWF hosted the NCAA South Region tournament at Jim Spooner Field for the first time in program history. The Argos used home field advantage to grab their first South Region Championship with a 7-4 win over Barry.

This year Tampa serves as host of the NCAA South Region Tournament.

The Spartans hosted the NCAA South Region Tournament in 2010 where West Florida went 0-2 falling to Valdosta State and Florida Tech.

Area students bring home Pensacola Sports Association awards

By BILL GAMBLIN

sports@srpressgazette.com

Santa Rosa County has proven the word "student" is very critical when it comes to the phrase student-athlete.

At the recent Pensacola Sports Association Senior Scholar Athlete Awards Banquet, students from Pace, Milton and Jay walked away with 10 awards, two of which were the male and female senior scholars.

When you included Navarre and Gulf Breeze, the number grew to 16 of the 24 athletes honored.

"It is very exciting to see student-athletes excelling in all phases of their high school careers," said Milton Principal Mike Thorpe, whose students took four awards at the banquet. "We are particularly proud of our four award winners."

When the cash value is determined, the awards are particularly impressive.

Overall winners received a $2,500 renewable scholarship to continue their education from the Pensacola Sports Association Foundation, while the individual sport recipients received a $1,500 renewable scholarship from Pensacola State College.

For Santa Rosa County alone, the total awarded was more than $60,000.

"I think this puts into perspective the modern student-athlete," said Pace principal Stephen Shell. "Many have an inaccurate perception of a student-athlete today.

"Many of the athletes get the opportunity to go to college based on their grades as well as athletics, instead of just their athletic abilities."

In 2012, Pace became the first high school to sweep both overall awards and became the first school to have brothers win in back-to-back years.

Ryan Funk, a swimmer at Pace High, followed his brother Brandon Funk in

Bowling's CALL of THE WILD

By Bill Gamblin
377-4611 | @SRPG_Bill
news@srpressgazette.com

Do you consider yourself a better than average bowler?

Do you have what it takes to tame a cheetah, viper, chameleon, scorpion or shark?

If you want to test yourself, then Oops Alley is offering the challenge this summer with its PBA Experience Sports League.

In this new league you can test yourself on the same oil patterns pro bowlers like Walter Ray Williams Jr., Pete Weber, and others compete on when they go to a PBA tour stop.

The brainchild behind this league is Oops' Frank Sasport, who returned to the Pace bowling facility after seeing this done at other bowling centers.

"This is a league that will test your equipment and your accuracy," Sasport said. "Many can get away with being a few boards off on a house shot like we normally have, but in this league you will be put to a test."

Each oil pattern — cheetah, viper, chameleon, scorpion, and shark — have different levels of oil strategically placed across the bowling lane.

Each oil pattern will affect your shot.

To help with this challenge, the league will bowl the same pattern for three consecutive weeks before moving to another pattern.

"We will show video clips to offer some tips before bowling," Sasport said. "Bowlers can also go online and get tips from different pros depending on what type of bowler they are."

"We will also be offering a night on May 23 to where people can come out and bowl to see what they think of the patterns and if they will need to look at some equipment changes."

The May 23 event will start with a short meeting, and then bowlers can enjoy a three-hour practice session on the new planned oil patterns for $10. All five different oil patterns will be available during the practice.

On May 10, Oops offered a special 9-pin, no tap on the viper pattern for bowlers in the center's Thursday night league, it received several mixed reviews.

"It is definitely a little different," said Christian Lajaunie, who bowled 11 strikes in a row back in March. "Tonight I only brought two balls, but I will work it out."

"I like to think of myself as being a pretty versatile bowler."

While Lajaunie struggled with the new pattern at first, Gordon Mickle found himself on a roll when he finished with a 278.

"I am able to work with the new oil pattern," Mickle said. "My bowling ball was drilled to respond more down the lane than others."

"But the main reason I bowl is to hang out with friends and have a good time; so I am just enjoying the evening."

Besides the new pattern, Oops is getting ready to put into place the 56 cases of new score king pins.

"These pins will make a huge difference," Sasport said. "All of the scoring has to do with the angle of entry between the 1-3 for right handed bowlers and the 1-2 for those that bowl left handed."

During one of the trial nights for the pattern, bowlers found out that the more they bowled, the more they could recognize the patterns.

"I am trying to get use to it," Richard Winkler said. "I started adjusting from where I normally start and I have realized I need to let the ball hang out there a little more."

While Winkler was seeing his ball respond to a larger hook, that wasn't the case for every bowler.

"My shot is not breaking," said Diane Michalek. "I think operator error is the big thing for me tonight."

"But playing no-tap tonight is hard to tell."

When the league begins on May 30, play will begin at 6:30 p.m. and bowlers will bowl in four games at a cost of $20 a week. This will be for three men or women teams with a 90 percent handicap.

Sasport said based on a 12 team league, they are projecting a $6,000 league payout at the end of 15 weeks.

Because this is a special league, United States Bowling Congress card holders will have to upgrade their membership card to a sport card, while everyone else can purchase a combination card.

These are the 5 different oil patterns that will be available at Oops Alley: cheetah, viper, chameleon, scorpion, and the shark.

BILL GAMBLIN | Press Gazette

Bowlers can experience an all new league at the end of May that will offer them the same challenges bowlers face on the PBA Tour weekly. Oops Alley in Pace is preparing to launch the PBA Experience League starting May 30 and for the next 15 weeks.

Prices go thigh-high as consumers seek dark meat

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Pat LaFrieda Jr. can't get enough chicken thighs. If his family business featured on the new Food Network series "Meat Men" orders 100 cases of boneless, skinless thighs, his supplier might deliver only 60.

That's because consumers have discovered something chefs have long known about dark meat: "It was always the least expensive protein that you could buy, but it had the most amount of flavor," LaFrieda said.

Thighs and drumsticks are climbing the pecking order as Americans join consumers abroad in seeking flavor that isn't found in ubiquitous, boneless, skinless chicken breasts. The poultry industry used to have trouble finding a market for dark meat, but changing domestic tastes and growing exports to countries that prefer leg quarters are pushing up prices and helping pull the poultry industry out of a deep slump.

Poultry industry experts agree TV food shows are helping to spur demand as chefs talk up dark meat and give home cooks new ideas. Dark meat is more forgiving than white and doesn't dry out as easily, La Frieda said, so thighs are great on the grill, while ground dark meat works well shaped into burgers, stuffed into ravioli or stirred into a Bolognese sauce and served over pasta, he said.

"If you're looking for what the next trend is ... always ask the butcher what he takes home," said LaFrieda, whose company, Pat LaFrieda Meat Purveyors of North Bergen, N.J., supplies restaurants in the New York City area and along the East Coast.

Matt Monk, 29, of Birmingham, Ala., a customer service representative for Medicare, said he grew up eating chicken breasts because that's all his mother would cook. He wasn't introduced to dark meat until he moved in with his father in his teens.

"I like it because of the flavor," Monk said. "It does not dry out like white meat. White meat, to me, it's flavorless. Any flavor that comes from the meat, it has to come from me seasoning it."

The convenience and greater availability of boneless, skinless thighs is another major factor in the dark meat craze. New, automated equipment makes it more economical to debone leg quarters, where the work once had to be done by hand.

Dark meat historically has been cheaper than white, but according to U.S. Department of Agriculture statistics, wholesale boneless, skinless thighs now cost as much as breasts, and sometimes more. Both averaged $1.33 a pound in March, but thigh prices were up 15 percent from a year earlier, while breasts were up only 1 percent. Bone-in leg quarters averaged 53 cents per pound in March, up 26 percent from a year ago.

Legendary car designer, racer Shelby dies at 89

DALLAS (AP) — Decades after a heart condition forced him to retire from racing, Carroll Shelby still loved to drive muscle cars. Well into his 80s, the legendary car designer spent hours testing his last Mustang Shelby GT500, which sets a new record for horsepower and hits a top speed of more than 200 miles per hour.

SHELBY
1964

A one-time chicken farmer, Shelby had more than a half-dozen successful careers during his long life: champion race car driver, racing team owner, automotive consultant and safari tour operator. His fabled Shelby Cobra sports car became an automotive and cultural icon, and he was later credited with injecting testosterone into Ford's Mustang and Chrysler's Viper.

When Shelby died Thursday night in a Dallas hospital, he also was one of the nation's longest-living heart transplant recipients, having received a heart on June 7, 1990, from a 34-year-old man who died of an aneurysm. Shelby also received a kidney transplant in 1996 from his son, Michael.

"What made him so unusual is he developed, literally, hundreds of cars," said Craig Jackson, chairman and CEO of Barrett-Jackson Auction Company. "This guy was 89 years old and he was still developing cars."

Shelby first made his name behind the wheel of a car, winning France's grueling 24 Hours of Le Mans sports car race with teammate Ray Salvadori in 1959. He had turned to the race-car circuit in the 1950s after his chicken ranch failed. He won dozens of races in various classes throughout the 1950s and was twice named Sports Illustrated's Driver of the Year.

He already was suffering serious heart problems when he won Le Mans and ran the race "with nitroglycerin pills under his tongue," his longtime friend, Dick Messer, former executive director of Los Angeles' Petersen Automotive Museum, once noted. Soon after his win at Le Mans, he gave up racing and turned his attention to designing high-powered "muscle cars" that eventually became the Shelby Cobra and the Mustang Shelby GT500.

"He's an icon in the medical world and an icon in the automotive world," Messer said.

"His legacy is the diversity of his life," he added. "He's incredibly innovative. His life has always been the reinvention of Carroll Shelby."

The Cobra, which used Ford engines and a British sport car chassis, was the fastest production model ever made when it was displayed at the New York Auto Show in 1962.

A year later, Cobras were winning races over Corvettes, and in 1964 the Rip Chords had a Top 5 hit on the Billboard pop chart with "Hey, Little Cobra." ("Spring, little Cobra, getting ready to strike, spring, little Cobra, with all of your might. Hey, little Cobra, don't you know you're gonna shut 'em down?")

Master of food

Julia Child, a legacy of teaching the joy of food

The Associated Press
Massaging poultry, dropping food and utensils, and warbling her way through boeuf bourguignon and coq au vin, Julia Child left an indelible mark on American food.

As television's towering, ebullient "French Chef," Child put within reach of the average American a cuisine most had only heard about. Using fresh ingredients and copious amounts of wine, she changed the way we thought about food, demystifying it and placing it firmly at the center of a joyous life.

But as we approach her 100th birthday, coming August 15, what's less obvious is how Child also revolutionized the way women saw cooking — and themselves.

"Julia turned women on to the beauty of making a wonderful meal for the family, not just scraping something together," says Bob Spitz, author of the forthcoming Child biography "Dearie" (Knopf, August 2012).

"She let women who watched her feel that they would be heard, that they could do anything she could do," he said. "She wanted women to be proud of what they did. That was so important to her. That pride. She had found it. And she wanted others to find it, too."

Child didn't come from pride. Wealth, yes, but pride took longer.

Raised in Pasadena, Calif., the eldest child of a prosperous land manager and a paper-company heiress, Child went to Smith College where she partied more than studied and aspired to get married. After college and a series of uninspiring jobs, she joined the Office of Strategic Services, the precursor to the Central Intelligence Agency, and was sent to Ceylon, now Sri Lanka. It wasn't until she married Paul Child, an artist and diplomat, and moved to Paris that she found herself.

In France, she studied at Le Cordon Bleu culinary school, then began work on "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" with two French colleagues. It was a game-changing cookbook that, unlike its predecessors, outlined every step of a recipe.

That was a bold change for the American palate in 1961, an era in thrall to the convenience food industry.

It was a time when a constant drumbeat of advertising and what passed for food journalism told women they had no time to cook, says Laura Shapiro, a culinary historian and author of "Julia Child: A Life." Women were being told they needed canned fruit, frozen vegetables, cake mixes and TV dinners. The fresh food available in supermarkets was segregated, wrapped in plastic and untouchable. The cookbooks of the period reflected this.

"The whole trend was to make it fast and easy, and what they considered easy was almost a quick summary of what you did — boil the beef for an hour and a half in a cup of wine and water and that's boeuf bourguignon," says Judith Jones, the book editor who rescued "Mastering the Art" after it suffered multiple rejections from a publisher who wanted it revised to include packaged goods and fewer steps. "Julia made the distinction between the home cook just cooking, putting it on the table, and cooking with finesse, tasting and understanding what she was doing. She believed that that's where the joy came."

It was a time of social — and particularly gender — upheaval in America: The birth control pill was introduced, sexual mores were changing, women were working, buying houses, supporting the growth of lifestyle magazines, including Gourmet.

And anything French was in fashion. The Kennedys — and their French chef — were in the White House. Jackie wore Chanel and Dior. She spoke fluent French. French food such as coquilles St. Jacques and quiche already had made it into middle class homes, Shapiro says, and there were even some French cookbooks around. Soldiers had returned from Europe more worldly and the advent of inexpensive airline travel meant more Americans were seeing foreign lands.

Then "Mastering" arrived on the scene.

"People were waiting for that book," Shapiro says.

Yet it got off to a slow start, Jones says. It was helped by a swooning review from New York Times food editor Craig Claiborne, but it was when Child got on television that her appeal and message finally saturated the culture.

"The French Chef" began airing in 1963, the same year that Betty Friedan's feminist tract "The Feminine Mystique" was released, and the underlying messages were strangely similar.

"It was to take your life in your own hands," Shapiro says. "You have a home and a family, if you're going to cook, get your hands in the food and do something good. You don't have to hand this over. Betty Friedan's big message was 'stand up and take charge of your life, it's yours.' And Julia said the exact same thing about food and about the meals you feed your family."

Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg smiles in San Francisco in January 2011. Zuckerberg turned 28 on Monday.

Facebook CEO could get $100 billion gift for 28th birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — He famously wears a hoodie, jeans and sneakers, and he was born the year Apple introduced the Macintosh. But Mark Zuckerberg is no boy-CEO.

Facebook's chief executive turned 28 on Monday, setting in motion the social network's biggest week ever. The company is expected to start selling stock to the public for the first time and begin trading on the Nasdaq Stock Market on Friday. The IPO could value Facebook at nearly $100 billion, making it worth more than such iconic companies as Disney, Ford and Kraft Foods.

At 28, Zuckerberg is exactly half the age of the average S&P 500 CEO, according to executive search firm Spencer Stuart. With eight years on the job, he's logged more time as leader than the average CEO, whose tenure is a little more than seven years, according to Spencer Stuart.

Even so, the pressures of running a public company will undoubtedly take some getting used to. Once Facebook begins selling stock, Zuckerberg will be expected to please a host of new stakeholders, including Wall Street investment firms, hedge funds and pension funds who will pressure him to keep the company growing.

Young as he may seem — especially in that hooded sweatshirt — Zuckerberg will be about the same age as Michael Dell and older than Steve Jobs when those two took their companies, Dell Inc. and Apple Inc., public. In his years as Facebook's CEO he's met world leaders, rode a bull in Vietnam while on vacation, started learning Mandarin Chinese and as a personal challenge, wore a tie for the better part of a year.

Facebook, of course, got its start in Zuckerberg's messy Harvard dorm room in early 2004. Known as Thefacebook.com in those days, the site was created to help Harvard students — and later other college students — connect with one another online. The scrappy website later grew to include high-schoolers, then anyone else with an Internet connection. Today more than 900 million people log in at least once a month, making Facebook the world's definitive social network.

All along, Zuckerberg has shown a maturity beyond his years. As the site grew rapidly and caught the eye of big media and rival Internet companies, Zuckerberg consistently rebuffed mouth-watering buyout offers, including those from Google Inc. and Yahoo Inc.

"Simply put: we don't build services to make money; we make money to build better services," Zuckerberg wrote in his letter to prospective shareholders. "And we think this is a good way to build something. These days I think more and more people want to use services from companies that believe in something beyond simply maximizing profits."

People who've observed Zuckerberg closely say his age is an asset. His is the generation that grew up with social networking, with computers all around them and the Internet as something that's always existed. Many of his employees are younger than him, as are a lot of the up-and-coming technology entrepreneurs with whom he competes.

Colleges go to dogs for stress busters

ATLANTA (AP) — Just down the hall from the reference desk at Emory University's law library in a room housing antique legal texts is Stanley the golden retriever puppy, barking his head off.

Stanley rolls around on the floor and chews on a squeaky toy while zombie-like law students wander in, a giant grin breaking out on their weary faces when they see the cuddly boy. Puppy therapy — just in time for finals week.

From Kent State University in Ohio to Macalester College in Minnesota, more and more pooches are around campus during exams to help students relax and maybe even crack a smile or two.

"We had a student who came in and a staff person commented they had never seen that student smile," said Richelle Reid, a law librarian who started Emory's pet therapy program this year after hearing about one at the University of California, San Francisco. "It has had positive effects, helping them to just have a moment to clear their minds and not have to think about studies, not have to think about books."

Pups are in counseling centers for students to visit regularly or faculty and staff bring their pets to lift spirits.

Pet-friendly dorms also are popping up where students can bring their dogs or cats from home.

Want to check out a pet? It's possible at Harvard Medical School and Yale Law School, which both have resident therapy dogs in their libraries that can be borrowed through the card catalog just like a book.

Some dogs, like Harvard Medical School's resident shih tzu Cooper, hold regular office hours. Researcher Loise Francisco-Anderson owns Cooper and said she got permission to bring him to campus after her husband read that Yale Law School had a therapy dog on campus named Monty.

Cooper, who sports a crimson scarf with paw prints on it, is so popular that undergraduate students have been petitioning for him to spend time on their side of campus. Many of them take the shuttle across the river to the medical school just to visit the pup on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

"You can release some of the emotions to a pet that you can't to a human. A pet keeps it confidential. You don't have to worry about someone else saying, 'Oh, I think she's having a nervous breakdown over the science exam,'" said Francisco-Anderson.

Most schools, like Emory, partner with organizations that train companion dogs so that the canines get their social training while students get stress relief. Others, like at Harvard, have faculty members bring their dogs — which are certified to be therapy

Law student Melissa Bonnington, 24, plays with Hooch, a 19-month-old golden retriever, between final exams at Emory University in Atlanta on May 2.

pups — to campus certain hours during the week.

The service is almost always free for students.

Research shows that interaction with pets decreases the level of cortisol — or stress hormone — in people and increases endorphins, known as the happiness hormone. Scant research exists on the how pet programs on college campuses help students cope with stress.

That's why Kathleen Adamle, a nursing professor at Kent State, hopes to garner a grant so she can conduct research as part of her "Dogs on Campus" program. Adamle launched the program in 2006 with just her dog and has since added 11 other therapy canines to the team that visits dorms regularly throughout the year.

The dogs belong to Adamle or other community members and are certified therapy dogs.

She has plenty of anecdotal evidence that her program works. As soon as there's a tragedy on campus — a student dies in a car wreck, for example — dorms scramble to book the dog team to help comfort upset students, she says.

"I don't care if it's 10 at night, we go to that dorm and sit on the floor. The kids are crying, and they grab the dog and put their face in the fur and just let it go," Adamle said.

Since 2006, Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn., has asked faculty and alumni to bring their dogs to campus during finals as part of the "Dog Day Afternoon" program. At Kenyon College in Ohio, the counseling center and dorms offer puppy play dates with Sunny the yellow lab and Sam the poodle-Chihuahua mix.

Last month, Indiana University students romped around with dogs in the first ever "Rent-a-Puppy" day. For $5, students could book time with one of 20 puppies from the local animal shelter — and could adopt them if they couldn't bear to say goodbye.

First-year Emory law student Anna Idelevich took a break from studying for exams at the library on a recent afternoon to visit Stanley and Hooch, two golden retrievers training to be companion dogs for disabled owners. The private university brought in the dogs as part of a new program to help students cope with the stress of exams.

"I've literally been here every day. This is the best thing that's ever happened to me," said Idelevich, 22. "They couldn't have thought of a better way to relieve stress. If they don't do it next year, I'll be upset."

Man makes amends for stealing plants in 1958

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — No matter how much digging investigators did, the crime remained open until a thief turned himself in and returned the fruits of his theft.

In this case, the crime was stealing two hydrangeas in May 1958 from Centennial Park in Nashville. And the thief, 72-year-old Bill Teitleff of Joy, Ky., returned plants from the root system of the purloined flowers to the park on Thursday.

Teitleff told WSMV-TV in Nashville he took the flowering plant because he didn't have enough money at the time to buy a Mother's Day gift for his mother. At the time of the theft, Teitleff was 18 years old and just married.

Eventually, the past caught up with Teitleff and he didn't like how it felt.

Teitleff says he can now walk through Centennial Park without feeling guilty.

Fla. author's book confused with '50 Shades'

PARKLAND — The author of a book called "Shades of Gray" says her work is being confused with that of a chart-topping erotic fiction writer.

Susanne Jacoby Hale, an author based in Florida, says she has received emails, Facebook messages and phone calls from people thinking she wrote "Fifty Shades of Grey."

"Fifty Shades of Grey," by British author E L James, has sold millions of copies and become a sensation among women drawn to the sadomasochistic romance between a college student and a wealthy entrepreneur.

Hale's book is about a dropout prevention teacher. The South Florida Sun-Sentinel reports even Hale's family members are being approached. Her husband, a medical sales representative, says doctors regularly approach him wanting to talk about the book.

Teen's body spray sets off school fire alarm

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. — Officials say a fire alarm that went off at a Connecticut high school was activated by a student's "overabundance" of body spray in a locker room.

Firefighters were called to Middletown High School shortly after 3 p.m. Thursday.

Officials told The Middletown Press that the student used an excessive amount of the scented spray and created a cloud of mist right below a heat sensor, which tripped the fire alarm.

Firefighters allowed students and teachers to return to the building shortly after arriving.

Officials deemed the call a "routine accidental."

Calico lobster on display in New England

BOSTON — So you think blue lobsters are rare? The New England Aquarium is holding a lobster that's way rarer than that.

The aquarium in Boston says it has a calico lobster that could be a 1-in-30 million find.

The lobster is dark with bright orange and yellow spots. It was caught off Winter Harbor, Maine, and is being held at the New England Aquarium for the Biomes Marine Biology Center, a science center in Rhode Island.

Aquarium spokesman Tony Lacasse says calico lobsters are quite rare.

The Maine-based Lobster Conservancy says perhaps one lobster in 1 million is blue, while both the orange and calico versions might be as rare as 1 in 30 million.

Naked unicyclist charged for distracting drivers

KEMAH, Texas — Police say a man arrested in a Southeast Texas city for riding his unicycle in the nude was distracting drivers and creating a hazard.

Kemah police Chief Greg Rikard says 45-year-old Joseph Glynn Farley was not intoxicated or impaired when he was arrested May 9 on a bridge in the city 20 miles southeast of Houston.

Rikard says Farley had been falling off the unicycle and into traffic.

Farley told officers that he liked the feeling of riding without his clothes, which were found at the base of the bridge.

Police charged Farley, of Clear Lake, with misdemeanor indecent exposure. Bond is set at $1,500.

Online jail records did not list an attorney for Farley.

Cops: Man with $5,000 refuses to pay $12 fare

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Police say a New York man who refused to pay a $12 taxi fare was carrying more than $5,000 when the cabbie drove him around looking for cheap cigarettes.

The Post-Standard of Syracuse reports a 68-year-old man had the driver take him to two stores on Monday. Each time he came out empty-handed, saying the price of cigarettes was too high.

When the man had the cabbie take him to a third store, the driver asked for the $12.40 fare. The passenger refused to pay and told the cabbie to call police over the issue.

According to the newspaper, the arrest report says the man became uncooperative. Police handcuffed him and searched his pockets, finding more than $5,000 in cash.

The man is now charged with theft of services.

Flight academy camp teaches teens math and science

PENSACOLA NAVAL AIR STATION (AP) — The panicked voice came into Ambition's air traffic control room — one of the aircraft carrier's young pilots was in trouble.

"Dude, my nose is down," the pilot shouted as he struggled to regain control over his X12 experimental Triad aircraft.

There was no real danger, however: The planes are imaginary and Ambition is a simulated aircraft carrier, the centerpiece of the new, $33 million National Flight Academy that supporters are calling space camp taken to the next level.

It officially opens Friday at Pensacola Naval Air Station with scheduled appearances by former shuttle astronaut Mark Kelly, the husband of former Arizona Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords, and Apollo astronauts Neil Armstrong and Gene Cernan — the first and the last men to walk on the moon.

Campers from seventh to 12th grade will experience five days onboard Ambition at the National Flight Academy, surrounded by sights and sounds that recreate the feeling of being at sea and conducting noncombat missions.

Organizers say it's not just for teens who might be interested in becoming a Navy pilot, but also for those who might have an unrealized aptitude for science or math.

"Unless kids get a spark somewhere and they get excited about math or science, they are not going to do it and that is what this is about. They may not find that they want to be an aviator, but they may be really good at meteorology or geometry and that helps them make decisions about a career," said Pam Northrup, dean of the college of professional studies at the University of West Florida and consultant on the Flight Academy project since it was conceived 15 years ago.

It costs $1,250 to attend, but directors said scholarships are available, with sessions running each week from June through August.

Ambition, operated by a nonprofit with funding from Lockheed Martin, Northrop Grumman and other aviation and defense industry leaders, was created with help from designers who have worked for Disney and Universal Studios theme parks. It has 30 networked aircraft simulators, the most in any non-Defense Department facility, and a high-tech control room. When planes take off, loud jet noises are piped into the building and rooms vibrate. The simulated hangar bays are dimly lit, just like in real life. Bells ring dignitaries aboard and crew members are alerted by an intercom system. When the mission gets under way, the windows are covered with pictures of ocean scenes and the campers sleep in berths and eat in a mess hall.

Rock City celebrates 80 years

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — It's been advertised on barns and billboards across much of the country. It's a natural wonderland with a rock formation called "fat man's squeeze." And it's been mentioned in a country song.

Rock City, a cultural and scenic capstone near Chattanooga with endurance like few other tourist attractions, is celebrating its 80th anniversary.

About 400,000 visitors annually come to see the 200-million-year-old rock formations, enjoy scenic vistas and walk among 400 native plant species on 90-minute self-guided tours along a stone path.

On the site are a 100-foot high waterfall, a 1,000-ton balancing rock, a swinging bridge and the "fat man's squeeze" challenging visitors to maneuver between imposing boulders. For the youngsters, there are concrete gnomes, a rock climbing wall and statues of storybook characters.

The 14-acre family-owned attraction atop Lookout Mountain, Ga., six miles from downtown Chattanooga, has survived the Great Depression, World War II, area pollution and the recent Great Recession.

"We combine natural beauty with incomparable gardens, views and wonders," says Andrew Kean, Rock City's president and chief operating officer.

And it's used an unconventional advertising campaign without corporate muscle: Barns, billboards and bird houses proclaim the commanding invitation "See Rock City."

"We've had a phenomenal amount of outdoor advertising," Kean says.

Much of the promotion focuses on the intrigue that on a clear day, visitors can see Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama from Rock City's Seven States Flag Court.

"It's unparalleled," Kean says. Pressed about the validity of the claim, he acknowledged on a recent overcast day, "Today will not be the best."

Rock City opened in 1932 to give Depression-era families a diversion. Bill Chapin, CEO, is a third-generation descendant of founders Garnet and Frieda Carter. There is no big corporation behind it; no multiple sites like theme parks. Even without such trappings, it's been named one of America's iconic places by National Geographic.

"We have a lot of freedom to change, and not to change," Kean says.

Rock City's opening followed other natural attractions across the country. Mount Rushmore National Memorial was created in 1925. Grand Canyon National Park opened in 1919 and Niagara Falls State Park in 1903. And Rock City is an elder statesman compared to theme parks. Disneyland opened in 1955 and Disney World in 1971.

It's also a historic site: The 1863 Civil War "Battle Above the Clouds" was fought on the mountain. And the country's first patented miniature golf course was created on the mountain in the late 1920s.

But Rock City is by no means mired in the 1930s. It uses social media to stay current. And there's a Starbucks on the property and two electric car charging stations.

It also competes with Great Smoky Mountains National Park, 110 miles to the northeast, for the tourism dollar, though at an elevation of around 1,700 feet, it is far below the 6,643 feet at Clingmans Dome, the highest peak in the Smokies.

Nevertheless, Rock City has held its own as "an authentic and rare experience," Kean says.
