Shopping mall could break ground in 2014

CRESTVIEW — Plans for a shopping center proposed for a site west of State Road 85 next to the Lowe's home improvement store continue to move slowly forward.

Developers hope to break ground on the project, called the Crestview Power Center, at the beginning of 2014, Public Works Director Wayne Steele said during Monday's city council meeting.

Rain has delayed a new site survey that will provide city leaders and project partners with more exact boundaries for the project's components such as retail stores and restaurants.

"They are finalizing the new boundary," Steele said.

Though developers with the Watkins Group have not disclosed which chains will occupy the Power Center, a site plan presented to the council labeled one freestanding restaurant "Red Lobster."

Developers repeatedly have said major national chain stores and eateries have expressed interest in the project.

Bob Peck of the Watkins Group was in Crestview this week and told Steele meetings with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the state Department of Transportation have necessitated adjusting the Power Center master plan to relocate some of the planned buildings.

Developers will provide the city with the site plans it needs to construct the project's new sewer line "as soon as possible," Steele said.

"It seems to me they are moving forward, and he (Peck) seemed very upbeat and positive," Steele said. "They are planning on breaking ground on the first of 2014."

During the meeting, Council President Robyn Helt said developers "have not yet made application (for impact fee waivers) with the city; therefore there is no action for the city to be taking in relation to that project at this time."

CRESTVIEW — With her arms filled with a ripe cantaloupe and bags of peas and tomatoes, Mary Goldring said her stop at the Brooks Farm produce stand in Baker on Thursday morning was a success.

"Everything's fresher when it's right off the farm," she said. "I could almost eat these tomatoes on the drive home."

The late spring and summer vegetables have been piling in from the fields, stand worker Kathy Cooper said. Peaches and tomatoes are at their peak right now, she said.

Krystal still a go after city refuses tax relief

CRESTVIEW — With differences resolved between the city and the state Department of Transportation, site work has begun on a new fast-food restaurant.

At a May 15 Crestview City Council meeting, Krystal representative Bob Ziegenfuss hinted that unless the city provided $30,000 in tax relief, the 2385 S. Ferdon Blvd. project would be "in jeopardy."

Council members took no action on the request.

However, Public Works Director Wayne Steele said Krystal and the DOT, which mandated unexpected improvements to the State Road 85 median, met last week, "and they're moving forward."

Okaloosa delays changes to aviation rules

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Okaloosa County commissioners have postponed approving a zoning change that would have prohibited private and residential airports from operating on the waterfront.

The policy change also would have restricted private airports to an agricultural, institutional or airport industrial park zoning area.

Commissioners voted last week to table the proposal indefinitely after hearing concerns from a group representing the private aviation community. Members told commissioners they feared the zoning change would have unintended consequences for their lifestyles and businesses.

County officials will restart their review of the regulations by getting input from local aviators and resubmitting proposed changes to the county's Planning Commission.

TALK TO THE WORLD WITH AMATEUR RADIO

Over the past 20 years, communications at the touch of a button have become commonplace. The cell phone enables us to talk to next-door neighbors or loved ones in the military across the world.

However, as we have learned in natural and man-made disasters, this communication infrastructure is fragile. If this system breaks down, amateur radio can take its place and get information to the outside world.

On Aug. 6 at the Crestview Public Library, Ronald Mahn, amateur call sign KI5FR, and Mike Martell, KK4KRZ, from the North Okaloosa Amateur Radio Club will demonstrate the many things you can do with amateur or ham radio.

The program, appropriate for fourth-grade students through adults, begins at 10:30 a.m. with coffee, juice and cookies served starting at 10 a.m.

We will listen to people talk and transmit data from around the world, and some audience members will be able to talk to other people in Okaloosa County using sophisticated hand-held radios.

At the end of the presentation — weather and equipment permitting — attendees can step outside the library and talk to people around the country. They'll use a radio and satellite 300 miles above the earth as it passes over the library between 11:20 and 11:35 a.m.!

You can learn more about this hobby using books available at the library, thanks to a donation from the local radio club.

School board renews food services contract

FROM STAFF REPORTS

FORT WALTON BEACH — A national food service company will remain Okaloosa County students' food provider another year following the school board's approval.

Sodexo America was hired in July 2009 to help cut the district's food costs. Its five-year contract has been renewed every year since then.

Company officials said they have ensured each year that the district has a fund balance instead of a deficit and have improved the food's nutritional value as national standards have changed.

Sodexo began providing breakfast in classrooms at schools with a high number of students qualifying for free and reduced meals, and has introduced food carts and vending machines to attract more students.

The company has encouraged its staff to join national organizations tied to improving cafeteria experience. Since 2009, more than 50 food service workers, which are still a mixture of district and Sodexo employees, have joined the Okaloosa chapter of a national nutritional organization.

Sodexo's contract with the district will expire at the end of next year, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture rules.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Crestview should take cue from Daytona sports center

Dear editor,

The International Motor Sports center in Daytona is being awarded the recycling recognition award. This is for their outstanding recycling of equipment used at the tracks and by reducing the amount of waste that is being sent to landfills.

I think it is amazing that a large organization like Daytona International Speedway, with the amount of domestic and international races that it holds each year, is able to make a substantial influence on recycling as well as cleaning the environment.

I have noticed that Crestview has not made many strides into this field; maybe the town could somehow increase the environmental awareness and compete for a similar award.

Get roads repaired so businesses can come

Dear editor,

Over the course of numerous years and councils of the past, we have had complaints about vehicle traffic and lack of restaurants and big business.

The perfect answer to these problems comes from a quote from Sen. Gaetz that summed it up on how easy it is.

These words came from Mr. Gaetz: "'If you build it, they will come' really does work in economic development," he said. "If you build roads, economic development becomes much more possible. But if you neglect transportation infrastructure, economic development is almost impossible."

Council members, please heed those words and not spend money on dog parks, sewage and water lines for anticipated future growth and other matters just to show you are doing something to show worth.

Let's get the roadwork in order so the business can come. Give it some thought, and plan for a bright city future. We are counting on you.

OUR VIEW

Examining the Zimmerman trial, race and criminal justice

The not-guilty verdict for a 29-year-old Hispanic who fatally shot a 17-year-old black high school student has inspired a national discussion.

Broadcast and cable news channels have aired town halls and discussion panels on the State of Florida v. George Zimmerman verdict and equality, or lack thereof, in criminal justice.

Our Facebook fans contributed to a lengthy — and not always civil — discussion on the Zimmerman verdict, equality and justice.

Saturday, Okaloosa County's NAACP branch, Blacks in Government, the Okaloosa County Democratic Black Caucus and community leaders presented "We Are Trayvon Martin," a town hall at Mt. Zion AME Church in Crestview. Discussion focused on the Zimmerman verdict, equality and justice.

These topics saturate most of the post-trial discussion, which includes a flurry of Facebook friends' shared Trayvon Martin memorial posts and retweets of celebrities' calls for justice for Trayvon.

A 17-year-old's death is a tragedy, and the outcome could have changed if Martin or Zimmerman acted differently on Feb. 26, 2012, but let's face the fact: A six-member jury of Zimmerman's peers found him not guilty of second-degree murder based on insufficient evidence.

Sometimes, the topic of race and criminal justice is a fair discussion point; for instance, the likelihood of a male serving time in a state or federal prison is about 4 percent, white; 28 percent, black and 16 percent, Hispanic, according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

However, when evidence aligns with the verdict, discussion on perceived racial disparities detracts from discussions that are more constructive.

Witnesses heard the gunshot and cries for help and yelping, but nobody saw anything beyond two figures fighting. An expert witness confirmed the likelihood of Trayvon straddling Zimmerman, based on the bullet's direction through the teen's clothes. Zimmerman's bloodied head confirmed his story about being bashed into concrete. And there were no racial remarks within Zimmerman's 911 call.

Jurors analyzed the evidence and didn't convict. Not because of race, but because the prosecution didn't prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that Zimmerman planned to murder Trayvon.

Meanwhile, there are substantive discussion points, like the media's scratching an itch to cry a racial foul.

NBC News edited Zimmerman's 911 call and transcript in a manner that first made this case about race. "This guy looks like he's up to no good. He looks black," the transcript initially said, ignoring a crucial line of dispatcher's dialogue that first said, "OK, and this guy — is he black, white or Hispanic?"

AP PHOTO

Above: George Zimmerman, right, is congratulated by his defense team after being found not guilty during Zimmerman's trial in Seminole Circuit Court in Sanford, Fla. on Saturday, July 13, 2013. Jurors found Zimmerman not guilty of second-degree murder in the fatal shooting of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin in Sanford, Fla. The six-member, all-woman jury deliberated for more than 15 hours over two days before reaching their decision Saturday night.

Sometimes, the topic of race and criminal justice is a fair discussion point ... However, when evidence aligns with the verdict, discussion on perceived racial disparities detracts from discussions that are more constructive.

Gary Tuchman, an Atlanta-based CNN national correspondent, gave one of the network's "top audio experts" a platform to suggest Zimmerman could have said a racial slur. Later, the network used "an even higher-tech method to analyze what was said that night," anchor Wolf Blitzer said. Tuchman and the audio analyst agreed that Zimmerman likely said the word cold, referring to a chilly rainy evening.

Why didn't CNN link the word cold with the weather? Why did it initially assume the worst?

Then there's Zimmerman's gunfire; while he acted in self-defense, jurors determined, could he have shot Trayvon to wound, rather than kill? Too often, people fatally shoot an aggressor rather than wound them until authorities arrive at the scene.

However, even that question carries some assumption about the altercation between the teenager and the man. And Florida concealed carry advocates point out that self-defense involves shooting as necessary to avoid harm not to kill or to wound. Doing otherwise could suggest a premeditated act.

That night, two people from different worlds collided. But their predetermined differences, if any, may not have been race; they may have involved perceptions of resident versus intruder, older versus younger or bigger versus smaller. No one knows the answer but Zimmerman and Trayvon.

Okaloosa's NAACP contingent and others led a meaningful discussion on Saturday as they tried to make sense of this tragedy. But sometimes, senseless tragedies are just that.

And there's still the option of a civil lawsuit against Zimmerman, so Trayvon's family and supporters may find justice and closure yet.

HUBBUB

GROUPS' INTERVENTION CAN'T BRING CLOSURE

What about all the white people killed by black people? Do you see us crying all over the news and acting ignorant? I'm sorry (Trayvon) died but you can't solve that by getting radical groups involved.

Justin Beeler

VIEWS WOULD CHANGE IF ROLES WERE REVERSED

If that was your child shot dead by a black person, you would want him to be put in jail.

I know people are tired of how the justice system works. So for all the people who think it's just about Zimmerman, think again. I am a black person who gets followed around in the store ... by people thinking that I will steal from them.

Put yourself in my shoes and you will feel the same.

Vanassa Denise Harrison

THE ISSUE ISN'T RACE

Why is this even a black or white thing? Zimmerman isn't even white ... the ignorant people want it to be a race issue!

Author releases poetic guide on battling everyday problems

Special to the News Bulletin

JACKSONVILLE — Florida author Margaret Rosenberger says that youths' exposure to violence, crime, adultery, drugs and temptation spurred her to write a guide on how to deal with these issues.

"A Guide — Ways to Succeed" instructs and explains in poetry how to respond to different life situations and describes ways to make positive choices.

"My book is full of character-building poems that cover topics from birth to subjects that individuals will deal with throughout life," Rosenberger said. "It is written to inspire, motivate, and encourage anyone who wishes to succeed in life."

The author worked with community leaders, youth and the Children's Committee to Rescue and Keep Youth from Crime. Each poem was read line by line, discussed, and approved for their positive influence.

"Sometimes life can be a puzzle," Rosenberger said. "This guidebook is full of options for success."

CRESTVIEW — After a work-induced hiatus from the creative world, a prize-winning local artist is once more at his easel and letting his muse run free.

Daniel Reid, 18, who graduated from Crestview High School in June, had been working so many after-school hours at a local burger joint he barely had time for homework, let alone creating art.

His detailed drawings of animals and nature scenes were well received at area art events, including the annual Crestview High student art show — in which he'd won multiple ribbons — and festivals.

However, long hours flipping burgers and making fries kept him from his pens, inks and paints. Resigning from the fast-food world allowed Daniel to return to creating.

"Plus, he's catching up on a lot of that rest he missed," his mom, Latina Reid, said.

After dabbling in oil painting, Daniel has embraced the medium wholeheartedly and churned out a succession of recent works, including a triptych in an abstract style new for the artist.

A Mississippi patron, a co-worker of Daniel's grandmother, commissioned the three-panel work.

"She likes traditional African painting, kind of like black tribal-style painting," Daniel said. "I did a tribal angel for her before so I know what she likes."

While the dancers were a departure from his usual style, the menacing gaze of an alligator's eye peering from murky gray waters typifies the natural subjects Daniel loves to capture in minute detail.

Painting in oils lets him execute it with his eye for detail, yet provides versatility to make slight revisions not possible once ink hits drawing paper.

"I like oils a lot better than acrylic," Daniel said. "It's a lot easier to work with."

Landing somewhere between the abstract of the dancers and the detail of the gator is his recent painting of a goose flapping its wings, in which Daniel played with a feathery, soft style.

"I'm not looking to do the same style in every painting ... it gets old after a while, doing the same thing over and over again," Daniel said. "I try to change it up a little bit."

While Daniel's inspiration leads him to diverse source material — often donated back issues of National Geographic —real life is inclining him toward a career in the U.S. Coast Guard.

But first, there's a lot more to paint — and another summer job to find.

"I have to go to a job fair and get a new job, then I'll see what I have time for," Daniel said. "I have a lot of oils and turpentine left."

Crestview artist Daniel Reid displays his new oil painting of a goose flapping its wings.

Daniel Reid's painting of an alligator casting a menacing gaze was done in the artist's familiar detailed style.

EXTENSION CONNECTION

Rains promote fungus in St. Augustine grass

North Okaloosa County's recent wet conditions — including high humidity, heavy dews and frequent afternoon and evening rains — promote gray leaf spot, a common fungal disease of St. Augustine grass.

LARRY WILLIAMS
Okaloosa Extension Agent

Individual spots or lesions first appear as brownish spots smaller than a pinhead. As they grow, they become circular and elongate lengthwise on the leaf. The spots turn brown to grayish in appearance. Numerous spots or lesions appear on an individual leaf. Heavily infected leaves begin to turn brown and wither, usually beginning at the blade's tip.

Gray leaf spot can move rapidly during prolonged warm, wet periods. Overwatering or irrigating in the evening provides the prolonged period of wetness required for disease infection.

"Severity of the disease is enhanced by application of readily available nitrogen fertilizer and is proportional to the amount of nitrogen applied," the Florida Lawn Handbook states.

Choose fertilizers that are low in nitrogen or have slow-release nitrogen. Don't overdo it in fertilizing your lawn, and do not apply a high-nitrogen fertilizer atop an already infected lawn. In addition, some lawn weed killers, such as atrazine, will increase grass' susceptibility to gray leaf spot.

Irrigate during early morning hours to minimize the time the grass is wet. Water only as needed and deeply.

Don't irrigate when it is already wet from rain. With frequent rains, very little to no supplemental irrigation has been needed in most local lawns.

Avoid leaving your irrigation timer on after adequate rainfall. It's best to operate your irrigation controller on manual so that you can monitor the lawn and provide irrigation during dry times.

You may need to use fungicide if the disease outbreak is severe. Look for products containing propiconazole, triadimefon or thiophanate-methy. Always follow the product label's directions and precautions.

VA converts 30 percent of disability claims into digital files

Special to the News Bulletin

WASHINGTON — More than 30 percent of the Department of Veterans Affairs' disability claims inventory is now digital and accessible in the VA's electronic claims processing system.

This effort transforms outdated paper processing into an electronic system to deliver disability claims decisions faster. In addition, all incoming paper claims are transformed into keyword-searchable digital records for electronic processing.

The VA is working with the Department of Defense and veterans service organizations to urge veterans and separating service members to file their disability claims electronically and, when possible, to file a Fully Developed Claim through the joint DoD-VA online portal, eBenefits.

Registered eBenefits users with a premium account can file a claim online, track the status, and access information on other benefits, including pension, education, health care, home loan and vocational rehabilitation and employment programs. Additionally, eBenefits users can use 50 self-service features that the VA and DoD have made available.

VA prioritizes disability claims for homeless veterans, those experiencing extreme financial hardship, the terminally ill, former prisoners of war, Medal of Honor recipients and veterans filing Fully Developed Claims, which is the quickest way for veterans to receive a decision on their compensation claim. See benefits.va.gov/fdc/ for assistance.

Claims for service members separating from the military for medical reasons will still be handled by priority with DoD through the Integrated Disability Evaluation System.

CHELCO PAYS EGLIN MORE THAN $170K IN CAPITAL CREDIT FUNDS

Choctawhatchee Electrical Cooperative Vice President of Member Services Steve Wolfrom, left, presents Eglin Air Force Base Col. Shawn D. Moore, 96th Civil Engineer Group commander, with two capital credits checks totaling more than $170,195 on July 15. CHELCO, a not-for-profit cooperative, earns margins annually after expenses are paid. Margins are similar to profits in a for-profit company. Eglin, as a CHELCO member and the cooperative's largest power user, earns a share of these margins based upon its usage. When financially able to do so, CHELCO retires capital credits as payments to members. Eglin is the electric cooperative's largest power user.

Although the event officially ends at 2 p.m., volunteers are willing to stay later to ensure all children receiving screenings, organizers said.

The event offers the opportunity for school and sports physicals, event chairman Malcolm Haynes said.

"A lot of times, parents don't have the time to take their children to get these physicals," he said.

Dr. Joseph Peter of Crestview Pediatrics and Dr. Michael Neuland of Allergy Partners in Crestview are sponsors. Peter will be in charge of the screening process.

Volunteers include medical practitioners from Walton County and Pensacola. Peter invited a practitioner from North Carolina to speak about children's nutrition, Haynes said.

The event also is sponsored by the 3rd Masonic District, the Kiwanis Club of Crestview, Mt. Zion A.M.E Church and Crestview city councilman Shannon Hayes.

Larry Welch assures a customer that a fresh supply of watermelons will arrive shortly at his north Crestview produce stand from his Laurel Hill farm.

"Corn, peas and watermelons are selling real well," Cooper said. "The corn sells really good. And we've been selling peanuts faster than we can boil them."

Farmers markets throughout the area are bustling as produce ripens after weeks of Northwest Florida's nourishing rain and sunshine.

"I've got some giant watermelons this year," Larry Welch said from his family's stand near Blueberry Curve, at which they sell produce grown on his Crestview plot and his Laurel Hill farm.

However, excessive rain has hurt some crops. Welch said his cantaloupe crop hasn't been as bountiful this year as in the past.

"All this rain has hurt us," he said. "Too much rain is like too little rain."

South of Laurel Hill, Farm and Garden World hosts its monthly Third Saturday Market at 8 a.m.

"It's been pretty successful," the store's Tina Alford said. "It's picked up people every month we've done it."

Now in its third month, the market, held in the store's parking lot, attracts upward of 20 farmers and private gardeners, Alford said.

Friday's Downtown Farmers Market, on the Main Street and Woodruff Avenue site of Crestview's old Curb Market, was bustling, with all available spots booked in advance.

On weekends, the impromptu market that sprouts on the lot across North Ferdon Boulevard from Goodwill features fresh peaches, produce and sometimes seafood.

"We've got it pretty good up here," Goldring said. "The people in the south end, they just grow sand."

Demolition of a former gas station on the site opposite Dunkin' Donuts is underway.

"In this project, they are going to demolish that old building and all the concrete pavement," city engineer Fred Cook said. "It's a complete redo of the whole site."

The former gas station's gasoline tanks were excavated and removed several years ago, Cook said.

Based on conversations in last week's meeting, Crestview residents could be picking up a Krystal Sackful as soon as October, Steele said.

"They said they'd be finished in 90 days and opening," Steele said.

Summer winds down for Bulldogs

By RANDY DICKSON
682-6524 | @BigRandle
randyd@crestviewbulletin.com

CRESTVIEW — Summer drills are winding down for the Crestview High School football team as the Bulldogs prepare for fall practice, which starts Aug. 5.

So far, first-year Bulldog coach Tim Hatten is pleased with the team's progress.

"Things have been good," he said. "We are right on schedule. We've had good throwing sessions and good installation sessions."

Working in threes has been a helpful strategy.

"We are working three groups: the varsity group, the JV group and the ninth-grade group," Hatten said. "We have the run session, the installation session and the lift session. It has worked exactly as I planned."

Hatten said any changes he makes in workouts between now and the start of fall practice will be minor. The Bulldogs will run a little more and throw a little more. Fans dropping by at the end of practice won't see much extra running.

"If you are a football team — I don't care who you are — you don't run your way into shape," he said. "You play your way into shape."

No matter how much running a team does for conditioning, players will cramp up during the first few weeks of the season, before being acclimated to the heat, Hatten said.

"It's still humid and it's still hot, but they have played their way into shape," he said. "Their bodies get accustomed to playing 12-minute quarters. You are out there all the time and resting some for 30 seconds (between plays), and their bodies become acclimated to that."

Similarly, once practice starts, the Bulldogs probably won't be doing two-a-days.

"I'd rather beat my hand with a hammer than I would go through two-a-days," Hatten said. "Would you prefer eight weeks to work in the summer or six days of two-a-days? You're trying to accomplish the same goal (during summer workouts as in two-a-days).

"We've had all summer to work with them. I don't think busting them four days with two-a-days is going to be the answer to the question."

Football has changed

By RANDY DICKSON
682-6524 | @BigRandle
randyd@crestviewbulletin.com

Football has changed since I played high school ball in the mid-1970s. Back in the good old days, the game was one of power and ball control.

NORTH END ZONE
Randy Dickson

Many high schools and colleges didn't throw more than five or 10 passes a game. Anyone who averaged 15 or 20 passes a game was living on the edge.

Back in that day, Bear Bryant was winning Southeastern Conference and national championships running the Wishbone, triple-option offense at Alabama.

Players weren't as big as they are today; coaches lined them up and ran the football.

From what I saw of new Crestview High School football coach Tim Hatten's offense this spring, nobody will mistake the Bulldogs for an old Alabama team.

Crestview likely will average 15 or 20 passes a half, and twice that many passes a game. The thought of keeping up with Hatten's offense has me thinking about checking to see if my health insurance policy covers oxygen at halftime.

I'll be hoping the Bulldogs score a lot of quick touchdowns and the other team's offense can hold onto the ball for a few plays so I can catch my breath. I know it's going to be a wild fall.

Things won't be so breathtaking at Baker School, where Matt Brunson will play the old ball control football that he loves and has embraced throughout his coaching career.

The Gators will be more likely to score on a long run by D.J. Thomas than they will on a long pass from Jon Beck or Ben Crowson.

The truth is there is no right way of doing things. Each coach must develop his philosophy and decide how he can implement it with his players.

Fortunately, for Hatten, the Bulldogs have skill position players that can stretch the field. And Brunson has the kids that take pride in power football.

Rain can't slow football camp

By RANDY DICKSON
682-6524 | @BigRandle
randyd@crestviewbulletin.com

CRESTVIEW — Rainy conditions ended the Crestview Bulldog Football Camp's first session on Monday evening.

Rain aside, everything seemed to go well at the camp, and the 50 or so players ages 4-12 seemed to have a good time.

The camp was the first under the direction of first-year Bulldog head coach Tim Hatten, who was pleased with the number of campers.

"For it being our first year and it looking like it was going to rain, those are good numbers to start with," he said.

The camp opened with about 15 minutes of stretching before moving into drills.

"We just want to show the kids a little bit of structure and how to move around with some agility stuff," Hatten said. "We want to help them know things about every position in football. Some of my best football players as skill players started off as linemen. so you never know what they are going to do.

"We teach all of them a little about every position if we can. We want to give them a base of knowledge of every position, and that's what we were doing when the rain hit."

The campers received coaching at receiver, linebacker, defensive back, offensive line, defensive line, quarterback and running back.

"... We were rotating around to seven different stations of football and teaching them a little," Hatten said. "It's always exciting to see young kids learning the game."

'When you have a kid that comes out there and knows nothing about the game, it's kind of fun to watch them learn more than trying to project what they are going to be.'

Hatten wasn't hoping to use the camp to evaluate prospects for the future.

"You will see the future of our program at the middle schools," he said. "As I spend more time in Crestview we are going to evaluate what we have coming up."

The biggest goal for the camp was establishing the Crestview High School football team's presence in the community.

"We want to build a relationship with them," Hatten said. "A couple of them will stick with you and you will know their names and they will come out every year.

"That's kind of what we are hoping to do."

RANDY DICKSON | News Bulletin

Crestview High School quarterback Corey Armstrong, right, pitches the ball to Jaylynne Robinson on a reverse during Monday's workout.

Two-a-days used to be the time for installing schemes and player conditioning — the things the Bulldogs have been working on throughout the summer.

"In the old days, you left school at the end of May and you came back in August and nobody saw you in June or July," Hatten said. "There were no team workouts, no conditioning, no seven-on-seven. Now you've got basically eight weeks to work kids and do the same thing you did during the two-a-days."

The first week the Bulldogs will practice in the morning, and then they'll move to afternoon practices Aug. 12, when teacher workdays start, he said.

Hatten's biggest concern heading into the season is minimizing turnovers.

"It's just one of those things where you throw it up and go, and hope you don't make mistakes, and hope (quarterback) Khalil (Foster) has learned a lot," he said. "Corey (Armstrong) has looked good in the summer, sometimes. Sometimes he hasn't (looked good)...

"If you control turnovers and don't have any problems in the kicking game, the rest of it will take care of itself."

CHANGED

Southeastern Conference Media Days, University of Arkansas head coach Bret Bielema complained about no huddle, spread offenses. He rightfully pointed out that up-tempo offenses don't allow for defensive substitution.

He argued that a player won't be as fresh on the 15th play of a drive as he was on the fifth play. That's just common sense.

Of course, what Bielema didn't address was the defense can get off the field by stopping the offense on three downs or forcing a turnover.

It seems as if Bielema is still living in the 1970s or 80s.

I still prefer a physical game of smash mouth football — in which a player can test his manhood with bone-jarring collisions — but I understand the game has changed.

Today's players love fast, high-power offenses. It's their game now, and I hope they will love it as much 30 years from now as they do today.

Love of the game and memories of time on the field stay with you forever.

Bulldogs reunite for class' 30th anniversary

FROM STAFF REPORTS

CRESTVIEW — The Crestview High School Class of 1983 relived their school days during last weekend's reunion.

When they proceeded into Bulldog history, Kenny Rogers' "Through the Years" was the class song, and the Big Red Machine had 100 members and three tubas.

"The Crestview Bulldogs experienced their best three-year record in the history of Crestview High School: 27-3 regular season (over three years) and back-to-back District Champs and Regional Runner Ups," reunion co-organizer Carolyn Smith said.

These and other memories were revived Friday and Saturday, when more than 60 members of the 234-member class that graduated June 3, 1983, regrouped for the first time in 10 years.

The reunion began with an informal mixer Friday evening at Hideaway Pizza on Main Street. A family picnic was Saturday at Gum Creek Lodge in Baker. The class' main event was Saturday evening at the Elks Lodge on Okaloosa Island.

ROCKY ROAD

PHOTOS BY BRIAN HUGHES | News Bulletin

Railroad bed ballast used to build up Davis Road in the 1990s resurfaces after grading and can include metal railroad spikes and debris.

Davis Road residents want better maintenance

By BRIAN HUGHES
682-6524 | @cnbBrian
brianh@crestviewbulletin.com

SVEA — Some residents say Okaloosa County doesn't even address road concerns, but Davis Road residents say the county doesn't make proper repairs.

Davis Road, a dirt country lane, runs from State Road 85 north to the Alabama state line through the Svea community east of Laurel Hill. In dry weather, it's a drive through verdant farmland and beneath leafy shade trees. However, when it rains, Davis Road becomes a quagmire, resident Hazel Harper said.

"It's just a mess down here," she said. "Some of us have small cars. We're not all truck drivers."

Clay Simmons, Okaloosa County Public Works Roads Division manager, said plans are in place to return Davis to passable condition.

"When you got the kind of rainfall we've had of late, the routine problems have been amplified," he said.

Once washouts and standing water issues are addressed, the road will return to routine weekly grading maintenance, Simmons said.

However, Mike Harper, Hazel's son and neighbor, said the county doesn't do the maintenance correctly.

"When they grade the road, they just churn up the top layer of rocks," he said. "They don't lower the blade (of the grader) enough to grade the potholes down. When they grade, they don't do it properly."

Before grading, there was little standing water at the entrance of David Osborne's driveway and around his mailbox. Scraping soil from the side of the road created a depression that three days after recent rains was still a large puddle.

Farther south, runoff from a large piece of recently logged property has started flooding the road, causing ruts and potholes as traffic passes, Hazel Harper said.

"It fills up so heavily with water that it runs across the road," she said.

The county is aware of the drainage problem and hopes to address it through regular weekly grading, Simmons said.

In addition, the county hopes to pave Davis Road next year, he said.

In the meantime, Harper said an ongoing problem is ballast the county scooped from an abandoned railroad bed in the 1990s to build up Davis Road.

Mixed in with rocks — some jagged enough to embed in vehicle tires — was metal debris including railroad spikes and pieces of hardware that fell off trains.

Although the county cleared much of the rocks and debris several years ago, ongoing maintenance and heavy rains reveal pockets of the sharp rocks and occasional pieces of metal.

Hazel Harper said the county has replaced five of her tires, though a request for reimbursement for a tire perforated by one of the sharp ballast rocks was denied.

"Every time I go into Strickland Tires, he laughs and says, 'They graded your road again, didn't they?'" Harper said.
