

Antique Outboards on display

Enjoy seeing Antique Outboard Motors and Old Wood Boats from the 1920s, 30s, 40s, and 1950s? Well if you do, The South Florida GATOR Chapter of The Antique Outboard Motor and Boat Club will be holding a show on Saturday, Nov. 8, from, 10 a.m.-3 p.m., at The Fisheating Creek Campground, Palmdale, off Highway U.S. 27 just North of Moorhaven and Clewiston.

The show is open to the public and there is no charge.

There will be displays of antique and classic outboard motors and boats.

There will be other nautical displays and as the show is open to the public the public can bring any old outboard they may have lying around in their garage or shed and get an honest, true valuation for it and to find out the value of their old outboard motor.

Judging will take place and awards given for the best motors and boats.

Membership applications and an overview of the club's activities will be discussed with those who are interested. The organization is a public charitable organization and is dedicated to preserve the historical significance of older boats and outboard motors since they were first produced in the early 1900s.

Foodborne illnesses show decline

TALLAHASSEE—The Florida Department of Health (DOH) recently made the 2007 food/waterborne illness statistics available, proving that the number of food and water borne illnesses continues to decline in Florida.

The DOH reports that in 2007 there were 119 food/waterborne illness outbreaks, which is a decrease from 148 in 2006 and a sharp decrease from 433 outbreaks in 1997. This 72 percent decrease in the number of food/waterborne illnesses throughout 10 years is a direct result of more aggressive food safety regulations in Florida.

Restaurants typically account for 75 percent of the total number of food/waterborne illness outbreaks in Florida, and were the primary culprit for the high foodborne illness outbreaks prior to 2000 when the state enacted a proactive measure that required Florida restaurants to train all employees who touch, handle or come into contact with food. Since the initiation of this requirement, the restaurant-specific and overall food/waterborne illness numbers have decreased substantially.

"I think the correlation between the huge decrease in the number of foodborne illness outbreaks and the mandatory training of all food handlers explains why we're seeing a continual decline in foodborne illness outbreaks," says Rick Wallace, CEO of TrainSafe, a state-approved food safety provider in Florida. "TrainSafe is being offered to Florida's restaurants because we understand that we have something important to teach that will really affect businesses, the industry and consumers, and we believe that this training should be as inexpensive as possible and as entertaining as it is informative."

Florida is the only state that has enacted a requirement for restaurant employees to become trained in food safety.

Some organizations continue to claim that Florida has the highest number of reported foodborne illness outbreaks in the Country, but state officials say that this claim is not accurate because unlike other states, Florida reports both suspected and confirmed outbreaks.

How to beat flu season

By Brenda Barnes

Get ready everyone, 'tis the season, flu season I mean. Yearly flu vaccinations should begin in September or as soon as the vaccine is available.

People can start getting the flu as early as October, but it usually peaks in January. The flu viruses are usually spread when an infected person doesn't cover their mouth when they cough or sneeze. Sometimes people get infected from touching something with flu viruses on it.

Then before they get a chance to wash their hands, they end up touching their nose, eyes, or mouth and "presto," you have just infected yourself with the flu virus!

Hand washing is a great way to help protect yourself. Wash your hands often and try not to touch your face (don't rub those tired eyes until you've washed your hands!). Be sure to cover your mouth when you cough or sneeze. Don't use your hand!

Use a tissue, or get into the habit of coughing and sneezing into the bend of your arm. Try to keep your distance from anyone that's sick, and if you're the one who's sick, keep your distance from others or stay home!

Some symptoms of flu can include fever, headache, extreme tiredness, dry cough, sore throat, rummy or stuffy nose, and muscle aches.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, people can infect others starting 1 day before symptoms develop and up to 5 days after becoming sick.

That means you might actually pass on the flu to someone else before you even know that you are sick! The best way to prevent the flu is to get a flu shot each fall. When you start seeing pumpkins, it's time to get your flu shot! Some people think that you can get the flu from the shot, but the viruses in the flu shot are killed (inactivated), so you can't get the flu from getting a flu shot!

There are some minor effects that can occur and generally only last a couple of days. Some effects can include mild soreness, redness or swelling in the area where the shot was given.

Or some may experience a low grade fever and mild body aches, but most people that get a flu shot have no serious problems from it. Talk to your doctor about recommendations for getting a flu shot.

Remember, be healthy and be happy!
