Picture the 226-foot-tall Florida Citrus Tower in Clermont turned into a giant Muslim Mosque, where an Islamic call to worship would be broadcast from its speakers across the countryside.

It's hard to imagine, but not for longtime resident Greg Homan, who wants to sell the iconic tourist attraction to the city for $2.5 million. Although he's considered putting the tower on the market officially, the thought of unknown private buyers makes him nervous.

"I've always said all along that Clermont, or the Chamber (of Commerce), or something along those lines, should be the next owners of the tower," Homan said, fearing a private owner might let the tower fall into disrepair.

"The other thing I thought of is that if I found a worthy private investor of the tower, and they turned around and sold it to a Muslim mosque, and they did a call to worship off the top of it a couple of times a day ... I'm just throwing (out) an example and not trying to spook you, but it's important for the city that you control it," he told city council members at a workshop this week.

The tower was built in 1956 to allow visitors to observe the miles of Central Florida orange groves before they turned into rooftops. At more than 500 feet above sea level, it is the highest observation point in the state.

The tower was one of several attractions that tourists went out of their way to visit before Walt Disney ever considered building a theme park in

Lake moving to ban synthetic marijuana

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer
livi.stanford@dailyccommercial.com

Lake County commissioners are moving forward with plans to ban the sale of synthetic marijuana countywide.

Commissioners last week agreed to advertise an ordinance banning the drug, which health experts and the Lake County Sheriff's Office say has an adverse effect on children.

Commonly marketed as potpourri, incense or bath salts, and packaged in colorful cellophane wrappers with brand names like Mr. Happy, synthetic marijuana is frequently sold in convenience stores and smoke shops. Health experts say the substances can cause psychotic episodes in those that smoke them.

Bath salts, meanwhile, are often sold as over-the-counter products used for bathing, but can be swallowed, snorted, smoked or injected to obtain a euphoric effect.

Commissioner Sean Parks pushed for the ordinance after hearing about a child who went into cardiac arrest from taking the drug.

"The chemicals we are discussing today pose a big danger to our residents," he said. "They are poisons that are being marketed to our kids. As the father of three young kids, it scares me. I think this will give the sheriff's department a tool to help tackle this issue."

The drugs are sold as "incense," with exotic names like K2, Black Mamba and Spice. Other brands names appear to target children, like

Residents air concerns on gas pipeline

ROXANNE BROWN | Staff Writer
roxanne.brown@dailyccommercial.com

While a proposed natural gas pipeline through Lake and Sumter counties might bring jobs and reduce power plant emissions, residents drilled home a common plea last week at a public meeting in Clermont: Can it go someplace else?

"We own 30 acres in Center Hill and we adamantly oppose the pipeline," said Diane Cochran, who along with husband, Joe, own 30 acres where they are building their retirement farm to fulfill a lifelong dream.

Federal Energy Regulator

Commission (FERC) officials hosted the last of 13 public meetings in Central Florida March 27, this one at the Citrus Tower, as part of the review process for Sabal Trail Transmissions' plans to build a 465-mile-long natural gas pipeline from Tallapoosa County in Alabama to Osceola County. Some project maps have it cutting straight across Sumter County and the southwestern corner of Lake County.

"We're here to hear the comments, concerns and things people want to say about any part of these projects, because we realize that nobody knows the area like the people who live here," said Jessica Harris, a FERC Environmental Project Manager and Deputy Project Manager on this project. "Hearing from residents give us insight as to things that are important to the area and lets us know what we need to be focusing on."

For Cochran, it was important that another route for the pipeline be found.

"This big company wanting to build this pipeline has turned our dream into a nightmare," said Cochran, whose property would be cut in half by the Scooby Snacks, Mad Hatter and Joker.

The products are made from crushed leaves or garden trash and then sprayed with powerful concentrated laboratory-synthesized chemicals that resemble THC, the active mind-altering ingredient in marijuana, according to Dr. Morton Levitt, senior associate dean for faculty affairs and professor of clinical biomedical science at Florida Atlantic University.

In 2013, Florida outlawed more than 140 chemicals used in synthetic marijuana. Levitt said manufacturers have found ways around the ban by altering the chemical formulations minimally.

"The problem is they keep continuously changing the nomenclature of the chemical," said Cpl. Tom Willis with the narcotics unit of the Lake County Sheriff's Office. "Once the Florida Department of Law Enforcement gets it on the list for illegal substances, the chemists change the chemical."

Willis said there is a six-month gap between when law enforcement identifies the new substance and when it is put on the list of banned substances.

Children are using the drug more than adults, Willis said.

"The majority of our complaints are in reference to parents calling about the stuff," he said. Sheriff Gary Borders also appeared before the commission in support of the ordinance.

Clinicians treating adolescents at Lifestream, a behavioral health and social services organization that provides inpatient and outpatient treatment, reported they had 123 clients over the past year who used synthetic marijuana.

The problem is "enormous" among adolescents, the clinicians — who could not be identified because of confidentiality issues — wrote in an email to the Daily Commercial.

"Society is not as harsh as it used to be," said Lori Shallcross, child clinical services director at Lifestream, referring to attitudes toward marijuana use in general. "Therefore, youth view it as not too bad or no worse than alcohol."

Clinicians reported to Shallcross that the drug could have an effect on the brain.

"It is well documented to be 'risky' in that is hard to judge how much is too much, and what gets a teen high on one day might lead that child to the brink of death on the next day," the clinician wrote.

Debi MacIntyre, executive director of the Safe Climate Coalition of Lake County, a community coalition that focuses on youth substance abuse and violence prevention, said the use of synthetic marijuana causes psychological and physical side effects.

"With K2 or Spice you have everything from extreme nervousness to hallucinations and seizures," she told commissioners. "Bath salts are more extreme, causing paranoia, psychosis and violent behavior."

Adolescents' interest in drugs is starting at a young age with reports of children in an elementary school crushing up Smarties candies and trying to snort them to replicate drug behavior, MacIntyre said.

"People are having psychotic breaks and going into a deep psychosis they are not coming out of," she said.

A recent 2012 Florida Youth Substance Abuse Survey of ninth to 12th graders in Lake and Sumter counties found that 5.8 percent of Lake and 4.2 percent of Sumter students reported synthetic marijuana use in the past 30 days.

In the first six months of 2012 there were 375 calls per month of people becoming ill on Spice, according to the Florida Poison Information Center.

Those calls are trending upward, according to county officials.

Hillsborough, Broward, Miami-Dade, Hernando and Pasco counties have instituted similar ordinances, and officials claim these laws have been effective in deterring the problem.

In Hillsborough County, the sale of the drug has almost been wiped out, according to Larry McKinnon, detective with the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office.

If the ordinance is adopted in the county, those who violate it will face a civil fine of $500 for the first offense and $1,000 for any repeat violation within five years of a previous offense, according to the ordinance.

CONCERN

gas transmission line. It would be located only 121 feet from the couple's water well and less than that from their backyard fire pit, putting them in danger, she said.

"Here we are trying to save our property from a big corporation whose sole intent is to make billions of dollars, while our land is forever destroyed if it's put there," Cochran said.

Some 70 percent of the pipeline will follow rights-of-way, leaving 30 percent crossing private property, some of which is located on environmentally sensitive lands such as the Green Swamp. The swamp sits atop the Floridan Aquifer, the state's underground water supply.

"Every drop of water counts and there are alternate routes we think can work for everyone involved," resident Peggy Cox said. "If taken, (an alternate route), the water will continue flowing where it should be flowing, so we'd like them to move it (the pipeline)."

Ron Hart, Water Resources Program Manager with the Lake County Water Authority, said his main concern was the environment.

"Water flow is sensitive and the chosen path of the flow that goes in line with the big and little creek systems is historically north and south," he said. "These are the creeks that feed into Withlacoochee and the Clermont Chain of Lakes. We want to make sure that when there is water flowing, the same volume flows into the Clermont chain — post pipeline construction — as what is flowing now."

Jay W. Small, an Orlando attorney representing private landowners, said people across the country who have had pipelines placed on their properties have had bad experiences.

"If you have two pieces of property, one with the pipeline and one without the pipeline, that you are seriously considering, which one would you buy?" he asked. "It's a concern that people in the real estate market have about this in the future."

To build the pipeline, the company has said it will need a corridor at least 100 feet wide for a 24- to 36-inch pipeline that will eventually carry up to 1 billion cubic feet of natural gas per day. The pipe would be laid about eight feet below the surface and, where necessary, the company would tunnel beneath roads and waterways.

FERC Environmental Project Manager John Peconom said the agency's five member board — along with input from residents and working with engineers, biologists and other specialists — "will ultimately decide whether or not to approve project."

"We want to identify the impacts of projects and research how to minimize those impacts," Peconom said.

Not everyone at the meeting was opposed to the project, like attorney Dan Robuck.

"Power companies are working to get rid of clouds from emission problems and go to gas, so we need this trail, because the more gas we have, the cheaper it will stay," Robuck said.

But Cochran's main environmental concern was her farm, where she feared her farm equipment could ignite a gas leak.

"My family and I will never feel safe on our property and will never feel safe having our children and grandchildren visit us on our property, and that rocks me to my core," she said.

FERC representative say people have until April 21 to file an 'Information Request' form at www.ferc.gov.

Work on the pipeline is still four years away, documents show.

Mental health care a wise investment

Florida is still grappling with a variety of mental health issues, and many of its residents need help.

The 60-day legislative session runs through May 2. In that time, the state has some extra money to consider. Surplus estimates range as high as $1.2 billion.

Much of the discussion so far has been of tax cuts and new education funding. And so it should be.

However, mental health treatment and drug and alcohol rehabilitation have been kept at tight funding levels through the recession and recovery years, even as surpluses began to appear.

Funding could have been worse, mental health officials concede, but progress often was not made as state lawmakers maintained the status quo on money, declining to break new ground for centers that offer drug rehabilitation, crisis stabilization and mental health care.

Gov. Rick Scott prides himself on removing fat from the annual state budget and deserves a reputation for being a pork cutter.

However, facilities and programs for mentally ill and emotionally distressed people are not pork. Such services are needed in every region, and they will need to be beefed up as the state's population grows into the next decade.

Here in Lake County, for example, officials at LifeStream, the largest provider of mental health services in the community, estimate a fraction of the people needing mental health services are receiving them.

And about the time Scott came into office, in early 2011, Florida was known as the prescription-pill capital of the United States. The majority of powerful painkillers in the nation were being prescribed in Florida. Addiction was growing.

Now that Florida has cracked down on prescription-pill abuse, addicts have turned to other narcotics and to alcohol. Methamphetamine addiction is a plague on the Sunshine State.

Florida also is racked by a shortage of beds for victims of domestic violence. More than 2,000 people were turned away from domestic-violence shelters across Florida last year because there weren't enough beds for those seeking refuge from their abusers.

Mental health challenges are broad and deep in Florida.

That is why making reasonable increases to mental health funding in the state budget, every year, makes sense. Such spending is an investment, not a money loser.

For every Floridian treated for depression, addiction, domestic abuse and other such problems, the likelihood of criminal behavior, unemployment, financial distress, divorce, broken families or suicide decreases. It's an investment that the Legislature and Scott must keep in mind this year as they look at a budget that has extra money.

LETTER of the WEEK

The state's misplaced priorities: Athletic teams get rich while the education system decays

Some interesting reads in a recent morning paper. Maintaining our district schools must be a priority, according to the editorial board. Vital equipment and features of buildings need repair or replacement, including roofs and air conditioning units.

School district officials have a backlog of maintenance repair work and would do what is needed if they could afford it. It suggests that the legislators of Lake County seek a solution promptly, but such a solution might prove hard to find because not only do the Lake County schools rely on school funding but so do other county school districts, not to mention Florida's state colleges and universities.

Then I turned to page B1 to find that Florida coach Billy Donovan has received bonuses and raises so that his salary for this year will be $3.9 million.

Obviously our priorities are somewhat misplaced. Should the basketball team win the NCAA championship trophy — that and $1.79 will get other residents in the state a cup of coffee.

Donovan also got a bonus of $250,000 for "longevity." I guess that doesn't take into account that he once resigned to coach the Orlando Magic for one day before resigning that position to go back to the University of Florida.

Where does it stop? We can pay millions to coaches, and to maintain sports facilities, but not the basic school structures? This leaves the children to suffer while the professional sports farm teams soak up state dollars.

When will the Legislature and various state officials stand up and say, "Enough, our children deserve better."

Teachers should not coddle students

In reply to a story from March 19, "Grades can only go so low," by Livi Stanford, in the Daily Commercial: I find it ridiculous that school teachers feel they have to coddle students so they don't drop out of school.

When I was living in North Carolina, my daughter had very good schooling previously in Connecticut and when she was doing very well they refused to skip her to a grade up. They were teaching her how to add one plus one in the fifth grade!

I'm sorry, but if a child can't pass the grade they are in, they have no excuse to move to the next grade. Also, why do we have to teach languages when we live in the United States?

When I hear that professional athletes can barely read at the fourth grade level and they graduate from college, it makes me sick.

When I was in public school, the teaching was very deliberate. Education was a top priority for my parents and no one "changed grades."

Coddling uneducated children doesn't help them succeed.

Whatever happened to earning your grades for a better life?

Shame on the president

I don't know why Russia and Uganda have chosen to outlaw homosexuality.

Russia has a history of being a godless country and Uganda does not have a history of following God's word. Maybe it is because they have knowledge of biblical history where God destroyed people, cities, nations and even empires because they had embraced homosexuality and other immoral practices.

Whatever their reasons, I salute their governments for rejecting it. And I condemn President Obama and his supporters for their position and for trying to intimidate those people into following his example.

Not only is Obama tempting God into destroying the USA, but he wants the whole world to go to hell with him. Shame on Obama and all of his supporters.

The sad part of this story is that there are too many people who call themselves Christians who have supported him, and still do. They say that politics and religion do not mix.

But God's word should guide us through our entire life if we expect to avoid the fires of hell.

New York investor buys Lake Square Mall for $13.28M

AUSTIN FULLER | Staff Writer
austin.fuller@dailyccommercial.com

Kohan Retail Investment Group of Great Neck, N.Y., is the new owner of the Lake Square Mall, according to Mike Kohan of the group.

The deal closed on March 17 for $13.28 million, Kohan said.

He said he has plans to revitalize the mall by bringing in more tenants, filling in vacancies, having more events and marketing and fixing deferred maintenance.

"We're gonna get our hands around it and (we're going to) try to make the best out of it," Kohan said.

He said he saw a lot of opportunity in the mall because of its location.

Business tax registration documents filed with the city of Leesburg show Kohan going by the last name of Kohansieh.

According to multiple media reports, Kohan has had mixed results with some of the malls he has bought, including two that officials tried to close because they were so dilapidated. Kohan, though, has said that is part of the nature of buying distressed malls.

"It's a very, very challenging situation for you to bring another anchor, which is close to impossible, but we are trying. We are trying," he said in an interview in February.

Built in 1980, the 470,943-square-foot mall has seen reduced foot traffic over the past few years, and two under-performing anchor stores, Target and J.C. Penney, both recently announced closings.

Kohan said he is working with many potential tenants

BRETT LE BLANC / DAILY COMMERCIAL

A man walks into the Lake Square Mall in Leesburg Wednesday. The Kohan Retail Investment Group from New York recently purchased the mall for $13.28 million. Mike Kohan, owner of the group, said they are in talks with multiple tenants to replace the soon-to-close J.C. Penney store, and hope to fill other vacancies in the mall.

DID YOU KNOW?

■ The 470,943-square-foot Lake Square Mall has been dropping in value over the past 34 years.

■ In 1980, General Growth Properties built the mall at 10401 U.S. Highway 441.

■ In 1984, General Growth Properties sold the mall to Equitable Life Assurance for $33.9 million.

■ In 1998, Equitable Life Assurance sold the mall to Macerich for $28.9 million.

■ In March, Macerich sold the mall to Kohan Retail Investment Group for $13.2 million.

to replace J.C. Penney as an anchor, but he could not guarantee anything.

"We're just gonna do our best to try to facilitate a deal with some other anchors," Kohan said Wednesday.

Target, which closed Feb. 1, owns its 87,842-square-foot store space and is actively marketing it with CBRE, a real-estate services company with 332 offices in 42 counties. It is listed with CBRE for a price of $2,250,000.

Sandi Moore, the executive director of the Leesburg Area Chamber of Commerce, said the mall is one of the community's biggest challenges and that struggling malls are a common problem.

She said she was hopeful that Kohan would be able to fill vacancies there.

"The mall, I think historically over the years, has kind of struggled. I hope that some new blood coming into the city (with) maybe a fresh vision will help the situation," Moore said. "I really hope that they can do that and I hope that our community will support that effort."

Robert Chandler, Lake County's director of economic development and tourism department, agreed that the older type of indoor malls nationally are struggling.

"Everybody now is going toward the outdoor kind of walkable town center-type things. ... That's kind of the new model for these regional shopping centers," Chandler said. "The indoor malls, you really have to be exceptional to continue to drive demand."

He said from personal observations the demand at the mall has dropped in the last five to 10 years.

"It's not the same type of a destination shopping center as maybe it was in the 90s," Chandler said.

Robert Sargent, public information officer for the city of Leesburg, said the mall is a great commercial asset and he hopes with the sale things will grow from here.

Sargent said the city spoke with Kohan after the initial auction of the mall.

"Our initial interaction that we've had with Mr. Kohan is that he ... is displaying a strong commitment to want to do something with that property. Not to just leave it as is, but to do something to make a more effective use of the property," Sargent said.

He believes Kohan's experience in managing malls is an advantage.

Kohan targets older malls. In fact, his company's website says, "The Kohan Retail Investment Group sees the future of aging malls as a place of mixed use that is more than just for shopping. (Malls) are social settings where people interact with one another and small businesses can get a boost in a public and well-trafficked platform."

The Daily Commercial previously reported that the mall sold in a November online auction for $13.6 million.

Orlando. Other old-time attractions still operating today include Bok Tower Gardens in Lake Wales, Sunken Gardens in St. Petersburg, Gatorland in Orlando, Sarasota Jungle Gardens in Sarasota, Monkey Jungle and Parrot Jungle in Miami, Marineland in St. Augustine, Cypress Gardens (now Legoland) in Winter Haven, Silver Springs in Ocala and Weeki Wachee Springs in Spring Hill.

Homan said he won a scholarship to then-Lake Sumter Community College based on a picture he drew of the tower while attending Clermont High School. In 1995, he purchased the tower and, since then, it's brought him both work, profit and the satisfaction of knowing that he's kept the structure in good condition.

Now, at age 58, Homan said he's ready to sell but doesn't want just anyone purchasing the tower.

"It's been a good ride, but I've reached my limit and wherewithal, financially, age-wise and mentally, regarding what I can do with it," Homan said. "I need someone to take it to the next level and in my opinion, the city of Clermont is the only worthy buyer. I know I'm probably shooting myself in the foot for saying that, but, in my heart, I feel it's true."

Homan said he and his wife, Suzie, purchased the tower for $750,000 in 1995 in order to nurse it back to health. He said the previous owners did not maintain the tower. A roof replacement, extensive cleaning, renovations, paint and other things cost him an additional $1 million.

The tower comes with 11,000 square feet of office space, a 1,000-square-foot kitchen and an elevator to the observation decks, Homan said. He also disclosed he pays about $6,000 in taxes on the property each year.

According to Homan, the tower cannot be torn down because of agreements with companies that have placed antennas on the top of it.

Mayor Hal Turville, a lifelong resident of Clermont, questioned the tower's profitability and whether it was the city's place to take on the task of running a business.

Mayor Pro Tem Keith Mullins said he would like to hear what people in the area had to say about the issue.

"I think I'd rather see it in quasi-government hands," he said.

City Manager Darren Gray and Councilman Tim Bates were worried about the cost.

"I agree with Greg that the Citrus Tower is a landmark for us," Gray said. "But I just look at finances and how there are other needs the community wants, and other needs out there, and do we have the funding to actually purchase this?" Gray asked. "... I'm not saying we can't work with other groups."

At the end of the workshop, the consensus among council members — since no votes can be taken at workshops — was to advance the issue to a future council meeting, where council members, with public input, can discuss whether or not to purchase.

RV park church draws hundreds

TERESA CAMPBELL | Staff Writer
theresacampbell@dailyccommercial.com

For three decades, from November to March, the Southern Palms RV Resort in Eustis has offered Sunday worship service for travelers from all over the country and Canada.

Sunday's 10 a.m. service was the last of the 30th season, with a closing service and communion in the park's fellowship hall, led by the Rev. Charles Granger, 82, of DeLand. An average of 150 to 200 people — just about all of the RVers — have attended on Sundays over the years.

"I love meeting such a wonderful group of people, a cross-section of Americana and the number of Canadians who come down here, too," Granger said.

Christmas Eve is one of the biggest services, along with a memorial service on the first Sunday in February. "We memorialize all of the people who have died the previous year who were a part of this fellowship here," the pastor said.

"They call it a church, but there is no membership," Granger said of the services at the resort, located near Lake County Fairgrounds. "This is just people coming together."

Granger recalled the park belonged to the city of Eustis before it was sold to individuals who owned parks all over the country. Granger had been serving as interim pastor at the First Baptist Church in Eustis when he was asked if he could preach at the RV park.

"My first Sunday, 82 people were sitting here," Granger said. "And what they told me was 80 percent of the people who were here for that service did not go to church anywhere on Sunday. I came back the next Sunday and we had 150 or so."

During his time of ministering at Southern Palms, Granger was serving as chaplain and campus minister at Stetson University.

"It was a great time; I was working with both age groups," he said of ministering to college kids during the week and to seniors on Sundays.

"I was 52 when I started (at Southern Palms) and I thought they were a bunch of old folks, and now I'm older than most of them over here."

In those early years, he arranged for some Stetson students to preach at the RV park.

"Every one of them would come to my office on Monday morning saying, 'Let me go again!' They loved coming over here," Granger said. He remained at the private college for 21 years before retiring in 1996 at age 65.

The Florida native recalled living three blocks from a Jacksonville church during his youth as the oldest of five children, yet

Council members request public forum for Wellness Way plan

ROXANNE BROWN and LIVI STANFORD
news@dailyccommercial.com

Clermont City Council members expressed interest last week in holding a public forum about the Wellness Way Sector Plan to give city officials and the public a chance to weigh in on plans for the 16,000-acre project.

City Manager Darren Gray said he had spoken to Lake County Commissioner Sean Parks, one of the key movers behind the Wellness Way effort, to relay "concerns the council had about public input and the amount of time, that we don't want to be rushed or pushed."

He noted that a consultant working on the plan — a mix of homes and businesses that will transform that corner of the county — has proposed some changes.

"You know when we first heard that, about three or four months ago, by a consultant that came here, we were all not in favor of it the way it was presented."

Gray said the consultant wanted to make that presentation to the county commissioners and to the council at the same time.

After Gray's appeal, the council considered having a regular City Council meeting following the presentation, then scheduling a public forum between the county and the city, but that idea was dismissed quickly.

"You know, this is the future of the city and to try to cut and not have any public input is wrong," Councilman Ray Goodgame said.

Council members ultimately agreed to have Gray set up a joint meeting with the county directly following the presentation by the consultant.

The meeting with the county could occur on April 22 at the community center rather than the council chambers and would be the night's city council meeting, with the sector plan as the only item on the agenda.

"I don't care what the county commissioners say, the ones that want to stay can stay," Goodgame said. "If they don't want to stay past 6 o'clock then fine, but I think we ought to start at 7 o'clock and have public input and dis-

"I don't think anyone is withholding information. The final product is going to be presented to both boards on April 22. There has been an ample opportunity for concerns and issues to be raised."

cuss the sector plan and discuss the sector plan with the public, give them our ideas, because they'll probably be a little different than what the county wants to do."

Goodgame even said he wouldn't mind foregoing a city meeting on that night to have the joint meeting instead.

Goodgame, however,

expressed reservations about whether the county was really interested in the city's opinions about the project, or those of Clermont residents.

"I don't think the county wants to hear what we have to say," he said.

Councilman Rick Van Wagner agreed with Goodgame and said it's exactly why the joint meeting and public forum is a must.

However, county officials said it is premature to say Clermont's concerns have not been heard because the plan has not been finalized.

There have been several public meetings on Wellness Way, county officials also said, where public comment has been allowed.

"The concerns that were raised by the city of Clermont and residents several months ago were all heard by our staff," Commissioner Leslie Campione said. "I don't think anyone is withholding information. The final product is going to be presented to both boards on April 22."

Campione added, "There were a series of public meetings so we could get input from property owners, stakeholders, and everyone that cared enough to attend those meetings had an opportunity to have their concerns heard."

"There has been an ample opportunity for concerns and issues to be raised."

There will be a public hearing on the plan before it is adopted.

his family did not attend church.

"We had never been in anybody's church," he said. "No one ever invited me to church because of my language. I used to cuss as good as any sailor at Jacksonville Naval Air Station," he said. "I could out-cuss them."

The turning point in Granger's life was his junior year of high school.

"God spoke to me in a Jewish grocery store on a Saturday afternoon," said Granger, who was sacking potatoes when he heard an audible voice saying, 'You go to church tomorrow.' I looked around the store because I thought there was a ventriloquist practicing a voice. I looked around the store and there wasn't a soul in sight near where I was. I was in the produce section all by myself."

He put the message out of his mind.

"I went out and raised hell, caroused with the guys, just like I did every Saturday night with a bunch of high school boys," he said. "The next morning I was wide awake by 8 o'clock. It was just gnawing at me that I had to go to church, and I literally sneaked out of the house and went up to the little Baptist church three blocks away. When I walked in the church, people said, 'What is he doing here?'"

Granger was baptized that same school year, in December of 1946. "Eventually, all four of my siblings and my mother and father came into the church," he said.

He was working in a shop repairing telephones when he said the Lord spoke to him a second time.

"I got stopped in my tracks when I heard, 'I want you to go preach.' And I thought I didn't want to be a part of it," he said.

Now the Baptist minister is glad he listened to the Lord.

"And that is what I encourage people to do — listen to the spirit that is speaking to you, not what somebody else is telling you," Granger said.

The pastor has gone through hip and knee replacements and a battle with lymphoma cancer, but strives to continue inspiring people with his tell-it-like-it-is sermons.

"Pastor Granger is just wonderful. Thirty years he has been with us," said Judy Kryder of Michigan, who sings in the choir and cherishes the friendship she has forged with others at Southern Palms, the park that has been her winter home since 1998.

Florida's glorious weather is what brings her back each year, she said, and she and hundreds of others hope to reunite with their pastor in November for the park's 2014-15 season.

Senator Hays' textbook proposal draws criticism

Halifax Media Group

The way textbooks are selected for Florida classrooms could undergo major changes this year, partly in response to the way protests over a world history book played out last fall.

State Sen. Alan Hays, R-Umatilla, has filed a bill that would eliminate the state from its long-time role in short-listing which textbooks are acceptable for districts. Hays' proposal — which is drawing mixed reviews — would make textbook selection a local responsibility from start to finish.

"The purpose of this bill is to make sure the people who are making the decision on selection of instructional materials are held accountable by the people of that community," Hays said. "I want to guarantee citizens have input and school board members will be held responsible at the ballot box."

Hays said he decided to file the bill after talking to some school board members in the four Central Florida counties he represents about complaints that the World History textbook published by Prentice Hall is biased in favor of Islam. That was the basis of the Volusia complaints — which ultimately were rejected by the Volusia School Board — and similar objections in Palm Beach, Brevard and Marion schools.

"The school boards feel their hands are somewhat tied to select instructional materials approved by Tallahassee," Hays said. That, he said, puts too much power in the hands of

Sen. Alan Hays
R-Umatilla

Florida Department of Education bureaucrats who oversee the state adoption process that includes material reviews by committees including teachers from around the state and opportunity for public comment.

His bill would require individual districts or voluntarily formed groups of districts to review available textbooks for compliance with Florida's academic standards, online posting of prospective materials for public comment and a school board hearing before final adoption.

Putting that process totally in the hands of local districts would be a "huge mistake," said Volusia School Board Chairwoman Candace Lankford, who believes the current state textbook adoption process allows adequate opportunities for parents, teachers, administrators and others to make their viewpoints known.

"We need to have a clearinghouse to bring in the big picture stuff," Lankford said. "With all the mobility we have in our state, it would be nuts to have some county looking one way at instructional stuff and another looking at it a different way."

Other school officials worry about the extra expense to districts of starting from scratch on textbook adoptions instead of having a state-level screening.

Hays brushes aside those criticisms, saying there's a large pool of retired educators living in Florida who could help with the district level material reviews and local control is more important than volume buying power with publishers.

"The publishers are going to scream and be upset, I'm sure," he said. "I don't care. My responsibility is to the students and school systems of Florida. My accountability is to the people paying the bill."

Yet some of the Florida taxpayers who pay that bill are opposed to Hays' proposal and its companion in the House, both now being reviewed by legislative committees.

We want to thank everyone for attending Aaron's Memorial Service at Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church along with all the prayers, flowers, cards, words of encouragement, kindness and support. It has helped carry us through during this very sad and difficult time. God Bless you.

Senate will not repeal red-light cameras

JIM TURNER
The News Service of Florida

Red-light cameras won't be turned off in Florida this year.

Without enough votes lined up, Senate Transportation Chairman Jeff Brandes put the brakes last week on a bill (SB 144) that focused on repealing the state's red-light camera law. Instead, he proposed changes to increase regulations on the use of the devices.

But Brandes' Transportation Committee on March 26 didn't act on the proposed changes, deciding to postpone a vote on his rewritten bill.

"That shows you the power of this (red light camera) industry," said Brandes who maintained his opposition to the Mark Wandall Traffic Safety Act of 2010, the state's red-light camera law, after the postponement.

"What you're seeing is municipalities that have become addicted to the funds, and in many of these cities it's not about safety," Brandes added. "It's become a backdoor tax increase."

While moving away from a repeal, Brandes proposed changes that would allow new cameras at intersections but only if their use is justified through traffic engineering studies — a requirement that is included in a House bill. Also, money generated from red-light camera tickets would have to be used for traffic safety improvements, and jurisdictions wouldn't be able to use the cameras if they fail to provide annual camera-enforcement reports to the state.

In early February, Brandes and Rep. Frank Artiles, R-Miami, held a press conference in the Capitol to highlight a report from the Office of Program Policy Analysis & Government Accountability, the Legislature's non-partisan policy office. The report found there were fewer fatalities but more crashes at electronically monitored intersections and that fines issued due to the technology cost motorists nearly $119 million last year.

That is the central question fueling a debate over red light cameras in Clermont. City officials implemented cameras at six intersections in January in what they said was an effort to improve safety at State Road 50 intersections.

The public outcry was almost immediate, however. Ninety percent of the more than 3,000 citations issued between early January and mid-February were to motorists turning right on red, which city officials said was not their intent when they installed the cameras.

Clermont officials reviewed video of all the infractions and ended up dismissing 70 percent. They further pledged to exercise more discretion in issuing citations for right-on-red turns.

Brandes, R-St. Petersburg, views the cameras as simply a revenue generator for local communities. But he acknowledged that there isn't enough support in the Senate to repeal the cameras. That was evident Wednesday when he couldn't get his own committee to approve three amendments to his rewritten bill.

The committee also rejected, by a 5-3 vote, an amendment that would have required only warnings to be issued to owners of vehicles caught on camera going through traffic signals 0.5 seconds after the colors changed from yellow to red.

Brandes said he might reintroduce the amendments when the bill returns this week.

State Attorney reviewing shooting of armed man

MILLARD IVES | Staff Writer
millard.ives@dailyccommercial.com

A state review of a deputy's shooting of a knife-wielding man has been forwarded to the State Attorney's Office for evaluation, according to Florida Department of Law Enforcement officials.

A spokeswoman with FDLE would not provide details of the investigation into the January shooting of Ian Saum, pending the completion of the State Attorney's Office review.

Walter Forgie, supervisor for the State Attorney's Office in Lake County, last week wouldn't reveal what possible charges the deputy could face, citing his office's pending review of the case.

The Lake County Sheriff's Office conducted its own administrative review and cleared the deputy of any wrongdoing, but the final word will come from the State Attorney's Office.

The shooting occurred Jan. 22 in the 10700 block of Aria Court, near the end of a cul-de-sac in Lake Crescent Pines East outside of Clermont.

Deputies said they responded to a report of a "suicidal subject." When they reached the Aria Court address, they reportedly found Saum armed with a large knife. It appeared that he had injured himself with the weapon prior to the deputies' arrival.

Deputies shot 24-year-old Saum after he approached them in a threatening manner and a stun gun failed to stop him, Sgt. James Vachon, sheriff's spokesman, said.

The deputy was placed on administrative leave and FDLE was called in to investigate.

According to a document dated Jan. 29 from sheriff's Chief Deputy Peyton Grinnell, a preliminary administrative review determined that the deputy was "found to be within the statutory authority given to law enforcement officers for the use of force, consistent with the agency's use-of-force training."

Lakehawks split with Seminole State

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer
 frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

The best softball season in recent memory at Lake-Sumter State College continued on March 26 against Seminole State College at the LSSC softball complex.

LSSC got a gritty pitching performance from Mellissa Webb in the opener and the Lakehawks scored three runs in the sixth to pick up a 3-2 win against the Raiders, lifting LSSC's record temporarily to 21-21 on the season and 6-5 in the Mid-Florida Conference.

Seminole State rebounded in the nightcap behind a six-run first inning to earn a doubleheader split with a 12-1 win in five innings. In the nightcap, the Raiders pounded out 15 hits and the Lakehawks committed five errors.

In the opener, Webb came out of the gate quickly. She didn't give up a hit until Taylor Duggan bunted her way on with one out in the third.

Seminole State got to Webb in the fourth for two runs on four hits.

After the shaky frame, Webb settled down and did not allow a hit over the final three innings. For the game, she gave up five hits while striking out two and tossed 100 pitches.

LSSC trailed until the sixth, when the Lakehawks found their swing. Michelle Breen opened the inning with a double and Kayla Fuller was walked. Zoe Hart then hammered a double, scoring Breen. Taylor Douglass followed with the third double of the inning, scoring Fuller and Hart with the tying and game-winning runs.

In the seventh, Webb sent the Raiders down in order with a pair of infield putouts and a fly ball to left.

The Lakehawks totaled five hits against Seminole starter Stephanie Adkins. She walked four and struck

Bozzelli wins at Harbor Hills

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer
 frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Making history isn't supposed to be easy.

Dominic Bozzelli's drive to establish himself as one of the best golfers in National Golf Association history was about as difficult as it gets.

Bozzelli birdied his final three holes on Sunday to finish with a four-day total of 269, 19-under-par, to win the Lake County Classic at Harbor Hills Country Club by two shots over Jack Newman. With the win, he is only the second golfer in NGA history to win three straight tournaments. Zach Johnson, an 11-time winner on the PGA Tour and the 2007 Masters champion, was the first to do so, having won three straight in 2001.

Bozzelli had to battle through the pack for the win under sunny skies over the nearly 7,000-yard par 72 layout. Unable to finish his third round on Saturday due to inclement weather, Bozzelli was forced to complete it on Sunday and then immediately begin his final loop. He responded to the challenge of a golfing marathon by carding a 5-under-par 67 in his third round for a two-shot lead over Newman at 15-under. He backed that up with a 4-under 68 in his fourth round to secure the win.

Bozzelli and Newman battled for the lead throughout the final round, with each player owning it on multiple occasions. Both players were tied at 17 under after exchanging birdies on the par-3 16th hole, the longest par 3 on the course at 210 yards and one that involved a carry over water to an undulating green.

On the 17th, a 400-yard par 4, Bozzelli set himself up for a makeable putt that would put him in the driver's seat heading to the final hole. The Pittsford, N.Y., golfer drained the putt and took a one-shot lead to the 18th. Newman was able to look down the fairway and watch Bozzelli's nearly flawless play down the stretch.

On the 18th, a 579-yard finishing hole that was set up for scoring, Bozzelli worked his way down the fairway and drained an insurance birdie, forcing Newman to make an eagle to take the tournament to sudden death.

Newman put himself in position for an eagle from the fairway with his third shot, but missed left, giving Bozzelli a shared entry with Johnson in the NGA Pro Tour history books. He will have chance to win an unprecedented four straight tournaments beginning Thursday at the Ocala/Marion County NGA Pro Golf tour at Ocala National.

In his final round, Bozzelli finished with six birdies and two

LHS gets clipped in extra innings

SANFORD — Lake County's entrants in the Florida League High School Invitational baseball tournament are proving to be formidable foes.

In seven tournament games through Thursday afternoon involving Leesburg, Eustis and Montverde Academy, six have gone at least seven innings with the largest margin of victory being four runs or less.

On three occasions, area teams have battled to a one-run decision.

That was the case in Thursday's morning session when Leesburg got solid pitching from Ryan Halstead and Jason Baita, but the Yellow Jackets dropped a 2-1 contest in nine innings against Weston Cypress Bay at Sanford Seminole High School.

Leesburg fell to 6-10 with the loss, while Weston Cypress Bay improved to 8-4.

Weston Cypress Bay scored the winning run when Jose Natera scored on a two-out single by Enzo Clemente against Baita. It was the only hit allowed by Baita in 1 2/3 innings of relief.

The Lightning managed only five hits against Halstead and Baita.

Weston Cypress Bay took an early lead with a run in the first against Halstead when Natera scored on a double by Thomas Quintero. Halstead stranded Quintero at third when he struck out Diego Maceda to end the inning.

Halstead pitched seven innings and allowed one run on four hits. He walked three and struck

Montverde Academy softball team wins tournament

The Montverde Academy softball team advanced to the Florida High School Athletic Association Class 3A state semifinals last year.

After outscoring three opponents by a combined score of 30-4 at last week's Montverde Academy Invitational Softball Tournament, the Eagles might be gearing up for a return trip.

The one-day tournament, played at the Montverde Academy Softball complex, included teams from Eustis, Apopka and Hollywood Sheridan Hills Christian, in addition to the tournament hosts. The Eagles took the tournament title with a 5-2 win against Apopka, which had beaten Montverde 8-0 earlier this season.

The Eagles earned a berth in the tournament's championship tilt with a 10-2 win against Eustis and a 15-0 drubbing of Hollywood Sheridan Hills Christian.

Apopka punched its ticket for the title game with a 15-0 win against

LAKES REPORT

■ SANDY'S BAIT AND TACKLE | TAVARES

Now is a great time to be out on the lake fishing. Many are still reporting catching limits. Lake Dora has been a good location for crappie catches of 30 to 40 fish has not been unusual. Some fish are still on the beds, fish that have moved off the beds are still feeding in schools. Shell cracker and blue gill are starting to move in and are biting on yellow tail worms. The Wednesday night open bass tournament has resumed with the time change. Last Wednesday night's winners were Tim Fredericks for first place and the team of Jojo and Zack Hood for second place. For anyone interested, they start at 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Sandy's bass tournament, open to all, is held on the third Saturday monthly at the Buzzard Beach ramp. Sandy's next regular bass tournament will be an open tournament held April 19 with the weigh in at Buzzard Beach at 2:30 p.m. Any questions about either tournament call the shop at 352-742-0036.

■ PINE ISLAND CAMP | FRUITLAND PARK

Several patrons are catching bass on shiners and artificial worms. Crappie are biting on grass shrimp and minnows. Catfish are biting on night crawlers. Pine Island has a full supply of live baits including grass shrimp as well as a variety of artificial baits. RV sites, camp sites, boats and slips are available for rental. Check out the restaurant before going out or coming off the lake.

■ PALM GARDENS | TAVARES

Specks are still being caught on mostly minnows and some jigs. They are still at the edge of the grass and shorelines and are back in the deeper water. A few stripers are being caught at the ends of Dead River on silver lures and silver spoons baited with salt water shrimp. Palm Gardens has pontoon boats available to rent.

■ NELSON'S FISH CAMP | WEIRSDALE

Speck activity has been very good; they are biting on minnows and jigs. Bass have been slow with the most recent weather change. Bream are starting to bite on worms and minnows. Come check out the next generation bass in the pond by Nelson's.

■ BLACK BASS RESORT-FISH CAMP

Guests are catching bass and crappie. Several large bass have been caught in Haynes Creek at the locks. The bass are hitting on artificial baits primarily while the crappie are biting on minnows and jigs. Minnows and worm sales have been very good. Small boats can launch from Black Bass boat ramps.

Baseball
LSSC led by as many as four runs on March 26 and held off a ninth-inning rally to pick up a 7-5 road win against Florida State College-Jacksonville, snapping a 10-game losing streak.

David Wood (2-3) started and got credit for the win. He went six innings and allowed five hits and three runs — one earned. He struck out 10 without walking a batter.

Tyler Reker got the loss for FSC-Jacksonville.

LSSC had 10 hits, including three by Tanner Elsbernd. Taylor Saris added two hits.

Five Lakehawks pitchers combined for the win. Walker Sheller wrapped with an inning of work and allowed two runs on one hit.

Dylan Jones, Anthony Mazzurco and Steve McClellan also pitched for LSSC.

LSSC benefited from five errors by FSC-Jacksonville. The Lakehawks also struggled in the field and committed four errors.

The Lakehawks improved to 15-14 overall and 2-10 in the Mid-Florida Conference with the win.

Against the Blue Darters, Montverde Academy hurler Jesse Dreswick led the way to the win. Dreout five.

The Yellow Jackets totaled seven hits against Quintero and Ben Fritts. Quintero gave up three hits and Leesburg's lone run in four innings and Fritts surrendered four hits in five innings of work.

Leesburg scored its lone run in the third inning when Baita crossed the plate on an error by Natera, the Lightning second baseman. Baita reached base on a single and reached third on a single by Tucker Smith prior to Natera's fielding miscue.

Smith was eventually stranded at third. Baita, who made 33 pitches, absorbed the loss for the Yellow Jackets.

Fritts, who made 57 pitches, picked up the win.

Smith (2-for-4) was the only Yellow Jackets with multiple hits. Baita, Garrett Vathroder, Halstead, Kyle Brana, and Turner Long had Leesburg's hits — all singles.

Danny Cepeda went 2-for-4 for Weston Cypress Bay. He was the Lightning's only player with multiple hits.

Leesburg has gone 1-2 in the weeklong tournament, beating Jensen Beach on March 24 and dropping a 6-3 decision to Naples Barron Collier on March 25.

bogeys. The three birdies he had on his final three holes of the tournament were, ironically, the only time he put together three red numbers in succession.

For the tournament, Bozzelli carded 20 birdies, three eagles and seven bogeys. He played par-3 holes to average score of 2.79 and par 4s to 3.93. On the par 5s, however, Bozzelli averaged nearly a full stroke below par at 4.19. He had seven birdies, three eagles and five pars on the four par 5 holes on the course. He did not have bogey on a par 5.

Bozzelli earned $16,000 for the win, giving him $52,700 for the year and an exemption in the Web.com Tour Price Cutter Charity Championship in August in Springfield, Mo.

Newman won $8,000 for finishing second to raise his season total to $12,200. Bozzelli extended his lead over Crawford Reeves, No. 2 on the money list by more than $30,000.

Brian Richey finished third at 272 after a final round 66, the low round of the day. David Skinnis was 274, good for a fourth place tie with Phillip Mollica. Skinnis and Mollica began the final round in a three way tie with Newman for second place.

Phillip Hutchinson, the first- and second- round leader, struggled to 76 in his final round.

Formerly known as the Hooters Tour, the NGA Tour is the No. 3-men's professional tour in the U.S. after the PGA and Web.com Tours, and has proven to be the top developmental tour by PGA and Web.com Tour Professionals. The NGA Tour has helped hundreds of professionals acquire their cards PGA TOUR, European, Web.com, and Champions Tour.

NGA Tour alumni include: Johnson, Bubba Watson, the 2012 Masters champion Jim Furyk, the 2010 PGA Tour Player of the Year and 2003 U.S. Open champion Keegan Bradley, 2011 PGA championship winner 2009 British Open champion Stewart Cink 2009 U.S. Open champion Lucas

Glover 2003 PGA Champion Shaun Micheel, 2003 British Open champion Ben Curtis and two time U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen.

Founded in 1988, the NGA Tour predates the Web.com Tour as the longest running developmental tour in golf. In 2013, the NGA Tour was awarded five Web.com Tour event exemptions and two PGA Tour event exemptions — Reno Tahoe Open and the Sanderson Farms Championship — the most of any tour in the history of developmental golf.

Family Walk Night strengthens participants' bonds and bodies

 roxanne.brown@dailyccommercial.com

Seven years ago, Becky Parks, the physical education teacher at Cypress Ridge Elementary School, was participating in a popular evening event there called Family Reading Night.

She looked around, saw families interacting, and that's when a light came on in her head.

"I thought, if there can be a family reading night, there can be a family walk night," Parks said, pleased the event has grown into something hundreds of families participate in every year.

With the help of Pam Hamilton and Trish Sproule, Parks has been inviting Cypress Ridge teachers, administrators, parents, students and other family members to Waterfront Park in Clermont to walk the trail together one night each month. The event not only creates bonds between families, but boosts their overall health and fitness.

In September, when the school year starts, participants begin by walking one mile, then every month after that, agree to increase their distances by a quarter-mile each time.

By the end of the school year, participants, including students, are walking three miles.

Parks said each month sees more than 100 participants on average, a number that she said sometimes dwindles slightly as the walking distance increases.

"(Family Walk Night) gives us a reason to exercise together. It provides us with an incentive because, truthfully, sometimes we need to be forced into it," said parent Matthew Gosselin, who came after work to meet his wife, Nicole Gosselin, and their children Evan, Aiden and Emma.

"When we can, we come together as a family," Nicole Gosselin said.

Melanie Ressler, a mother of three students, called the program a "great initiative" to help kids be active.

"It gets them out of the house and keeps them from being in front of the television or playing video games all afternoon," she said.

Meet Your NEIGHBOR

CATHY McEACHERN

■ HOMETOWN: Minneola

■ OCCUPATION: Office manager at Doctor's Weight Control

■ FAMILY: My husband is Kelly McEachern. I have two daughters, Amber Jessee (husband, Nathan Jessee, and sons Kelly and Rowan) and Britteny Schrufer (husband, Michael Schrufer).

What do you enjoy most about south Lake County?

I like the hometown feel it still has, compared to Orange County.

1) If you had to summarize your philosophy of life in one sentence, what would it be?

With God and your family and friends around you, live well, laugh a lot and love deeply!

2) Name a person or incident you've come across recently that's touched you in some way. Why did this person or incident impress you so much?

A person I've been touched by is Rosemary DeMott of Not Just Dance. She is one of the busiest women I have ever seen. She has her studio where she teaches children ages 4 to 18, and then she goes to the colleges and teaches. She is the choreographer for the high school, and she still makes time to be at Moonlight Players to choreograph all the shows there as well. She cares about each and every one one of her students as if they were her own children. She is a true mentor.

3) How does what you do contribute to the welfare of the area?

I work at Doctor's Weight Control, and I help men and women every day to learn to lose weight and live a healthier life. I am also a member of the Moonlight Players. I have been with Moonlight from the start, going on 20 years.

4) Name one of your greatest accomplishments so far.

My family, my two girls, Amber and Britteny, and every time I get to direct a show at Moonlight.

5) What's something you've always wanted to do but haven't yet?

Go to Ireland.

South Lake Press reporter Lucie Blake attended the Orlando Sentinel's 10th annual Letter Writer's Forum in the Ivanhoe Ballroom at the Radisson Hotel. This annual event rec-Lucie's letter that resulted in her invitation to the forum was printed December 24, 1987, and recalled the last Christmas spent with her late husband, Gerry, before he died. Lucie and Gerry moved to Minneola when he was hired as Minneola city manager.

The Clermont Woman's Club put on quite a show at its annual luncheon and fashion show at the First Baptist Church Christian Life Center. It served 395 lunches, by far the largest number ever served in the Clermont area. Tables were placed down either side of the room, leaving a nice walkway for club ladies who modeled fashions from Larsen's in Leesburg.

and with Ressler's family, has participated every month since the start of school. Cicco-telli said she also likes the venue (Waterfront Park) because of its natural beauty. After walking, the kids enjoy playing on the beach and in park areas.

The two moms also like that participating counts as school volunteer hours for parents.

"Coming keeps us in shape and then afterwards, we can spend time with our families, friends and play with each other," Sebastien Ressler, 9, said.

Joshua Phillips, there with his 6-year-old daughter Elizabeth, said he feels the program provides a great opportunity to get some exercise, spend time with family and friends and show support for the school, but most of all, he likes the challenge.

"They lay it out for you and they increase it each time we come. It gets tougher, and it's exciting to see how far we can go," Phillips said.

In March, in honor of the city of Clermont police department's newly instated waterfront/downtown Clermont task force patrol initiative, the kids, parents and teachers at Family Walk Night were greeted by Officers James Rooney, Brenda Teets and Chief Charles Broadway. They congratulated the walkers for their efforts and rewarded the students with wrist bands.

Melon Patch debuts dark musical drama 'Sweeney Todd'

Theresa Campbell | Staff Writer
theresacampbell@dailyccommercial.com

Melon Patch Playhouse in Leesburg is breaking away from its norm by showcasing a dark musical drama, "Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street," by Stephen Sondheim, which features a murderous barber, a cannibalistic pie maker and glorious music.

The show runs through April 6.

"A lot of people write off this musical because of the murder and because of the darkness of it, but if you can get past the subject matter, this is one of the most beautiful musicals that you will ever hear," Director John Turcotte said. "The music is glorious and sung so well. This really is an operetta of more music than it is actually dialogue."

The director, who also is a local schoolteacher, said he worked to tone down some of the scenes so they would not be offensive.

"We have made this as much of a family-friendly Sweeney Todd as Sweeney Todd can be made," Turcotte said. "We are not putting blood and guts in your face. I've toned down a lot of that to make it more accessible to the general public so that they can enjoy the show and not get totally freaked out by the subject matter." He believes teens can handle Melon Patch's Sweeney Todd.

"It has no more than what kids would see at 8 o'clock at night on a crime drama," Turcotte said.

He believes audiences are bound to find themselves cheering for the evil duo of Sweeney Todd (Nathan Jessee) and Mrs. Lovett (Jolene Sheets) and their plot against Judge Turpin (Cliff Barrineau) and Beadle Bamford (Tad Kincade). The arrival of Adolfo Pirelli (Kyle Stone) and his servant boy Tobias (Manolo Hernandez) adds complications to Sweeney's plot for revenge and results in the first bloodshed of the show.

Not to worry, there is no real blood.

"We do not shed one drop of blood; we do it all very theatrically with the lights. This is not the Johnny Depp movie made gloriously bathed in blood," Turcotte said. "This is a much more theatrical production, and much more of a representational production."

The plot also revolves around the love affair between Judge Turpin's ward Johanna (Stephanie Hutchison) and the sailor Anthony (Daniel Roscoe). And how does the beggar woman (Jessa Dodds) fit into this murder thriller? Turcotte said audiences will have to wait until the end for the answer.

The ensemble of this show acts as a Greek chorus and often comments on the action as the sinister story unfolds. Members include Alan Terry, Kristian Ware, Derek Wallman, Heather Franklin, Trista Fouts, Meagan Nee, Mike Bailey, Lindsay Koons, Kathleen Byrd, Charlotte Jardine, Jessica Shinn and Lavonte Rogers.

Turcotte praised his cast and noted they are relishing the intensity of the show and their chance to perform a dark drama.

"They are really enjoying being in something that is a little bit off the beaten path," Turcotte said. "It's not often that you find a musical drama. ... I hope the audience walks away enjoying the fact that they can enjoy something very different."

Turcotte said no one fainted or complained from last weekend's opening shows.

"We have not lost one person because of the production or the subject matter, so I think we are handling it quite well as far as not offending anybody," Turcotte said, who was relieved to hear praise about the talented cast.

The director said he has always adored "Sweeney Todd," and was pleased to have the opportunity to show it at Melon Patch for the first time. He performed in the show twice before in the role of Beadle at IceHouse in Mount Dora.

"Now that I have transformed to doing more directing than anything, I am looking at all the different shows that I love and that I have done out there," he said. "Sweeney Todd' was one that had not been done at Melon Patch."

The Leesburg theater has focused more on musical comedies of Rodgers and Hammerstein, he said.

"People didn't think Melon Patch was as capable of doing a dark show. This is a very different departure from our norm for us, and people weren't sure that we could pull it off, and we seem to be able to very well," Turcotte said. "I'm very proud of my cast and crew."

The production staff for "Sweeney Todd" includes Linda Charlton (accompanist), Michael Winterheimer (technical director), Sally Gage (choreographer), Jennifer Fink (stage manager), Joshua Eads-Brown (costumes) and Pauline Judge (prop mistress).

Melon Patch is located at 311 N. 13th St., in Leesburg. Tickets for the show are $18 for adults and $9 for students. Tickets can be reserved by calling the box office at 352-787-3013. Since the musical deals with adult themes and subject matter, parental discretion is advised.

County struggles with millions in repairs

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer
livi.stanford@dailyccommercial.com

Lake County officials say they are struggling to come up with funding to make needed repairs at county buildings and to replace obsolete technology.

With 41 percent of the county's buildings more than 20 years old, the HVAC controls system and IT file servers must be replaced to avoid system and operational failure in the future, they say.

Some of those buildings include the Lake County Administration Building, Lake County Sheriff's Office and the jail.

"We are not talking about iPads and laptops or anything like that," County Manager David Heath said. "We are talking about the guts of the system," referring to the network and servers. "If we have servers that go down, we will have departments not able to function."

Mark Wrigley troubleshoots a water heater that supplies the water for inmate showers at Lake County Detention Center in downtown Tavares, Thursday.

BRETT LE BLANC / DAILY COMMERCIAL

Heath added: "This stuff is very low budget and not extravagant. These are truly needs."

The decline in property values over the last few years has tightened and reduced budget allocations in Lake County's Facilities and Information Technology departments.

Facilities has 17 fewer employees than it did in

Kristian Swenson, Facilities and Fleet Management director, said there is a backlog of $12.2 million of facilities needs, while IT is reporting $950,000 for critical updates to file servers, data storage units and telephone systems.

Officials said many building components in need of repair, such as HVAC controls system, chillers and boilers, are at the end of their life span or are obsolete.

If funding is not allocated long-term, Swenson said those needs will continue to grow, adding to the large backlog.

"You don't want an operational failure in the building," he said. "For example, if you have heating and air conditioning disruption in the courthouse it could affect the court system."

Facilities has made two separate budget requests of $500,000 for this year's and next year's budget; IT has requested $200,000 for immediate needs.

But finding revenue to meet long-term needs could become a challenge as the county grapples with a $7 million shortfall in the 2014-15 budget.

Last year, the county used $1.1 million from the infrastructure penny sales tax fund to pay debt on capital rather than taking it from the general fund.

The quandary facing commissioners is whether to use $5.74 million available next year from the penny sales tax to pay debt on capital, which would make up the shortfall, or use the revenue to address facility maintenance needs over the long-term.

Even so, county officials say some needs in different areas could go unmet. For example, if the commission decides to use all the revenue available to pay down the debt, it could displace projects such as South Lake Regional Park.

Swenson said there are hundreds of parts that have to be changed out in fire alarm systems, boilers, lighting protection systems, switchgears, kitchen equipment and laundry electronic components.

And as technology continues to change, the systems the county uses are also becoming obsolete because the industry no longer supports it or sells replacement parts, according to Steve Earls, IT director.

"Servers are what hold our main business applications that everyone uses, and we have electronic data storage units that house data information user files," he said. "A third of those are over six years old. We have already had hard drive failures."

The current racks that house the county's hard drives are no longer made, as technology has moved to a smaller design.

With everything today Internet-based, Heath said upgrades are critical, because the public relies on the county's website for online permitting and watches the County Commission meetings made possible by the audiovisual equipment.

"We are asking for funding to replace a 20-plus-year-old system providing video and sound for the board chambers," Earls said. "We can't get replacements with the current system we have."

Earls said the county also accepts electronic submissions for building plans and architecture drawings, which could affect these offerings if the servers are not replaced.

County Commissioner Tim Sullivan said funding should be allocated for the immediate needs for those departments. As for the long-term needs, he suggested the county piece together a capital improvement plan to evaluate the highest priorities.

While concerned about how antiquated the systems have become, Commission Chairman Jimmy Conner said the majority of the penny sales tax in the future, after it comes up for renewal potentially in 2015, should go primarily toward public safety and include parks and sidewalks.

"It most definitely comes down to priorities," he said, explaining there is a need for patrol cars for the sheriff and ambulances for Lake EMS.

Understanding IT and facility maintenance needs is essential to the operation and have to be funded, Commissioner Sean Parks

IN NEED OF REPAIR

A list of items that county officials say must be replaced in the coming years:

FACILITIES

- Replace plumbing at the jail for numerous leaks
- Replace two hot boilers at the jail
- Update fire alarm systems
- Replace jail kitchen appliances
- Replace HVAC controls, which are obsolete in numerous buildings

TOTAL: $12.2M

TECHNOLOGY

- Replace critical file servers and power supplies
- Replace old data storage devices
- Replace Commission chambers audiovisual system
- Network components for remote offices
- Replace 26 outdated telephone systems

TOTAL: $950,000

SOURCE: Lake County Government

said at the same time he hopes to keep funding intact for South Lake Regional Park and public safety needs.

"Some needs will be unmet," he said.

Heath said the county can either address the facilities and IT needs now or have the system eventually collapse and cost 10 times as much to replace it.
