MUST PAY LICENSES.

For Selling Certain Medicines Druggists Must Pay Uncle Sam.

The commissioner of internal revenue, United States Government, ruled several months ago that, after December 1, patent medicines that are known to contain a certain per cent of alcohol would be placed in the same category as intoxicating beverages.

After due consideration, however, it is understood this distinguished official has extended the time to January 1, in order that druggists may have an opportunity to dispose of such medicines now in stock.

Druggists as a rule feel that this decision will work quite a hardship upon them, as it requires the payment of a United States Government license for the dispensing of alcoholic liquors. It will fall more seriously upon druggists of a "dry" town, since a certain druggist has declared that it would seem prima facie evidence that the druggist had purchased the United States license for the purpose of dispensing intoxicating liquors, and that said action might be so construed by the county or local authorities, which would place a druggist subject to arrest at any time.

All druggists, in preparing prescriptions, at certain times must use alcohol, with the result that they must keep it on hand, and to do this they will be compelled to pay the government privilege of $25 a year, besides being subjected to criticism for carrying a Government license.

To say the least, from the first of the year the druggists throughout the country will be subjected to an additional hardship, and those who feel disposed may accuse them of selling intoxicants under the protection of a Government license.

A Princeton Professor in Jail.

There is now confined in the Ocala jail waiting trial a graduate of Princeton College, and after his graduation held a professorship in that celebrated seat of learning for five years.

This unfortunate man is charged with passing counterfeit money and will be tried before Judge J. W. Loche in the United States Circuit court, which convenes in this city in January next.

Mr. H. L. Anderson will appear as his counsel.

Col. H. H. Buckman, of Jacksonville is out as a candidate for senator for Duval county on his record as the author and advocate of the Buckman Law. This is the way to do it. Let the candidates in every county of the State in their announcements state whether they uphold or oppose the Buckman Law. The people will then have a chance to express themselves in regard to it—and their decision is, or should be, final.

A PITIFUL SIGHT.

The Result of Strong Drink and Fast Living.

There were seen on our streets last Wednesday three young white men, of good appearance and good health, representatives of respectable families in Florida, chained together and were being conveyed to the convict camps to work out a five years sentence for larceny and robbery.

In a state like Florida, where there are so many new developments on foot, there is no necessity for a young man, a graduate of our schools, who is willing to work being out of employment, and when this is not the case there must be something wrong with the home life.

Speaking of the conviction of those young men, the Tampa Times says:

A most pitiful sight greeted the view of persons having business in the sheriff's office at an early hour this morning, the scene presented being that of three well-appearing and intelligent looking young white men, all members of respectable families, who were sent to the headquarters of the state penitentiary at Ocala, to serve five years for the commission of crimes that resulted from drinking and fast living.

The men were in charge of Warden Bridges, who will send them to the various convict camps from Ocala, there to remain in disgrace and oblivion from the respectable world for the time mentioned.

In the trio, all of whom were bound together with hand cuffs, was Hebern MacWilliams, a member of one of the best known families of the state, who goes to the penitentiary for stealing $750 from W. B. Cason, of Columbia county, at the house of ill-fame conducted by Blanche Underwood. MacWilliams appeared to feel his disgrace greatly, and held back tears of sorrow with difficulty.

Jim Mills and Leonard Hewitt, both of whom were convicted of the charge of robbery at the recent term of criminal court, were other members of the trio. They did not seem to feel their disgrace as greatly as did MacWilliams, in spite of which the scene created considerable sadness, even among the officers of the law who are accustomed to witnessing such scenes continually. MacWilliams' mother, who came to the city to be with her son in the hour of trial, is almost prostrated with grief at her son's conviction.

"That is about the saddest sight I have witnessed for some time," said a well known officer. "I have grown accustomed to witnessing sorrowful scenes, but when three bright young men are condemned to five years of service with the toughest convicts of the state, I can't help letting my sympathies get the better of me. And the cause of the whole thing is drink."

How Bishop Candler Rebuffed a Young Man.

If you wish to arouse sad and vivid recollections in the mind of a young man who recently came to Tampa from Georgia, and decided to better himself by staying here, just ask him to take a friendly drink with you. He'll probably tell you that he has reformed on account of his best girl, but here's the real reason:

The young man in question, like many others in this city, was a student at Emory college during the administration of Bishop Warren A. Candler, who is now conducting the Methodist conference at Ocala, and all have a vivid recollection of the bishop's heart-to-heart and matter-of-fact style of talking. Well, Mr. Young Man in Question had been indulging in a drink or more with a number of friends, when Bishop Candler met him on the fair grounds, and a guilty conscience caused him to attempt a quick "get-away." That kind of thing has been tried upon the sober-minded divine without success for a good many years, however, and the same sad failure resulted on this occasion.

"John, where are you going?" asked the bishop in a voice that sounds to a former student like the rumbling of wrath from other regions than this. "Nowhere," responded John meekly.

"Come and let me get a good look at you—I think you've been drinking," commanded the bishop.

"Honestly, I haven't," came the meek and pertinent response, followed by another effort to promote absence from the scene.

"John, don't you know that you can't lie to me?" demanded the bishop in a tone of disgust. "Didn't you try to lie to me without success for four years at Emory, and haven't you grown old and wise enough to know better now? And what's the use of lying now, when your breath covers an even greater range than your sad attempts at preservation? Own up, now; and admit for once that you've been guilty of drinking."

"Yes, sir," was the faint response that greeted the great preacher as Mr. Young Man in Question made a final and successful beak for liberty.—Tampa Times.

Speaking of good newspapers, it seems to us that the Times-Union fills the bill. No other daily newspaper so completely covers the field it undertakes. It has its correspondents and reporters in every city, town and hamlet in the state and there is not a marriage, nor a death, nor anything else of the least importance occurring anywhere that is not noted in its columns. The person who reads the Times-Union carefully is thoroughly posted on Florida affairs. Its news columns, editorial page and miscellaneous items are all selected and edited with scrupulous care. The Times-Union is certainly a great newspaper.
