Account set up at Madison County Community Bank and fundraiser to be held for Big Mike Woods

By Jacob Bemby
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Mike Woods recalls the day he met Tori Webb.

"It was the best day of my life," he said.

Mike Woods had come to Madison from Tennessee after receiving a basketball scholarship at North Florida Junior College. He and Tori fell in love. They have been married for over 30 years. They have two children, Ashley, who is 29 and married to Edward Hutchinson; and Adam.

Ashley and Edward have produced two grandchildren for them. Their son, Hagan, and daughter, Kaitlyn proudly call Mike and Tori "Pa-paw" and "Memaw."

Mike uprooted himself from Tennessee and has called Madison his home since his days at NFJC. Many people know him as their former door-to-door insurance man, working for Gulf Life and AGLA for 18 years. They also remember him as a volunteer firefighter with 17 years experience. They remember him as the District 5 County Commission, serving from 1996-2000. Still others remember him fondly as the owner of Big Mike's Produce. He had to close that store because he was weakened by having to take dialysis.

Big Mike has polycystic kidney disease. He has had to rely on dialysis for the past two years in order for his kidney to function.

Polycystic kidney disease (PKD) is a disease that can be fatal. The average life expectancy for PKD, according to the American Kidney Fund is five to six years. If Big Mike could get a kidney transplant, it could save his life. The trouble with that is that he is not on the transplant list due to his weight.

To lose weight, Big Mike would need lap band surgery; however, Big Mike's insurance company will not pay for a procedure they consider cosmetic. Despite doctor's pleas and appeals to the insurance commis-

City Looks At Park Plan

By Ginger Jarvis
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Madison's city commissioners got a close look at the plan for a proposed park at their regular meeting on September 13. The park, enclosed by Martin Luther King Boulevard, Third Street, Bunker Street and Miller Street, would occupy a presently-vacant lot.

Health Department Director Kim Barnhill presented the plan to the commissioners. "Some people may wonder what this has to do with health," she said. "But if we can get children out to play and adults out to walk instead of sitting on the sofa in the house, then we will have a healthier community. This absolutely is public health."

The plan as presented features a walkway diagonally across the lot, with benches, a playground, a picnic area with a grill, and tables with seating. A walking trail runs around the perimeter. The oak tree canopy and large pecan tree that are there now will be preserved as part of the park.

Barnhill and Public Works Supervisor Chuck Hitchcock explained that the "bowl" in the center of the lot will be partially filled with dirt, and enhanced by three swales to direct water away from the playground and tables. Hitchcock said that the connected culverts will be covered by iron grates to prevent small children from getting into the drains.

Barnhill refuted some beliefs that residents in the surrounding community did not want a park there. "I did a survey of 77 homes in that area, and 76 of them are very much in favor of the park," she said. She added that she hopes to convince local businesses to contribute tables, benches, and playground equipment. She also said that she believes the people in nearby houses will call to report any suspicious activity in the park.

After some discussion, Barnhill agreed to begin working with the Suwannee River Water Management District to move fill dirt. "I will keep you up to date on the project," she told the board.

The city earlier purchased the lot with grant funds from the Florida Department of Parks and Recreation.

Sheriff's Office Moves To Old FHP Building

By Jacob Bemby
Greene Publishing, Inc.

As of Tuesday, Sept. 20, the Madison County Sheriff's Office has moved to a new location.

People wishing to stop by and speak with Sheriff Ben Stewart may do so at the old highway patrol station on U.S. 90, west of Madison, near the high school, Central School and Madison Academy.

The building was named after late Florida Highway Patrol Trooper James H. Fulford, who was killed by a bomb planted in a microwave on Feb. 1, 1992. It had been abandoned by the state due to budget cuts.

Built in 1967, closed in 2011, Stewart feels that the building will be a perfect fit for the Sheriff's Office.

Stewart noted that the lease he had signed was for 57 years and the building is rent-free.

"The only thing we will have to pay is the electric bill," he said.

The number for the Sheriff's Office remains the same at (850) 973-4151.

Two Injured In Rollover

By Jacob Bemby
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Two Greenville women were injured in a two-vehicle accident on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 15.

According to a Florida Highway Patrol report, Louis Edward Carter, 65, of Tallahassee, was traveling south on County Road 150 (NW Lovett Road) in a 2008 Dodge. At the same time, Kristina Dee Jarvis, 34, of Greenville, was also traveling south in a 2007 Chevy Tahoe.

Carter pulled onto the west shoulder of the road, and then pulled back into the southbound lane to turn around.

Jarvis saw Carter's Dodge coming back into the lane. She steered the Tahoe to the left to avoid colliding with the Dodge.

There was no contact between either vehicle. The Tahoe then traveled south onto the east shoulder of County Road 150. Jarvis attempted to steer the vehicle back into the southbound lane.

Jarvis overcorrected the Tahoe, causing it to travel southwest across both lanes of the road. The Tahoe then continued southwest onto the west shoulder of the road.

The Tahoe overturned and came to a final rest on its left side, facing east.

VIEWPOINTS & OPINIONS

One of the last two surviving members of Colin Kelly's crew has died. Bob Altman, a gunner and radio operator on the 8-man crew, died peacefully in nearby Lake City on September 8th. He was 91.

But 70 years ago as a 21 year old enlisted man, Bob Altman had a front row seat to history. On December 10th (the ninth in America), Colin Kelly's B-17C Flying Fortress was flying out of Clark Field in The Philippines. They had just finished bombing the heavy Japanese cruiser Ashigara and were returning to base when their aircraft was attacked by enemy fighters.

The initial attack killed TSgt Delehanty and severely damaged the Fort. As the fighters continued to attack the crippled aircraft, Colin Kelly tossed his aircraft around the sky to foil their tracking solutions. After repeated attacks, Kelly saw that the situation was hopeless and ordered the remaining six crew members to bail out of the blazing B-17.

Someone had to fly the airplane to allow the crew to don their parachutes and make their way to either of two exits. This was in the age before ejection seats so the bailout had to be manually performed. If Kelly were to release the controls, then G forces would have prevented nearly everyone from successfully exiting the ship.

In so doing, did Colin Kelly understand that he would not be able to safely exit the crippled aircraft? Probably not; he was frankly too busy flying a dying ship to consider the implications of his action. If we could talk to Captain Kelly today, he would probably say something like this: 'I was just doing my job. I gave the order because I was the aircraft commander. Someone had to fly the aircraft and that was my duty. I wish that I could have successfully jumped from the ship, but it didn't work out.'

With his selfless actions, Colin P. Kelly, Jr. became the first hero of World War II according to the commander-in-chief Franklin D. Roosevelt. He put sleepy little Madison on the map. Schools were named in his honor; songs were written about his exploits; and little boys all across America dreamed of becoming the next Colin Kelly. Madison's hero continued to serve his country long after his death.

The six surviving members of Kelly's crew made it to the ground alive. One would die of his injuries and another would be lost later in the Pacific War. Four survived the war to return to their native land. They all credited Colin Kelly with saving their lives by his selfless sacrifice.

Bob Altman was the only one of crew to be captured by the enemy and made a prisoner of war. He survived more than three years of hellish prison as a slave laborer. That he survived the war and lived to the ripe old age of 91 is testament to his courage and will to live. In his own right, Bob Altman was a hero of the first order. I believe that the NFCC library has a video tape of an interview between Altman and the late Bernard Wilson conducted in 1994 during the 50th anniversary celebration of the Four Freedoms Monument.

I never had the opportunity to interview Bob Altman myself and I regret that because there was something I wanted to learn about and document. On the Friday before the Pearl Harbor attack, Kelly's B-17 was launched on a reconnaissance mission to Formosa (Taiwan) which was Japanese held. Two days later, the Japanese launched the air attack from this island that essentially destroyed McArthur's air force in The Philippines.

There was significant cloud cover over the island and Kelly was unable to see much. On the return trip to Clark Field, the clouds parted and the crew noticed a large Japanese convoy steaming south. This was no doubt the invasion force for Malaysia and Singapore. Kelly descended to low altitude to learn more about the Japanese intentions. At one point, he ordered his gunners including Bob Altman to fire warning shots with their machine guns to see if he could provoke a response. The fighting Irish spirit of Colin Kelly was evident.

When the B-17 landed at Clark and Kelly recounted what he had seen, he was roundly criticized by two 2-star generals, Sutherland (McArthur's chief of staff) and Brereton (the air force commander). They accused him of trying to start a world war. That claim turned out to be prophetic because two days later, Japan launched World War II on their own initiative without any help from Colin Kelly.

As best I can tell, the results of that mission have never been documented and it is an important part of the story. Maybe it's been lost to posterity, but I'm curious nonetheless.

In closing, I return to Bob Altman. He has earned a well deserved rest after a full life on earth. But maybe beyond the great divide, Colin Kelly has assembled his crew and once again, they're ready to fire up those huge Wright Cyclone engines and sortie. God speed.

Warning To Consumers

As a resident and consumer in Madison, and my goal is to try to support the local business in this fine community. I am hurt. One would think that you can feel safe in dealing with local business and not be taken advantage of.

After my experience this past week I am so disappointed and angry with a local air conditioning company. I am ready to put on my boxing gloves! How dare them to take advantage of any customer, much less a longstanding customer who is a senior citizen and on a fixed income.

The young service repairman advised that my fifteen-year-old unit was too old to fix. The broken part was no longer available. A new unit would cost four thousand dollars.

I obtained a second opinion. The unit was fixed by reattaching the broken tubing and replacing the lost coolant at the sum of two-hundred and twenty-five dollars ($225.00).

An estimate was mailed to me for four thousand and five hundred dollars ($4,500.00) for a new unit.

Would you call this service a fraud?

Have you been a victim of a fraud?

One can make a complaint by calling the Florida Department of Consumer Services at (850) 488-6603.

Red, White and True Mysteries Mars And Hershey Share A Strange Secret

Have you ever wondered how certain products get their names? Take M & M's, for example. What do the two M's stand for? The answer will surprise you – and you will probably remember this story every time you eat M & M's in the future, just like you've noticed the arrow in the FedEx logo ever since someone first told you about it.

Last week my mother-in-law gave me a book, titled The Emperors of Chocolate, which tells the story of the Mars and Hershey chocolate companies. Naturally, when my bride of six months – who is convinced that chocolate is one of the four main food groups – heard that this week's story is about chocolate, she asked if this means that we will be going to Hershey, Pennsylvania, any time soon.

But I digress. Mars was founded by Forrest Mars, Sr., in 1920, while Hershey was founded by Milton Hershey in 1894. The two companies are bitter rivals that, together, control 95% of the candy market in the United States.

There are several interesting things about the Mars and Hershey chocolate companies – and the entire chocolate industry, for that matter. For example, at Mars, they are so focused on quality that millions of M & M's are thrown out every day simply because the M's are not applied properly. Yet when Forrest Mars, Jr. and his brother and sister were growing up in the 1940's, their father never let them eat M & M's because he said they couldn't spare any of them.

Meanwhile, Milton Hershey founded the Lancaster Caramel Company in 1890, and had turned it into the nation's largest caramel company by 1900.

He was at the top of the business world when he sold it for $1 million that year. Before he sold it, he had already discovered the opportunity that chocolate presented him, so he founded the Hershey Chocolate Company. His chocolate company was the first one to sell its products nationwide. Within a few years, he had built an entire town that would later become known as Hershey, Pennsylvania.

Both founders – Forrest Mars, Sr., and Milton Hershey – had to get away from their fathers before they became successful. Milton Hershey's first two companies failed after his father interfered by trying to get the son to expand too fast. Forrest Mars, on the other hand, was kicked out of his father's chocolate company when he interfered by trying to get his father, Frank, to expand his business. Both the elder Mars and the younger Hershey had failed in their first couple of business ventures.

But one of the more interesting stories about the Mars and Hershey chocolate companies is what the M's stand for on the M & M's candy.

The two companies are bitter rivals. The Mars Company was run by Forrest Mars, while the Hershey Company was run by Milton Hershey's good friend, William Murrie, when Mars introduced M & M's to the public back in 1940.

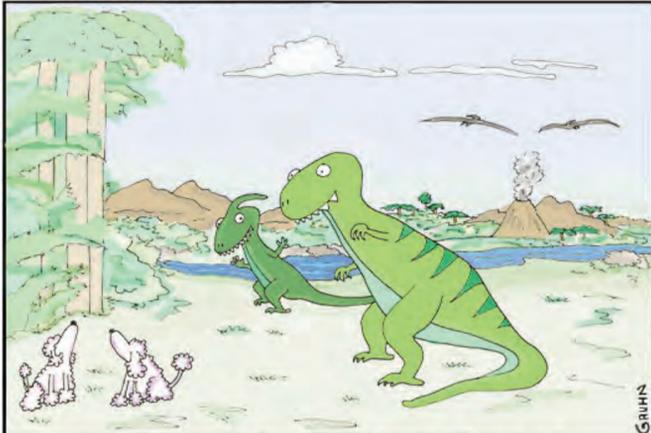

It would make sense if M & M stood for Mars & Mars, which is what the Mars employees claim, but the truth is that one of the M's stands for William Murrie's son, Bruce. So, in reality, the brand name of M & M stands for Murrie & Mars. Or Mars & Murrie.

Why would Forrest Mars agree to name his hot new product after the son of the president of Hershey, his biggest rival?

The two companies were once dependent upon each other. Forrest Mars, Sr., recruited Bruce Murrie to work for him, and it made sense at the time to offer to name one of the M's after Murrie. Plus, Hershey helped Mars design some of its machines, and it was the vendor that supplied the Mars Company with its chocolate.

You're still trying to figure out where the arrow is in the FedEx logo, aren't you? I'll give you a hint: It's between the "E" and the "x."

sioner, state representatives and the insurance commissioner, they insurance company has not bent yet.

Doctors say the lap band, in Mike's case, could be a life-saving procedure because it would enable him to possibly receive a kidney transplant. They also say that he has also needed knee replacements for years. The surgeries could help Big Mike get his life back.

Big Mike's daughter, Ashley, has decided not to wait for insurance companies to decide her father's fate, so she is asking for help.

The lap band surgery will cost $19,500, not including the travel expenses and Tori's loss of pay during Big Mike's recovery. There would also be extra cost for travel and pay loss during Big Mike's transplant surgery.

On Saturday evening, Oct. 8, there will be a cake auction and a benefit gospel concert featuring LifeSong, beginning at 6 p.m. at the Madison Woman's Club.

Donations of any kind will be accepted. As noted before, there will be a cake auction. The auction will feature the delicious Amish cakes, formerly sold at Big Mike's Produce. Flavors include sour cream pound cake, Italian cream cheesecake, caramel cake, carrot cake, hummingbird cake and other favorites.

An account has also been set up at Madison County Community Bank under "Big Mike's Medical Expense." Donations may also be made there.

"I know I'm asking a lot, but Dad's life is on the line," Ashley said. "I just want him to have a fighting chance."

Keeping The City Streets In Working Order

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

Pennsylvania-born-and-raised J.R. Olmstead has been in charge of the Madison City Street Department for the last six years, working with three other men to keep Madison's streets and roadways passable and looking good. Soon, Olmstead will have a fourth member of his crew, since the city is in the process of hiring an additional person.

For now, it is Olmstead, Michael Corrie, Ron Layton and Freeman Mobley who comprise the team keeping Madison's streets clear of debris and in good repair. They also help with the downtown holiday decorations, especially when it comes to hanging banners or flags, attaching the familiar Christmas decorations to the utility poles and decorating the huge trees in Four Freedoms Park. They provide the bucket truck and the safety oversight for the members of the Woman's Club and other civic groups that want to decorate large trees on city property. Last year, when the Woman's Club decorated the largest tree, Olmstead recalls that it "took about a day, and they did a nice job."

"We stay busy," he continues, describing the more typical duties of his crew, including patching/repairing potholes, repairing water leaks, picking up trash and recycling, removing road kill, clearing tree debris after thunderstorms, mowing roadsides within the city limits and keeping the trees on city property trimmed for safety reasons - to maintain unobstructed views of other vehicles for motorists and to minimize fallen debris after storms. However, in spite of the thunderstorms that have rolled through the area in the last few weeks, "we've been spared this year," said Olmstead. The amount of fallen tree limbs has been fairly moderate, unlike the big storm of 2009; they spent about two weeks clearing away the limbs that were piled up every-

Basically, it's the day-to-day stuff that describes much of their day, being ready for anything that comes over the dispatch, and the ladies of City Hall deserve a lot of credit for relaying the messages to all the departments quick-to traffic again. Sometimes, when a tree on city property has been too badly wind-damaged, it has to come down, again for safety reasons. If it is a smaller tree, Olmstead's crew removes it. If it is a big tree, they call in the tree surgeon and let the experts handle it. "It's not worth somebody getting hurt," said Olmstead.

They also take care of traffic signals within the city limits; whenever a light goes out, it is their job to get it working again. Any traffic signs or road signs that are damaged and need replacing also come under their purview.

As for the most unusual job they've ever handled, they all agree - the truck that spilled the chicken guts all over Base Street right in front of Four Freedoms Park back in April.

In a little while, they'll be starting their winter maintenance, getting the last of the mowing and the trimming done.

To get all this work done, the guys have a mower, a bucket truck, a knuckle boom, a backhoe and three tractors, "and when the bucket truck is down, we just tie J.R. to the end of the boom and send him up there." Ron Layton jokes.

Layton has been with the department 19 years. Originally from Miami, where he worked for Caterpillar, he left because there were "too many people in Miami," and has been in Madison ever since. Michael Corrie, a Madison native, will mark five years with the department on October 5.

As another day begins, the crew gets ready for whatever calls come in, and as always, "we do whatever needs to be done," said Olmstead.

where after that was over, working together with the other city departments - water, sewer and gas - to get the streets back into shape. He praised the way the departments worked together helping each other out, and not only during big clean-ups; whenever one department gets in a tight, they can always count on help from the other guys to get things put right again.

ly and accurately. The ladies - Lee Ann Hall, Debbie Thompson, Gloria Washington and Paula Jarvis, are known as "the hub of the wheel," said Olmstead, and they do a great job despite being under a lot of pressure.

Occasionally, they do get that 2 a.m. call about a fallen tree across a roadway, and have to go out immediately to remove it and get the roadway opened up

Record Crowd At 55 Plus

By Lynette Norris
Greene Publishing, Inc.

A record-breaking 131 people turned out for the September 14 meeting of the 55 Plus Club, their first gathering after a three-month break for the summer.

It was the special guest speaker who drew so many, according to Sonny Rollings, who chairs the Board of Trustees of the United Methodist Cooperative Ministries, sponsor of the 55 Plus Club.

"Having the Sheriff (Ben Stewart) is a big draw. When he said he'd come back to speak again, we knew we'd have a big crowd," said Rollings, as an extra table was being set up to handle the overflow.

Madison County Sheriff Stewart and his four-man drug interdiction team of Lt. David Harper, Sgt. Doug Haskell, Cpl. Michael Maurice and Sgt. Bill Hart were on hand to give the gathered crowd an overview of what the MCSO's drug interdiction efforts had accomplished during its first three years in Madison County, and to give a demonstration of one of their K-9 Units in action.

Speaking first, Stewart said that drug interdiction was a key component of his election, as is his belief that nearly every crime in Madison County is somehow drug-related at its root. But when he began his term as Sheriff, the drug interdiction team consisted of one man, "and that just wasn't going to work."

On his first day, he hired Haskell, and in short order had put together the four-man team that now covers the entire county. The four men are also deputized as U.S. Marshals, meaning they can travel outside the Madison jurisdiction if need be while conducting an investigation. They are deputized and trained as U.S. Customs Agents, giving them more federal authority when needed as well as access to federal databases. The team has been asked to train interdiction agents in other jurisdictions.

The first year Stewart was in office, his budget was cut by about $120,000. The second year, the budget was cut by another $350,000. His office has had no capital outlay for equipment in its budget for three years, but with the drug cash the interdiction team has seized, they have been able to purchase about 20 fully-equipped patrol vehicles (including a boat that can be used in both patrol and search-and-rescue operations) 15 new tasers, two additional drug-detecting canines, video surveillance equipment and computer systems.

"Drug dealers are paying us to do our job in catching them," said Haskell.

Rather than handling any of the drug money directly, the Madison team always turns the money over to the federal agents, who then return a percentage of the money to the county through official channels.

The MCSO has also been able to contribute a portion of the drug money toward drug rehabilitation (for Madison residents only) and to charitable efforts like the Boys and Girls Ranches.

Haskell also presented some never-before-seen video from two "indoor grow operations" found in Madison County, one in a stripped-out double-wide trailer, and the other in a semi trailer. Both operations involved hundreds of nearly mature plants, and both were stealing power from the utility company at the rate of $28,000-$30,000 a year, a cost that is eventually passed on to other consumers.

When the Sheriff himself appeared briefly in one of the scenes, Haskell said, "I have no idea who that guy is," to a round of laughter. "I think he was one of the suspects."

The final part of the presentation, and the most eagerly awaited, was outside. People got a close-up look at the boat and some of the vehicles and the equipment the sheriff's office now uses and a chance to see a demonstration of one of the K-9 Units in action. Arko, a shepherd/Malinois mix, was led once around an SUV containing a hidden stash of drugs, and quickly located the hiding place behind the right front headlight, to the delight of the crowd.

The 55 Plus Club meets at noon on the second Wednesday of the month at the United Methodist Cooperative Ministries building, on the corner of Colin Kelly Highway and Dill road, about five miles north of town. Lunch is provided by whichever church is hosting that particular month, and there is always a presentation on a topic of interest to seniors.

There are no fees or dues; anyone 55 and older is welcome to attend. Their next regular meeting is October 12 at noon.

Madison Woman's Club Begins A New Year With New Officers, By Taking Stock In Children

Greene Publishing, Inc.

The Madison Woman's Club began its first meeting after the summer break on Sept. 8 with outgoing president Jackie Johnson presenting certificates of appreciation to nearly two dozen members for their hard work on various projects during the past year, and looking ahead to the new service opportunities that awaited with a new slate of officers to lead the way.

Ethel Barefoot presented Johnson with a bouquet of flowers and a gift on behalf of the Club, in appreciation for Johnson's work as president for the last two years. Then the new officers were installed during a brief ceremony. Johnson passed the gavel to incoming president

Mary Groover, and each of the new officers received a different color rose that symbolized her office: Johnson, stepping into her new role as parliamentarian, received a peach rose; Kaye Browning, the new recording secretary, a pink rose; Sandra Bass the new treasurer, a coral rose; Ethel Barefoot, second vice president, a yellow rose; Margaret Ann Bunch, first vice president, a white rose; and new president Mary Groover, three red roses symbolizing love, respect and congratulations.

Glenda Gordon, who was unable to attend, is the new chaplain.

The first meeting was focused on children in the community, particularly school children in need. Club members had brought in school supplies for them and Faye Browning would later divide all those donations into dozens of bags for distribution to the students.

Florida Smith read some hilarious excerpts from a book of children's letters to God: "Dear God, thank you for the baby brother, but what I really wanted was a puppy." "Dear God, are you really invisible, or is that just a trick?" "Dear God, is it true my father won't get into heaven if he uses his 'bowling words' in the house?"

The guest speaker was Jo Willis, State Director and Coordinator of Take Stock in Children, who recognized and thanked all the members who had participated in the club's mentoring efforts, giving special recognition to Margaret Ann Bunch, a former student who is now a mentor herself.

The Madison Woman's Club now has more mentors than any other civic group in Madison, Willis said; it had even surpassed Kiwanis, which had long held the lead in the number of mentors.

Woman's Club members now actively mentor about 60 children, and of those 60, 15 were graduating this year, 34 had a cumulative 2.8 GPA, 24 had cumulative 3.0 and five had achieved straight A's - a cumulative 4.0.

Next month, Jackie Johnson and Ethel Barefoot are going to the State Convention with the Madison Club's scrapbook for the year, and the Annual District Meeting Oct. 15 will be held at Honey Lake Plantation. That same Saturday is also Rachel Reichmann's 100th birthday. Daughters Nell Ring and Raye Wooley are holding an Open House for her that afternoon from 2 to 4 p.m. at their home on Livingston Street. Members will be busy that day, going from the District Meeting that morning at Honey Lake to Rachel's 100th birthday celebration that afternoon.

Ahead of them lies another year of service, with plenty of opportunities for fun and friends.

The Madison Woman's Club meets the second Thursday of every month, and their next regular meeting is Oct. 13.

NFCC Welcomes New Students To Campus

With the end of summer comes an exciting time at North Florida Community College - the anticipation and start of fall term. Each August an influx of new and returning students flood the campus and it's up to NFCC's Campus Life department to help prepare the newcomers for their NFCC experience.

One way NFCC welcomes its new students is with orientation sessions, required for all new, dual enrollment and transfer students. The sessions are structured specifically to help familiarize new students and their families with the college campus and its multitude of resources and opportunities. Around 250 students and family members attended NFCC's Fall Term 2011 orientation sessions held Aug. 22-23.

"Students are more likely to succeed in college when they are connected to the people and resources available to them," said Kim Halfhill, Director of Campus Life at NFCC. "Our goal at Orientation is to help students begin making these connections."

Themed "Let the journey begin..." NFCC's fall orientation allowed new students to explore the campus, get their official student ID, and find out about important campus resources. In addition to campus speakers, NFCC also welcomed guest and professional speaker Yvonne J. Harvey Williams. Williams led an Ultimate Money Skills for College presentation that shared information on how new college students can build good credit, avoid credit mistakes and protect themselves from excessive debt and identity theft. The program was presented at no cost to NFCC through support from Bank of America and Monster.com.

Orientation sessions are held at the start of fall and spring terms at NFCC to help prepare students for the road ahead. For more information, contact Kim Halfhill, Director of Campus Life, at (850) 973-1623.

ACA JV Warriors Chalk Up Third Victory

By Fran Hunt
Special from ECB Publishing, Inc.

With three games down and two remaining in the season, the Aucilla Christian Academy junior varsity football team chalked up their third victory, downing Brookwood for a 14-0 win and to stand 3-0 on the season.

Coach Derrick Burrus advised that pre-game formalities were set aside due to impending weather.

ACA kicked to Brookwood and the Warriors defense went to work.

Timmy Burrus led with seven tackles and forced one fumble.

Nick Roberts had six tackles and one fumble recovery.

As Brookwood moved the ball up the field into the red zone, Ricky Finlayson picked off an interception.

Austin Bishop had three tackles including a quarterback sack.

Bryce Sanderson and Daulton Browning each made three tackles.

All of Aucilla's points resulted from broken plays.

Timmy Burrus had 136 yards total offense including rushing 55 yards for a touchdown on a broken play.

On another broken play, after breaking several tackles in the backfield, he passed to Eric Hutsell for a 41-yard touchdown.

Extra point kicker, Austin Bishop turned a high snap into a run for two points.

"We did a great job on both sides of the ball tonight. Unfortunately, lightning ended the game just prior to half time," said Coach Burrus. "I am especially proud of our linemen. They don't get stats, but they work hard every play giving our backs room to do their work."

The young Warriors face off against North Florida Christian middle school, 6 p.m., September 22, at home. Come on out and cheer Aucilla on to their fourth season victory.

Does Big Tobacco Want YOUR Children? Tobacco-Free BMX Event at Lanier Field September 24

In an effort to reduce youth initiation into tobacco use, Tobacco Free Madison is hosting the Freestyle Connection, a spectacular BMX bike show Saturday, Sept. 24, at Lanier Field from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. Freestyle Connection will give two performances, one starting at 10 a.m. and the other starting at noon. This group came to town the last couple of years and performed shows for standing-room-only crowds. As well as entertaining the crowds with jaw-dropping stunts, the Freestyle Connection helps promote good decision making like wearing your bike helmet and being above the influence of Big Tobacco's marketing that attracts youth.

If you're young (underage is fine) with a whole lifetime ahead of you, Big Tobacco has made it a lot easier to get past those awkward, unpleasant experiences many have with their first trials of tobacco use. Big Tobacco is using candy-flavored tobacco products wrapped in bright, attractive packaging that draws the attention of rookie tobacco users. Some of the chemicals in these specially flavored products have been manipulated so that they don't cause the nauseous feeling commonly associated with initial tobacco use. The more pleasant of an experience for those just testing the waters, the easier it is for novice users to be drawn into a lifetime of expensive addiction to Big Tobacco's products, lining its corporate pocket ets with their hard-earned money.

The flow of money does not stop there. Vast sums of money are then required to address the life-long impacts of tobacco-related illness and lost productivity over one's lifetime; large portions of that money are paid by non-tobacco-using taxpayers, an approximate 4 to 1 majority.

Flavored cigarettes, other than menthols, were banned by the FDA in 2009; cigarettes being the most common/preferred form of nicotine delivery making up nearly 90% of the tobacco market. The FDA did not restrict the sale of other flavored products like cigars, cigarillos, blunt wraps and smokeless products, like dip and chew. Marketing of products not covered by the FDA ban has increased greatly since 2009. Communities are now working to restrict the sale of these flavored products at a grass roots level.

Tobacco companies are not legally allowed to market their products directly toward youth, so they deny that the chocolate-chip-cookie-dough-flavored blunt wraps in the cute, colorful packages are aimed at teenagers and young people. Such marketing campaigns, they claim, are directed at smoking adults in general, of all ages. Other common flavored products include peach flavored dip, grape flavored cigars and pina colada flavored blunt wraps.

Tobacco Free Madison wants to reduce young people's initiation into a lifetime of tobacco addiction and thereby reduce the impacts of tobacco use in Madison County. By pulling aside the curtain on the tobacco corporations' marketing ploys and letting the young people and parents see to what lengths these companies are willing to go to get teenaged consumers hooked, addicted and subsequently get their dollars, the Freestyle Connection and Tobacco Free Madison hope that Madison's young people will make informed decisions. Teens can invest in their future by choosing a long, healthy, tobacco-free life rather than opting for the statistically shorter life of a smoker, which averages over 12 years less than non-smokers. "Studies show that almost 90% of adult tobacco users began using before age 18. So, if we can prevent initiation through 18, the odds are in our favor" says Tobacco Prevention Specialist, Doug Freer, of the Madison County Health Department.

Healthy Start will be on hand at Lanier Field with a limited number of bicycle helmets in various sizes for those who are interested. The Whole Child Connection will be on site as well, helping parents and youth link to needed resources.

Come on out and join the crowds at Lanier Field for a fun-filled and informative event. Check out tobaccofreeflorida.com for more information on tobacco prevention resources and free help to quit.

Ask The Dentist

Question: What do my prescription medicines have to do with my teeth?

Answer: Patients are surprised on a regular basis when I tell them how their necessary prescription medicines affect their teeth. Let me reiterate when I say necessary prescription medicine. What I am telling patients is there are side effects to numerous medicines some of which will show up in the mouth. You need to see your dentist for help with the side effects.

One of the most obvious side effects is sudden rampant or aggressive tooth decay. I have seen this with 3 patients in the last three weeks which is my inspiration for this article. These patients have had routine dental care for years and all of a sudden with new medications come new dental decay problems.

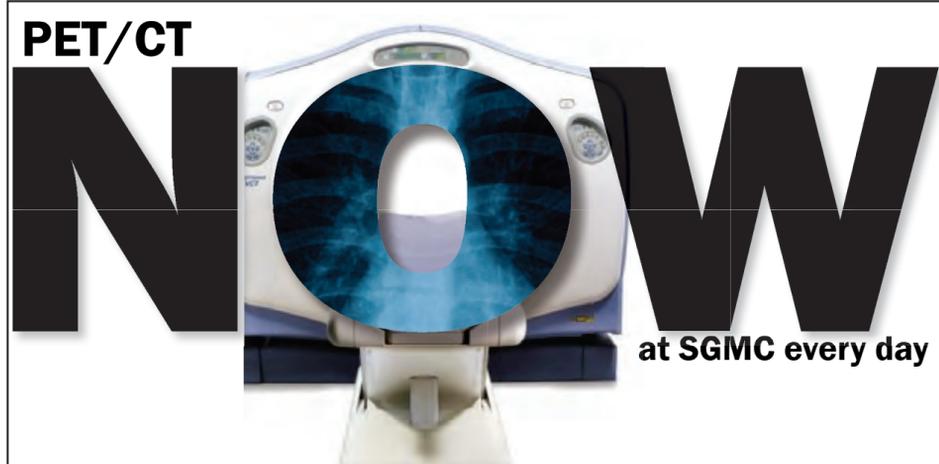

Numerous medications have the effect of drying up your saliva. You can often tell someone with dry mouth because they say they are thirsty all the time and they carry around a bottle of water. They have been checked for diabetes because of the excessive thirst but they are fine. What has happened is they have developed a dry mouth condition called Xerostomia.

Two of my patients started using cough drops to make their mouth feel better. Interestingly cough drops do have antibiotic ingredients to help sore throats. Things like menthol, spearmint, & cetylpyridium chloride will all help fight the bacteria when you have a sore throat, which is wonderful. The problem is most all sore throat lozenges are loaded with sugar. Go ahead and use sugar laden cough drops for three months. They will cause just as many cavities as candy.

Let me describe it this way. You know that fire extinguishers have some form of baking soda to put out fires. Let me ask a question. Would you buy a Fire Extinguisher from the BP Oil Company? (I know you won't buy anything from BP) Does it make sense to have a fire extinguisher which is half baking soda and half GASOLINE? Well that is what you are doing when you get cough drops with sugar (high fructose corn syrup) and a disinfectant. You are killing the bacteria and fueling them at the same time. It also fuels tooth decay.

So if you like cough drops you need to find them that are sugar free. Don't let them put gasoline in your fire extinguisher!

SGMC's Imaging Center is proud to offer one of the world's most advanced PET/CT scanners. This remarkable 64-slice technology combines two distinct diagnostic images. The result is one clearer picture of the location and extent of the disease. And once doctors know where to treat, they can begin working on the best treatment plans for the best outcomes. Using PET/CT to detect cancer at earlier stages may allow physicians to plan more effective treatments, whether that involves surgery, chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

PET/CT is also an excellent tool for performing cardiac studies, and distinguishing between neurologic disorders such as Alzheimer's and other types of dementia.

The addition of this superior technology allows you to stay close to home. No need to travel out of town or wait for the next visit from a mobile PET/CT. When it comes to your health, there's no time for waiting.
