THAT'S ALL FOLKS

Selling a 25 cent luxury item: After more than 50 years of providing community news, Pinellas News publishes its final issue

BY ROBERT POTTER
EDITOR AND PUBLISHER

"You will not be the first and you do not want to be the last purveyor of buggy wips or anything else."

- Dr. Tim Pennel, Wake Forest University School of Medicine

Newspaper people and newspapers as an organization have no problem talking or writing about anything except their own publication. Having the passion, the skill set and opportunity to work at a newspaper, and the need for journalistic objectivity simply cannot co-exist. So call this paragraph a disclaimer for writing this paper's obituary and I apologize for using the word "I" in the story. As for writing about another paper, in the back of the writer's mind "that could be us someday," can get in the way as well.

The paper you have in your hands is the final edition of the Pinellas News. After 17 years, we are closing our doors. The why is rather basic. Our expenses are more than our revenue. Though small business has its up and downs, this time the losses started back last year and we have no seen a reversal nor do we anticipate one in the near future. We are not the first newspaper to close nor will we be the last.

This newspaper started out as the Pinellas Park Post back in 1954, by Mr. Judson Bailey. He was an Associated Press reporter and a three packs a day smoker. Some of the old documents he signed still reek of tobacco today.

After changing ownership several times, my tenure started in Pinellas Park on April 1, 1993, and was quoted by one staffer as an "April Fool's prank" when describing how the assets purchased were not found to be as valuable as presented.

Three lawsuits later, I realized life was more than the job. Dealing with all of that I have to thank Alison Steele and Guillermo "Willey" Ruiz for getting me through it and reminding me that regardless of the variations of the earth's rotation that the sun would still rise in the east and set in the west or there about.

While all of this was happening, AOL introduced us to the world we now call

USF to host Gen. Petraeus and other leading thinkers on Afghanistan and Pakistan

TAMPA, Fla. – The University of South Florida will host more than two dozen of the world's leading authorities on Afghanistan and Pakistan for three days of discussions on the challenges and opportunities in one of the world's most volatile and important regions, Wednesday through Friday, March 24-26.

The event will include an hour-long conversation with U.S. CENTCOM Commander Gen. David H. Petraeus at 2:30 p.m. on Friday, March 26, in the Oval Theater of the Marshall Student Center.

The general's talk, as well as other conference discussions, are free and open to the public, but seating is limited. Those interested in attending are asked to RSVP at RSVP-GenP@usf.edu.

"The importance of Afghanistan and Pakistan to American national security is irrefutably profound," said conference co-organizer Mohsen Milani, chair of USF's Department of Government and International Affairs and an internationally renowned scholar on the region.

"There are thousands of American troops stationed in Afghanistan, and Pakistan is a nuclear power. In three days of intense discussions, our invited experts, who come from a truly diverse academic and career backgrounds, will analyze the challenges faced by these two countries and their ramifications for the U.S. national security and interests."

USF is organizing the conference as a means of advancing discussion on the development of future regional policy. Attending the event will be contingents from U.S. Central Command, the U.S. diplomatic corps, scholars, students and concerned citizens.

Experts also will explore the connection between security interests and the dire healthcare situation in both nations.

"Public Health plays a major role in creating a stable Afghanistan-Pakistan region," said conference co-organizer Tom Mason, an epidemiologist in USF's College of Public Health.

"Without good health, people are not only susceptible to disease but also to manipulation. By addressing health needs we can achieve recognition as a caring society, which is committed to providing care to all."

Five panel discussions will feature scholars from diverse backgrounds. Experts from the U.S. Army War College, Gen. David Petraeus (pictured here at an event at the Jim Blanchard Leadership Forum), will speak the challenges faced by Afghanistan and Pakistan at USF on Friday March 26.

FWC Lieutenant Bingham honored for marine conservation work

He would humbly tell you he was just doing his job. But the federal government calls the marine conservation work of Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) Lt. David Bingham "outstanding."

Last month, the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida honored Bingham, who heads a patrol squad in Broward County, with an Outstanding Law Enforcement Officer of the Year award.

"Winning this award is a highlight of my career," said Bingham. "It's rewarding to know that the federal government recognized the FWC for our work in resource protection."

The award recognized Bingham and NOAA Special Agent James Rodriguez for their work in "Operation Mind Games." The two worked together in 2005 to bust charter fishing vessels based in North Miami Beach for illegally harvesting and landing sailfish. The defendants in the case were sentenced in 2008.

"Lt. Bingham's expertise in dealing with state and federal fisheries is a huge asset to our agency," said Bingham's supervisor, Capt. Denise Warwick. "The cases he has been involved with have brought a tremendous amount of revenue dollars back to Florida. We are proud that he has been recognized by the U.S. Attorney's Office for his efforts."

"Lt. David Bingham's efforts in this case not only led to the conviction of a team of environmental criminals, but resulted in restitution to hundreds of anglers, mostly tourists, who had been

Record breaking winter leads to high number of manatee deaths

As of March 19, biologists with the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission's (FWC) Fish and Wildlife Research Institute (FWRI) have documented 431 manatee carcasses in state waters so far in 2010. This preliminary data indicates that in just three months, the number of manatee deaths has exceeded the highest number on record for an entire calendar year, which was 429 in 2009. The cause of death for the majority of these animals is cold stress.

The "cold-stress" category accounts for 222 documented manatee carcasses; however, it is likely the cold temperatures also contributed to many of the 108 deaths in the "undetermined" category and the 64 deaths in the "unrecovered" category.

Manatee deaths are categorized as "undetermined" when biologists are not able to confirm the cause of death, often because the carcasses are too badly decomposed. The "unrecovered" category includes carcasses that are unavailable to scientists, such as when carcasses are found in remote locations.

Unfortunately, the number of recovered carcasses for this year continues to be well above long-term averages.

As the rate of cold-related deaths diminishes, FWC staff will begin to focus on determining the long-term implications for the manatee population, a process that could take several years.

The period of prolonged cold weather earlier this year exposed manatees in Florida to colder than normal water temperatures. Exposure to low temperatures over a period of time can cause a condition called "manatee cold-stress syndrome," which can result in death.

"The unprecedented rate of mortality this year is of great concern," said Gil McRae, FWRI director. "FWC staff, partners and volunteers have done a tremendous job working around the clock for weeks recovering carcasses and conducting rescues throughout Florida."

Since the cold weather conditions began to affect Florida, FWC staff and conservation partners have rescued 48 manatees from across the state and continue to respond to reports of distressed manatees.

To report a dead or distressed manatee, call the FWC Wildlife Alert Hotline at 888-404-FWCC (3922).

UF/IFAS, Buckeye break ground for biorefinery pilot plant in Perry

BY: STU HUSTON
UF/IFAS

GAINESVILLE - In 2002, the U.S. Department of Energy set a goal that, by 2030, a third of the nation's reliance on fossil fuels would be replaced by environmentally sound products made from plant material usually discarded as trash.

Today, despite technical hurdles and the worldwide economic recession, representatives from the University of Florida, Buckeye Technologies Inc. and the Florida Legislature broke ground for a facility that could be a significant step toward reaching that goal.

The Stan Mayfield Biorefinery Pilot Plant, slated to be operational in spring 2011, will be operated as a UF/IFAS satellite laboratory facility concentrated on the use of cellulosic biomass to produce ethanol.

"We would not be here today without the exceptional foresight and support of those who realize, even in these trying economic times, how important this work is to our future," said UF President Bernie Machen, who led the groundbreaking ceremony.

Funded by a $20 million appropriation from the Florida Legislature, the plant will be built at the Perry, Fla. facility of Buckeye Technologies Inc., a manufacturer and worldwide distributor of cellulose-based specialty products made from wood and cotton.

Much of the plant's research will be based on the work of Lonnie Ingram, UF distinguished professor of microbiology and cell science and director of the Florida Center for Renewable Chemicals and Fuels.

Ingram engineered an E. coli bacterium that breaks down inedible plant material into sugars that can be processed into fuel-grade cellulosic ethanol. Variations of the technology are already at work in fuel plants in Louisiana and Japan.

The UF Board of Trustees named the facility for Stan Mayfield, a member of the Florida

House of Representatives from 2000 until his death in 2008.

An alumnus of UF's College of Engineering, he was a leader in education and environmental issues. As chairman of the Florida House's Environmental and Natural Resources Council, he championed energy research, including funding for the Perry plant.

"The...plant will continue his vision and concentrate on the research and development of new renewable resources from cellulosic biomass," said Debbie Mayfield, Stan Mayfield's widow and member of the Florida House of Representatives. "This is a great day in the state of Florida. The only thing that would make it better is if Stan were here with us."

USF professor leads Capitol Hill briefing on school safety

TAMPA, Fla. – With each school shooting, fears deepen for the safety of everyone at every learning institution, from grammar schools to college campuses. Yet how afraid should the public be, really? University of South Florida Professor Randy Borum led a team of school safety experts in writing an article titled "What Can Be Done About School Shootings?" for a special issue of Educational Researcher devoted to "New Perspectives on School Safety and Violence Prevention" and indeed does bring a new set of ideas to the issue.

The article examines empirical evidence and concludes that these kinds of violent events are very uncommon and should not generate widespread fear, but the authors also recommend that schools "develop plans to assess and manage threatening situations and to respond effectively in the aftermath."

According to Borum, "School shootings are horrific, but extremely rare events. We have to put the risk in its proper perspective, and focus our efforts on prevention – not prediction, profiling or checklists. Effective prevention efforts work to create a safe climate in the school, while relying on systematic procedures for thoughtfully assessing and managing situations in which there is a concern about potential violence.

USF Professor Randy Borum will present his findings on school shootings at a debriefing on April 8 in Washington, D.C.

"America's long-term interests in school safety generally, and in preventing school shootings specifically, will best be served by relying on research evidence to guide a comprehensive, school-wide approach," he concluded.

Borum is a professor in the USF College of Behavioral and Community Sciences Department of Mental Health Law and Policy and holds a joint appointment in the USF College of Public Health. He and his co-authors will be acknowledged in Washington, D.C. at a Congressional briefing to be held April 8, at 2 p.m. in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Room 430 where their findings will be presented.

"We hope that members of Congress will come away from this briefing with an understanding that schools are fundamentally safe, but it is vital that they have a careful approach for assessing and managing threats," Borum said.

Residents use series of murals to inspire unity in troubled area of downtown Clearwater

CLEARWATER, Fla. – On March 27 and 28, a neighborhood will come together to paint a mural with a lofty goal in mind—to turn around downtown Clearwater's troubled East Gateway District.

The East Gateway Business & Neighbors Association is partnering with the Pinellas Opportunity Council and the City of Clearwater to produce the first of three murals in conjunction with the Pinellas Opportunity Council program, Talento 2010, A Celebration of Pinellas County's Hispanic Art and Culture.

In 2009, Hispanics and Latinos represented an estimated 61 percent of East Gateway's population. The neighborhood's median family income is 44 percent lower than that for the City of Clearwater as a whole.

The first Talento 2010 mural will be completed during the March 27 to 28 event that Maria Emilia, Pinellas Opportunity Council Manager, calls a "weekend slam." Members of the neighborhood association and other community volunteers will don paint clothes and wield brushes and rollers in 2 hour shifts from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day at Tshirt Warehouse, 1498 Gulf to Bay Blvd.

Volunteer artists will not have to go it alone, though. The mural project will be under the direction of a local Hispanic artist, Jorge Vidal. Vidal has been coordinating with the neighborhood association over the past few months to design and plan the mural project and will be on-site for the painting process.

The mural theme is based on the historic gladiolus farms that occupied the area in the early 1900s. The mural event concludes with a March 28 celebration at the Fraternal Order of Eagles, 1485 Gulf to Bay Blvd, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Eagles are extending their bi-weekly Delegates Breakfast to the general public ($5 made to order breakfast, 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.). The Eagles will serve hot dogs and burgers from noon to 3 p.m. At 1 p.m., kids can tie-dye t-shirts (free while supplies last).

Two more Talento 2010 murals are scheduled for future weekend slams. On April 24 and 25, artist "Pila" Victoria Cadena will orchestrate a mural and on May 1 and 2, artists Felipe Packard and Ricardo de la Vega have designed a mural that coincides with a Cinco de Mayo festival.

The Pinellas Opportunity Council is covering the cost of the murals using federal stimulus grant funds in hopes that the outdoor art will attract visitors to the East Gateway District and generate customers for its diverse mix of small businesses, including several establishments known for their authentic Mexican cuisine. Once finished, the Talento 2010 murals and others in the city will be published in a mural guide.

Cat of the Week Artemis

Wiggle Worm is a name that would describe this very funny cat! She is as silly as she is sweet and she has amazing emerald green eyes. Artemis is a very, very affectionate cat... Did I mention that Artemis is affectionate? All Artemis wants to do is be close to you. She is so beautiful on the outside but she is so nice on the inside too. She has lived with another cat, she likes toy mice, but most of all, she loves people! Visit Artemis at SPCA Tampa Bay, 9099 130th Ave N in Largo, or call 727-586-3591.

Dog of the Week Prince

Prince truly lives up to his name! He looks like he has a little red beard under that white face. He seems to be housetrained, is doing well on his basic commands and walks nice on a leash. Prince enjoys all humans he meets and often leans into you for a good scratch. He loves to run a lap or two around the yard with his ball in his mouth. He is not a high energy dog, but he will need a brisk daily walk or run. If you have time, patience and love, Prince is your man! "The illegal landings and fraud on our state's visitors would likely never have come to light and been subjected to both state and federal scrutiny but for his dedication to resource protection. The public should applaud and support such cooperative enforcement efforts by the wildlife officers and agents of South Florida."

Located in the heart of Pinellas County, Eagle Lake Park offers the freedom to explore and abundant opportunities for relaxation and recreation. With more than 163 acres, this new public resource offers a slice of natural tranquility in the midst of urban life.

The Grand Opening of the first new park introduced since 2001 is set for 10 a.m. on Tuesday, March 30, between shelters 4 and 5 in the northwest corner of the park. Cub Scout Pack 484 will present the colors and Commission Chair Karen Williams Seel of the Pinellas County Board of County Commissioners will speak to commemorate the park's public opening.

Eagle Lake Park is located in the City of Largo and bordered by Belleair Road on the north, Keene Road on the east, McMullen Road to the south and Lake Avenue to the west, with the main entrance at 1800 Keene Road.

The park was purchased in two separate transactions from the Taylor family, early pioneers in Pinellas County who used the property for cattle grazing and as a citrus grove. Amenities include a playground, six picnic shelters, fishing piers, three restrooms, a dog park, paved recreation trails and 2,000 feet of boardwalk. The habitat of the park includes native vegetation, restored wetlands and diverse local wildlife.

People more dangerous to sharks than vice versa

The numbers of shark species in Florida have been steadily declining over the last 20 years.

As a top predator in the world's oceans, sharks deserve our cautious respect. However, the fear they instill among swimmers is disproportionate to the actual number of negative encounters. Sharks prefer other prey. Attacks on humans are usually a case of mistaken identity.

According to International Shark Attack File statistics, the odds of a shark attack on a human are 1 in 11.5 million, and of a fatal shark attack, 0 in 264.1 million.

Humans are top predators too, and they pose more of a danger to sharks than sharks do to people. Some anglers love to catch and kill sharks just for the thrill, while people harvest most sharks primarily for their meat, fins, hides and jaws. Brent Winner, a scientist at the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission's Fish and Wildlife Research Institute, noted that people harvest an estimated 100 million sharks annually worldwide.

"Scientific data show that many shark populations have been dramatically reduced by almost 50 percent over the past 25 years," Winner said.

The lemon shark, known to scientists as "Negaprion brevirostris," gathers at specific locations off Florida's southeast coast from November through June for what scientists believe are "pre-breeding aggregations."

Clustering makes the lemon-colored sharks that reach 9 feet vulnerable to overfishing, so the FWC recently passed a rule protecting lemon sharks from recreational and commercial harvest in all Florida state waters.

"I've been in this state only 20 years, yet, in that short time, the numbers of many shark species have declined. In 1989, we didn't have harvest restrictions on any species. Now, harvest is prohibited on more than 20 shark species in both state and federal waters," Winner said.

The ocean is a wild environment for humans (Homo sapiens), but it is home to sharks. As apex predators, sharks maintain the natural balance of life in the sea. For more information on sharks, go to research.myfwc.com/features/ and click on saltwater.

the Web. Nothing will replace that cazzz beep beep sound of a modem synching.

We made the name change to Pinellas News, which everyone who lives here had no problem pronouncing, however, the rest of the world required a lengthy explanation of the proper enunciation.

We also moved the office from Pinellas Park to downtown Saint Petersburg to get closer to the courthouse and concentrate on legal notices. We signed the lease with Mr. David Foster on April 14, 1995, and will have been here until the end of March, 2010.

We fought and won the bid for Pinellas County tax rolls twice and I found out first hand that stuffing 10 sections of tax rolls into each paper took a while. We had our thickest paper run at 170 pages. Of course, reading the tax rolls was not relished by a lot of our subscribers back then and post office boxes were jammed when stuffed with that edition.

This week the state house is taking testimony in committee again to remove legal notices from newspapers altogether. The first time a bill was introduced to remove legal notices from newspapers was back in 2006.

Back before the last millennium, with much assistance from Erik Mathre, his family and friends, we added the Web site www.pinellas-news.com. The concept was simple enough. Design the site so that anyone could update it without becoming a wizard of the html code. That part was simple, or so we thought, but we got it done. Not every story written is there, but at least a lot of the local ones were uploaded.

So, why stay in this business for all this time? I can only guess that either it is a defect in genes or a passion for enjoying or dreading the mystery of what was to happen every day when I walked in the door and feeling of accomplishment every week of putting out another edition.

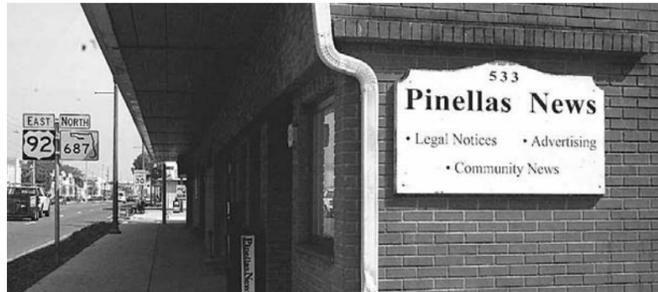

My grandfather owned a small newspaper and my father

also owned a small newspaper, then two, then five before they were sold to a chain, which is why I say I may have that gene issue.

I have to say what I have enjoyed the most over these many years while dealing with all the "stuff" was being a mentor to a lot of young kids, as I called them, who were trying to decide what to do with the rest of their lives. A task I shall have beginning Monday, after I sign the last paycheck, finish all the corporate reports, turn off the lights and lock the door for the last time.

Pinellas News, currently located at 533 4th St. N. in St. Petersburg, will close its doors at the end of March 2010.

Former American Idol contestant to perform at Dallas Bull

Tampa, FL- If you are among the millions of die-hard American Idol fans that span the globe, Danny Gokey is a name you have not forgotten. If you haven't been fortunate enough to hear the talented vocalist/guitarist/pianist, you're in luck - he's bringing his act to the Dallas Bull on Friday, April 9.

The handsome 29-year-old church music director from Milwaukee finished in third place during Season 8 of the popular reality series. He released his first single in 2009, an upbeat melody titled "My best days are ahead of me." While Gokey sang a wide variety of songs during his Idol career such as Aerosmith's "Dream On" and Joe Cocker's "You Are So Beautiful," he felt most at ease singing country music. With a little coaxing from superstar Randy Travis who saw a unique spirit in the young artist, Gokey made his way into the country scene, releasing his album My Best Days in March of 2010. Gokey attributes his success to his supportive wife, who passed away just one month prior to his Idol audition. He has since started the foundation "Sophia's Heart" in her honor.

Doors will open at 7 p.m. and the cost of attendance is $9.95 in advance through Ticketmaster or www.Dallasbull.com. Tickets are $15 at the door.

Gokey came in 3rd place in season 8 of American Idol.

National Child Safety Expert Holds Free Seminar for Parents

Pinellas Park, Fla. -Just 32 seconds. That's all it takes to lure your child away. Award-winning author and nationally-recognized child luring expert, Dr. Ken Wooden, will hold a free seminar for parents and other interested citizens on Wednesday April 14th from 6:00 to 8:00 pm at the Pinellas Park Performing Arts Center.

This free child luring awareness and prevention seminar is designed to teach strategies and tactics to protect children, teens and young adults from predators.

Dr. Ken Wooden founded the nationally-recognized child safety program, Child Lures Prevention, and has been a featured guest on CNN, Oprah, and Inside Edition, to name a few.

"If predators are using lures, shouldn't we be teaching our children the lures?" urges Wooden.

The free seminar is being held in conjunction with National Child Abuse Prevention Month in April and was organized by the Abuse, Neglect and Dependency (AND) Committee, an interagency collaboration with membership from more than a dozen Pinellas County social service agencies.

BULLS BASEBALL VICTORIOUS OVER UNF

TAMPA-- In their final tune up before BIG EAST Conference play offs, senior left-handed pitcher Teddy Kaufman and the University of South Florida baseball team shook off a shaky start to claim a 10-7 victory over in-state foe North Florida.

After giving up three runs in the first inning, Kaufman settled in and shut down the Osprey lineup until the sixth inning, when he yielded one unearned run. Kaufman would go six innings allowing four runs on five hits while striking out eight, en route to his team leading third win of the season. Only three of the runs were earned.

Kaufman was relieved by Kyle Eastham, who pitched 2.0 innings and would strike out two while allowing two hits and one run.

USF pitching combined for 13 strikeouts. It is the fifth time in the last six games in which the Bulls' pitching has recorded at least 10 strikeouts in a game.

After not allowing a run in his complete game shutout of UCF one week ago, the UNF Ospreys jumped on Kaufman early. UNF collected three runs on three hits to take the early 3-0 lead through the top of the first.

In the bottom half of the first, the Bulls continued their recent trend of two out magic.

Hunt singled, and advanced to third after Todd Brazeal and Eric Sim were each hit by a pitch. Junior Carlin then doubled to left to clear the bases and tie the game at 3-3. Carlin would come in to score from second on a single by Daniel Rockhold to put USF up 4-3 through one.

The Bulls added another run in the second, as Chad Taylor walked to lead off and advanced to second on a sac bunt by Lockwood. Kosco singled to left to score Taylor and give USF the 5-3 advantage.

Left-handed pitcher Teddy Kaufman (pictured) struck out eight batters before he was relieved by Kyle Eastham. The two men's combined pitching lead to 13 strike outs in the game versus UNF.

Jimmy Falla started the rally for the Bulls in the bottom of the fourth with a single up the middle and moved to second on a sac bunt by Taylor. Back-to-back doubles by Lockwood and Kosco plated a pair for the Bulls, and a single by Brazeal would bring home a third for the Bulls in the bottom of the fourth.

The Ospreys cut the USF lead to 8-4, as they were able to score a run without picking up a hit in the top of the sixth.

UNF would add another in the eighth on back-to-back two out hits to trim the deficit to 8-5.

The Bulls' success with two outs continued in the bottom of the 8th, as Kosco reached base after getting hit by a pitch. After a Hunt single, Brazeal was hit by a pitch, and Sim came through with a two-run single to extend the USF lead to 10-5.

Junior closer Kevin Quackenbush struck out the side in ninth to seal the victory and move the Bulls to 8-13 on the season with the BIG EAST Conference opening series against Notre Dame scheduled this weekend, March 25-27, at Red McEwen.

Richardson Tosses Complete Game In 1-0 Loss To No. 22 Ohio State

Freshman Lindsey Richardson pitched a complete game, striking out eight batters and giving up three hits.

Although the University of South Florida softball team outthit the No. 22 Ohio State Buckeyes, 5-3, the Bulls loss 1-0 on a first inning home run.

Freshman Lindsey Richardson (5-3) tossed a complete game earning the loss, striking out eight while scattering three hits.

"It was all Lindsey today," said head coach Ken Eriksen. "It's a shame we couldn't get any runs from her. She really gave us great opportunity to win the ball game. You're talking about a pre-season top 15 team, and we're holding them to three hits, while striking out eight. It's probably one of the better games I have seen pitched here in a couple of years. I am pretty excited for her and excited for our team."

Sam Marder knocked her 11th home run of the season over the left field wall, on a 1-0 pitch, in the top of the first inning.

"You can't make any mistakes on All-American Sam Marder," said Eriksen. "It's a situation where I called a bad pitch and I blame myself."

To lead off the second inning, senior Alison Savarese singled to left field for her fifth straight game. Ohio State attempted to turn a double play on a grounder by JoJo Medina, but an erroneous throw for the second out went wide, landing Medina on second. After Kendall Arnold walked with two outs, the Bulls could not push across the tying road.

To start the fourth, sophomore Janine Richardson laid down a bunt single for her first of two hits. Medina singled to left to put runners on first and second for the second time in the game for the Bulls. With two runners in scoring position, the Bulls left them stranded, leaving the Buckeyes with the lead, 1-0.

"I thought our effort was fantastic," said Eriksen. "I would say tonight was the best attitude efforts we have had."

In a pitching battle, only three hits combined finished the game from the fifth inning on.

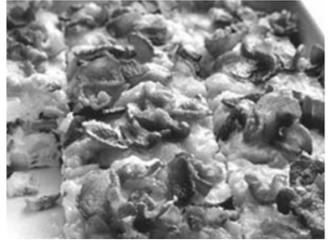

Melanie Nicols (7-0) hurled a complete game, surrendering five hits, no runs, striking out four, while walking one.

The Bulls continue with play against Dartmouth tomorrow at 5 p.m. at the USF Softball Stadium.

"You go in facing Dartmouth like it's a new day because it is a new day," said Eriksen. "Brittany Bowles is going to get the ball and she is going to try and match the performance of Lindsey."
