BLAME IS LAID ON THE BROTHER

Many People Say Thornton J. Hains Is Responsible for the Shooting of Annis

Sandy Hook, N. J., Aug. 22.—The shooting of William E. Annis by Capt. Peter Hains on Long Island, and the appearance here of Capt. Hains' wife to see her children, has occasioned unusual excitement in and about the garrison at Fort Hancock.

Gen. Hains, who has the custody of his son's children, has apparently determined that their mother shall not in any way get possession of them without the process of law. The youngsters are being watched constantly, and are not allowed out of sight of the maids who have them in charge.

Several of the officers and their wives in the garrison, who know something about the domestic affairs of Capt. Hains, are inclined to blame T. Jenkins Hains for talking too much to his brother about the latter's wife. They do not think the shooting would have occurred if it had not been for his.

He is Another Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde

Baltimore, Aug. 22.—T. Jenkins Hains has a "Jekyll-Hyde" personality, according to men and women here who knew him during several years of his residence in this city.

Hains came to Baltimore under a cloud because of the fact that he had shot and killed his chum, Ned Hannigan, at Old Point Comfort. While a Virginia judge and jury had declared him not guilty of wilful murder, many doors were closed to him. This attitude of hostility still lingers and is evident in much of the comment. Men friends of the author who were least affected by prejudice and knew him best unite in the opinion that there must be a demon hid deep in his character, which occasionally masters him and compels some lawless deed before it slinks away to give place to a man of many defects, but withal quiet, inoffensive, interesting and normal.

Hostile and Suspicious

There is one flaw upon which all agree. With Hains suspiciousness mounts to a disease. He held men at arm's length, and in the whole period of his Baltimore residence never admitted any one of real intimacy. He was stocky, dull of eye and of un-repossessing appearance, emphasized by carelessness in dress and Bohemian tastes.

These traits, plus an unfriendly, challenging, suspicious glance, kept even those who were attracted to him at a distance. He was quiet, even moody, but in conversation, when a heme touching the sea and ships was broached he would flash into life, talk rapidly and entertainingly, evidencing what he actually possessed—a thorough, accurate, scientific knowledge of the whole range of matters nautical.

He knew all the ships that plied to and from Baltimore. He frequented the shipping section and was himself float on every possible opportunity, winging small steam and sail craft and managing them himself on venture-money trips.

His interest in the sea came naturally. His grandfather was Admiral Thornton Jenkins, and as a stripling Hains was sea-mad. He served an apprenticeship afloat, and now holds license as a deep sea navigator from both the American and British governments.

Dubbed "The Poe of the Sea"

When Hains came to Baltimore, attracted to this city by the fact that his father was here superintending extensive defense works on the Pa-pasco, his literary reputation was not et made. He had published "Captain et made. He had published "Captain The Windjammers" came out that he eured a public hearing. This was one in 1899, and much of the work was one in this city. He was dubbed in Baltimore "The Poe of the Sea," because of an atmosphere of horror which characterized all his stories.

Many of the stories take the readers in sailing ships to the Horn, and this circumstance, even the title, "The Windjammers," was suggested by the extensive coal-carrying trade between Baltimore and the Pacific coast in use five-masted schooners known as wind-jammers." No phase of the hipping activity of the port appealed o Hains so strongly as this.

At one time he contemplated taking the trip with his girl wife. This plan was abandoned, Mrs. Hains, naturally enough, having a decided horror of a voyage which her husband had painted in colors and scenes well calculated to make the blood creep.

Baltimore might have softened to the author after the success of "The Windjammers," but Hains, after having become more and more hermit-like and morose, apparently feeling the social hostility, left the city when the book was becoming known. With his wife in a light craft he made the side trip to Florida as a compromise or the windjamming expedition round the Horn. In the meantime Gen. Hains had been transferred from the work at Baltimore, and since then the family has been only a memory here.

Owing to the effect on his character of the Hannigan tragedy no fair estimate of T. Jenkins Hains can be based on his stay in this city.

He seemed, however, to lack frankness and sincerity. He utterly lacked magnetism or any social quality. He was cynical, misanthropic, super-sensitive and altogether of a type that suggested damp-cellar environment.

He was fearless when on the water, driving small boats with reckless daring through any sort of weather and laughing at expressions of apprehension when made either by his wife or friends. Nothing about him suggested the literary man, and there was less of the artist.

His tastes in most things were crude and elemental. The whole impression he made was of a man of limited education, hopelessly disappointed in life, without ambition or energy except when it came to boats and water. His literary success was a puzzle, his tragic escapade at Old Point Comfort another, and his most recent affair more mystifying than either.

Carter Silent About the Army Code

Chicago, Aug. 22.—"No officer of the army can discuss the shooting of William E. Annis," said Brigadier General William H. Carter, commanding the Department of the Lakes, in explaining the leave of absence granted to Maj. John P. Hains, paymaster of the department, who is hastening to New York to assist in defending his brother, Capt. Peter C. Hains. "Maj. Powell Hains applied to me for leave. He was entitled to it and received it. I did not ask him the nature of his mission."

"I know Capt. Hains is a brilliant young officer. He was an honor graduate of the academy and of John Hopkins University. Talk of his being mentally unbalanced is ridiculous, unless it may be that the natural indignation of a man confronted with the condition which appears to have led to the shooting is conducive to an unbalanced mental condition."

"Is it not true that in the army a so-called 'code of honor' prevails which has been exemplified in the killing of Annis?" was asked.

"If it were a subject concerning me personally there would be much that I might say," Carter replied, "but I can add nothing to what every man knows about the demands of personal honor."

RAILROAD MAN TOOK THE MORPHINE ROUTE

J. I. Smith Found Dead in His Room in a Jacksonville Hotel

If J. I. Smith, thought to be a railroad engineer, found dead in a room at the LeRoy Hotel, corner of West Bay and Lee streets, took all of the contents of a bottle picked up in his room, there was enough morphine in his body to kill more than a score of persons.

Smith, who had been in the city for several days, is supposed, from a bank book found in his clothing, to have lived at Atlanta, Ga. He registered at the hotel on the 16th of August, and that time claimed to be from the Georgia metropolis. He was a heavy man and apparently about 40 years of age.

Smith's dead body was found in his room on the third floor of the building in which the hotel is located about 10 o'clock this morning by a maid, who carried the news to Dr. R. S. Christie, proprietor of the hotel. On a dresser was found an empty bottle, which, from its label, had contained an eighth of an ounce of morphine. Smith was evidently despondent over family troubles.—Jacksonville Metropolis, 21st.

HAD AN AWFUL TIME

But Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Cured Him

It is with pleasure that I give you this unsolicited testimonial. About a year ago when I had a severe case of measles I got caught out in a hard rain and the measles settled in my stomach and bowels. I had an awful time and had it not been for the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I could not have possibly lived but a few hours longer, but thanks to this remedy I am now strong and well. I have written the above through simple gratitude and I shall always speak a good word for this remedy.—Sam. H. Gwin, Concord, Ga. For sale by all druggists.

RACE RIOT IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Aug. 22.—In a fight yesterday between white and black dock laborers employed on the Western Transit Company's wharves, North Water and St. Claire streets, growing out of antagonism which has developed since the Springfield riot, five men were injured and the police restored order only after a free use of clubs and by threats to shoot.

The feeling against the negro laborers reached a climax yesterday and some of the whites declared last night they would not go to work unless the negroes quit. This the latter refused to do, and a quarrel ensued.

Government Will Make a Determined Fight for the Collection of that Thirty Million Dollar Fine

Chicago, August 22.—The government's petition for a rehearing by the United States court of appeals of the case against the Standard Oil company of Indiana was filed yesterday, and represents, it is authoritatively stated, the administration's attempt to save the Elkins act and the interstate-commerce law from becoming futile.

The filing of the petition marked the appearance of Attorney General Bonaparte in the case, as well as that of Frank B. Kellogg, special assistant to the attorney general.

Although it is not specifically stated in the petition, it was agreed by counsel for the government in their conference at Lenox, Mass., following a reversal by the appellate court of Judge Landis' decision that if the interpretation of law as given by Judge Grosscup, Judge Seaman and Judge Baker were allowed to stand, a successful prosecution of the rate cases against the corporations would be impossible in the future. The lawyers at that conference, over which the attorney general presided, were a unit in expressing the opinion that reforms in rebate matters, brought about by the Roosevelt administration, would represent too much waste of time unless the upper court can be convinced that it is in error in its construction of the law.

COHEN WAS CASHIERED

And Moreno was Reinstated—Trouble in the Second Regiment Believed to be Ended

Resulting from court-martial proceedings held in Tampa during the month of June, Major M. Henry Cohen of the second regiment, has been dismissed from the military service of the state by order of Gov. N. B. Broward and Adjt. Gen. J. C. R. Foster. Major Cohen is the first officer of such high rank to be dismissed in the history of the Florida militia in time of peace.

With the same order comes another from the governor and adjutant general exonerating Captain E. A. Moreno, of Company M, also of Tampa, and ordering that he be reinstated. Captain Moreno was court-martialed on account of charges brought against him by Major Cohen, but the result indicates that the "worm has turned" in a most effective manner.

The second regiment came near being disrupted for a time, but has recently been put on a stronger basis. The outcome of the court-martial proceedings, it is hoped, will bring about continued improvement.

PROGRESS AT PANAMA

A Fair Prospect that Bryan May Open the Big Ditch to Commerce

Washington, Aug. 22.—Gen. Luke E. Wright, the new head of the war department, is greatly pleased over the reports he is getting of progress on the Panama canal. Gen. Wright believes that the unprecedented rate of excavation in the present rainy season is extremely significant. He considers that it means the early completion of the canal and that four or five more years is likely to see the great ditch so far finished that vessels can use it.

It is not at all inconceivable that Bryan, if elected, will dedicate the opening of the canal before the end of his administration. It goes without saying, however, that the canal question is no longer in politics, and that whoever is elected president will be impelled to press canal construction with the utmost energy. Under the army engineers, the great project is going ahead regardless of season or weather.

Six Children Burned to death on a Washington Ranch

Colfax, Wash., Aug. 22.—Six children are dead and two others are burned so seriously that recovery is doubtful at the H. W. Schultz ranch between Colfax and Palouse, resulting from a fire that destroyed the home last night.

Four of the dead were children of Schultz. The other two were children of W. W. Fox, a brother-in-law. The men were away harvesting and the mothers were attending a theatrical performance.

The oldest two Schultz girls attempted to rescue the children, but lost the way to the door and were forced to drop the babies to make their own escape.

The cause of the fire is a mystery.

A WEAKLING

White's Cream Vermifuge gets rid of the worms quickly, easily and with no bad after-effects. Price 25 cents a bottle. Sold by Anti-Monopoly Drugstore.

HEARING BOTH SIDES

Last summer there died at Washington a lawyer who for many years had shocked a large number of his friends by his rather liberal views touching religion.

A friend of the deceased, who cut short a Canadian trip to hurry back to Washington for the purpose of attending the last rites of his colleague, entered the late lawyer's home some minutes after the beginning of the service.

"What part of the service is this?" he inquired in a whisper of another legal friend standing in the crowded hallway.

"I've just come myself," said the other, "but I believe they're opened for the defense."
