FELL IN LOVE WITH HIS STEPMOTHER

Young Man in Duval County Jail for Shooting His Father (Times-Union, 25th.) An unfortunate killing occurred about ten miles from this city, on the Orange Park road, last night, which resulted in a young man named Turner being lodged in the Duval county jail on a charge of murder.

Several years ago the mother of the Turner children died. Five years ago the father married again, this time taking for a wife a young girl no older than the son who yesterday fired the fatal shots. A short time ago it is charged that the elder Turner boy, the one now in jail, became deeply infatuated with his stepmother.

The young man went to visit relatives in the country while young Turner remained in charge of the store. Last night when the father returned from the city and found his wife had not returned he remarked that he would go out and get her.

MRS. CLEMENTS ON HER TRAVELS Mrs. Kate H. Clements, the most successful woman merchant that ever sold goods in Marion county, on the shining shores of Lake Weir, but who recently sold her business to Clarence Smith at Weir Park, is now enjoying a visit among friends in Morgantown, W. Va., and in a letter to the Star says:

"In company with friends I have been spending ten days delightfully on the very tip top of the Allegheny mountains, Mt. Lake Park, Md.; attending chautauqua at that place with a daily attendance of 3,000 people; drinking in eloquence, pathos, mirth, mountain dew (the ice-cold spring water) and last, but not least, enjoying the fruits and vegetables, which they have here in such abundance.

THE MOST IMPORTANT ISSUE

(Savannah Morning News.) The tariff is the most important issue of the presidential campaign. Mr. Bryan so regards it. If he thought there was another issue more important he would have made it the subject of his first campaign speech after his acceptance of the nomination.

At Des Moines yesterday he clearly pointed out the inequities of the present tariff, compared the tariff planks of the Democratic and Republican platforms and showed how impossible it is for the Republican party to give the country another reform as it demanded and how improbable it is that that party has any intention of providing any genuine tariff reform in the event of its being retained in power.

The reading of the tariff planks in the platforms of the two parties is sufficient to show which party is sincere in its tariff reform declarations. The people have been calling for this reform for years, and yet the Republican party, although in possession of every branch of the government, has done absolutely nothing in that direction. It promises tariff reform now because it doesn't dare to withhold its promise, but there is a vast difference between promises and performance.

It is an easy matter to confuse the voter in respect to the tariff. The trusts have become firmly established by means of the protective system because the people have been made to believe that the prosperity of the country depends upon retaining that system. The country has been deprived of revenue by this system, simply by shutting out importations.

It is impossible, of course, in a short article to go into this subject exhaustively, but it is a fact that the protective system permits the protected trusts to sell the products at home for very much higher prices than they sell them for in foreign countries. The Standard Oil company, for instance, sells its oil for more in this country than it does in some other countries because it is protected against its great Russian rival by a duty of about 100 per cent.

OUR WEEKLY NEW YORK LETTER.

Early Fall Fashions Still Under Directoire Influence—The Most Decided Changes Shown by the Sleeves—Smart Combinations of Materials—Ribbon Embroidery New and Effective. BY MONS. GENE DE PONTAC.

The summer is getting on, and already early fall hints and indications are beginning to make their appearance. The sheath skirt or not the sheath skirt. That question still continues to burn, but the early fall fashions show merely a continuation and of course something of an elaboration of the summer ideas.

Skirts will undoubtedly be closely fitted about the hips and will probably follow the gored and semi-circular models. The Directoire influence is still paramount—narrow shoulders, long plain sleeves, frills at throat and wrist, large square pockets and cuffs, large revers, cut-away coats and sash girdles.

Whether the straight figure which has been attained by so many curious expedients on the part of the corsetier—hips not only being laced in but waistlines padded out where there seems to be something too dangerously near a curve—will endure, remains to be seen; but on the light wool tailored suits for early fall days that are already beginning to appear in the shops there is no variation from the straight lines of the summer.

The purchasing and planning of thin gowns have, however, by no means ceased, since they make dainty all-the-year-round house-gowns and their usefulness does not wane with the coming of chilly days.

Shortwristed, one-button gloves are in demand once more—a sure indication that the long, close-fitting sleeve is an accepted fact. The new sleeves define the arm; even when they are draped, the folds lie flat and indicate the contours plainly. But the tendency is toward the long, close sleeve, its severity sometimes modified by trimming along the back. Many of these close sleeves are buttoned their entire length; others have over-lapping scallops with a button set in each scallop; braided sleeves have the back seams finished with tassels; the wrinkled sleeve of transparent material is often finished by a little frill along the outer seam; the silk or satin sleeve has the top part extending a couple of inches over the back seam, with the raw edges ravelled in a fringe.

A very new, very chic touch is to make the wrinkled, transparent sleeve of two tones of chiffon, one over the other, giving a changeable effect; the small round yoke of the gown being down in the same way. Some very exclusive white lingerie gowns have sleeves of lace lined with colored chiffon or silk muslin, with yoke and stock to match.

At the French watering-places linen and khaki are often seen in combination—the skirt of the white linen and the coat of the khaki; and this will be a comfortable fashion for September, khaki having a distinct amount of warmth. Among the best of the cloth and silk combinations are the costumes including pongee and cloth of the same shade. The skirt is usually a pleated model in the pongee, and the cloth coat is heavily covered with soutache braiding. One reason for the perennial vogue of pongee is its well-nigh universal becomingness.

A new kind of embroidery that has just made its appearance is of ribbon. The ribbon runs along straight for a few inches, then turns on itself and continues, but must not be stitched down. Some of the late French gowns show this ribbon embroidery made of rather narrow ribbon and crushed up into four-leaf-clover outline or flower shape. These embroideries never appear as a separate applique design but as a running border on skirt, yoke, stock or sleeve. White voile trimmed in this way with a pale-colored ribbon embroidery makes a charming little frock.
