NO USE FOR STRENUOUS POLITICS IN FLORIDA

All this outcry about a strenuous time in politics in Florida is both. Why should there be a forced enthusiasm for that it would be in this month. There is no necessity for one to tear his nightgown about politics here for the sentiment is as unanimous for the Peerless as it is possible for it to be.

Light Colors for the Autumn Suit—New Ruches to Finish the One-Piece Gown—Skirts Growing Long—The Winter Hats Usually Satin or Velvet.

BY MONS. GENE DE PONTAC. For the early autumn cloth suit, the light-colored homespun, serges and cloths will have their innings before we settle down to the half-tones and subdued shades which are promised for the winter—perhaps as a reaction from the brilliant hues that have flouted themselves all summer.

As well as the light cloth suit, a fashion that seems popular this autumn is a dark serge or chevot gown worn without a jacket and finished off with a stole of marabout or a rucho of ribbon or chiffon.

These gowns are usually very simple one-piece affairs, with yoke or sleeves of dyed net or chiffon. A very dainty new ruff lately seen with such a gown was of malines with an edging of ostrich feathers.

A new ruff being worn in Paris is comprised of a wide, soft black ribbon, with wide frills on top and bottom, the ribbon tied in a huge bow, either at the back or on the side, and the upper frill graduated to extreme narrowness under the chin.

Skirts are growing longer, and the short skirt would seem to be doomed, save for the severely plain trotting frock. For the gown intended exclusively for house or carriage wear, there is no question that the long skirt has a grace impossible to the skirt that does not reach the ground by several inches—and it is a pity that it will not be confined to these uses.

The woman who for the past year has appeared in the astonishingly brief skirt, six or seven inches from the ground, will be the first to be seen on the street with a long train clinging and dragging about her; the woman with a sense of the fitness of things will confine her long skirts to the house—where alone they belong.

In order to preserve the graceful lines of the long skirt, only the narrowest and softest of underskirts can be worn—satin-finished silk or crepe de chine—and that the train may be more easily managed this skirt is made to clear the ground by a couple of inches.

The close-fitting skirts are seldom trimmed, except sometimes for a panel of embroidery down the front, but many of the tunic skirts are bordered with embroidery, passementerie or fringe. Some of the newest skirts show a clever combination of two materials—a cloth skirt having the upper part composed of silk draped about the waist and hips in front and carried down the back in a wide panel.

A new Paris fancy in millinery that may prove to be a forerunner of a winter fashion is the trimming of dark broad-brimmed straw hats with bands of white falling in tails flat on the brim and falling in tails at the back, or sometimes the marabout in use in big, soft choux. This same arrangement will probably be carried out in fur on felt or velvet hats. Felt is to be less used than for many years—that is, felt of the ordinary dull finish. Satin, taffeta and velvet cover the new shapes, and the smartest hats to be worn in Paris during the autumn are of black in these materials trimmed with colored plumes and large round feather trimmings and pompons.

The vogue of the jabot has revived the old fashion of the large brooch—of coral, of cameo or of the beautiful miniature style, surrounded by brilliants or by a plain gold band.

HISTORIC FOREST FIRES

The terrible work of the flames which have burned over and destroyed hundreds of thousands of acres of timber and property to the value of millions in the Lake States, recalls to memory other great forest fires which have attained historic importance.

One of the earliest of these was the great Miramichi fire of 1825. It began its greatest destruction about one o'clock in the afternoon of October 7 of that year, at a place about 60 miles above the town of Newcastle, on the Miramichi River, in New Brunswick.

Before ten o'clock at night it was 20 miles below Newcastle. In nine hours it had destroyed a belt of forest 80 miles long and 25 miles wide. Over more than two and one-half million acres almost every living thing was killed.

Even the fish were afterwards found dead in heaps on the river banks. Five hundred and ninety buildings were burned, and a number of towns, including Newcastle, Chatham, and Douglastown, were destroyed. One hundred and sixty persons perished, and nearly a thousand head of stock. The loss from the Miramichi fire is estimated at $300,000, not including the value of the timber.

In the majority of such forest fires as this the destruction of the timber is a more serious loss, by far, than that of the cattle and buildings, for it carries with it the impoverishment of a whole region for tens or even hundreds of years afterwards.

The loss of the stumpage value of the timber at the time of the fire is but a small part of the damage to the neighborhood. The wages that would have been earned in lumbering, added to the value of the produce that would have been purchased to supply the lumber camps, and the taxes that would have been devoted to roads and other public improvements, furnish a much truer measure of the loss.

The Peshtigo fire of October, 1871, was still more severe than the Miramichi. It covered an area of more than 2,600 square miles in Wisconsin, and involved a loss in timber and other property of many millions of dollars. Between 1,200 and 1,500 persons perished, including nearly half the population of Peshtigo, at that time a town of 2,000 inhabitants. Other fires of about the same time were most destructive in Michigan. A strip 40 miles wide and 180 miles long, extending across the central part of the state, from Lake Michigan to Lake Huron, was devastated. The estimated loss in timber was about 9,000,000,000 feet board measure, and in money over $10,000,000. Several hundred persons perished.

In the early part of September, 1881, great fires covered more than 1,800 square miles in various parts of Michigan. The estimated loss, in property, in addition to many hundreds of acres of valuable timber, was more than $2,300,000. Over 5,000 persons were made destitute, and the number of lives lost is variously estimated at from 150 to 500.

The most destructive fire of more recent years was that which started near Hineckley, Minnesota, September 1, 1894. While the area burned over was less than in some other great fires, the loss of life and property was very heavy. Hineckley and six other towns were destroyed, about 500 lives were lost, more than 2,000 persons were left destitute, and the estimated loss in property of various kinds was $25,000,000. Except for the heroic conduct of locomotive engineers and other railroad men the loss of life would have been much greater.

This fire was all the more deplorable, because it was wholly unnecessary. For many days before the high wind came and drove it into uncontrollable fury, it was burning slowly close to the town of Hineckley, and could have been put out.

Church Members Want Epitaph Removed from an Infidel's Tombstone

Kenosha, Wisconsin, Sept. 20.—After passing them unnoticed for years, orthodox Christians in this city finally have protested against the strange inscriptions on the tomb of Lewis Knapp, a famous infidel, who died seven years ago.

Before his death he had erected for himself a group of monuments bearing the most unusual inscriptions ever written as epitaphs.

Christian people have protested against this monument to infidelity, but the officials of the cemetery have repeatedly refused to order the monuments removed, holding that the ground on which they stood belonged to Knapp, and that he had a right to erect any monument he saw fit.

Old Broad Gauge Knapp, as he was commonly known, was one of the most interesting characters in Southern Wisconsin. He was famous throughout the country as a follower of spiritualism, and the thing he prized most in his life was his personal friendship with Col. Robert C. Ingersoll. Here is one of the epitaphs:
