

Not "How Much?"

but "how good?" is the question that every one should ask in buying candy.

The old saying that "a man is judged by the candy he gives" holds good today same as always. Buy the best—don't take the "just as good" kind.

SPANISH QUEEN HAS GOOD SENSE

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 20.—Queen Victoria is a firm believer in mothers caring for their children and she has decided views on woman's mission in life.

The Queen gave audience this week to some English ladies of title, friends of her youth with whom she had consorted as Frances Ena of Dattenberg. In talking with these women the Queen took occasion to express her views on motherhood and she did so quite frankly. She spoke so frankly, in fact, as to make it somewhat uncomfortable for her visitors.

She condemned the gay butterfly lives that they and other women of fashion are leading, and showed that she has opinions fully as strong and decided as those of President Roosevelt of the United States, on race suicide.

She told them that it was woman's duty to perpetuate her race, and that it should be her purpose in life to help bring into the world a race of strong, virile men.

But she assured them woman's work did not end with the bringing of children into the world. The mother must shirk no responsibilities, said her majesty. She should nurse her own children, watch over them, care for and protect them, and train them to be good and great men and women. The social life should always be second, the Queen asserted.

She earnestly assured her old friends that the mother found ample compensation for her sacrifices and sufferings in her children.

The Queen was intensely in earnest and left no doubt in the minds of her hearers as to her sincerity.

MR. CONNOR WILL REBUILD

Mr. John Young, the government architect, has made some very complete plans for Mr. C. E. Connor's new house as it will be rebuilt. The house will be on the bungalow order and will contain a most beautiful home. It will contain six rooms below and four rooms above, besides numerous bath rooms, closets, alcoves and verandas. We are reliably informed that Mr. Walter Ray, having practically given up the idea of being able to secure possession of the remaining lot to complete the east half of the block between the government and court-house blocks, will soon begin to build a large mule and horse barn on the northeast quarter of the entire block. He has been offered a most flattering rental for such a building. Mr. Ray is very anxious to erect buildings on this property that would cost from $100,000 to $150,000 but will not undertake it unless he can secure the entire half block. Could this be done he is ready to have the plans drawn and the work started at once.

CRIMSON ISN'T THE COLOR

For an Auto in a Cattle Country—Experience of Tourists in North Dakota

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 20.—Red automobiles won't sell in the cattle country. A. A. Hanson of Minneapolis, familiarly known as the "rain maker," has tried out that style of machine on the prairies of North Dakota, and he says that the cattle of the prairies won't stand for the red automobile. As a result, Minneapolis dealers who are trying to win North Dakota trade, are keeping the telephone wires busy.

"Don't send red cars," they say to the builders. "The cattle of the plains don't like them." This year's plentiful harvest in that country has opened a splendid prospect for trade this fall. Mr. Hanson has just returned from a nine-days' trip in Northern Minnesota and the Dakotas. The car in which he traveled didn't buck once during the trip, but Mr. Hanson says it is no car for the cattle country. "It was painted red," he says. "Any other color might go in North Dakota, but red won't. Look at the car and you will see the reason."

The car is red no longer and this is the story that the "rain maker" tells of the reason why the car has changed color in nine days.

Soon in Full Flight
"We set out on a pleasure trip for five days it was a pleasure trip. Then we struck Washburn, N. D. After leaving Washburn we struck the cattle country. I didn't know what was the matter. I turned on the exhaust in an effort to scare him away, but he came on faster and faster. He hit me. I tumbled. The ball had spotted the bright red of our machine, and if he ever caught us there would be telegrams to Minneapolis."

Dodging the Herds
"I never believed much in dodging, but I started it then and it worked. For just six days we dodged in and out of the cattle herds of North and South Dakota. When I was a kid I played a good game of prisoner's base and I want to tell you the knowledge came in handy."

"We had several narrow escapes, but I won't particularize. That gouge in the red paint on the rear end of the car was made by an infuriated heifer ten miles east of Bismarck. A brindle cow took off that front fender five miles from the state line at Big Stone. That spot in the tire is where we hit a yearling near Ortonville. "I have always fancied red automobiles, but they will not do in North and South Dakota."
