GENERAL FINLEY

The following telegram was received in Ocala last evening:

Lake City, Fla., Nov. 6.

Mrs. Fannie R. Gary, President Dickison Chapter, Ocala, Fla.: General Finley died today. Funeral in Gainesville Monday afternoon.

Belle Lamar Stockbridge.

The announcement will be received in Ocala with sadness, not because his death was not expected, as General Finley had long ago reached the allotted years of man, being in his 92nd year, but because of his association and citizenship in Ocala.

General Finley was born in Tennessee, November 12, 1812. He was a practicing attorney in Memphis. As near as we can gather, the following are the leading events in his life:

He came to West Florida before the war and was appointed judge of the United States court at Pensacola, where, at the breaking out of the war, he raised a company and went into the field in Tennessee as colonel of the 6th Florida regiment. In 1863 he was made a brigadier; was wounded at Resaca; returned home and General Robert Bullock assumed command of General Finley's brigade until shortly before the battle at Jonesboro, Ga., south of Atlanta, where he was again wounded, and again returned home, when General Bullock, who had been wounded at Atlanta, gone home, recovered, and a few days after the Jonesboro fight returned and again assumed command of General Finley's brigade, to which General Finley did not again return, which command General Bullock held until in Hood's movement north he was severely wounded at Murfreesboro, Tenn. After the war General Finley located in Jacksonville, practiced his profession of attorney and canvassed the state in 1872 for the democratic presidential electors. In 1876 General Finley ran for Congress, defeated Colonel Horatio Bisbee of Jacksonville, his republican opponent, but the latter contested the election and the seat was awarded to Bisbee. In 1880 General Finley again ran for Congress, was elected and served his term. About that time he came to Ocala, was appointed judge of the fifth judicial district, served two terms, when Judge W. A. Hocker succeeded him.

General Finley for a short time after he retired from the bench, practiced his profession and occupied an office in "legal row" for a year, when he went to Lake City to look after a vineyard he possessed there, and where he lived until the final hour.

General Finley was a man of fine physique, commanding presence, and was a true gentleman in every sense of the word, the soul of honor and chivalry, learned in the law and possessed of a broad, comprehensive and unbiased mind. Every person who came under his gracious and charming manners and genial personality became his admirer and friend, and as such was looked upon as a high type of civic and Christian manhood, for he was a devoted and consistent member of the Episcopal church. His wife was also an Episcopalian and together they traveled life's slope together.

General Finley leaves several children, a son, Charles, well known in the state, residing at Lake City, also a daughter living in the same place, and Miss Maggie Finley, living in Jacksonville. His life was a noble, unselfish and useful one, and may we cherish his virtues.

CONFEDERATE COMRADES TO ATTEND FINLEY FUNERAL

General Robert Bullock and Colonel John M. Martin left today as a delegation from the Confederate camp in this city to attend the funeral of General J. J. Finley at Gainesville this afternoon. The Daughters of the Confederacy have contributed a beautiful floral offering as a tribute of respect to the grand old man.

THE KINDERGARTEN

Miss Annie Sharpe's kindergarten is doing splendidly. The school is full to its last seat, and more room is called for. Mrs. Charlotte Pie of Philadelphia, who has done such excellent work in the school for the past several terms, has charge of the kindergarten department. Assisting Miss Sharpe in the literary department are Miss J. M. Dunn of Spartanburg, S. C., and Rev. W. C. Lindsay, who has charge of the Latin, history and algebra classes. Everything is moving like clockwork. The school is getting down to its work beautifully, and progress is made in every department. The building has been neatly painted outside and presents a very attractive appearance. The inside has not been neglected, and is neat and clean, from the application of paint and kalsomine.

The Star is pleased with the good school work accomplished in our midst by Miss Sharpe and her able and zealous attendants. August and September Miss Sharpe spent in visiting the World's Fair, and also her sister, residing at Liberty, Mo., fourteen miles from Kansas City, where is located one of the oldest educational institutions in the state, Jewell College, under the auspices of the Baptists. Here Miss Sharpe also met her other sister, who, several years ago, was known and beloved in Ocala as Miss Bettie Sharpe, but now a minister's wife at Alexander City, N. Y. The three sisters, all left of the family, had a delightful visit, as it has been years since they met under one roof. The additional pleasure of Miss Sharpe's visit was meeting with Rev. Dr. Green, the eminent scholar and able president of Jewell College, with whom Miss Sharpe had a correspondence eleven years ago about taking charge of the kindergarten work in Jewell College, which she really had accepted, but which she relinquished at the earnest solicitations of her sister, Miss Bettie. She only knew Dr. Green by correspondence and by reputation, and her pleasant impressions of this scholarly man were greatly enhanced by coming in contact with his pleasing personality.

This incident of about to leave and persuaded to remain shows what little things in our life change the whole current of it and adds lasting repute, benefit and pleasure to a community in which so admirable a life is lived—the debt conferred in this incident by the lady of whom we have been speaking.

AT THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Bishop Gray, missionary bishop of Southern Florida, preached and confirmed a class of eight at Grace Episcopal church Sunday. The bishop was on his way home to Orlando from Boston, where he attended the general conference of the church. His discourse was in the nature of a resume of the work of the convention, in which eighty bishops and 800 laymen participated, and it was infused with the missionary spirit to a degree never before known. The notable thing was that it was held in Boston, the very center of Unitarianism, where it was almost treason to mention the name of the Episcopal church during the revolution, but now it is given a warm welcome. The event of the occasion was the presence of the archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Davidson, the first dignitary with that title who had ever honored an American session of Episcopalians. He is a modest, unassuming man of great dignity, who came to see how things were done in America. He hoped this visit of the archbishop of England would eventually lead to a union of the two branches of the church.

The deliberation on divorce was long and many speeches were made. He spoke of the sacredness of the marriage relations and deplored the separations. The ministry was in favor of amending the divorce law, but the laity was against it.

The attendance was great, the greatest in its history, and the interest was intense. Every Tuesday and Thursday was mission day. The churches overflowed in the eagerness to hear the sermons, and the Tremont Temple meeting exceeded all.

He favored dropping the words Protestant Episcopal and substituting the word Catholic, because Catholic, in its broadest sense meant the world. He did not want all, did not expect all to be Episcopalians, but did want all to come to Christ.

He made a plea for the great work his church had done in the past 1900 years—wonderful, marvelous. He paid a glowing tribute to the prayer book, which contained the gems of the bible, had been a companion to the lowliest and the highest and had been a source of comfort and spiritual delight to all. The church has been seen and honored of God and given the world what it needed. To show the growth of the Episcopal church he instanced Rhode Island, the home of the Baptists. In 1883 there were 6000; in 1893, 10,498; in 1903, 144,078. Baptists for the same years, 11,097, 13,002 and 14,268. The Episcopal church, in its growth in Rhode Island, had outstripped all other denominations in thirty years. What he said about the growth of the Episcopal church in New England he did not utter in the spirit of bigotry, but rejoicing in the spread of the ministry. It filled his soul with joy to know that the idea was outgrown that the church was for women and children, and the attendance of men at the big missionary meetings at Boston demonstrated this fact. Business men all over the city left their places of business and joined the immense throng. He referred to the fact that in 1907 the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Jamestown would take place; spoke of the fact that while Episcopalians had made this settlement the growth of the church was slow because the church had no bishop to lead, guide and encourage them for 200 years. Of the great meeting of Episcopalians that would take place in 1908, and a month prior to the gathering of the officials of the church, a great missionary meeting would take place at Lambeth, England. He did not know that he would live to be present, but hoped some one in the audience would be there.

The bishop was entertaining, instructive and truly eloquent and inspired when he spoke of the great missionary spirit that was abroad in the land, and in time would lead all men to Christ. His audience truly enjoyed his grand discourse.

He then confirmed a class of eight as follows: Mrs. J. G. Lege, Brantley Weathers, Donald Schreiber, Selwyn Little, Usher Norwood, Laura Norwood and Mrs. Cooper and daughter.

AT THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Two excellent discourses were delivered by Mr. Rowland, pastor of the Christian church yesterday. The morning theme was "Work," and the evening subject was "Am I My Brother's Keeper." In the morning Mr. Rowland chose as his text "Work while 'tis day, for the night cometh, when no man can work," and he showed that the whole life represented the day referred to, and the whole life must be a life of charity and Christianlike deeds. If the life is not profitably spent, then when the long night cometh human beings will go into the presence of Jehovah empty handed. Mr. Rowland showed that the useful life was the happy life here, and hereafter could claim the rewards promised to God's faithful ones.

He spoke encouragingly of the work in Ocala, but urged the people to nobler deeds, higher purposes, and broader charity in all their lives.

A large and appreciative audience greeted Mr. Rowland at the evening service and they were not disappointed in the way he handled his subject. Mr. Rowland proved that every new life brought into the world had an influence on the whole world. Every individual is his or her brother's keeper, and only the Cains have denied the responsibility, and replied falsely as to the knowledge of a brother's whereabouts.

He spoke most touchingly and beautifully of the fraternity in lodges. When initiated into a lodge he lives of not only the members but of their families are sworn to be held sacred, and it behooves the church of Christ to be up and doing as much and more than the fraternal societies. The church is a fraternal society of God's people, responsible each for the other's soul's welfare and happiness. Each life must bring sunshine and love to every one needing him or her most.

Miss Whitfield sang very sweetly "In the Secret of His Presence," and the choir rendered an anthem.
