BEAUTY AND THE BEAST

Mrs. Frank Brown, Said to be the Prettiest Woman in the South, Demands a Divorce

Baltimore, July 10.—Mrs. Frank Brown, Jr., who has been called by admirers "the most beautiful woman in the south," has filed her bill of divorce against the young son of ex-Gov. Frank Brown, alleging extreme and sensational cruelty.

She also filed suit against her father-in-law, claiming $100,000 damages for alleged alienation of her husband's affections.

Young Mrs. Brown charges that her husband dragged his vicious thoroughbred bulldog into her apartment and set the dog upon her, so that she had to flee and take refuge with friends; that he pulled her hair, hit her, kicked her, cursed her and abused her before others in the vilest language; that he threatened her life with a pistol; that while in company he had thrown cards, food and other articles in her face.

Mrs. Brown alleged that frequently in the presence of male and female acquaintances her husband tore up and destroyed her clothes and articles of adornment, and she was forced to seek the protection of friends from the violent abuses of her husband.

She states that frequently he urged his bulldog to attack her, made her remove his shoes and perform other abjectly menial acts. Besides he would twist her arms and subject her to other cruelties.

Frequently, Mrs. Brown states, her husband would have both male and female friends in his wife's apartments and would not allow her to enter. She declares her husband is worth a quarter of a million dollars in his own name and that to defeat her rights he has threatened to dispose of every cent he owns. She declares that his income is $10,000 a year and that since her marriage he has given her only about $10, and part of this amount, Mrs. Brown says, her husband has borrowed from her. She states that she is a poor girl, wholly without property or income, and is entirely dependent upon her parents.

Judge Elliott, in the circuit court, signed an order allowing Mrs. Brown $50 a week alimony pending the determination of her suit, and $250 attorney fees.

A HORRIBLE HOLD-UP

"About ten years ago my brother was 'held-up' in his work, health and happiness by what was believed to be hopeless consumption," writes W. R. Liscomb, of Washington, N. C. "He took all kinds of remedies and treatment from several doctors, but found no help till he used Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles. He is a well man today." It's quick to relieve and the surest cure for weak or sore lungs, hemorrhages, coughs and colds, bronchitis, influenza, grippe, asthma, and all bronchial affections. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

MUCH MARRIED MADISON

Ten Wives Heard From and Returns Not All In
San Francisco, July 10.—John Madison, said to be wanted for bigamy in many cities, is in the hands of the police here. The authorities have established his marriage to ten women, and his engagement and postponed marriage to fourteen others. Each is said to have lost money through acquaintance with Madison.

A FOOL AND A PISTOL

A Twelve-Year-Old Girl Shot Down by a Juvenile Ruffian
Pensacola, July 10.—Little Marguerite Kataochi, 12 years old, is in a hospital here in a dying condition as the result of a pistol shot wound through the abdomen, inflicted by a boy her own age. The girl was passing along the street when the boy suddenly appeared from behind a tree with a drawn revolver and ordered "Hands up." Laughing, she failed to comply, only to fall a moment later mortally wounded with a 38-caliber bullet hole through her body. The revolver, it is said, was given to the boy by his father, that he might early learn its use.

TOM TAGGART EXONERATED

Chicago, July 9.—Placed on the stand to tell of his alleged connection with the troubles of Ella Gingles, the young Irish lace-maker who says she was assaulted in the Wellington Hotel at French Lick Springs, Ind., Thomas Taggart, former chairman of the democratic committee, denied that he knew anything about the girl or her troubles except what he had read in the newspapers. Miss Gingles' attorney made a statement which completely exonerated Mr. Taggart from any connection with the case.

A HARD STRUGGLE

Many an Ocala Citizen Finds the Struggle Hard
With a back constantly aching. With distressing urinary disorders. Daily existence is but a struggle. No need to keep it up. Doan's Kidney Pills cure you.

Mrs. Anna Erickson, Third St., Sanford, Fla., says: "I was a victim of kidney trouble for years, the kidneys being so weak that I had but little control over the action of the secretions. I suffered almost constantly from backache accompanied by pains across my loins and some days I could hardly get around, having so little strength and energy. I finally obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and their use as directed soon proved that they were the remedy I needed. The kidneys gradually became stronger, my back ceased to ache and the pains across my loins disappeared. I have been able to rest well at night since and as a result, have felt much better in every way. Doan's Kidney Pills have certainly benefited me more than any other remedy I ever used." Plenty more proof like this from Ocala people. Call at Tydings & Co.'s drug store and ask what customers report.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE KANSAS

A Story of Love and Adventure on the Little Known Coast of South-western America

(By Louis Tracy.)

CHAPTER XVII.

ISOBEL'S drooping was of brief endurance. Elsie and Mrs. Somerville supported her to the stateroom, and there Elsie sat with her a little while soothing her as one might comfort a child in pain.

Isobel, stupefied by some haunting knowledge which appeared to have a vague connection with the misfortunes of the Kansas, yielded to Elsie's gentle compulsion and endeavored to close her eyes.

Through the open port Elsie heard a man walk rapidly along the deck and halt outside the door. She half rose from her knees to answer the expected knock, thinking that Mrs. Somerville had sent a steward to ascertain if Miss Baring needed anything, but the newcomer evidently changed his mind and turned back. Then came Courtenay's voice, low, but compelling:

"One moment, M. de Polcinclit. A word with you."

"Another time, m'sieu. I pray you pardon me now. I find I am not strong enough yet to venture on deck."

"Oh, yes, you are, m'sieu. I want to give you the chance of your life. Mr. Gray has told me of your behavior, and he has charitably added that your cowardice and treachery might have arisen from ungrounded fear. Now, if you wish to atone for your conduct, here is an opportunity. I am taking a boat ashore to try to save some of my men who are imprisoned there. There is a fair risk in the venture. The outcome may be death. Will you volunteer to take an oar? That would whitewash your weather marks."

"It is impossible. I am too feeble. I cannot row."

"Ah, you swine! Can it be possible that you are a Frenchman? What sort of countship is it you boast of?"

"Sir, I am a passenger on this ship!" Courtenay's voice was raised a little. "Mr. Boyle," he said, "give orders that if this skunk shows his nose inside the salon again he is to be kicked out. He can eat his meals in his stateroom or in the fore cabin with the other savages."

Elsie heard every word. She fancied, too, that Isobel was listening, though she gave no sign. But the unknown cause of the captain's anger was as naught compared with the statement that he was about to leave the ship. She had heard the lowering of the boat without heeding. He was already climbing down the ship's side. Soon he would be far from her, perhaps never to return, for he was not one to paint imaginary ills, and had he not told De Polcinclit what the outcome of the undertaking might be? She found Isobel looking at her with frightened eyes.

"Did you hear?" came the tense whisper.

"Yes."

"And you are content to let him go?"

"Ah, God! Yes, content."

"But it is folly. He is the captain. He should not go. We have risked enough already. Who are these men for whose sake he leaves you and all of us?"

"I know not, nor do I greatly care. May heaven help me and them. We are his first care. Let it be mine to leave him unhindered in the task he has undertaken."

Isobel was cowed into silence. Elsie's hero worship had reached a height beyond her comprehension. She would never understand how a woman who loved a man could send him voluntarily to his death, and her shallow mind did not contemplate the possibility of Courtenay's refusing to be swayed by any other consideration than that which his conscience told him was right.

Thus at arm's length, as it were, they waited until they caught the sharp command "Give way there!" and the splash of oars told them that the boat had really started on its journey shoreward.

ward. Then Isobel, glancing furtively at her companion, saw the tears stealing down her cheeks, and the situation came back from the transcendental to that which was intelligible to her lower ideals.

"I am sorry," she whispered, catching Elsie's hand timidly. "I said what I thought was for the best. At any rate, it is too late now."

"Too late! The other girl gaped blindly for the door. She felt that she would yield to the strain if she did not go on deck and catch a parting glimpse of the man who had become dearer to her than life itself.

On the poop she found Boyle, Christopher, Gray and Walker. A number of Chileans were leaning over the rails of the main deck. All the men were talking earnestly. It was ominous that they should cease their conversation the instant she appeared. One man may conceal his fears, but twenty cannot.

She brushed away the tears determinedly and looked at the boat, already a white speck on the green carpet of the bay. She could see Courtenay distinctly. Some magnetic impulse must have gone out from her, because she had not been watching him loiter than a couple of seconds when he turned and waved his hand. She repeated instantly, uttering a handkerchief, poor girl, long after it became impossible for her to distinguish whether or not he returned her signals.

At last she turned to Mr. Boyle, who was nearest to her.

"Who is sitting next to Captain Courtenay?" she asked, and she had a fleeting impression that he was anxious for her to speak, so quickly did he answer.

"Tollmache. He shinned down the ladder as the first volunteer. The skipper ordered him to get out, but he said he was deaf. Anyhow, I'm glad he is there. Courtenay ought to have one sure enough white man by his side."

"And what are they attempting?"

"Huh. It's a bold plan, an' I'm not goin' to condemn it on that account. Have you heard this mornin's news—how Suarez found out from the Indians that eleven of our crew are hid in a cave on Guanaco hill?"

"Something of it, not all. But why—why has Captain Courtenay gone off in such a hurry?"

"Well, Miss Elsie, he figures that an open effort by daylight is the only way to rescue them. They will have seen our signals, an' they can hardly fail to sight the boat. When he is close ashore they are sure to make a dash for it, an' he hopes to get them off before the Indians wake up to the game he is playin'. There are eight men in the boat, and with eleven others to help there shouldn't be much difficulty in keepin' the savages at a proper distance."

"How soon—will he—reach the landing place?"

"Huh. Maybe an hour, an' another hour for the home trip. He'll be aboard for tea."

Boyle uttered that concluding statement a trifle too airily. Elsie for the first time in her life knew what it meant to want to scream aloud.

"Did Captain Courtenay leave any message for me?" she demanded.

"Huh—message! Why, he will be away only a couple of hours!"

"Surely you will tell me, Mr. Boyle!" she pleaded wistfully.

"Well, I happen to know there's a letter in the doctor's hands, but that is to be given you in case of accident alone. And there's no sign of any accident yet, thank goodness!"

Elsie clung to the after rail and watched the boat, now a tiny dot hard to discern amid the ripples caused by the inflowing tide. Her intimate acquaintance with the daily happenings of life aboard told her that Courtenay had chosen the last hour of food for his effort, thus gaining the advantage of the ebb in the event of the lifeboat being pursued by canoes on the return journey. By degrees a tender little sprig of hope peeped up in her dulled consciousness. The boat was very near the distant rocks, and there was neither sight nor sound of the Indians. Could it be that they were afraid—altogether broken and demoralized by the slaughter of the preceding night?

Suddenly she had a breathless desire to know why Courtenay was so sure that the men to whose help he had gone were really members of the crew.

"Will you tell me now what it was that Suarez found out?" she murmured to Christobal.

The doctor quickly appreciated her need of material for further thought. He suppressed no detail except his own willingness to take Courtenay's place in the boat.

When Elsie heard of the duplicity practiced by Suarez it was good to see the hot indignation which reddened her brow. With all a woman's single-mindedness she regarded the Argentine miner as being directly responsible for Courtenay's hazard, nor would she listen to Christobal's mild protest that nothing could have been done earlier, no matter how outspoken Suarez chose to be.

The Spaniard encouraged her to debate this point—anything was better than the dumb pain of thought—but their talk ceased abruptly when a muttered exclamation from Gray sent Walker flying to the chart house. Forth with the trumpet shriek of the siren sent its wild boom across the silent waters. Elsie needed no explanation of this tumult. Other crew was not so far distant that canoes gutting its splinter could not be seen with the naked eye. She counted sixteen putting forth in a cluster, and they all made for the adventurous lifeboat.

"That is exactly what our captain expected," Christobal was ready to assure her. "He was certain he would reach the head of the bay before the Indians awoke to the meaning of his scheme. By this time, unless his plan fails, the men on shore should have
