THE POLITICAL POT

It is said by those on the inside and next to the railing at the political arena that the friends of the respective aspirants for political offices are busy mentioning the name of their favorite to those who will give ear. Those who are being groomed for the state senatorial race from Marion are Hon. E. L. Wartmann, Citra, Attorney, William Hocker and Carlos Ellis, Ocala. There may be others, but they are not yet in the lime light. As this is Marion's time to name a candidate, Senator Baker, of Sumter, who has served so faithfully and well, will not be a candidate.

A CHARGE FOR OBITUARIES

Heretofore the Star will make a charge for obituaries from individuals, lodges, Sunday schools and churches in excess of 20 lines on the death of one person. This was formerly the rule of the paper, but of late we have not been enforcing it; consequently the privilege has been considerably exceeded.

Mr. C. E. Connor has returned from a business trip to Gadsden, Ala. He said the dominating feature of the day is politics in that state and state-wide prohibition is the all absorbing theme. Partisan spirit runs high and there is great excitement and prophetic utterances in both camps. The wets claim the amendment will go down in defeat, while the dries shout victory with a big 'V'.

There was a very pleasant dancing party given last night at the home of Mr. Fraser Clayton out Sharpe's Ferry way. It was well attended and the young people of the neighborhood had a delightful time.

The Globe had an unprecedented run on school books yesterday and completely cleaned them out, but a fresh supply will be on hand Thursday.

Mr. W. D. Carn, in charge of the Ocala Fertilizer company, is patiently awaiting the arrival of the lumber for the factory. The foundation is ready. It will take 100,000 feet of lumber to enclose the factory. Mr. M. J. Reoss has the contract to supply the lumber but owing to the great demand all of the mills are way behind with their orders, some of them having sold the output 90 days ahead. The price of lumber in the meanwhile has advanced $2 a thousand, which shows the demand for the product.

Messrs. Parramore & Halsell are preparing to do all kinds of repairing of furniture, also upholstering. All work will be first class and the prices exceptionally reasonable. Mr. August Stein, the portrait artist, has made his headquarters with these gentlemen for his stay in Ocala. His genuine oil portraits can be had for about the same price that the average picture man sells his photos. Give us a trial. No. 10 Fort King avenue.

Veteran Abe Ross, of the Stoke's Ferry section, was in town today and said the Atlanta bridge building firm was on the ground and would reinstate the iron bridge across the Withlacoochee river which the late highway was demolished. The bridge will be raised fully three feet and its wings extended so as to permit the waters greater egress and lighten the pressure. Mr. Ross, speaking of the wrecked bridge, said when the commissioners came to establish that bridge and they showed him the height it would be, he told them it was too low, for he had seen the water fully three feet higher than the proposed bed of the bridge. They seemed to doubt his statement, but when the high waters came he stood verified. Mr. Ross said his neighbor, Rod Morrison, has grown the best crops ever seen in his fields and now his barns, bins and cribs are filled to the utmost with hay, corn, oats, feeders. And speaking about Rod, reminded Mr. Ross to remark that Mr. Morrison was the first man in that section who had foud and noted the immense teeth, ribs and thigh bones of extinct monsters, telling unmistakably that in by-gone ages these monsters had feasted on the succulent grasses and herbs of the Withlacoochee valley and these are the fore-runners of the story of the phosphate discoveries, years before Albertus Vogt announced the glad tidings that he had discovered a great treasure.

Jesse Burtz is in the lime light now because he recently gave to the publisher of Orlando his new directory of that city. He said he made an unusually careful estimate of Orlando's population, over 5,000, but to which Mayor Jewell takes exception, not because he thinks Burtz was not honest and conscientious in the discharge of his duty, but because he failed to catch on to a 1,000 white citizens who had quietly folded their tents and silently stole away to other resorts for the summer. Well, now, how was Jesse, who never sleeps, to know this. It was the duty of the mayor to have posted Jesse before he took the census and not go into print and reflect on Jesse, who in this instance gave Orlando the most complete, correct and satisfactory directory ever given the Phenomenal City. Its a case of speaking out, not in meeting, but after the meeting adjourned. Jesse is all right and has become the assistant editor of the Orlando Reporter-Star, and will soon convince Orlandoites that it will not be long before every one who reads that sprightly sheet that Orlando's absent thousand white people are all present and accounted for.

Mr. C. H. Dame left today for Day, Perry county, where Friday he will be the orator at a big Woodmen picnic. Ere he returns home he expects to add at least half a hundred members to the order. Last week he visited Pine Mound, Live Oak, Callahan and Jacksonville and did some very fine work for the Woodmen.

Miss Irma Blake devised a very pleasant surprise for her mother, Mrs. R. G. Blake, in commemoration of her birthday. It was a very select affair and only the personal friends of Miss Blake's mother were present, and had a very pleasant hour. Miss Gladys Martin, cousin of Miss Blake, assisted her in serving refreshments.

Mr. J. J. Crosby of West Fort Meade, is at the Ocala House.

Parramore and Halsell. Mr. Augustine will be pleased to receive visitors from 2 to 4 each afternoon. It will be interesting to see him at work. CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking the public through the columns of your paper for the liberal patronage that has been extended to us through the past season in our business, as we have not been able to deliver cars, as the entire country as a whole bought more cars than the Buick factory could produce. We are just in receipt of letters giving us a slight inkling of our 1910 product, assuring us of the fact that there will be no question in the future that we will be cared for. Our 1910 models will be ready for delivery the first of November, and we have the assurance that if we should need 100 cars we can deliver the same. Our models 10 and 17 will be continued, but the horsepower will be increased 20 per cent. We will also have a model known as No. 18, practically the same as our No. 17, only slightly a smaller car, and will sell for about $1400 complete, and we think this model will hold the rest of them for quite a while. We will also have a $600. a runabout, 2-cylinder, opposed motor in front, under the hood, and bowels, preventing that clogging that invites appendicitis, curing constipation, biliousness, chills, malaria, headache and indigestion. 25c at all druggists.

TWELVE HUNDRED FEET UNDER GROUND WENT TAFT

Helena, Mont., Sept. 28.—Attired in a linen duster, an old black slouch hat and swinging an electric lantern at his side, President Taft was locked in an iron cage and dropped 1,200 feet through darkness into the depths of the famous old Leonard copper mine at late yesterday. He had the rare experience of seeing miners at work with a giant drill in a vein of high-grade ore that sparkled green with its wealth of mineral luster. After half an hour under ground, the president was brought to the surface, blinking in the glare of the noonday sun. He was cheered to the echo by the crowd of curious people gathered at the hoist. He declared enthusiastically: "I would not have missed it for the world."

GEORGIA GIRL CAPTURED A CRIMINAL

And Tuned His Over to the Man, who Let Him Escape

Statesboro, Sept. 28.—After having been captured by the brother daughter of a farmer, eight miles from Statesboro during the late hours of last night, after he had broken into her room and attacked her, Otis Hendricks, a burly negro, lately escaped from the men in whose custody he was placed and is at large. The young woman, the negro attacked is large and unusually athletic for a woman and the negro had no chance to get away after he attacked her, before her cries for help brought several men to the room. The men took him into the nearby woods, to wait for morning before bringing him here. They built a big fire and were all standing around it when Hendricks disappeared.

CHAPTER XI

FOR a long time Mrs. Brooks stood gazing in silence at her husband, her heart reat with conflicting emotions. Her happiness of the past few months, then, had been built upon the precarious foundation of speculation. Oh, the horror! Oh, the shame of it! On the very morrow the name she bore would be held up to disgrace and derision. He would be cast into prison. The misery of their struggles with poverty was as nothing compared with that of their sudden downfall.

Numbered though her heart was with the shock, shrunk by the terror of their ghastly position, it was yet not impervious to pity, and the hopeless wretchedness of her husband inspired it. She thought of how he had lavished his stealings upon her, how he appeared to be moved by the one desire to make her comfortable and happy. She went to him and put her hand on his head, smoothing his hair. "Oh, Joe! Oh, my boy!" she said brokenly. "How could you do it? Didn't you know sooner or later you'd be found out? Now I know why you've been interested in the races—you've been betting on the horses."

"I—I wanted to get the money back," he sobbed. "But didn't you know you couldn't? Oh, why didn't you leave things as they were—the flat, the struggle and all that? Why did you bring me here and show me all this—this happiness—with money that you stole?"

His sobbing ceased, and he pushed her away and rose. "That's right. You call me a thief! If there was one person in the world I thought I could turn to it's you, and you turn on me!" "Joe, you mustn't say that. I haven't turned on you. Only I can't help but think—"

"What? That man Williams drove me to taking money?" "Drove you?" "Yes, he did. He went away so I could take it. I expected you to stand by me. Do you know the hole I'm in? There are three central office men downstairs watching. If I make a move I'll be nabbed. It's all very well for you to stop and preach—you always were so d—d saintly—but what of me? That's the question—what of me?"

He thumped his breast violently. She drew back, hurt by his reproaches. "If I thought you were yourself I'd never forgive you for saying that to me," she declared. "I'm not asking your forgiveness, nor your mother's, nor your sister's. What I want now is somebody to help me out. I don't want to go to jail. It would kill me."

"Do you think I want you to go to jail? Do you think I want the disgrace?" "The disgrace—that's it! I knew that would come sooner or later, but I didn't think it would come from you. There's always somebody to hammer that into a fellow when he's down."

"I'm not trying to hammer anything into you. What I want to know is what can be done, what are we going to do?" "I don't know—unless—"

"Unless we can get the money to pay back. There's Jimsey." "That won't do. It's too much. He hasn't got it. Besides, it's too late. Williams means business. He wouldn't take the money. He's not that kind."

"Oh, if I only knew a way—if I could only help!" She wrung her hands and sank helplessly into a chair by the table. Brooks paced the room restlessly, like a wild animal in a cage. Now and then he shot a peculiar, furtive glance in the direction of his wife. Finally he sat opposite to her, leaned toward her on the table and said in a low, intense voice:

"If anything is to be done it's got to be done tonight, Emma. Williams is the only man. You can square it with him."

"Yes, he does," he went on. "He always did. Women are his weak point. He's liked you for years. That's why he hangs around. I've seen it and heard what he said tonight about what he'd do for a girl like you. He meant that, Emma. He'll do anything you ask him if—if you go to him right."

Beginning to understand what he wanted of her, she rose slowly, incredulous horror in her eyes. He rose also and went toward her. "He's home now," he urged eagerly. "You can go. No one will know but just Williams, you and me. And you can do more than that—you can make him give us money, more money, to keep on living like this, and there won't be any risk."

She recoiled from him, consumed with rage and shame, her eyes blazing. "I hope I don't understand aright!" The words came in quivering gasps. "You mean me to go to his apartment tonight to see him—and—"

"No one will know the difference," he coaxed softly. "You can handle him all right. Besides, you know how far you can let a man go—all women know that."

"Oh, I can't believe I'm listening to you! A husband to ask a wife!" She stopped, pressing her cheeks between her clenched hands, appalled at his infamy.
