ICE! ICE!

Buy Ice From Red Wagons

They say, but if you will examine carefully the ice which melts so rapidly you will note that there seems to be holes in it, that the center is what is called "snow ice," which, being more porous, allows it to melt quickly.

AWFUL ACCIDENT IN ILLINOIS

Hundreds of Lives Lost by an Explosion in the St. Paul Coal Company's Mine

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 14.—Mine officials of the St. Paul Coal company's mine, where an explosion occurred yesterday, say 400 men are dead in the mine.

Twelve bodies have been taken out.

Six of these were heroes, not employed in the mine, who gave their lives in a futile effort to save the imprisoned workers.

Mine Superintendent James Steele declared five hours after the explosion that any of the miners still imprisoned could escape death.

The entrance to the mine has been sealed up in hope of checking the flames. The building above the pit entrance was blown up to permit of this. Despite the frantic efforts of the officials and the scores of volunteer assistants in the little town of Cherry it seemed assured that only bodies of the dead will be taken from the mine.

Until tomorrow morning, when the covering will be removed and rescuers endeavor to penetrate the smoke and gas-choked shaft and veins, the fate of those within cannot be learned.

The fire causing the explosion which may prove one of the greatest tragedies in the list of mine horrors, has an origin almost trivial. A pile of hay allowed to smoulder too long, finally ignited the timbers of the mine and before the workers realized their danger the mine was filled with smoke, gases and flames and all exit was impossible.

Heroinism such as rarely exhibited was shown by officials of the mine and the residents of the town of Cherry. These men, who were outside the mine when the fire originated, contributed to the list of twelve known dead.

BRITISH STATESMAN BEATEN

An English Suffragette Laid the Lash to the Shoulders of Hon. Winston Churchill

Bristol, Eng., Nov. 14.—For probably the first time in the history of a European country, a cabinet minister was whipped by a woman in the public streets.

Mrs. Theresa Guernett, a smartly gowned and very militant suffragette, was the aggressor, and Winston Churchill, a member of the prime minister's cabinet, was the man who received the sting of the horse-whip which the woman carried in her hand.

The minister and his wife had just alighted from a train yesterday and were making their way to a cab when the woman appeared on the scene. She drew the whip from beneath her coat and with a "take that you brute," brought it down over Churchill's head and face once or twice. Mr. Churchill seized the whip and tore it from her hand.

The woman was immediately arrested and placed in prison to await trial. She became hysterical when arrested.

The minister and his wife hurried from the scene in a carriage.

SHOWERS OF STARS

The Celestial Fireworks of the Last Three Nights were Rather Scarce

Washington, Nov. 14.—All over the country the stars began falling Friday night and the display continued last night. Astronomers state that the display was hardly up to standard. As a matter of fact, this day cuts their orbit at perhaps its most sparsely studied spot. This shower has a period roughly corresponding to the generations of human life, roughly computed as three to the century. The last great display was due in 1889, but it was a disappointment when compared with former manifestations of this periodic maximum.

This year the earth crosses the orbit of the solar system at a point ten years away from the maximum density; about a third of the circuit of that orbit. The prospects, therefore, are that the display will not approach anything like the brilliance that from time to time has been observed. On the other hand the exhibition, chiefly in the early morning hours of today far exceeded the count of the wandering stars which blaze for a moment almost every night, silent flights of cold incandescence.

The penultimate display was a great show in the skies. It was spread over three years, the peak of its magnificence in 1866, a heavy fall in 1867 and what might be called a smart shower even in 1868.

But the 1833 rain of the heavens was most astounding. The eastern seaboard was most advantageously situated for observation on the night of Nov. 12-13. The stars fell as fast and thick as flakes of snow on a winter day. Prof. Olmsted reckoned that 240,000 gleaming trains were visible in the course of nine hours. To the ignorant it presaged the crack of doom, the beginning of the rolling up of the heavens like a scroll.

CHAPTER II

AN EXTRAORDINARY DOCUMENT.

IT appears that the Messrs. Skaggs and Wyckholme as their dual career drew to a close set about to learn what had become of their daughters. Investigation proved that Wyckholme's daughter had married a London artist named Ruthven. The Ruthvens in turn had one child, a daughter. Wyckholme's wife and his daughter died when this grandchild was eight or ten years old. By last report the grandchild was living with her father in London. She was a pretty young woman, with scores of admirers on her hands and a very level head on her shoulders.

Wyckholme held to his agreement with Skaggs by bequeathing his share of the property to him, but it was definitely set forth that at the death of his partner it was to go to Agnes Ruthven, the grandchild—with reservations.

Skaggs found that his daughter, who married Browne, the American, likewise had died, but that she had left behind a son and heir. This son, Robert Browne, was in school when the joint will was designed, and he was to have Skaggs' fortune at the death of Wyckholme in case that worthy survived.

In order to keep the business and the property intact and under the perpetual control of one partnership the granddaughter of Wyckholme was to marry the grandson of Skaggs within the year after the death of the surviving partner. The penalty to be imposed upon them if the conditions were not complied with, neither to be excusable for the defection of the other, lay in the provision that the whole industry and its accumulated fortune, including the land (and they owned practically the entire island), were to go to the islanders. Wyckholme named Sir John Allencroft as one executor, and Skaggs selected Alfred Bowen of Boston as the other.

As Wyckholme was the first to die, Skaggs became sole owner of the island and its treasures, and it was he who made the final will in accordance with the original plan.

The island of Japat, with its jewels and its ancient chateau, of modern construction, represented several million pounds sterling. Wyckholme's dream of seeing an exact replica of a famous old chateau round response in the equally whimsical Skaggs, who constantly bemoaned the fact that it was impossible to spend money. For five years after its completion the two old men, with an army of Arabian retainers and Nubian slaves, lived like oriental potentates in the huge structure on the highlands overlooking the sea.

Skaggs seldom went from one part of his home to another without a guide. It was so vast and so labyrinthine that he feared he might become lost forever. The dungeon below the chateau and the moat with its bridges were the especial delight of these lonely, romantic old chaps. One of the builders of this rare pile was now sleeping peacefully in the sarcophagus beneath the chapel; the other was lying dead and undiscovered in the very heart of his possessions.

The magnificent plans of the partners would have been a glorious tribute to romance had it not been for one fatal obstacle. The trouble was that young Miss Ruthven and young Mr. Browne did not know that their grandfathers lived, much less that they owned an island in the south seas. Therefore it is quite natural that they could not have known they were expected to marry each other.

Miss Ruthven, from motives peculiar to the head and not to the heart, set about to earn a title for herself. Three months before the death of Mr. Skaggs she was married to Lord Deppingham, who possessed a title and a country place that rightfully belonged to his creditors. Mr. Browne, just out of college, hung out his shingle as a physician and surgeon and forthwith, with all the confidence his profession is supposed to inspire, proceeded to marry the daughter of a brokerage banker in Boston and at once found himself struggling with the difficulties of Back Bay society.

A clause in the will, letter of instruction attached, demanded that the two grandchildren should take up their residence in the chateau within six months after the death of the testator, there to remain through the compulsory days of courtship, up to and including the wedding day. Four months had already passed. It was also stipulated that the executors should receive £10,000 each at the expiration of their year of servitude, provided it was shown in court that they had carried out the wishes of the testator or in failing had made the most diligent effort within human power.

"It is very explicit," murmured Mr. Hare for the third time. "I suppose the first step is to notify young Mr. Browne of his misfortune. His lordship has the task of breaking the news to Lady Deppingham."

"You are assuming that I intend to act under this ridiculous will."

"Certainly. It means about $50,000 to you at the end of the year, with nothing to do but to notify two persons of the terms in the will. If they're not divorced and married again at the end of the year you and Sir John simply turn everything over to the Malays, or whatever they are. I think it's easy sailing for you."

Young Mr. Browne hastened downtown in response to a message from the American executor and was told of the will which had been filed in England, the home land of the testator. To say that this deonair, good looking young gentleman was flabbergasted would be putting it more than mildly.

"What shall I do—what can I do, Mr. Bowen?" he gasped, bewildered.

"Consult an attorney," advised Mr. Bowen promptly.

"I'll do it," shouted Bobby Browne, one time halfback on his college eleven. "Break the will for me, Mr. Bowen, and I'll give."

"I can't break it, Bobby. I'm its executor."

"Good Lord! Well, then, who is the best will breaker you know, please? Something has to be done right away."

"I'm afraid you don't grasp the situation. Now, if you were not married it would—"

"I wouldn't give up my wife for all the islands in the universe. That's settled. You don't know how happy we are. She's the—"

"Yes, yes, I know," interrupted the wily Mr. Bowen. "Don't tell me about it. Go and see Judge Garrett, over in the K. building. They say he expects to come back from the grave to break his own will."
