FORTY SURVIVORS FOUND

After a Week Underground, Two Score Men have Been Taken Alive from the St. Paul Mine

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 21.—Not all of the miners who were entombed in the St. Paul coal mine are dead. Yesterday afternoon forty of them were brought to the surface alive.

Following the recovery of thirty bodies from the mine, the work of recovery was proceeding apathetically, when suddenly one of the searchers in the heap of dead bodies cried out: "This man's alive!"

Back into the shaft went the tired rescuers in larger numbers. In a short time word came to the surface that a large number of others were alive and would be brought out.

One of the men, a stalwart Pole, recovered sufficiently, under stimulation, to give a brief account for their struggle for life. He said after the explosion came, and there seemed to be no escape from death by fire, the men held a council and decided to wall themselves up in the short gallery and take a chance on being found.
