face raised eagerly to the bobbing light. Not until hours afterward was Geneva to resent the use of her Christian name by the man in the clouds.

Rushing over, she grasped the knotted end of the rope. A glance and a single tug were sufficient to convince her that the other end was attached to a support at the top of the cliff. It hung limp and heavy, lifeless. A sharp tug from above caused it to tremble violently in her hands. She dropped it as if it were a serpent. Again she heard the shout, and this time she called out a question.

"Yes," was the answer, far above. "Can you hear me?" Greatly excited, she called back that she could hear and understand. "I'm coming down the rope. Pray for us—but don't worry! Please go inside until we land in the garden. It's a long drop, you know."

"Are you quite sure—is it safe?" she called, shuddering at the thought of the perilous descent of nearly 300 feet sheer through the darkness.

"It's safer than stopping here. Please go inside."

She duly comprehended his meaning. He wanted to save her from seeing his fall in the event that the worst should come to pass. Scarcely knowing what she did, she moved over into the shadow near the walls and waited breathlessly, all the time wondering why some one did not come from the chateau to lend assistance.

At last that portion of the rope which lay in the garden began to jerk and writhe vigorously. She knew then that he was coming down hand over hand through that long, dangerous stretch of darkness. The cliff reared itself sheer to the height of 350 feet directly behind the chateau. At the summit of this great wall a shelving ledge projected over the hanging garden. A rope dangling from this ledge would fall into the garden not far from the edge nearest the cliff. The summit of the cliff could be gained only by traversing the mountain slope from the other side. It was impossible to scale it from the floor of the valley which it bounded.

The rope was undoubtedly attached to the trunk of a sturdy tree at the brow of the cliff.

She could look no longer. It seemed hours since he started from the top. Every heart beat brought him nearer to safety, but would he hold out? Any instant might bring him crashing to her feet—dead, after all that he may have lived through during that awful night.

At last she heard his heavy panting—growing almost—the creaking and straining of the rope, the scraping of his hands and body. She opened her eyes and saw the bulky, swaying shadow not twenty feet above the garden. Slowly it drew nearer the grass-covered floor, foot by foot, straining, struggling, gasping in the final supreme effort, and then with a sudden rush the black mass collapsed, the taut rope sprung loose, the end switching and leaping violently.

Geneva rushed frantically across the garden, half fearful, half joyous. As she came up the mass seemed to divide itself into two parts. One sank limply to the ground, the other stood erect for a second and then dropped beside the prostrate, gasping figure.

Chase had come down the rope with another human being clinging to his body!

Geneva fell to her knees beside the man who had accomplished this miracle. She grasped his hands, warm and sticky with blood. She tried to lift his head from the ground, moaning with pity all the time, uttering words of encouragement in his ear.

Many minutes passed. At last Chase gave over gasping and began to breathe regularly, but heavily. The strain had been tremendous. Only superhuman strength and will had carried him through the ordeal. He groaned with pain as the two beside him lifted him to a sitting posture.

"Tell Selim to come ahead!" he gasped, his bloody hand at his throat. "We're all right!"

Then, for the first time, Geneva peered in the darkness at the figure beside her—a slight, graceful woman in oriental garb. The woman turned and lifted her face to the heights from which she had descended. In a shrill eager voice she called out something in a language strange to the princess. A faint shout came from on high, and once more the rope began to writhe.

The princess passed her hand over her eyes, bewildered. The face of the woman in the light, half shaded, half illumined, was gloriously beautiful—young, dark, brilliant!

"Oh!" she exclaimed, starting to her feet, a look of understanding coming into her eyes. This was one of the Persians! He had saved her! A feeling of revulsion swept over her, combating the first natural, womanly pride in the deed of a brave man.

Chase struggled weakly to his feet. He saw the tense, strained figure before him and, putting out his hand, said:

"She is Selim's wife. I am stronger than he, so I brought her down." Then, looking upward anxiously, he shouted: "Be careful, Selim! It's easy if you take your time to it."

About Sewing Machines

Why Not Buy The Best?

There is no economy in buying machines that are cheap in mechanism, and high in price, that you will want to trade off in a short time.

A "SINGER" is always the pride of its owner. The Singer Sewing Machine is recognized all over the world as the model of sewing machine perfection, and all other makes are judged by the Singer standard. That is why every woman is proud to own a Singer, sold only by the Singer Sewing Machine Co., dealing directly from maker to user. They are now being sold at lower prices.

Also the best oil, needles, belts, etc., of which we carry a larger stock than any other dealer, and we are on the spot to give careful attention to all customers.
