BUSINESS IS NOW IMPROVING

TRADESMAN'S WEEKLY REVIEW SHOWS CONDITIONS ARE BETTER IN ALL LINES OF TRADE.

In its weekly review of Southern market conditions the Tradesman says: Fifteen dollars per ton No. 2 foundry, is the level now in the Southern territory and pig iron manufacturers are already discriminating in accepting business for delivery during the coming year, that is limiting the amount of iron being sold. There is a strong expectation that prices are soon to take on another advance and mention has been made of a probability of a runaway market, as much as the iron makers express themselves against such a condition. Some immediate delivery iron is selling still in this territory but not to any great extent. The next year's buying has not started in as yet in full force but the aggregate will soon become noticeable. With iron at $15 per ton and a strong inquiry for the product, the Southern iron market can be announced as in fine condition. There is a great amount of iron being delivered in the South still at the low prices that prevailed several weeks ago, around the $11 and $11.50 figures. The furnace companies well supplied with this business are doing everything in their power to finish on the orders so that the better price iron can be handled.

There is no denial of the fact that the Southern territory is either shipping out or melting more iron than is being manufactured. The stocks of iron on hand belonging to the producers grow less every week, in fact the accumulated stocks at present being at almost minimum quantity, so far as that owned by the iron companies goes. There is to be a general moving out of iron on the yards here shortly and by the end of the year there will be plenty of room around the furnaces.

The inquiries that are being received by the furnace companies in the Southern territory would indicate that there is to be a long run of prosperity. Inquiries are being received for iron to be delivered during the first half of the coming year. One or two furnaces only are willing, so it is learned, to discuss business beyond the first quarter and one of the larger concerns in the South, a company with six furnaces making iron and all the product handled on the open market, is limiting the amount of iron to be sold to a customer for delivery during the first quarter of the coming year. This condition has not been noted now in three years, that is when customers could not get all the iron they saw fit to buy at prevailing quotations, delivery in the future.

The make for the month of September will show an increase as compared to the figures of the output of the previous month. If plans formulated some time back are carried out the make in the Southern territory should be improved greatly during the month of October so that in November the high water mark as far as the iron production goes can be reached. There is positively no apprehension expressed that the make in the near future is likely to exceed the demand. There is no fear for a while that the production is going to out a figure in the market conditions. Nor is there any fear expressed in the Southern territory that foreign irons are going to be brought in in quantity, now that a runaway market is being discussed in this section.

The home consumption, in foundry, basic and charcoal irons, is increasing right along. The cast iron pipe plants are operating to the fullest capacities and the soil pipe plants doing better every month. The foundries and machine shops are requiring more foundry iron while other industries have their hands full and are looking ahead for still better conditions. Charcoal iron, with few makers in the field in the South, has a steady demand with inquiries under consideration that will require a large tonnage. The car wheel works in particular in several Southern states are enjoying a most healthy demand. Basic iron is in sharp demand.

Seven furnaces in Alabama, Tennessee and other states should be put in operation during the present month, according to the schedule made up during the last fortnight in industrial sections. Averaging an output of 250 tons a day to each furnace the make can be estimated nicely. Raw material supplies are being given some attention. The only weak spot apparent at this writing is in coke and before the end of another twelve months additions shall have been made in the Southern territory to increase the output in this regard wonderfully.

Textiles.

Reviewing textiles in the South the Tradesman says: The most interesting topic of discussion among mill men during the past week was the alleged pool in yarns. Some days ago the New York American contained a sensational story telling of the existence of an alleged corner in cotton yarns, by a pool headed by such well known speculators as James Patten, Frank B. Haynes and others. In this story it was alleged that the pool has already spent millions of dollars in buying up yarns that have been hanging over the market from last year's production, and that they have practically cornered yarns, which is the basis of the cotton manufacturing industry in this country. It is alleged that James B. Duke is a member of the pool. It is further stated that the pool in yarns will be used to further strengthen the corner in cotton. It is claimed that pool now has power to boost the price of cotton to 15 cents within a few weeks, but that they prefer to keep it at 13 or 14 cents until the spinners realize their power and come into the market to stock up for necessities.

Asked for an opinion of the alleged pool, numerous prominent manufacturers, officials of Southern textile associations, etc., have all expressed the belief that the story is a fake and that no such pool exists.

Mr. T. W. Crews, who is secretary of the Southern Hard Yarn Spinners' Association, was very emphatic in his belief that no pool in yarns has been effected.

During the past week yarns have stiffened slightly, the increase amounting to 1-2 to 1 cent per pound. This is due principally to the continued upshoot in raw cotton. However, buyer and seller are still very far apart and dealings have been on a small scale. The mills continue the hand to mouth basis, and many manufacturers are predicting the necessity of curtailment or closing down of plants unless prices of manufactured goods shortly increase more in the proportion to the increase in raw material. Mills that had bought their cotton ahead are profiting by the slight advance in prices, but those that are forced to buy now are in bad shape.

Outside of picking up spot yarns, knitters are not inclined to operate extensively. Weavers are buying very little and are getting what they need at the lowest prices possible.

Meanwhile, notwithstanding the fact that there is only slight improvement in the markets, capitalists continue to invest freely in new mill properties. During the past week a number of large cotton mills have been organized, and others are being talked in various parts of the South. Numerous plants are also busily engaged making additions and improvements, installing new machinery and otherwise enlarging their facilities for handling the business which they confidently expect.

Lumber and Hardware.

The Tradesman's analysis of the lumber and hardware markets contains the following comments: Heavy orders from railroads and car manufacturers is perhaps the chief feature of the lumber trade of the South this week, and the indications are that these buyers will continue actively in the market for some time. Railroads are doing much repair work and many that operate their own shops are building cars as fast as the labor can be assembled. This has brought much activity in the pine belt and put practically all the mills to working full time. The general movement of pine is also good this month, manufacturers and country trade being excellent. In the hardware sections the demand continues good with a much better demand from manufacturing consumers. Prices are advancing on the better grades and rare dimensions but low and common grades show little inclination to advance. All mills are operating on full time where logs can be procured and the movement, rail and water, is unusually heavy.

All branches of the hardware trade continue to hold up exceedingly well in the South, this month starting out fully as brisk as September closed. Trade is pretty even throughout the Southern states with excellent prospects for a continuation of this condition indefinitely, or at least through the crop moving period. Jobbers who were optimistic of the fall and prepared for better times are reaping their reward, although some centers have found themselves poorly prepared for the heavy trade, which has forced them into the manufacturing market with wire orders. Generally the business is very satisfactory and no complaints are heard at the gradually advancing prices.
