will be their first appearance in the South and they will put forth their best efforts to win approval from the most skeptical and fastidious of theatregoers. Bell and Washburn will be seen in a musical comedy sketch replete with music, mirth and melody and this week will also be their first appearance in the South, it is a safe bet that they will make things hum pretty lively and fast during their time upon the stage. They come from the big houses of the North and East, where they are known as "the" team with the goods." Billy Falls is a black-face comedian and is known as the "assassin of sorrow." He guarantees to cure long standing cases of the blues and he invites all people who can't laugh to pay him a visit at the Orpheum, so take notice to all whom it may concern. Two new reels of pictures today from 3:30 until 10:30 p. m. Admission ten cents.

THE EDWIN R. WEEKS COMPANY TUESDAY NIGHT

The Edwin R. Weeks Co. will appear in the K. of C. hall Tuesday night. This is the second of the Lyceum course attractions for this season. Mr. Weeks, who heads his fine company, is probably the most humorous entertainer on the lyceum stage today. He has the prestige of a European tour, was the first entertainer selected by the international committee to go to Panama, and has repeatedly played return engagements on the largest courses throughout the country. He gives original monologues, humorous and pathetic recitations, parodies and medleys of his own arrangement, operas and musical extravaganzas of his own composition, humorous character sketches and last, but not least, impersonations of famous men, past and present. In fact, with his unusual versatility he is enabled to give, with the co-operation of two assistants, all the variety usually furnished by half a dozen artists, and those who enjoy wholesome humor and high class musical features will appreciate Tuesday night's entertainment.

St. Elmo Next Week.

Dramatizing a popular novel results either in a marked success or pronounced failure according to the merit of the dramatist and the spirit in which he approaches his work. Some masters of technique regard the book merely as an inspiration and disregarding the sentiments of the author place their own valuation upon character and influences with the result that a play is produced which antagonizes the admirers of the novel. It was with no such purpose that Neil Twomey approached the dramatization of Augusta J. Evans's "St. Elmo." He saw in the book a story of life in the south told as only a southern writer could tell it. He perceived in the character of St. Elmo a complex psychology that would tax to the utmost his technical resources and literary skill. Thoroughly imbued with the vast possibilities of his hero from a dramatic point of view, he has carefully refrained from altering the type as drawn by the author and has labored earnestly and with excellent results to reproduce exactly the character as originally drawn. It was impossible to improve upon the work of the creator of St. Elmo and his effort has been directed toward reproduction and realization of this most fascinating central figure. A unique dramatic type which gains in power through contrast with others in the play.

Mr. Twomey's "St. Elmo" will be seen at the opera house on Saturday next, and when Mr. Twomey will be seen in the title role of St. Elmo.
