PENSACOLA, FLORIDA, THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 23, 1906

The Disgraceful Georgia Campaign Has Ended.

The campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor of Georgia ended yesterday, after one of the most bitter political fights in the history of the state and one in which acrimonious vituperation, slander and mud-slinging generally, played a large part.

Uncle Joe's whiskers will insure him the electoral vote of Kansas if he ever becomes the nominee of the Republican party for the presidency.

Opening Gun of the Democratic Campaign.

Mr. Bryan's forthcoming speech on the occasion of his reception at New York is causing both the politicians and the press of the country no little concern, as it is generally conceded that his remarks will form the keynote of the Democratic campaign to be waged in 1908.

The Republicans will attempt to retain power by pointing to President Roosevelt's acts and to the record of congress. The Democrats have been the president's warmest supporters.

The Republican party is divided on this issue. There are standpatters, chiefly connected in some manner with the beneficiaries of Dingleyism, and there are revisionists in the republican party.

Jerome's candidacy for Governor of New York state seems to be a case of dog in the manger. He can't get it, but is willing to do anything to defeat the aspirations of William R. Hearst.

John D. Rockefeller is of common clay after all. All his money does not give him immunity from aching molars.

If the revolution in Cuba continues much longer it will offer an unusually fine opportunity for the executive to give the Big Stick a few shakes.

San Francisco and Valparaiso are neck and neck for the Pacific coast earthquake championship, with the chances slightly in favor of the latter.

UNION LABOR HAS COME TO STAY.

Atlanta Journal.

A MATTER OF LINGO.

Live Oak Democrat.

The Punta Gorda Herald says that we don't want to hire people to come to Florida, but if we are going after immigrants, we should be sure to get them from the United States, so that we may understand their talk.

With all due respect due to the Macon Street Car Company, the day has gone by in America when a man may be wantonly dismissed from his job for the sole reason that he chooses to become a member of an organization working to protect his interests as a working man.

American public sentiment has passed its judgment and declared that whatever their faults and mistakes may have been, the masses of American workmen would be in a far less satisfactory condition to-day, and the country in general would likewise, if it were not for the union idea.

It is the right of an American citizen to organize for mutual benefit and protection, and the day has gone by when a labor union can be "smashed," can be wiped out of existence, for the simple reason that it is a labor union. We are living in the twentieth century, and our workmen are not serfs, but free men.

Prof. I. E. Allen Among Friends of Former Days

Editor Pensacola Journal: Milligan has a population of 500, 5 merchandise stores, 1 millinery store, 1 newspaper, 3 hotels, 1 doctor, no lawyers, 1 depot, 1 large saw mill, 2 planing mill, 1 turpentine still, 2 churches, 1 fine school employing two teachers, and no saloons.

Milligan is situated twenty-seven miles above Milton on the L. & N. railroad, and is in a fine farming district. My first night was spent with Mr. A. L. Garrett, whose noble wife is a daughter of Fletcher Wilkinson. Many of the good people of the place assembled at Mr. Garrett's nice home, and we all enjoyed the old-time pieces rendered on the violin and organ.

Next morning I was captured by Mr. J. R. Miller, one of Santa Rosa's prosperous farmers. On our arrival at his home he showed me a button that he won twenty years ago from me by solving a problem. While at the home of J. R. Miller I met Dr. Malcom Baggett whom I've not met in many years. I spent my last night at Milligan at the lovely home of J. W. Baggett, and had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Baggett's wife and children. Several of his children who went to school to me twenty years ago are now grown-up and are in business.

Met Former Scholars.

My last night was spent with my nephew, N. B. (Bud) Jernigan and family. Several of the neighbors met at "Bud's" to hear the rendition of the old-time pieces. While at Bud's I had the pleasure of meeting Messrs. Charles and Osier and Miss Mary Stinson, who attended my school in Milton in the by-gone days. The two brothers and sisters live on their beautiful farm which lies opposite Bagdad lumber mills of Stearns and Culver.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Littlefield of Maine.

It is understood that President Samuel Gompers and other trades unionists will wage an active campaign in the Second Maine congressional district against Congressman Charles E. Littlefield, who is a candidate for reelection. Mr. Littlefield is upon the blacklist of the American Federation of Labor because of his opposition as a member of the judiciary committee to the anti-injunction bill.

World's Richest Woman.

Mrs. Russell Sage, by the inheritance of practically all of her late husband's vast fortune, becomes probably the richest woman in the world. The estate of the late Russell Sage is variously estimated at from $80,000,000 upward. At the lowest estimate Mrs. Sage becomes sole possessor of $75,000,000, which puts her in the first rank of the rich persons of the world.

He Could Trust Her.

Of young Marshall Field, now sometimes called the richest child in the world, this story was recently told at Lakewood: The boy, according to the story, approached an old woman in a hotel and said to her: "Can you crack nuts?"

The Wrong Party.

Mayor McClellan of New York has a butter in his Washington square house who wears knee breeches and the rest of a real butter's outfit on ceremonial occasions. The mayor invited some

THE JOURNAL'S CIRCULATION

FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1906.

The actual number of complete and perfect copies of The Pensacola Journal printed each issue for the first six months of the year 1906 was as stated below:

Table showing circulation figures by day from Jan. to June 1906. Total circulation for the period is 151,000 copies, with an average of 5,848 copies per issue.

The grand total of copies printed during the first six months of the year 1906, as per above statement, was 151,000.

The grand total, 151,000, divided by 25.8 (the actual number of issues) shows the average number of copies printed per issue to have been 5,848.

I hereby certify that the above statements are correct according to the records on file in this office.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 25th day of July, 1906. PERRY DICKEN, Notary Public.

GROWTH BY YEARS table showing circulation increase from 1901 (1,887) to 1906 (5,848).

MRS. RUSSELL SAGE.

Of young Marshall Field, now sometimes called the richest child in the world, this story was recently told at Lakewood:

WOMAN AND FASHION

An Attractive Waist. Such a waist as the one shown would be just the thing for either a suit waist or for wear with separate skirts.

FANCY YOKES WAIST.

While a small fanciful yoke introduces another material at the throat. Several rows of shirtings at each shoulder provide extra fullness for the front and back and are well adapted to the softer materials.

Jet Ornaments and Pins. A natural outcome of the use of black in the court of England is the use of jet for any and all purposes.

Fashion Notes. Eoliennes make the prettiest of extra dresses, and the mercerized cottons are best liked of all.

Bronchitis advertisement: The next time you meet your doctor, ask him in opinion of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in cases of bronchitis.
