K. OF C. AT SACRED HEART

Gegorian Chant Will Be Sung According to the Strict Rule.

REV. J. W. SENTERFITT WILL PREACH ON "MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE" AT EAST HILL BAPTIST CHURCH TONIGHT—OTHER SERVICES IN THE CITY.

One of the most impressive church services ever held in this city will take place at the Sacred Heart church today at 8 o'clock a. m., when the local council of the Knights of Columbus, accompanied by delegations of the same order from other councils of the state will join in singing the Gregorian chant. This will be the first time in church history of the city that the official mass of the Catholic church has been executed according to the strict rule. On several former occasions the mass has been sung but the choir was not composed of male voices entirely.

Bishop McClosky, of Louisville, will hold services at St. Michael's this morning. The aged prelate has visited this city before for the benefit of his health, and will be remembered my many of St. Michael parish as reading the 7 o'clock daily mass for several weeks about seven years ago. The bishop is stopping at the Escambia.

There will be a large class of communicants at St. Michael's church today. The class will be one of the largest that has ever received the sacrament at the church, there being about 100. The children have for the past few weeks been preparing themselves for the occasion by study and close retreat. The services will take place at 7 o'clok.

Rev. J. W. Senterfitt will preach on "Marriage and Divorce" tonight at 7:30. The minister has especially prepared his sermon on this subject which is so freely discussed throughout the country at the present time.

SERVICES TODAY.

Ministers are respectfully requested to notify The Journal promptly of any change in the order of services at their respective churches. Notices for this column should reach The Journal not later than 6 p. m. on Saturday of each week.

HANG ON

Coffee Topers as Bad as Others.

"A friend of our family who lived with us a short time was a great coffee drinker and a continual sufferer with dyspepsia. He admitted that coffee disagreed with him, but you know how the coffee drinker will hold on to his coffee, even if he knows it causes dyspepsia.

"One day he said to me that Postum Food Coffee had been recommended and suggested that he would like very much to try it. I secured a package and made it strictly according to directions. He was delighted with the new beverage, as was every one of our family. He became very fond of it and in a short time his dyspepsia disappeared. He continued using the Postum and in about three months gained twelve pounds.

"My husband is a practising physician and regards Postum as most healthful of all beverages. He never drinks coffee, but is very fond of Postum. In fact, all of our family are, and we never think of drinking coffee any more." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Sick and disabled men who were formerly in the life-saving service have organized the Life Savers' Benefit Association. Charles A. Meyland, of Milwaukee, has been elected secretary. Only men who were honorably discharged from the service because of disability arising from exposure or accident received in the service are entitled to membership. Disabled members receive no pension or any other remuneration from the government. After devoting their entire life to the service many of them are forced to make a living as best they can, although unable to do hard work because of advanced age or infirmity. The association has for its object the welfare of the men after they leave the service. The members propose to collect funds in some way by which its members can be given financial aid. It is believed that the boat owners will contribute. Collection boxes may be placed in public places, where those who are interested in their cause may contribute. Mr. Meyland was in the service for fourteen years, when he was incapacitated from further work by rheumatism. He was dropped from the government payroll, he says, without means of support.—The Nautical Gazette.

The common practice of shipbuilders and other big contractors stipulating for the payment of their contract by instalments, as the work proceeds, sometimes raises the question Can the contractors recover an unpaid instalment as if it were a debt? This was the point recently settled by the court of appeals in the case of Workman, Clark & Co., Limited, vs. Lloyd Brazileiro. The shipbuilders had contracted to build a ship, to be paid for by five instalments, the first to be paid when the keel was laid, and the others at specified interva's during the ship's construction. Under the contract the first two instalments were overdue and the plaintiffs issued a specially indorsed writ (order 3, rule 6), and under order 14, rule 1, they were given leave to enter final judgment for the amount claimed. Against this the defendants appealed. Under order 14, rule 1, it will be noted the plaintiff may obtain final judgment without the delay of a trial when, by affidavit, he swears to the facts, and can satisfy the judge that there is no defense to the action, unless, of course, the defendant can show a good defense. Such summary judgment is generally granted when the claim is for a liquidated demand, as for the amount of a dishonored check or bill of exchange, as to which there is prima facie no defense, and when the usual law's delay would defeat the ends of justice. On behalf of Workman, Clark & Co., the plaintiffs it was contended that this was a debt or liquidated demand. The defendants had admittedly contracted to pay certain instalments on certain stages of the plaintiff's work being reached, and they had failed to do so. For the defendants it was urged that order 14 did not apply as to a liquidated and agreed demand. The overdue instalment was not a debt, as the contract was one and indivisible, and not five contracts. Each of the five instalments could not be a debt. The court of appeals, consisting of the Lord Chief Justice and Lord Justices Farwell and Kennedy, dismissed the appeal. The Lord Chief Justice, in delivering judgment, held the failure to pay the instalment when due, according to the express contract, was a liquidated demand, and there was therefore jurisdiction to allow summary judgment. — Engineering London.
