BALLADE OF COMPENSATION.

You hear it coming with a whoop,
You shudder at its demon shriek,
To shun its force you shrink and stoop
Before its fury it can wreak.
The tree tops sway, their branches creak.
It's quite disturbing to the mind,
Palsies the limbs and pales the cheek,
It soon blows over, you will find.

If you have looped the winding loop
And then at last your home you seek,
And feel your spirits rather droop
Because your partner is not meek,
Don't try to make excuses weak.
Because your treasure is not blind,
But let her with all fredom speak.
It soon blows over, you will find.

And if you're in a greedy group—
A crowd of ringsters or a clique,
Those who the public treasure scoop
And rule the roost with brazen cheek
And somewhere there has been a leak
That starts the old muckraking streak,
You needn't show your yellow streak.
It soon blows over, you will find.

L'Envoi.

Of course, you may for cover sneak,
Or jump the town if you're inclined,
But lasting storms are quite unique,
It soon blows over, you will find.
—The Rag Time Muse.

A TALK WITH THE MOTHER OF JAMES K. HACKETT.

The venerable Mrs. Jas. H. Hackett, mother of the famous James K. Hackett, the foremost actor, perhaps, on the American stage today, was interviewed by The Journal in her son's private car as it stood on the local L. and N. tracks last night.

Mrs. Hackett, clever, congenial, and the sort of woman, precisely, whom you would imagine as the mother of the big-souled Jas. K., is intensely interesting and a voluble talker. She has stronfi striking features, hair of snowy whiteness, and her firm, fine grip on the world and its things worth while is good to see.

Probably the leading, all-enveloping trait in the character of Mrs. Hackett is her consuming devotion for her son, who, in his stalwart, mature manhood, is very gentle, very considerate, and very devoted to this mother of his, whom one can easily see at a glance is a valued companion to her illustrious boy.

After the charming hospitality of both mother and son had fairly radiated throughout the atmosphere of the attractively appointed car, and when James and the gentlemen of the crowd were discussing other matters, the writer dropped the first hint of the really truly interview which had been duly framed for the occasion.

It would not be polite, of course, to charge Mrs. Hackett with fencing. Still, she persisted in considering the idea of an interview in the nature of a very good joke, and infinitely preferred to bubble on and on in her own delightful, informal way, talking impersonally, humorously, delightfully—in a way, in fact, quite capable of completely and wholly disarming you.

"You have traveled with your son a great deal?" she was finally asked.

"Well, you see," she answered, quizzically, and smiling a bit reminiscently, "he has traveled with me since he was really quite young," and so on throughout the pleasant hour, her Brilliant repartee holding her foremost in the little gathering about the dinner table.

Mrs. Hackett, who has been in ill health for some time, having been unable to leave the car frequently, did Pensacola the honor yesterday of making a very supreme effort, and doing the forts at Barrancas with her son.

She was delighted.

In fact, Mrs. Hackett has a beautiful way of being eternally delighted, according to the impression which she makes, and is one of the most charmingly unaffected conversationalists imaginable.

You ought to know Mrs. Hackett.

She is one of those delightful latterday mothers who make charming first-rate—shall we say—good fellows—(shame on us) and James K. is the man to appreciate this particularly fine little mother of his.

"Are you going?" she called with her son, as we started to make our own departure, "well, do come back. Can't you drop in after the show? No, not even twelve o'clock would be too late, for we are up very late. Come back, now do—" and we felt in our heart of hearts that the invitation rang true.

HUNTER-LANGFORD WEDDING LAST NIGHT.

The wedding of Miss Marguerite Hunter and Mr. Walter Langford took place last night at the First Presbyterian church, a number of the friends of the young people having been present to witness the beautiful ceremony which joined these two estimable young people in the holy rites of marriage. There has probably been no marriage this season of more interest in Pensacola than that which was solemnized last night, as the bride is known and admired for her lovable traits of character among an extraordinarily large list of local acquaintances, and the groom is a worthy son of one of the oldest and most respected families in Pensacola. Immediately after the ceremony last night, the young couple were showered with congratulations from large numbers of their friends who witnessed the pretty event.

MISS BONNIE HAINES RETURNS TO MOBILE.

Miss Bonnie Haines has returned to Mobile after having spent a delightful visit with Mr. and Mrs. John Murich, of this city. Miss Haines was much admired while in the city, being a most charming young lady.

MISS WHITE AN ENTERPRISING YOUNG LADY.

There are probably few persons in Pensacola who are really aware of the fact that one of the most creditable, attractive and very newest of local green houses is actually conducted by a young lady, and a very young and winsome little lady at that. The North Hill greenery, located on North Baylen street, with its well appointed gardens, its prosperous appearing offices, and its two well ordered hot houses is a monument, in fact, to the industry and enterprise of a Pensacola woman—or girl—who is really directing and conducting a business in which the city should well take pride. Besides being a business woman of rare capabilities, Miss White is the possessor of a very charming personality, one of the necessary and natural attributes, by the way, of the "really, truly little business lady": she directs and attends to things herself, and her sweet even temple is, after all, one of the leading stepping stones toward success.

MARRIED LADIES MET YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

The Married Ladies' Euchre club met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. V. J. Vidal on East Government street, a delightful time having been enjoyed by those present. Mrs. Joe Roth won the first prize, a hand-embroideded centre piece, Mrs. Harry Plumer securing the second prize, an elaborate battenberg square. Refreshments were served, the afternoon proving one of the most interesting of the season. The next meeting of the club will occur at the home of Mrs. Sydney Bell on Gregory street.

PRETTY EVENT IN HONOR OF MISS QUINA.

Miss Celestine Quina, who is soon to be one of Pensacola's fairest brides, announcement of her approaching marriage to Mr. Carroll having already been made, was the charming honoree of a pretty event yesterday, given in the form of a linen shower at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank Whiting. A number of the younger set were present, Miss Quina having been of exceptional popularity among her girl friends since her very early girlhood. Attractive linen pieces were literally "showered" upon the beautiful young recipient, and the event proved a merry one indeed. The home was beautifully decorated in crimson and white, and presented a most cheerful appearance, proving a grateful setting for the most attractive scene as enacted during the afternoon. Luncheon was served, the table decorations having been particularly beautiful. Those present were as follows:

Miss Celestine Quina, Misses Lizzie McGaughey, Sallie Wright, Georgia Renshaw, Fannie Renshaw, Alma Finch, Marguerite Finch, Louise Quina, Miss McLauchlin, Belle Whiting, Marguerite Ingraham, Isabelle Grant, Isla Smith, Mabel Gonzalez, Mildred Kessler, Leila Reese, Frances Swayne, Ellie Swayne, Mrs. Hervey, Miss Alice Quina and Miss Annie Quina.

Smith, of East Jackson street, has returned home from an extended visit in the various points of interest in Iowa, where she has many friends and relatives. During her absence, she was accorded many social attentions, having enjoyed a most pleasant sojourn of more than 4 months. Miss Nina is very popular in local circles, and her many friends will welcome her return to Pensacola.

CHOOSING EXTRACTS.

The way to secure the finest flavoring extracts is to buy a well known absolutely reliable brand like Blue Ribbon lemon and vanilla.

SOME TIMELY TIPS.

If there is but one electric light in the room place a mirror near it and get the double benefit of light.

Enormous ball hatpins are made from rhinestones. You cannot see the metal in which the rhinestones are set and they gleam beautifully against the modish all-black hat.

Stains and discolorations on tinware can be removed by dipping a damp cloth in common soda and rubbing briskly. Then wash thoroughly and wipe dry.

It is now the fashion to frame a picture without the mat showing. The effect is artistic. This is a good thing for housewives to know who are redecorating their rooms for the winter.

To prevent noise round pads of leather, cut from old boots and nailed to the legs of kitchen chairs, prevent the grating noise upon a brick or tiled floor which is so distressing to the nerves of sensitive people.

To prevent frayed buttonholes—If buttonholes have to be made on a material that frays badly, proceed as follows: Mark the position of buttonhole with a thread, then run a line of machine stitching around the thread. Then cut the hole and buttonhole it in the usual manner. This will prevent any fraying.

Nothing is more provoking to the careful housewife than to have a perfectly clean tablecloth liberally bespattered with gravy the first time it is used. Get a large table napkin, one to match the tablecloth, if possible, and a piece of white oilcloth, cut inch shorter and an inch narrower than the napkin. Place the oilcloth where the meat dish will stand, spread the napkin over it. The gravy cannot penetrate through the oilcloth, thus there is a considerable saving in the wash bill.

Powder boxes for the guest chamber, large in size though not very high, have nickel covers and cost $1.95 and $2.25. Swansdown puffs to accompany them are 95 cents and $1.50 respectively. For the bathroom there are others of Japanese lacquer, the ground color red or black, and the design mostly in gilt with a few touches of other colors and silver most attractively done. These complete with puff are $2.50 each.

A colonial tea set in white china with inch-wide gold bands at rims is irresistible, especially as the teapot, sugar and creamer are all in those quaint octagonal shapes that used to delight the great-grandmothers of the present generation, and have tops that lift by gilded acorns. The set of three pieces is $10, and the cups and saucers to match are $13.50 and $15 the dozen respectively, and are in two sizes. Plates with similar gold bandings at edges are from $7.50 to $13.50 the dozen and are shown in various sizes at the prices between those mentioned.

Although it is almost impossible to draw wool through the eye of an ordinary needle, however large the latter may be, the needle can sometimes be threaded by fine wool if cotton is used as a "decoy." Both ends of a piece of cotton should be passed through the eye until only a short loop remains, the end of the wool being then run through the loop and the whole gently pulled.

A nice little embroidery bag is made of cretonne covered with two embroidery hoops, and finished at the ends with cardboard covered with cretonne just the size of the hoops. In other words, the bag is built like a barrel, with an opening at the side. This opening is held together by lacing with ribbon or by two buttons. The bag is carried by ribbon loops, which are fastened at each end to the embroidery loops. It is pretty and the sewing materials do not get lost when thus protected.

Some of the daintiest pin cushions seen this season are of lingerie and their development is quite within the skill of any girl who knows how to hold a needle. The covers are square and oblong in shape, and are finished like miniature sofa cushions, edged with a ruffle. White lawn, hemstitched, is used for the ruffle. On the top a square of filet lace is used as a decoration. When finished the covers are slipped over colored satin cushions, which can be bought for the purpose. Of course these pincushion covers launder perfectly, and surely there could be nothing prettier for a holiday gift.

Carpets can be cleaned and colors restored by going over them occasionally with a broom dipped in warm water to which turpentine is added.

If you have an old bicycle pump around the house you can put it to good service when next you clean your sewing machine. Tiny pieces of lint, threads and the like can be blown out of the crevices and the machine cleaned in much less time. An atomizer can often be used for the same purpose.

To polish a piano wring a cloth out of warm water as dry as you can, then sprinkle a little paraffin on it. Rub lightly on the case of the piano with cloth, only wetting a small piece at a time, then polish immediately with a soft, dry duster. This method produces a brilliant polish and is quite safe.

Lace curtains wear much better when washed at home, as they meet more careful treatment than is usually afforded them by the professional laundress. After washing thoroughly, starch while still wet with thin, boiled starch. Next hang them lengthwise, double, over the line, pulling the edges at the same time gently into shape. Curtains treated in this way will not have the stretched look at the edges that is so ugly. They should finally be "damped down" and rolled up, and will then be found quite easy to iron.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Lady Margaret Chrichton-Stuart, sister of the marquis of Bute, is the only English woman who holds the master's certificate of the board of trade navigation. She could command one of the ocean steamers if she were fitted in other respects and is very much devoted to yachting. She is one of the women to whom the suffragists refer when they declare that their sex is the equal of the other in every respect.

Thimbles were introduced into England by a man named John Lofting, who came over from Holland about the end of the seventeenth century and established a thimble factory at Islington. The word thimble is derived from the Scotch "thummel," or thumb bell, a sort of shield worn over the thumb.

Few "nervy" women realize what a soothing effect sewing has on the nerves. When things go wrong in the home and numerous irritations gather in the mind an hour's sewing is a wonderful comfort. George Sand, one of the most neurotic women, was always loud in praise of the soothing effect of sewing a long seam and every woman who has tried this simple remedy will contribute a similar testimony.

Duchess D'Uzes is one of the fashionable women of France who has begun a campaign against the directoire style of gowns. She declares that it is not a becoming gown, and the dressmakers of Paris have been asked to design a new gown that shall be like the other only in the matter of tight sleeves.

A writer describes scenes on Japanese railways and says when a native woman enters a carriage she slips her feet from her tiny shoes, stands upon the seat and then sits demurely with her feet doubled beneath her. A moment later she lights a cigarette or her little pipe, which holds just tobacco enough to produce two good whiffs of smoke. All Japanese people sit with their feet upon the seat of the carriage and not as we do. When the ticket collector—attired in a blue uniform—enters the carriage he removes his cap and bows twice politely. He repeats the bow as he comes to each passenger to collect the tickets.

Worth county, Missouri, has been doing its share in making things comfortable for women with political aspirations. A woman was elected treasurer this year, and already the republican paper of the county announces that in two years from now a woman should be elected circuit clerk; at least he seems to have one in mind who would just suit the place.

Miss Laura A. Hecock has had absolute charge of the light of Vera Cruz lighthouse since 1881, following her father as the keeper. Her father was a minister, who took charge of the light when his health broke down, and for thirteen years his daughter practically had charge of the work. During the twenty-seven years she has been connected with the light house she has only taken six vacations.

The late empress of China has been much likened to Catharine of Russia, both women having strong characters, both knowing how to bide their time, to stop at nothing to attain an end, but the Chinese woman ruled within her own territories. She did not increase its boundaries greatly, and no foreign potentates sought alliances with her. She has also been compared, and possibly with greater reason, to Catherine de Medici.

The crown princess of Greece is better known perhaps, as the Duchess of Sparta. She inherits from the late Empress Frederick many of the latter's brilliant intellectual qualities, and the mother and daughter are devoted to one another. The kaiser, of course, is her brother, and he has always been extremely fond of her, though very often their points of view are diametrically opposed. The crown princess of Greece did not go to her husband empty-handed. She is, on the contrary, wealthy in her own right by the will of her father, the Emperor Frederick, she inherited a sum of 100,000 pounds.

Lady Harrington, who was a Miss McMillan until last October, when she married Sir John Harrington, has passed her honeymoon in Abyssinia, and among the other experiences of the trip was a 7,000-mile voyage to Jibutil, on the Gulf of Aden. From that point to the capital of King Menelik, a 600-mile journey was taken, all but 185 miles of it through a country in which there was no railroad and travel was by camel.
