HAIL FLORIDA.

Sunny state, with matchless climate Undisturbed by hand of Time, Ice cannot assail thee— Bled by gulf and ocean breeze, Shaded 'er by tropic trees, Florida, I hail thee!

Hail thee, yes—but not farewell; Here I would forever dwell. Earth has no spot rarer— Flower-laden breezes fill— All the air of vale and hill; Only heaven is fairer.

Nowhere else the sky's so blue; Nowhere else are maids so true, True as heaven above thee, Nowhere else the moon's so bright, Nowhere else the heart's so light— Florida, I love thee. Estelle Trichelle Oltzrage, in the Florida Review.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

An excellent liniment is made of equal parts of alcohol, oil of wormwood and laudanum.

When a child is restless from teething it can often be quieted by giving it a warm bath. The water should be as hot as can be endured without burning.

A dry shampoo of corn meal is very cleansing if properly done. The meal should not be allowed to get too close to the scalp, and should be brushed out with a gentle "lifting" stroke.

To keep the hands smooth and white soak them in sweet almond oil every night. Pour the oil in a bowl and immerse the hands for several minutes. Wipe gently with a soft towel and draw on loose white gloves for sleeping.

For the bumpy appearance under the eyes rub gently with the tips of the fingers dipped in alcohol. Follow this treatment by massaging with cold cream.

Few skins stand and glycerine and it should never be used without being diluted. It absorbs all moisture, and the skin becomes dry and parched.

A celebrated oculist recommends in any cases where dirt, lime or sparks get into the eyes that the sufferer apply petroleum oil poured in until everything of a harmful nature is removed. The remedy is quite painless, and never fails to remove all foreign substances.

If there is a baby in the family, save the linen andkerchiefs and some pieces of muslin. Cut them in squares about the size of a half inches across, and keep them at hand to use for washing the little one's mouth or eyes. They will be found superior to absorbent cotton for the purpose, as there is no danger of the tiny bits of lint clogging off.

Carry your head up and well back, and whenever you get a chance rest it against the chair cushions. A tall-backed, wide-armed chair of comfortable height will do wonders towards preserving a woman's looks. If she can drop into it for five minutes it will do her as much good, speaking from a hygienic standpoint, as ten minutes of massage, particularly if she can clasp her eyes while she is resting.

A woman with a bad face should do her utmost to conceal it by the arrangement of her hair. One should take particular pains to adopt a narrow dressing, as the only accentuates the defect. A round pompadour is becoming to the bad face, and if the hair is slightly parted it will soften the lines. A small toque should never be worn and a large picture hat should also be avoided. The long, oval face should never carry a perfectly round hat, nor a flat hat on the top, for one with a stiff, regular brow. The trimming should not be much higher on one side of the hat than on the other, but should be about the same. The hair should be arranged in soft curls and waves and never low on the neck.

It goes without saying that the bedroom should be well ventilated, especially in view of the heavy storing up of oxygen in the tissues which goes out during sleep. All windows should be open from the top, at least one and better two or three feet, so that a gentle current of air can be felt blowing across the face. It is just as pure and wholesome as day air. Night fogs and rains are only injurious in so far as they frighten you into shutting your windows. No air that ever blew outdoors is so dangerous or poisonous as that inside a bedroom with closed windows. The clothing should be as light as is consistent with warmth, the mattress elastic, but firm, the pillows as light as the breadth of the shoulder, so that it will keep the head and neck horizontal or slightly above, when lying on the side.

NEEDLE-WORK NOTES. Eyelets in the Wallachian embroidery done on crash in a contrasting shade of silk makes a simple but effective pattern for fancy bags. Before stitching new calico rub the part to be stitched with a dry cake of soap. Enough soap will come off to make the needle slip through the material quite easily, and the work will be done quicker and without the breaking of needles so usual when stitching new calico. The baby-hood shawls, made of a square of cashmere, one corner being gathered across to form the head covering, are sensible. They may be lined and finished with a buttonholed edge. Either is equally effective. Some bind the edge with wash ribbons, but this is not so dainty. Fashion is borrowing from the clergy as well as the classic. What with the cassock gown, the girdles of heavy floss, the monk cape, there is quite an addition to the styles from priestly vestments. Now the stole has come into highest favor. It was in fashion some time ago, then somber and subdued. Now it is resplendent with embroidery and metal threads. These stoles are worn over the shoulders, around the waist, down the front of skirts, from the arched sleeves of the sides of evening gowns and from back of an empire bodice to hem of the skirt. Next to leather itself nothing is more useful for covering shirt-waist and other utility boxes than burlap. If the color selected harmonizes with the color scheme of the room it combines beauty with usefulness. The edges of the box should be finished off with linen braid of the color of the burlap and held in place by button tacks. Both the braid and the tacks may be bought of any upholster or in any drapery department of any general furnishing store. Burlap can be treated with splendid effect for non-ferrous where an inexpensive yet attractive material is desired. The simplest lace may be made strikingly attractive by outlining the design in gold thread. Plain valenciennes, itself quite inexpensive, treated in this fashion, will enrich any dressy costume. Tiny little cases for the thimble are made of three pieces of pasteboard about two inches long and half an inch wide pointed at either end and covered on both sides with pretty silk. Overlaid these together to form a case similar in shape to a beehive, but leaving an opening between two of the sides. A slight pressure of the case at the ends will open it as if by magic. There is a wide return to the use of fringe of all widths on indoor gowns. In other days it was used on street frocks, but it is to be hoped, for the sake of convenience and comfort, that this fashion will never return. It is a pretty one, however, for dress costumes. The trouble about making use of it is that the fringe is not easy to find. Shops do not offer large quantities of it and the range of colors found is not wide. White fringe is to be found and is easily dyed to match the color of the drapery, to tunic, to sleeves and as a finish to ornaments that are put well above the waist line on princess gowns. If you have only a scrap of material left over from a cloth skirt trim your blouses with it. If the blouse isn't of the cloth it will be of net or chiffon dyed to match in color. To be quite correct it wants a touch of the skirt material on it. The mere scrap left from the skirt will do it. Cut it into as wide a band as the shoulders will stand and the material allow. Stitch it at edges, cover it with an Egyptian design in soutache and apply it to the blouse. If you have still another piece left over from another band as wide as you can, soutache it, and put it around the figure, under arms. Where it passes under the upright hand join with an embroidered crow's foot or a satin-covered button. You know how uneven the edge of a dolly appears after it has been laundered and cut from the linen on which it is worked. One woman whose dollies have a beautiful, smooth edge always embroiders the pattern and then outlines the button-hole stitch upon the machine. She uses 100 thread and makes several rows of stitches. The pattern is then cut from the material, lightly whiped with fine thread and the usual button-hole stitch is made. The machine stitches serve as a padding and eliminate uneven notches.

REFORM SCHOOL BOYS AND GIRLS

Mrs. Fannie B. Chapman Tells What Is Being Done For Them.

Mrs. Fannie B. Chapman, of Marianna, sends The Journal a clipping from the Marianna Times-Courier which contains an account of the big Christmas dinner given by the citizens of Marianna and others to the inmates of the reform school at that place. It also tells of the work being done to make life happier for the little unfortunates who are being cared for by the State. Mrs. Chapman then writes: "The object of this is to let the public know that we are trying to help these boys and how we try to help. Mr. Belch brings a wagon load of them to town to church almost every Sunday. They rotate in the churches, attending the Methodist at one time, Baptist at another and next the Presbyterian. "Of course Mr. Belch places them in the rear of the congregation and at the close of the service they stand in their places till the crowd has passed out, but many ladies and gentlemen halt and shake hands with all in reach and tell them they hope they enjoyed the service and will come next Sunday. "During the Culpepper ten days' meeting here, I am told they came every day. I could not attend myself, but I saw quite a number received and baptized into the Methodist church. Previous to that time there had been revival services at the Baptist church and I think four joined that church. "Now it seems to me as it does to many of our gentlemen as well as ladies, that a sort of Sunday uniform ought to be provided for the boys who thus proclaim a determination to lead new and better lives; different from the "prison garb," a badge of dishonor. It cannot be at all conducive to their self respect to be branded as criminals in that crowd of well dressed boys and girls. Some of them are not there because of offenses against law and order, but because they had no homes or proper care takers and their city authorities sent them to the school to be cared for and educated and taught to work, or in other words, to keep them from becoming criminals. "The State cannot furnish this extra uniform of some other than the blue they wear at work. We are asking this for the white boys. If the colored people desire a like addition, let them furnish it. The colored boys cannot be permitted outside the grounds, lest there should be an escape attempted. "We desire to have white or light colored shirts and brown coats at least with like pants to match, but pants are not so conspicuous in the church as coats and shirts with caps to match the coats. "This can only be done with consent of the proper authorities. I know, but I consulted Senator W. H. Milton about it and he said he thought there would not be the slightest objection to the plan and for himself he approved it, and would willingly assist in procuring the uniforms. "Before any move is made in the matter other than public discussion, and we hope 'everybody will speak out in this meeting,' the consent of the powers that be must be obtained. Will you kindly aid us in this beneficent enterprise? I feel assured that your interest in the uplifting of all the youth of our land will prompt you to do all in your power for a cause so good as this. "Very sincerely, "FANNIE B. CHAPMAN."

A Worthy Object.

The work which Mrs. Chapman proposes and describes is a very worthy one and should call for the assistance of every person who is able to give it. Too Much Face.
