Sugar Cane Culture in Florida

John Thomas Porter, of Grand Ridge, in Louisiana Planter.

We read with interest the reports from your several corespondents regarding the crop prospects, and fear that you are going to have a heavy yield of immature cane and a low yield of sugar, with comparatively low prices. It is doubtless known to most of your readers that there is no sugar now made in Florida and the growing of cane and the making of syrup is on a small scale, compared with Louisiana; but it has a steady growth, and greatly improved prices.

The Cohassett Syrup Company of this place has been running for five years, and grinds one hundred to one hundred and fifty acres each season, and has yielded a usual and uniform net profit on the investment of thirty per cent. It is a fact that the finest syrup on the market is made from our West Florida cane, without any clarifying agent, and the crop now brings nearly thirty cents per gallon in barrels to our small farmers. The Cohassett Company expects 23 to 26 gallons good syrup from a ton of cane and sold last year at 33 cents per gallon net, exclusive of cans and crates; and their crop is contracted for by regular customers at that price.

This figures, thus, a minimum yield 23 gallons at 33 cents, equal $7.59. Louisiana cane yields 120 to 160 pounds prime yellow sugar per ton. Allowing a high average, say 150 pounds at 4 5-8 cents per pound, equals $6.92, which shows a balance in favor of syrup of fifty-seven cents per ton of cane, and expense of operating and cost of plant makes it largely in our favor.

This is a realization which we had not expected a few years ago, from the fact that our cane has but a small amount above one per cent of glucose, and so rich in sucrose, we longed for money and men to put up central factories for us. For the present, at least, this necessity is removed, and it allows the putting in of small mills on most any plantation, and thus increase the growth of cane, and if bye and bye the syrup trade is overdone, we will then have sufficient cane for the sugar factory of larger proportions and the small syrup mills can go further back into the interior, and possibly still be remunerative.

We have none of the expense of ditching and draining, and no complaints from excessive rains and but little loss from excessive drouths. We have never seen the fields boggy in the harvesting season. Our subsoil is a mixture of clay and sand of about 20 per cent clay to 80 per cent of sand, which in excessive rains, late or early, becomes soft, and allows the excess to pass away rapidly, but in dry weather becomes hard enough, and is close enough to the surface to arrest the summer showers, and allow the quick return of the moisture to the rootlets, and in time of greatest drought, this subsoil is so porous that the moisture is drawn from the deep bowels of the earth, and hence this soil stands the extreme of wet or dry, the best of any we have ever known.

Our soil never becomes so hard that it cannot be broken up with a good two-horse or mule team at the rate of two acres per day. We plant tolerably deep, and cover lightly, and as the canes begin to sprout we cultivate lengthwise and crosswise with the "Halleck Weeder," and continue this process a half dozen times or until the cane is 20 to 24 inches high, which puts the ground in the best of tilth, absolutely free from grass between rows or stalks, and in best condition for the two-horse cultivators, and obviates the necessity of "the man with the hoe."

Expert cane growers of your state have freely admitted that two acres of cane can be cultivated here with the labor of one in Louisiana.

The item of water for personal and family use is sometimes important to white farmers. Everywhere over this section fine, pure, soft well water is found at a usual depth of thirty feet below the surface, and that below this perfect subsoil, nature's perfect filter; but another important fact is that artesian water as pure and soft as the surface, and free from all minerals, is found at a usual depth of one hundred and fifty feet, and under 80 to 100 feet of solid rock.

Mr. Editor, we would not detract from Louisiana sugar growing, but you have now large factories and a large number of small or tenant growers, who are also expert in manufacture of syrup and sugar who could combine together and get lands and operate a factory for syrups within themselves, and be vastly more independent, have all the profits of growing and manufacturing and soon be amongst the big men of this new country. West Florida wants cane growers and sugar makers and offers big opportunities for them.

Sunflower Philosophy.

A farmer would rather drive 25 miles than write a letter.

"I have a fine head of curly hair," said a man today, "but it never gets me anything. Plenty of bald men succeed better."

It is an awfully good thing for a man when he gets caught the first time he does wrong.

The longer we live, the more we admire a plain, modest gentleman, and the less we care for a genius.

If a man is poor it is observed much sooner when he begins to show signs of insanity than if he is rich.

Children act very badly sometimes, but parents never dream of having them sent to insane asylums. Cases are reported every day of children having their parents caged up for acting foolish.

It is getitng so that a man can't rest secure in the possession of his rainy day fund so long as anything is left in either him or his wife that the doctors can cut out.

Most men who die prematurely die either of stomach or kidney trouble, the result of overeating or overdrinking. Women live longer than men; about half the women "diet." If the men don't do more of it, there will not be enough men left after awhile to hold an election.

"Rags are royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake." This is the declaration of one of the lithograph characters hanging up around town. As a matter of fact, there is no reason why anyone should wear rags for virtue's sake. Virtue can always afford to dress reasonably well.—Atchison, (Kan.) Globe.

For Sore Feet.

"I have found Buckien's Arnica Salve to be the proper thing to use for sore feet, as well as for healing burns, sores, cuts, and all manner of abrasions." writes Mr. W. Stone, of East Poland, Maine. It is the proper thing too for piles. Try it! Sold under guarantee at all druggists. 25c.

YOUNG AMERICA.

Little Jr., aged 4, was playing out in the yard, when suddenly he came rushing into the house, crying out: "Oh, mamma! come quick! Come and see this big bug; he is taking his trousers off!"

He had found a locust coming out of its old shell.

Schoolmistress (endeavoring to impress upon the class the meaning of the word "cuticle")—Now, Polly Johnson, tell me what it is with which my face and hands are covered. Back came the answer with startling promptitude.—"Freckles, miss."—Tit-Bits.

NORWEGIAN STEAMER WAS CAUGHT IN THE HURRICANE

By Associated Press.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 10.—The Norwegian steamer Trafalgar, Thorsen master, of the Munson steamship line, reached here today after being storm swept from stem to stern and her crew exhausted from their experience with a tropical hurricane encountered in the Gulf of Mexico, off the coast of Cuba.

The steamer fought out the hurricane for many hours, the covers of the life boats being blown from their fastenings and some of the light upper works being damaged and everything moveable being tossed about like chips. Captain Thorsen, who has followed the sea for many years, says that it was the worst storm he ever experienced, the sea being mountain high. When the steamer left Cienfuegoes the storm was raging along the Cuban coast. No one was injured aboard the Trafalgar, but it was a miracle that they were not. Fears are entertained here for the safety of vessels that were in that vicinity.

FINE LECTURE ON THE BIBLE

Was Delivered at Lutheran Church—Services at the Churches To-Day.

Last Sunday night's lecture on "How We Got Our Bibble," at the Universalist church, was listened to by an interested congregation and the many beautiful lantern pictures thrown on the screen of the temples and monuments of Egypt and Assyria confirming Biblical history, pleased and instructed the people gathered there nightily. The lecture for tonigat wid also be illustrated with many lantern slides thrown on the screen, showing the way in which one Bible text has come down to us, the romance of the finding of our oldest manuscripus, and their importance in our English Bible.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Special music will be rendered at this service.
