Recasting the Criminal Law.

Attorney General Benjamin F. Butler is about to make a radical change in the criminal laws. In his proposed bill he is buying into the idea of the "progressive" police, a distinguished police officer and a civil libertarian. It is his belief that the criminal law is an instrument of social control and that its purpose is to prevent crime, not to punish criminals.

The bill he is planning to introduce is designed to replace the old, harsh, and punitive laws with a system of rehabilitation and education. He believes that the old system of imprisonment is a failure and that a better system can be developed.

The bill will provide for the establishment of new prisons, where criminals will be taught trades and skills that will enable them to support themselves when they are released. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new schools, where criminals will be taught the values of hard work and the importance of education.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new clinics, where criminals will be treated for their addictions and mental disorders. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new hospitals, where criminals will be treated for their physical injuries.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new homes, where criminals will be given the chance to start a new life. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new schools, where criminals will be taught the values of hard work and the importance of education.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new clinics, where criminals will be treated for their addictions and mental disorders. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new hospitals, where criminals will be treated for their physical injuries.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new homes, where criminals will be given the chance to start a new life. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new schools, where criminals will be taught the values of hard work and the importance of education.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new clinics, where criminals will be treated for their addictions and mental disorders. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new hospitals, where criminals will be treated for their physical injuries.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new homes, where criminals will be given the chance to start a new life. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new schools, where criminals will be taught the values of hard work and the importance of education.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new clinics, where criminals will be treated for their addictions and mental disorders. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new hospitals, where criminals will be treated for their physical injuries.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new homes, where criminals will be given the chance to start a new life. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new schools, where criminals will be taught the values of hard work and the importance of education.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new clinics, where criminals will be treated for their addictions and mental disorders. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new hospitals, where criminals will be treated for their physical injuries.

The bill will also provide for the establishment of new homes, where criminals will be given the chance to start a new life. The bill will also provide for the establishment of new schools, where criminals will be taught the values of hard work and the importance of education.