SOUTHLAND.

O Southland! loveliest land bencath
the bright, blue-bending skies!
O, land most passionate this side of the gates of Paradise!
A sense of gladness unconfined was mine when first I set My foot upon thy flowery sod; it lingers with me yet.
I love thy immemorial hills by humankind untrod;
The rose-lights of their raptured
heights touched by the kiss of God;
The crash and wirble jubilant of cataracts that leap
And flash and shimmer thru the vines that trail from steep to steep.
I love thy valley lands; they hold a beauty never sung,
As sweet, as pure, as undefiled as when the world was young.
As then the ripe, wild roses trail their scarlet mists of bloom,
And sparkle sunlit lily bells with
amber hearts illume;
As then the rivers roll and surge—
proud, passionate and free, Thru sweeps of glad savanna lands
to kiss the golden sea.
I love thy wild and waving woods
where in the glooms of green
The miracle magnolia flowers like fallen moons are seen, Where mock birds twitter, pipe and
trill thru long resplendent days, Till leaf and flower seem to dance in rythm with their lays!
Cradle of Jefferson, Calhoun and Davis—knightliest one!
Whose name, whose high, white name
will shine and circle with the sun
Until humanity no more its immortelles will twine,
Nor offer up bright votive blood at Freedom's altar-shrine!
O land of roses and romance! of sunshine and of song!
The Grand All-Hail Hereafter will
avenge thy ruth and wrong;
We can hear its portents thundering
and see its flashing sign
As pearls into a purer light a day that is divine.
Down, faint hearts! Down, false souls! at least this hour is not for thee,
Nor this the place for recreants to crook the ready knee.
Avaunt! nor thus insult our faith,
our Memories, our Dead:
Remember heroes trod the spot
whereon this night we tread!

—Will Hubbard-Kernan.

EXAMINATION IS CONTINUED UNTIL SEPT. 1

PASSENGER RATE HEARING GOES OVER TO ALLOW L. & N. COUNSEL TO MAKE EXAMINATION OF EXHIBITS SUBMITTED BY THE COMMISSION.

Special Examiner Wilson yesterday granted the request of counsel for the Louisville & Nashville in the passenger rate hearing for a continuance until Sept. 1, and as a result no testimony was taken yesterday, the hearing adjourning immediately after the announcement by the examiner.

The request for a continuance was made Thursday when the attorneys for the railroad commission submitted eight lengthy exhibits as a part of the testimony. Inashmuch as these exhibits form an important part of the testimony counsel for the railroad desired time in which to examine them in order that their cross examination might be conducted intelligently. It is probable that when the hearing again commences it will be at Tallahassee, where some state officials are to testify. Then the examiner will go to Louisville, to hear testimony in rebuttal.

NARROW ESCAPE OF YOUNG MAN

STEPHEN HAGAN BADLY INJURED AT CARYVILLE IN UNLOADING LOGS.

Special to the Journal.

Caryville, Aug. 20.—Last Monday while engaged with a crew of men unloading the log train of the Geo. E. Wood Lumber Co. at Caryville, Stephen Hagan, a young white man, came near losing his life. His foot slipped and he fell under a sawlog just as it was leaving the car. The log passed over the body of the young man, breaking his collar bone and bruising him severely. Those who were present and saw the accident say the spectacle was frightful, and it is wondered how he escaped instant death.

For the past few days the hot wave has caused the thermometer at Caryville to reach 100 degrees. Yesterday (Wednesday) at 5 p. m., it reached 101 in the shade. No damage to gardens or crops has been reported. This morning (Friday) however, there have been copious showers since 5 o'clock a. m., and the thermometer went down to 80 degrees, which has wonderfully improved the condition of things generally.

The Woodmen of the world under the direction of District Deputy Broome have completed their organization at Caryville and a camp at this place is an assured fact. With the old members and those who have joined recently, the camp has a large following to commence with.

PSEUDO-COP THE CHARGE

YOUNG STRANGER FOUND WITH GUN AND HANDCUFFS AND OFFICERS ARE LOOKING UP DATA REGARDING THE MAN.

A young man named G. P. Hubbard, who does not reside in Pensacola, has been taken in charge by the Pensacola police on the charge of carying concealed weapons, and when searched, the statement was made in the city court yesterday, a pistol was taken from him. A stiff penalty will be his fate unless he can prove that he had authority to carry the gun. He was arrested by Officer Simmons, but yesterday desired that his case be continued. Such request was granted.

The arrest of Hubbard was a sort of termination of a search made for a party who was alleged to have been representing himself as an officer of the internal revenue department and was collecting funds on the strength of such a claim. One case came to the department where the party had held up a countryman and demanded that he pay a dollar or go to jail "for that little something he had done." The rural gentleman paid over the money without murmur and then started out to find some bluecoat to have the man arrested. To the chief later the rural man pointed out a man who had been asleep all day, and who was on night duty. He afterward acknowledged his error and said he would later find the right man. This was only one specific case out of many reported, and when it was reported that Hubbard carried or had a gun, he was arrested. He is not, however, charged with any connection with the other crooked business practised by an apparent stranger here.

The Journal's Daily Fashion Feature

CHILD'S FROCK.

A child's pink linen frock is sketched above. A shaped panel, wide at the shoulders, with heart-shaped opening for guimpe and narrowing at the waist, forms the front. Shaped shoulder pieces, which disappear at the waist line beneath wide pleats of the material, add a graceful line to the frock. The little skirt is side-pleated and the belt passes through straps at the sides. An exceedingly novel trimming is used on the little garment; this is a design of flowers and leaves, the flowers being formed of lace medallions appliqued and the stems and leaves embroidered in white.
