WIND MILLS AND PROGRESS.

It is interesting in this age of new ideas, when steam and electricity are so much in evidence, to notice how some of the older methods of obtaining power are still profitably employed. Take for example the use of the windmill. Nobody knows when this useful device was invented. It is rumored that the old Romans knew of its use, and there is another story that the Saracens introduced it into Europe. But while the early history of the wind-mill is shrouded in uncertainty we do know that it came to play so important a part in the little kingdom of Holland as to be considered a national necessity in keeping that courageous nation out of the hands of the sea.

In Holland wind-mills are used to get rid of the water; in America they are employed to produce it. Out on the great plains in Kansas, Dakota, Iowa and the adjoining States, and ideal place for wind-mills, where the country lies flat, and the winds sweep uninterrupted for miles, the landscape is fairly dotted with them. They are all sizes and kinds, some tall and graceful, others placed low and resembling huge paddle wheels with the lower half housed and the upper half catching the wind. A number of the larger ones grind corn or do other similar work, but the majority are engaged in pumping water for the needs of stock and the irrigation of the land from the exhaustless supply below the ground. Of course each pump can bring up but a small amount of water at a stroke, but it is astonishing to see how much this little aggregates in the course of a year. An estimate has recently been made of the capacity of a wind-mill running ten hours a day for six moths from an interesting report on windmills and their use, issued this year by the United States Geological Survey, which is studying the great plains to make available these rich underground water resources. It was found that an average wheel, twelve feet in diameter, with the wind blowing sixteen miles an hour, is capable of pumping 1,920 gallons an hour, 19,200 in a day of ten hours, 576,000 each month, and 3,456,000 gallons in six months. This is the work of only one wind-mill. Add to it the work of hundreds and thousands of others, and realize the vast amount of water brought into use by this means.

It is difficult to appreciate the significance of this work and the value of the wind-mill as a factor in the development of the country. It means in the first place an abundance of water for stock and irrigating purposes, and water always means a great increase in the productiveness of the land. This is followed by an increase in values and the possibilities of larger population, bigger crops and better prices, and more business and increased earnings for the transportation lines. This is what the wind-mills are helping to do in America.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

The Tallahassee Water Works Company wishes to state for the benefit of its water consumers, that the new contracts now being signed are subject to the decisin of the Supreme Court on appeal from the decision recently made by Judge Malone.

Also that the annual minimum rate for each and every house was ten dollars; however by recent concession of the company, houses of four rooms or less will be served for the minimum rate of six dollars.

In any and all cases a minimum charge will be made for each house, regardless of how many houses are supplied by a single meter.

The company will not take advantage of their right to collect the minimum charges from the first of April last, but said rate has been put into effect from July first.

Failure on the part of a consumer to sign contract in no way releases them from their obligations for the minimum charges as long as said parties continue to use the water.

Very Like a Scandal.

"This dollar that I hold in my hand," he said, "reminds me of a deep, dark, scandalous secret."

"Oh, George!" his wife exclaimed, dropping her hands in her lap and bending forward eagerly, "tell me about it."

"Yes," he went on, "it reminds me of a secret of that kind, because it's so hard to keep."

And then she refused to speak to him for three hours.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.
