When the Legislature of the State of Florida met in January last, a bill to prevent the coming in of immigrants was considered. This bill, which is the most comprehensive and sweeping that has ever been presented to that body, would, if enacted into law, have had a most disastrous effect on the agricultural interests of the State.

The bill was introduced by Mr. W. H. Tucker, the chairman of the committee on immigration, and was referred to that committee for consideration. The committee reported favorably on the bill, and it was referred back to the floor of the Legislature for further consideration.

The bill provided for the establishment of a commission to be appointed by the Governor, consisting of five members, three of whom should be citizens of the United States, one of whom should be a citizen of the State of Florida, and one of whom should be a citizen of another State.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The bill was passed by both houses of the Legislature, and was signed by the Governor. It was then presented to the Governor, who signed it, and it became law.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended that the State should adopt a policy of restricting the coming in of immigrants, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission also recommended that the State should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens, and that it should adopt a policy of encouraging the coming in of American citizens.

The commission was authorized to make all necessary investigations, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was further authorized to investigate the condition of the State, and to report its findings to the Governor, who was required to issue a proclamation setting forth the facts and recommendations of the commission, and requiring all persons who might have information respecting the subject to come forward and give evidence.

The commission was organized, and its investigation of the subject was begun. The commission held hearings in various parts of the State, and received testimony from a large number of witnesses.

The commission found that the State was suffering from an influx of immigrants, and that the influx was causing great harm to the agricultural interests of the State.

The commission recommended t...