Daytona Beach sets tentative tax

By Wayne Grant
 wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — The Daytona Beach City Commission set the tentative property tax rate for next year at $6.53 per $1,000 in assessed value at its last meeting. The amount may go lower but may not go higher at the final vote in September.

Last year's rate was $5.42. The $6.53 millage rate is the "rolled back" rate for next year, which will bring in the same amount of money as last year, excluding new construction.

Michael Robertson, chief financial officer, told the commission that gross taxable value in the city is estimated at $4.3 billion, compared to $5.3 billion last year.

The commission will have budget workshops in August before making the final vote September 23.

City Commissioner Shiela McKay-Vaughan said she thought taxes were too high and would like to go on record as saying that the taxes should be lowered.

Mayor Glenn Ritchey said he would like to go on record as saying there should be no taxes, which evoked laughter in the room.

"I don't know how we'd pay the police and firefighters, though," he said.

Commissioner Pam Woods said she would not support the resolution to approve the tentative rate of $6.53 because she thinks they should start with a lower figure before the workshops.

The commission approved the resolution with Ms. McKay-Vaughan and Ms. Woods dissenting.

Banner planes lose when shuttle launches — or doesn't

By Wayne Grant
 wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — When the space shuttle is scheduled to fly, a local business owner loses money.

For several hours before a shuttle flight, air traffic restrictions are in place in a 40-mile circle around Cape Canaveral and that means banner plane operator Remy Collins is grounded.

Mr. Collins said he is losing valuable summer business, especially when the shuttle is scheduled and then scrubbed several days in a row as it was before the last flight.

Mr. Collins said another week like that and he could go out of business.

"I lost $10,000 last Sunday when the shuttle was scheduled," he said.

Mr. Collins said the restricted hours have been extended in recent years.

"They've increased the hours that I can't fly," he said. "It used to be a couple of hours before the Shuttle flight. Now it's eight hours."

Another factor is that the shuttle has recently been scheduled in early evening. When they fly in the morning, the banner planes can get off the ground after the launch.

The restricted zone extends north to Daytona Beach. Mr. Collins takes off from an airport south of New Smyrna Beach.

Mr. Collins said he has spoken to the FAA and they told him the rules are issued by NASA.

Mr. Collins said he would like to talk to NASA about making some arrangement so he could fly during the flights but his calls have not been returned.

His business is not the only one to suffer, said Mr.

Collins, pointing out that the advertisers are not getting their message to the public.

Dick Neeland, owner of Inlet Harbor Restaurant, said that banner planes are one of his most important advertising tools.

"When you're on the beach and a banner plane flies over, what do you do ... you read the banner. It's like a magnet," he said. "I can tell you in spring and summer without question it's the most effective advertising we do."

Mr. Collins said the local economy benefits from his business and he employs seven people.

Katherine Bergen, a spokeswoman for FAA in Atlanta, said it would be very dangerous for people to fly in the vicinity of the shuttle.

The FAA, she said, enforces the restrictions at the request of NASA.

Ms. Bergen confirmed that for a recent flight, restrictions were enforced from 10:58 a.m. until 7:30 p.m.

A message left at a NASA communications office in Washington, D.C. was not immediately returned.

Airport noise task force conducts test flights and listens carefully

By Wayne Grant
 wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

ORMOND BEACH — Attempts to solve noise problems around Ormond Beach Municipal Airport got off the ground recently.

In a recent workshop, members of the Aircraft Noise Abatement Task Force stationed themselves at various locations in neighborhoods around the airport.

Pilots from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University then took off from the airport, and flew different routes so the task force members could assess how different flight patterns affected noise.

Two days later, the task force met to discuss the results.

Those on the ground noted an improvement when the airplanes veered away from neighborhoods.

"We could sit and talk," said Dave Nichols. "Normally we can't do that."

Dr. Frank Ayers, chairman of the Flight Training Dept. at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, said directions could be provided to pilots to have them follow certain routes.

"Everything we've talked about is easy to do," he said. "It's not an issue of procedures, it's an issue of implementation."

Dr. Ayers suggested that all pilots be given concise, illustrated instructions to follow correct flight patterns.

Dr. Ayers serves on the task force and coordinated the planes and pilots for the workshop.

Residents at the meeting mentioned other problems around the airport.

After one resident complained about aircraft flying 100 to 200 feet over his house, airport manager Steven Lichliter said the resident would need to get the number of the airplane and report it to the FAA.

The resident responded that he couldn't read the number because he was ducking.

Another resident asked how could you get the number

Help still available for flood victims

By Wayne Grant
wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — The flood waters may be gone but they are not forgotten. Many people are still struggling to put their lives back together, Dan Sandz of Project Hope said recently.

In addition to problems in their homes such as mold, many people have been emotionally traumatized, Mr. Sandz said.

Free disaster counseling is available to all Volusia County residents whether or not they have applied to FEMA, he said.

Project Hope is a program that helps survivors cope with the aftermath of disasters and is funded by FEMA.

Project Hope counselors inform people where they can go for services and also provide emotional support.

"People don't know where to turn so we sit with them and calm them down," he said.

Vernon Burton, a city commissioner in Lake Helen, is serving in the local Project Hope office in the capacity of a crisis counselor. He recently addressed the Daytona Beach City Commission to inform them about Project Hope activities.

Mr. Burton said if a person has been turned down for FEMA they should apply for an SBA loan. He said it's very important to follow this process because if a person is turned down by SBA, they could qualify for a $30,000 grant which does not have to be repaid.

At press time the deadline for applying to FEMA was July 27, but Mr. Sandz said it may be extended.

Mr. Burton said counselors have been canvassing the neighborhoods and have identified a problem with mold.

"I've walked into houses and the mold just knocked me backward," he said. "After awhile, a homeowner can become immune to the smell of mold."

Mr. Burton said the city will probably see an increase in mold infestation in coming months.

It was also pointed out the workshop only tested planes leaving in one direction.

City Manager Joyce Shanahan said she believes the task force will make a positive difference.

"I'm excited about where we are going," she said. "I'm proud of how we're working together. I know we need to get the cooperation of the flight schools."

The task force was started earlier this year after complaints from area residents about noise. The panel is composed of citizens from surrounding neighborhoods, City staff, and representatives from the aviation industry.

Board to discuss artificial reef, dogs

By Wayne Grant
wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — A plan to prevent beach erosion and the pros and cons of allowing dogs on the beach will be two of the topics at the August 11 meeting of the Volusia County Beach Advisory Board.

The board heard a proposal on an artificial reef system last March that would protect beach sand from being washed away.

Since then, an environmental impact study has been done and it will be presented at the board meeting.

Additionally, Bob Ernest, an environmental consultant for Volusia County, will be available to answer questions.

In the plan, estimated to cost $5 million, giant bags of sand would be placed on the ocean floor.

Tony Sopotnick, liaison between the board and the Volusia County Council, said the cost of the project and permitting would be a problem.

"This system has never been used in the United States, which means monitoring would be required, adding to the cost," he said.

The artificial reef system has only been installed in Australia and a few other places around the world.

The company presenting the plan for the reef is ASR America, a marine consulting and research company in Cocoa Beach.

Allowing dogs on the beach is a hot-button issue, Mr. Sopotnick said. "People are either very much for it or very much against it."

Currently, dogs are allowed at the two inlet parks, Lighthouse Point Park in Ponce Inlet and Smyrna Dunes Park in New Smyrna Beach.

The board is composed of community members who make recommendations to the Volusia County Council on beach issues. They meet at 5:30 p.m. at the Lifeguard Headquarters and Administration Center at 515 S. Atlantic Ave., Daytona Beach.

Volusia County deputies collecting back-to-school supplies

The Volusia County Sheriff's Office will be helping dozens of less fortunate children head back to school.

The drive is an extension of the 21-year-old "100 Deputies/100 Kids" holiday program.

The school supplies will be distributed to students identified through their schools as being economically disadvantaged.

All distribution is conducted through the local school system. Parents shouldn't contact the sheriff's office to ask to be placed on the distribution list.

The goal of the drive is to collect enough supplies to have glue, scissors, pens, pencils, notebooks and paper to supply economically disadvantaged youths at eight Volusia County schools.

These items may be dropped off at any Sheriff's district office in New Smyrna Beach or Holly Hill.

For more information, call (386) 254-4602 in the Daytona Beach area or (386) 423-3352 in the New Smyrna Beach area.

Supplies will be collected until August 14.

My job isn't about letting go. It's about letting families live in the moment.

At Halifax Health - Hospice of Volusia/Flagler, we celebrate the life of every patient we serve. Although our patients are passing through the last phase of their lives, we see it as the most meaningful phase of all. Our goal is to manage their pain and medical care so that families can relax and share the quality time they need. It gives patients the chance to reflect and pass along wisdom that will live on long after they have gone. After five years with Halifax Health - Hospice, I could write a book about everything I've learned from my patients. Whether it's through words, actions or just quiet strength, they have all taught me something I will never forget. While every hospice experience is different, many families have told me that spending those final days together brought them closer than ever. That's one reason I feel so good about working with Halifax Health - Hospice - and why I believe so strongly in the beauty of the hospice experience.

Athletic fee worries area coaches

By Andreas Butler
For Hometown News

VOLUSIA COUNTY — It came as no surprise to area high school coaches that student athletes will now have to “pay to play.”

“It’s been talked about for a while,” said Terry Anthony of Mainland High School. “It is tough times and we have to go through drastic measures to find funding.”

Last week, Volusia County Schools announced that starting in August students will have to pay a $75 fee to participate in athletics. An additional $25 will be charged if a student engages in a second sport, but there will be no charge for a third.

“With the loss of millions of dollars to our budget, we had to find ways to make up the difference,” said Nancy Wait, public information officer for Volusia County Schools.

The school district is projected to lose $19.1 million in this year’s budget. The fee is expected to cover $300,000 in athletic costs.

Mr. Anthony, who is the offensive coordinator for Mainland’s football team and serves as head coach for both girl’s basketball and girl’s track, and other coaches are taking a wait and see approach to what affect the fees will have on participation.

“I hope that it won’t resort to losing any kids,” said Keshia Rentz, director of cheerleading operations and JV cheerleading coach at Spruce Creek High School. “Some parents may be discouraged because of the fee, but both the student and parent need to do research and see what assistance is available.”

Ms. Rentz said participation in sports helps many students.

“If it wasn’t for sports a lot of kids would get into trouble,” she said. “Many kids focus more in school because of athletics.”

Seabreeze High School head football coach Marc Beach said he and his staff will do everything they can to keep kids playing.

“I think eventually it (the fee) will hurt us, but we will see what happens,” Coach Beach said. “Some coaches aren’t too happy. We have to find ways to get the fee paid for those who will have trouble paying it.”

Mr. Anthony said his school will do the same.

“We have some ideas floating around that can bring money to our programs and schools,” he said. “We will try to go get sponsors. I am accustomed to doing such things for the basketball team.”

Ms. Wait said that several fundraisers are planned for the upcoming academic year including a holiday show in December and a sports jamboree. Schools can also raise funds to cover the fee.

Last year businesses and donors raised $100,000 to save junior varsity sports, cheerleading and athletic competitions.

Private schools in the area will not be affected by the measure, but at least one school is looking at an additional fee for athletics.

“We have discussed a possibility of having a $30 fee on athletics at our school for the past several months but it has yet to be agreed upon,” said Andy Price, Athletic director and Head football coach at Warner Christian Academy in South Daytona. “If we do decide to do that, we would raise the money for the kids by some fundraiser and they would not have to (pay it) out of pocket.”

The next School Board budget meeting is scheduled for July 28th at 5 p.m. in DeLand.

City shouldn't allow dogs in garden

Ormond Beach has spent a lot of money fixing up Rockefeller Gardens along the river. It's beautiful. The best I've seen in Florida.

I would like the city to put up signs that there is a $100 fine for people letting dogs in there.

I hope they would enforce it.

Ormond Beach lacks enforcement for a lot of laws.

Politicians selling their votes for free campaign ads.

I have seen some very disturbing politics in play over the past month, and it is very upsetting.

I have seen television ads for Suzanne Kosmas and Alan Grayson paid for by the healthcare, pharmaceutical, and clean energy industries.

These ads speak about what great people Suzanne Kosmas and Alan Grayson are, and how they voted for new health care and clean energy.

If they are so great, why are private industries and lobbyists paying for what amounts to early campaign ads?

If they are doing such a great job, shouldn't they be communicating with the people they represent and informing them of all the great work they are doing? It sounds more to me like they sold their votes to the healthcare, pharmaceutical, and clean energy industries in exchange for some free early campaigning.

What a despicable and unethical group. I am embarrassed to say I supported them in the last election, but I certainly will not make the same mistake twice.

Taxes shouldn't increase

There was an article recently in the Daytona Beach News-Journal concerning property taxes in Volusia County.

How taxes could increase or even remain the same with values plummeting is beyond belief.

People have been or are about to be laid off and some are having to choose daily whether to eat or buy medicine.

James Dinneen, our county manager, should be removed from office. This man has shown he is not in touch with reality.

In response to: 'How can I find the American dream?'

I inherited 10 acres in Samsula, which went through probate and was decided to me by the court. When I was ready to put a home on the property, the county of Volusia told me I did not have vested rights in my property.

I had to pay more than $100 to make an application for the rights to my own property, which I was informed at the time that I would be denied and would have to go before the county council to plead my case. Of course, this process would take about three months and more money.

After several weeks of trying to figure out what to do, I contacted the councilperson for my district and explained the situation. He didn't see how the county could do this to me. Thanks to him the matter was resolved in several days instead of three months.

You may ask, "Did you get your money back?" Of course not, when I went to pay the impact fee, I was informed I had another charge because they sent someone out to the house an extra time. That process delayed getting the certificate of occupancy.

What should have taken three months at the most to finish took six months.

So I'm another person speaking up about the way Volusia County deals with individuals who are trying to build a home.

I too understand about certain codes and regulations and that many are for our protection, but there is a lot of miscommunication. One department tells you one thing and another tells something different and guess who pays the extra costs? We do.

Don't blame Bush or Obama

The economic situation started with President Bill Clinton's administration with Barney Frank and the Democratic Congress trying to get Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac to take care of all the poor people buying $100,000 houses they couldn't afford.

Seat belt law violates my civil liberties

I just can't take one more minute of listening to the malarkey that is going around in the newspapers, on the radio and on television.

Just how stupid do the "powers that be" think the American people are?

I am so sick of hearing about how the state of Florida cares about my personal life and that they are obligating me to put on my seatbelt or risk getting fined.

Is this not America? Why am I having this forced upon me? It is a violation of my civil liberties.

Am I hurting anyone else in deciding not to wear my seatbelt? Am I putting anyone other than myself in any danger by not wearing my seatbelt?

Now, I am all for having children wear their seat belts. I may even consider making a passenger who I am driving wear a seatbelt. Not for his or her safety, but for liability issues if we were involved in an accident. After all, isn't that how most of these laws come to be in the first place?

My argument here is, if I am driving to and from work, to and from the grocery store or to and from a friend's house, it is my prerogative and my freedom of choice to decide if I want to wear a seatbelt.

This is just another gimmick to add to the city and state's treasure chest, all under the guise of looking out for my well being, and nothing more.

If they are so worried about saving lives, why does the state say that you are not obligated to wear a helmet when riding a motorcycle?

Are the lives of motorcycle drivers less important than automobile drivers?

And for that matter, why not ticket and fine anyone smoking a cigarette?

After all, these poor souls are not only putting their own lives in danger, but the secondhand smoke is also endangering the people around them. Why not stop them inside their homes or on the street? Where does this all end?

This is total bunk, and I think people should write their representatives and get it thrown into the garbage bin where it belongs.

Jennifer Genovese
Ormond Beach, FL

Watch for pedestrians

I saw a tourist throw shells at a passing car on A1A, and I applauded. Why?

Because many drivers in Ormond Beach have no respect for pedestrians, and speed up to cut them off. I would also say that the pedestrian had every right to throw whatever they liked, since he was in a pedestrian crosswalk, and the car in question nearly hit him, crossing just in front of his toes. Try crossing in front of a pedestrian in a crosswalk in Georgia, and you will be fined and sent to traffic school.

So I say go ahead and throw whatever you like.

If you break a windshield, so be it. If it goes to court, you will win. Your lawyer will say, "Judge, my client was trying to call attention to himself, since obviously the driver didn't see him in the crosswalk, and was speeding at the time." What will the judge say?

"Case dismissed."

Don't blame President George W. Bush or President Barack Obama.

In response to: 'Would you vote for president Obama again?'

To the individual that responded to the person who wasn't happy with the current President's performance so far;

It is obvious that the writer is quite liberal, judging by the tone and text choices of their response to the original writer.

In their response, the author whimsically claims that "Bush put us in this mess."

Never once does the author actually consider the fact that during the period of his last term, Bush had a Democratic majority in Washington D.C. to set the tone for the economy.

One man cannot create this dismal situation alone. I wouldn't even credit President Obama with that.

In addition, the writer fictionally classifies President Reagan as occupying the "worst president" rating.

I would certainly like to know what poll or text the individual is quoting from.

Obviously this is just an unread opinion on the writer's part as I have found absolutely no learned source of reference that even comes close to that.

Historical scholars were polled at least three times in recent history and placed President Reagan's rating between No. 6 and No. 10 of the 44 presidents of our nation.

President Bill Clinton, in the same polls, turns out to be No. 15 and No. 24.

These polls are readily available online to anyone desiring to actually do a little research.

The printed response and editorial from this individual is a typical example of many of the 54 percent of the voters that placed the man we have now in our nation's highest office with little service under his belt, with the exception of "community organizer."

President doesn't need more time

For those who keep saying President Barack Obama needs more time, I think you need to start paying attention to exactly what we are giving him time to do.

This man is not acting like a responsible leader. He is not prioritizing the most important issues that need to be dealt with and working with both parties in Congress to get reasonable legislation passed.

He is taking every far left, socialist idea in the Marxist playbook and ramming them through Congress as fast as he can. He is in a hurry, boys and girls, to get his agenda passed before we can stop him.

Have you noticed that with every issue it is the same story? We have to get this done quickly or the sky will fall. He is trying to scare the American people into believing he is averting tragedy, when in reality these very pieces of legislation are designed to grab as much power as possible and make it more and more difficult for the American people to fight back.

Massive 'stimulus' plans, massive 'bailout plans', massive 'cap and trade' legislation and massive 'health care' legislation, are supposedly 'urgent'? The only thing that is urgent is for the American people to wake up and smell the socialism that "King" Barack is cramming down our throats.

By the way, did you know they have quietly introduced legislation to repeal the 22nd amendment?

Editor's note: According to opencongress.com, over the past six congressional sessions, several members of Congress (of both parties) have introduced resolutions that would repeal the 22nd amendment, which restricts presidential terms to two. The resolutions have never proceeded out of committee.

Wake up middle class America

It is time to put a stop to tax hikes and rate increases on middle class Americans.

We are being decimated by the greed and corruption of our elected officials from the federal, state, county and local governments. We no longer have government "for the people and by the people." It is now "government for the rich by the rich."

Free enterprise is a thing of the past in this country. What we have now is "greed enterprise" at the expense of the people that built this country.

A lot of very expensive American real estate has been sold to China, Japan and the Arab countries. This country built many of the oil fields that are now controlled by the Organization of Petroleum-Exporting Countries, and those countries have held us hostage for decades. Does anyone not remember the gas lines of 1973-1974 or the Iran hostage situation of 1978-1979?

The lawmakers of this country do not work for the little person, but for their own best interest and certainly for those big companies that contribute to their campaign funds. Have you ever hear of kickbacks and lobbyists?

Social Security will not get a cost of living increase until 2013, and it will be a pittance.

You can be certain that these senators and congressmen will give themselves another cost of living every year and at the expense of the taxpayer.

The economy has been going down the tubes for years, and it is no surprise what has happened. I put the blame on these same elected officials who turned away from what was going on in corporate America and letting them get away with big payouts and golden parachutes. Do any of them have a moral conscience?

Let us make this country great again by contacting these elected officials and telling them that you have had enough of tax increases, rate increases and paying twice as much for goods and getting half as much.

Government should do their part by downsizing and getting rid of all the pork and useless spending. It should take care of its own citizens before taking on the rest of the world's problems.

ORMOND BEACH

Visually impaired find help at local center

By Wayne Grant
wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — Loss of vision can be devastating. Fortunately, help is available locally to enable the visually impaired lead fulfilling lives.

Teenagers can attain the skills they need to go to college. Adults can get help with vocational training. Seniors can learn skills for everyday living.

This help can be found at the Center for the Visually Impaired and the Division of Blind Services, which are located on the same campus on Dunn Road.

"If a person has vision problems, this is where they should be," said Ronee Hudson, executive director at CVI.

In terms of employees and services offered, it's the largest blind services campus in the U.S. and includes the largest Braille and Talking Library in the world, she said.

The Division of Blind Services also operates another agency, the Conklin Center for the Blind, on White Street.

Ms. Hudson said teenagers and adults hear about the available services through school or work but many seniors do not know what is available.

In the Independent Living Skills program, seniors learn skills to cope with declining or lost vision.

Instructor Leon Rosen said the sky is the limit for what seniors can learn.

"They find they can do 95 percent of things they did when they had sight," he said. "Woodworking is even possible."

CVI helps visually impaired people to adjust emotionally and psychologically, Ms. Hudson said. Two certified counselors are on staff.

Ms. Hudson said a person with vision loss should not view himself or herself as a blind person, they should think of themselves as a person with skills and talents who happens to be blind.

"If a person loses their sight, they just need to learn a new set of skills," she said.

Ms. Hudson said she sees a big difference in people after they learn to deal with vision loss and meet others with the same problem.

"At first they are very sad and you see tears. By the end they are smiling and laughing," she said.

"We have a family atmosphere here," Ms. Hudson said. "They come here and feel happy."

"We have a family atmosphere here. They come here and feel happy."

Ronee Hudson
executive director at CVI.

Mobility instructor Meghan Althafer agreed that clients are often depressed when they come to the agency.

"We help them understand it's not the end of the world," she said. "They just need to learn a different way of doing things."

The Teen Transition Program teaches clients the skills they need to eventually leave home.

Maggie Meade of Palm Coast graduated from the program and now volunteers at CVI.

Ms. Meade said she loves writing, and learned how to submit articles for publication as well as developing her writing skills.

In the special computer program she uses, a voice tells her what key she is striking. There are several other computer programs that help the visually impaired.

A program called "Jaws" provides a synthetic voice for visually impaired users. The "Blackboard" program allows students to take college classes online.

Adults can get the help they need to pursue a career, or just learn mobility and abilities for daily life.

The Division of Blind Services will provide aid for a person to attend college, if they see a potential for a career.

Adult vocational training is very important, Ms. Hudson said.

"Seventy percent of blind people are unemployed," she said.

"Many employers are reluctant to hire the visually impaired," she said. "There are still a lot of misconceptions about what they can do."

Ms. Hudson said with

Ronee Hudson

training and support from CVI, the visually impaired can be very successful.

"We've had businesses tell us they are the best employees they ever had," Ms. Hudson said.

Ms. Hudson is the perfect example of how someone with vision problems can use available services to have a career.

Ms. Hudson is visually impaired, having limited vision in one eye.

In her home state of New York, she received assistance to obtain a master's degree in rehabilitation for the blind.

"I wanted to help others," she said. "I knew their world and understood their problems."

Ms. Hudson relocated to Florida in 1992 to work at CVI as a mobility specialist. In 1999, she was promoted to director and has seen a lot of growth at the agency, she said.

"In 1999 CVI had three employees and now there are 28," she said.

The local Center for the Visually Impaired is the headquarters for branches in Brevard, Flagler and Putnam counties.

Funding for the center for the Visually Impaired is provided by the United Way of Brevard County, the United Way of Volusia and Flagler Counties, the County of Volusia, the County of Flagler, and the Division of Blind Services.

New Smyrna Beach: lots to do and see

By Jamye Durrance
Durrance@hometownnewsol.com

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — While the allure of white sandy beaches is definitely the main attraction in New Smyrna Beach, the city isn't just a carefree beach town.

There's plenty to do in this quaint city — and you can do it all without digging deep into your wallet.

"(The beach) is not all we have," said Deborah Boyd, executive director of the New Smyrna Beach Visitor's Bureau. "There are so many cool things to do. Most people tell us they didn't know this was here. It's wonderful. They say they are surprised because it is so much Old Florida."

New Smyrna Beach, located just 15 miles south of Daytona Beach, is one of the oldest cities in the state: it was first settled in 1768.

You can take a stroll through the city's rich historical heritage with a visit to the Southeast Volusia Historical Museum, located on Sams Avenue downtown, where admission is free.

Across the street from the museum is Old Fort Park, home of the Turnbull Ruins, which are believed to be the foundation of a personal home owned by Andrew Turnbull, the city's founder.

Another historical site worth checking out is the Sugar Mill Ruins, located just off State Road 44 on the western end of the city.

The sugar mill was built during the early 1800s but was destroyed during the war between the Seminole Indians and the United States.

The city also has a black history museum, located downtown in an old Catholic church that was renovated into the museum in 1999. Admission here is also free.

While you are downtown, be sure to check out Canal Street, the city's historic and shopping district.

Canal Street is home to several antique shops, restaurants and galleries and ends at the Indian River. Merchants there host a classic car night every second Saturday of the month.

At the Marine Discovery Center, located just off the North Causeway, you can either rent a kayak to explore the Indian River Lagoon, the most biologically diverse estuary in North America, or you can take a guided tour with a naturalist. Moonlit tours are also available.

Right next door to the Marine Discovery Center is the city-operated Water Taxi, which carries riders on a two-hour scenic ride from New Smyrna Beach to Ponce Inlet, along the Indian River Lagoon. Along the way, riders can stop off at Flagler Avenue or Ponce Inlet restaurants before getting back on the taxi. The trip costs $15 for adults and $8 for children roundtrip. Sunset cruises are also available.

Another popular destination for visitors is Flagler Avenue, the beachside shopping district.

Starting at the Indian River and ending at the Atlantic Ocean, Flagler Avenue is a half-mile palm tree lined stretch of quaint shops, restaurants, pubs and galleries.

At the end of Peninsula

Avenue, a side street of Flagler Avenue, is Smyrna Dunes Park, a 73-acre park where you can walk the 1.5-mile boardwalk over sandy dunes to the beach. Along the way, you'll get a view of the Ponce Inlet Lighthouse, which is located just across the inlet from New Smyrna Beach, as well as turtles, birds and raccoons in their natural

Ornamental grasses can lend variety to a yard

We are always looking for new ideas or ways to make our gardens look different from our neighbors. One thing I do not see often in local landscapes is ornamental grasses.

Ornamental grasses can give any landscape a distinctive and tropical appearance.

You can use the larger varieties, such as fountain grass, as a centerpiece and plant smaller varieties, such as liriopie, around them. Clusters of these majestic grasses can look awesome in almost any yard.

One of my favorite grasses to use is the perennial fountain grass. Fountain grass is an upright, open-s mound forming grass.

These grasses can be used to accent corner areas, areas around ponds or fountains or in masses in an island. These beautiful plants will peak with flowers during the summer months. They can be purchased at many local garden centers.

Fountain grass will grow in any fertile moist or well-drained soil condition. These plants will do well in sun or partial shade. If they are located in full sun, they will require a bit more water for them to stay perky and majestic.

On the other side of the spectrum is a grass known as liriopie. These specimens are much smaller than fountain grass, but can also be planted in clusters. Liriopie can also be used as border plants around other landscape projects or clusters of larger ornamental grasses. They are extremely hardy and do very well, even if they are ignored.

Liriopie are very versatile and can be planted in a variety of locations. They will withstand both partial and full sun. If you plant liriopie in partial shade, they will tolerate dry conditions quite well. If they are located in an area of more sun, they will require a bit more water. In either case, the plant will require well-drained soil.

Variegated liriopie have an appearance similar to the green liriopie, but they have a white coloring mixed with green. They do not grow quite as high as the green variety and they also do not hold up as well in full sun. They also require a bit more water to stay healthy and vibrant.

Tropical grasses can add a distinctive flair to your prized garden. With some careful planning and imagination, you can create the landscape of your dreams.

Law officers said Toliver and another man had an AK 47 with them on a recent weekend when they shot and wounded someone. Police said they took precautions, evacuating some residents and bringing in a SWAT team because they couldn't be sure the suspect wasn't armed. Chief Chitwood told WESH 2 they also had information that Toliver may have been part of a plan to kill one of his officers several months back. The suspect's girlfriend walked out of the apartment before he gave himself up and a crowd of on-lookers gathered at the scene, including the suspect's mother. She worried police would shoot her son and became more distraught as the ordeal wore on. She eventually passed out in the heat and was taken by ambulance to the hospital.

Attempted carjacker arrested

Daytona Beach police believe a DeLand man they recently arrested was behind an attempted carjacking and the burglary of a business. The suspect is Frank Grillo, 47. Police said Grillo tried to carjack a woman in the parking lot of a Kentucky Fried Chicken on Mason Avenue. Grillo allegedly punched the woman in the face and demanded her keys, but he ran when she refused. Just over an hour after that incident, police said Grillo broke into a store on North Nova Road, coming in through an air conditioning handler on the roof. He was picked up not far from the business.

Meth lab busted

Holly Hill Police said they busted another meth lab there, the fourth in three months and Chief Mark Barker said his message is simple. Barker said if you cook meth in his town, you are going to jail. City police officers have information that ties a group of people to the meth labs that have been busted in recent weeks. In this last case, four children were in the home with what police said were explosive materials that could have endangered them and neighbors in the area. Jennifer Kelsey, 31, and Marvin Canter, 45, were arrested and police, along with representatives from the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Volusia Bureau of Investigation, dismantled the lab. Police said they will continue to be vigilant to protect neighbors like Marlene Hayes, who is disabled and was terrified to learn she was living next door to such potential danger.

Carter holds camp

NBA superstar Vince Carter is home and was in Daytona Beach last week to lead his annual weeklong basketball camp at Mainland High School. The 120 youngsters are well aware that they're getting help from the newest member of the Orlando Magic and are thrilled to be part of that action. Carter told WESH 2 the Magic is his dream job. He lives in Orlando and returns to Daytona Beach frequently to touch base with his roots at Mainland where Carter first honed his skills. Carter helped build the new high school and said he will be back to catch as many games as he can since many friends are still leading sports at Mainland. The camp kids told us Carter will help Dwight Howard get a ring this year and Carter said his job is to make it easier for Superman to do the job.

Man dies after crash

A Holly Hill man was killed when he crashed his motorcycle in Ormond Beach. John Leet, 60, was south on Beach Street at Fairview Avenue when police said he lost control of his bike and was thrown into a fire hydrant. Leet was rushed to the hospital, but did not survive his injuries.

County lifeguards took top honors at competition

Volusia County lifeguards took top honors in the Southeast Regional Championship last weekend. There were a number of different challenges including rowing and swimming, paddle boarding and running as well as ironman and woman fetes. Lifeguards from all over Florida and the Southeast went head to head with Volusia County guards well ahead of the pack.

Possible ban on red snapper could hurt businesses

A possible ban on red snapper has fishermen and women in Ponce Inlet and New Smyrna Beach very worried about their businesses. The government claims red snapper is over fished and at just three percent of a healthy stock, but locals and others in the southeast said the government is using outdated statistics and said that red snapper are more plentiful than ever. WESH 2 was in Ponce Inlet recently when Super Critter II Captain Wes Carr returned from a half-day trip with plenty of satisfied customers. Snapper and grouper are the most popular catch for recreational visitors and a proposed six-month to yearlong ban, would devastate business, according to Carr and other sea captains. They said in the last decade, red snapper size and catch restrictions have replenished the population. The older a red snapper, the more prolific the fish is so captains have formed a group and hired their own experts to help prove plenty of older red snapper are still in the sea.

habitats. The park is also one of the few dog-friendly parks in the area. Admission to the park is $3.50 per vehicle.

New Smyrna Beach is also well-known for its arts scene, with several galleries and hands-on workshops where you can learn to do everything from clay pottery to glass blowing.

At the Bob Ross Art Workshop & Gallery, you can learn to paint in the style of the famous PBS painter, who was from the area. At Galleria Di Vetro on Flagler Avenue, you can learn about glassblowing or buy a piece from the unique gallery.

The Atlantic Center for the Arts, tucked away on 70 acres on the Spruce Creek Preserve at the northern city edge, is an artists' center with a residency program. But, visitors are welcome to check out the many unique galleries and buildings as well as the quiet nature trails. The Center also offers kid's programs at its Harris House, located downtown.

If you're looking for an adrenaline rush, visit the New Smyrna Speedway, located on the western edge of the city, for auto racing every Saturday night from March to December. Admission is $10.

After the Speedway, if you are looking to slow it down a little, try a Segway tour of New Smyrna Beach. For $45 per person, you can ride your Segway onto the beach and through the beachside neighborhoods.

When it comes time to dine during your "staycation," New Smyrna Beach has several dining options with a plethora of "mom-and-pop" restaurants scattered throughout the city.

admission tickets are $10. Act I is "He's Having A Baby," a story of three anxious mothers to be: Mrs. Murray, a first timer constantly at the point of hysteria; Mrs. Foster, who is

Delicious (low-fat) additions to summertime meals

Hello smart shoppers. This column will give you delicious recipes that can be very high-fat.

Many of you complain that fat-free cream cheese and sour cream are awful. When combined in a recipe with other ingredients, you can't tell the difference.

If you think fat-free cheese doesn't melt, it just lies on top of the food and you can peel it off like a piece of plastic, you haven't tried Kraft fat-free slices. They come in

ROMANCING THE STOVE
with the Grammy Guru ARLENE BORG

American, cheddar, Swiss, mozzarella and I believe provolone, and melt better than high-fat cheeses, I promise.

When I make grilled cheese sandwiches for guests, I eat the fat-free version. If I don't cut a corner off my bread, I can't tell the difference.

Southern caviar is a great recipe from a mother and daughter who agreed to let me share with all of you.

For a healthy dipping chip, spritz cooking spray on each half of a split whole-wheat pita bread. Sprinkle with herbs or spices (such as garlic powder or oregano), and cut into wedges. Bake at 250 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until crisp.

Enjoy. See you next week.

1 cup (4 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese

Beat cream cheese until smooth, blend in yogurt or sour cream and taco seasoning. Chill for 1 hour. Spread mixture in the bottom of a 9 inch by 12 inch baking dish. Spread salsa over mixture. Layer with remaining ingredients, ending with the cheddar. Serve with tortilla or taco chips. Refried beans, chili and mashed avocado are a few ingredients you can add to the layers.

preheated oven for about 15 minutes or until chili starts to bubble a little on the sides. Uncover and continue baking for 5-10 minutes until cheese is melted evenly. Serve with Tostitos chips.

SOUTHERN CAVIAR (NIB)

Recipe by Margo Kelly and daughter, Nicole Cheyne

One 14 to 15-1/2 ounce can each of shoe peg corn*, black eyed peas and black beans (drained and rinsed)
1 can Rotel brand diced tomatoes and green chilies
3 Roma tomatoes, chopped (shaped like an egg)
1 bell pepper, chopped (orange or yellow)
6 green onions (scallions), chopped
8 ounces bottled zesty Italian dressing

Mix together, chill for at least 2 hours or overnight. Serve with tortilla chips called Scoops.

*Shoe peg corn can be found in large supermarkets near the vegetables. Regular corn may be substituted.

KIMBERLY'S FOUR BEAN SALAD (NIB) regular and sugar free

NOTE: One pound cans are now from 14-1/2 to 15-1/2 ounces, which is fine in this recipe.

1 can each of cut green beans and waxed beans
1 can each of Garbanzo beans and red kidney beans
1 medium green pepper and 1 small onion, finely chopped
1/2-cup sugar or equivalent sugar substitute
1 teaspoon salt
1/2-teaspoon black pepper
1/2-cup white vinegar
1/2-cup canola oil

Drain green and waxed beans thoroughly, drain and rinse Garbanzo and kidney beans. Add green pepper and onions. Mix well. Add remaining ingredients and toss to blend. Chill for several hours, serve cold or at room temperature.

BAKED BEANS serves 6 to 8

Buy an inexpensive can of baked beans; we're gonna' doctor them up!

1 large 40-ounce can baked beans
1 medium onion, coarsely chopped
1/4-cup molasses
1/4-cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 teaspoon liquid smoke (optional)
3 slices raw bacon, cut in thirds (an optional and high fat, but delicious special occasion choice)

Mix all ingredients except bacon together, place in a baking pan, top with bacon and bake uncovered in a 350-degree oven for 40 to 50 minutes.

Well-done meat increases pancreatic cancer risk

Here is the rest of the best from the recent newsletters I've collected. The news comes so fast and furiously that it's hard to choose the items of most interest.

ALIVE & WELL
SHELLEY KOPPEL

Charred meat linked to pancreatic cancer

From the Duke University Medical Center HealthNews, July 2009:

You may love your fried or grilled meats well done, but it may not be good for you. Consumption of well-done and very well-done meats can form carcinogens which don't form when meat is baked or stewed.

Researchers have found that people who preferred well-done steak were almost 60 percent more likely to die of pancreatic cancer than those who ate steak less well done or don't eat steak.

Researchers suggest that meat be cooked at a safe temperature, but not an unnecessarily high temperature, and that charred pieces be cut away.

Moderation key in drinking red wine

From the UCLA Division of Geriatrics Health Years newsletter, July 2009:

Many of us have read articles about the benefits of red wine, especially for heart health. That does not mean it's time to start drinking.

Recent studies have linked mild wine consumption to lower risks of cardiovascular death and neurological disorders. However, there are many people for whom alcohol is not recommended, including those with liver disease, those taking medications that may interact with alcohol and people having chemotherapy.

One point the researchers make is that even though something may help one condition, it isn't a magic bullet. Alcohol use is listed as a risk factor for a number of cancers, for example, and people wishing to lower their risk of getting cancer are often advised not to drink or to drink sparingly.

In the next item, you will see that the recommendation for lowering triglycerides includes eliminating alcohol.

If you don't want to drink alcohol, but want the benefit of some of the properties it has, try adding grape juice to your diet or in cooking and eat more fresh fruits and vegetables which contain substances similar to the polyphenols found in wine.

Triglycerides; the forgotten lipid

From the Duke University Medical Center HealthNews, July 2009:

People are familiar with cholesterol testing and the numbers that go along with normal cholesterol levels. Triglycerides, the body's main energy-storing molecules, come from food and are stored in fat tissue.

Abnormally high triglyceride levels are associated with a higher risk of heart attack and stroke, especially for women.

If you are taking a statin drug to lower cholesterol, it probably will not lower your triglyceride level. Drugs that lower those levels have more side effects, so doctors suggest lifestyle modifications as the first and best treatment.

Cutting calories, losing weight, watching cholesterol intake, limiting sugar and refined foods, substituting unsaturated fats for saturated fats, eliminating trans fats and alcohol and getting regular exercise can lower triglyceride levels to the under 150 mg/dL considered normal.

Shelley Koppel is unable to endorse specific treatments for disease. Any protocols for treatment or testing she discusses are accepted standards of medical practice as recommended by agencies such as the American Academy of Pediatrics or the American Cancer Society. When she draws from personal experience, those are her experiences and not medical recommendations.

She is the former editor of "Today's HealthCare" magazine and a member of the National Association of Science Writers. E-mail questions to skoppel@bell-south.net.

James recently created a low-cost custom water ionizing system, the fountain of youth. It creates healthy water at a fraction of the cost of high-priced filtering systems. It helps bring the pH back in balance in the body.

Hometown News $UPER BUY$ of the week

Reader mail: Are photocopies of coupons legal?

Once again, I'd love to answer some questions from readers like you who are learning to super-coupon:

Q: My friend and I have been reading your column every week and we love your tips. My question is about Internet coupons. I know you can usually print two copies of each one. We would all like to have more coupons. My friend said it is OK to make a copy of the coupons that print from the computer but I don't think this is right. Is it?"

A: Many new coupon users wrongfully assume it is OK to make a photocopy of Internet-printed coupons. Since they printed it out from their computer, they conclude it must be OK to make more. But making photocopies of coupons is illegal. It's coupon fraud. I've often equated this to photocopying a dollar bill. We all know that's illegal. And it's illegal to copy coupons, too.

Internet coupons have unique identifiers and barcodes. When a store submits their coupons to be redeemed, a coupon clearinghouse scans the barcodes and the store receives reimbursement for each unique barcode. If you make a photocopy of a $1 Internet coupon, each copy will be identical to the one before it. If you make 20 copies and use them all at the same store, your store will only be reimbursed for one of those coupons. You will essentially be stealing $19 from your store since the store will not be paid for the bogus coupons.

COUPON QUEEN
JILL CATALDO

Truthfully, we all pay the price when shoppers copy coupons and submit them for savings.

In many areas, stores have become increasingly wary of Internet coupons. Some refuse to accept them at all, a big frustration for shoppers.

Finding and printing coupons using the Internet is a great way to supplement the coupons we receive in the newspaper each week, allowing us to obtain a larger number of coupons for the items we buy the most.

Companies that offer printable coupons on the Internet usually set the coupons' print limit at two, so always go back and try to print the coupon again until you've received the message that the coupon is at its print limit.

Remember, there are also times printable coupons will have higher print limits, too. Recently, a major cereal manufacturer had a $1 coupon on its Web site with a print limit of 14! That was a great opportunity to get a lot of coupons at one time. But it's never worth committing coupon fraud and risking prosecution over photocopying coupons.

Q: My question is about expired coupons. One of the stores in my area will take them. But will the store get reimbursed for these, too, or are they just eating the loss when they accept expired coupons?"

A: When a store gets ready to redeem coupons, it gathers all of the coupons customer have submitted, packages them up and submits them to a coupon clearinghouse. The clearinghouse weeds out expired coupons and fraudulent, copied coupons. After that, the clearinghouse invoices the manufacturer for the value of all of the coupons received during that period. At that point, the manufacturer pays the store back for the coupons that have been redeemed.

Depending on when the store submits its coupons to the clearinghouse, some expired coupons may still be valid for reimbursement. But if you're using coupons that are several years old, the store is definitely "eating" the loss on those coupons.

So why do some stores do it? It gives shoppers an incentive to choose that store over its competition. Accepting expired coupons may give them an edge over a store in the same market that does not accept them.

Jill Cataldo, a coupon workshop instructor, writer and mother of three, never passes up a good deal. Learn more about couponing at her Web site, www.super-couponing.com. E-mail your own couponing victories and questions to jill@ctwfeatures.com.

You don't need fancy equipment to have fun fishing

Many of the good folks who enjoy the Hometown News write to ask me what fishing equipment I might recommend.

Usually they don't bother to say where they would be fishing or what they hope to catch.

They leave it up to me to guess whether they will be going for marlin or catfish.

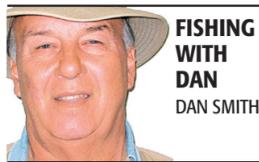

Of course, there is a wide variety of tackle available, but for our purposes let's talk a bit about some of the methods used to catch fish in the inshore.

A length of twine, a lead weight and a hook is the easiest rig and was probably the first.

It still works fine. By eliminating the rod and reel you put yourself in direct contact with the line and fish. A hand line is best used in deeper water from a boat or pier. The Cuban people have taken this method to an art form and can use their big spooled up line as well as any rod and reel fisherman.

The next method is the cane pole that allows the angler to reach out before suspending the hook. Telescoping fiberglass has now improved on the cane pole, but not totally replaced them. More pan fish have been caught in this way than any other.

Closed face spinning reels are the easiest to use and most of us began with the closed face Zebco brand push button reel. They are great for blue gill, bream, and catfish. The larger models will catch bass, trout and red fish.

FISHING WITH DAN

I know that many have a problem with the open bail spinning reels that always come with the reel handle on the left. The closed face reels solve that problem. Be aware that most open-faced reels have a handle that is reversible.

Here I should talk about bait caster reels, but I stopped using them years ago.

It is enough to say that they are very accurate in the proper hands. Fly-fishing is a love of mine, and I would advise everyone to try it.

The lightest touch of any tackle, the fly rod may be used for everything from trout to tarpon.

If you know of a pond that is full of blue gill, take a fly rod and a small popping bug, and I promise that you will get more hits than Google.

If you know of a pond that is full of blue gill, take a fly rod and a small popping bug, and I promise that you will get more hits than Google.

Dan Smith

Most of us who fish the inshore brackish waters of Volusia County rely on light spinning gear. Rod should be between six and eight feet and the action should be rated as light medium or medium, a fiberglass or graphite composite is best.

If you are picking out a rod and are unsure if it is meant for a spinning reel, it is usually stamped low on the rod.

ning reels come in sizes that may be numbered one through five.

Depending on the manufacturer that may be in 10s or 1,000s.

A light duty reel for the inshore may be rated as a 20 or a 2,000. One a bit more substantial, but still very light will be a 30 or a 3,000.

If you are beginning, I would recommend a four, 40 or 4,000. They are large enough to hold a lot of line and stout enough to take a good bit of abuse.

The secret to any good reel is in the drag. That is the built in adjustable resistance that is applied to the line as it comes off the spool. It should be smooth; never jerky or binding. Make sure that the tackle you choose fits your hand comfortably. A cheap combo can cost as little as $15 and go on up to $500.

Let the price of your tackle reflect your expertise.

Remember a kid with a cane pole will have as good a time as an old pro with the most expensive equipment. Fishing is all about fun. Don't over think it.

Dan Smith has fished the waters of Volusia County for 40 years. When he's not fishing, the retired contractor is heavily involved with the Ormond Beach Historical Trust. For questions or comments send an e-mail to apes123@mybluelight.com.

Condo great alternative to hotel

There is a growing trend when it comes to travel accommodations. No longer are large or even small families subjected to small single-room hotels or finding a place with adjoining rooms so the entire family can "stay" together.

Now families and even more importantly, groups of golfers, can stay in lavish two, three or even four-bedroom condos complete with full kitchens, several baths and large spacious living rooms. Best of all, this can be all yours for about the same price as a hotel room.

A couple of weeks ago, we took our annual summer family vacation to Orlando. There was no way my family was going to enjoy a week there if it meant living out of a small hotel room and eating out for every meal.

Couple that with the need to save as much money as possible during these tougher times, and I was on the hunt.

What I discovered after putting on my Indiana Jones hat was Sky Resorts, proprietors of five properties in the Orlando/Kissimmee area. Each property has its own unique portfolio designed to meet the needs of families, groups and extended-stay visitors.

Based on your needs, Sky has resorts close to all of the theme parks as well as the convention center. Our choice was Sky Resorts' Lake Buena Vista Resort Village & Spa.

Here we had a huge three-bedroom condo, complete with full kitchen, balcony, Jacuzzi tub, washer and dryer and a 42-inch HD TV. I could just imagine myself in the same place with my golf buddies, playing cards, making a hot breakfast every morning or being able to have my own room, where I could relax in peace and quiet while everyone else enjoyed their day. It was like being at home without the yard work.

While I didn't have my entire golf gang with me, my son plays. For us, the location was close to several wonderful courses and afforded those in my family who don't golf all kinds of choices.

For the non-golfer there is an outlet mall right next door. There is also a fantastic spa on site, where one can have all the tension of a day on vacation wiped away. If you'd prefer to enjoy a few libations and more, there is Frankie Farrell's Irish Pub and Grille, located on site.

My favorite amenity, along with that of my kids and some friends that came by to visit, had to be the Pirate Plunge main pool.

Here, our kids enjoyed the cool, refreshing water and the slide that runs through a pirate ship, while I melted away the soreness of a long day in the hot tub before retiring to a hammock for a nap. For those looking for more peace and quiet while at the pool, there is another pool and hot tub area without the craziness.

One thing about being on vacation with family or a golf vacation with your buddies is you want to spend time doing more than golf. The social aspects of a vacation are just as important as the theme parks or the golf course.

With a true "home" for the time you're here, you get to make meals, watch television, play games and more without being cramped in a small single room.

If you divide the cost between three or four of your friends on a golf getaway, the price is much less than that of a room. Throw in the savings on food and you could easily add another round of golf or cover your losses in the nightly poker game. Depending at which of Sky's properties you stay, amenities include: nightly cocktail receptions, complimentary hot breakfasts, basketball courts, barbecue facilities, heated pools, business centers, Kid's Club, complimentary transportation to the theme parks, 24-hour fitness rooms and much more.

The next time you think about taking a family vacation or getting away with your foursome for a few days on a golf trip, consider looking into what Sky Resorts has to offer. You can reach them at (866) 455-4062 or visit them on the Web at www.staysky.com.
