'Shark Tank' star encourages entrepreneurs to go for it

By Andreas Butler
For Hometown News

Investor, entrepreneur, author, television personality and motivational speaker Daymond John rallied the business troops at the Daytona Beach Chamber of Commerce's 93rd Annual Meeting on Monday.

Mr. John is the founder and CEO of FUBU clothing line and a star of the ABC reality show "Shark Tank." His estimated worth is $100 million.

Local business leaders, politicians and others packed the event, which highlighted entrepreneurship.

"This year is all about entrepreneurship in the area," said Suzanne Forbes, outgoing chamber president. "We brought Mr. John in to talk about the inspiration and spirit of what it takes."

Mr. John sees the national landscape improving for entrepreneurs.

"I think due to the recession and the shortage of capital that the stronger are surviving while others are finding it harder to get capital," he said. "On the flip side, most wealth is made this way. There are many people who spent 20 years at a company that thought they were safe with a good retirement package who are now entrepreneurs. That means there is a lot of talent out there."

Entrepreneurship is on the rise and will impact the future economy, Mr. John said. "That is what will save us from the recession and where we are economically at the moment."

Local business leaders also are seeing a rise in entrepreneurship.

"There is so much activity now," said Ms.

Ormond Beach Commissioners deny smaller lots for subdivision

By Richard Mundy
For Hometown News

The Ormond Beach City Commissioners denied smaller lots in the Marshside Village subdivision, voting 4-1 against reducing them from 80 feet wide to 60 feet wide.

Mayor Ed Kelley was the sole "yes" vote.

This action reversed their previous vote that gave approval to White Falcon Development building the subdivision with 60-foot wide lots. Edward Speno, president of White Falcon Development of Orlando, attended the meeting.

After nearly two hours of citizen speakers, 18 in all, Zone 4 Commissioner Bill Partington voiced the general consensus of the board. He said, "I really don't think it (conflict between area residents and resolution) has anything to do with lot size… When you get down to it, I think it's about density. And when you look at this project, it's consistent with many of the other neighborhoods in that area. There are actually four neighborhoods that have a higher density than this project does."

Mr. Partington also said the project, "improved the drainage of the area, it improves the traffic flow, and that's based on a traffic

Spruce Creek student helping WARM program help others

By Andreas Butler
For Hometown News

Katie Miley is a senior at Spruce Creek high school in Port Orange but she isn't your average student.

She is in the International Baccalaureate program, president of the Chess Club, secretary of the Psychology Club and a member of the National Honors Society.

But Katie also is a Girl Scout, which has taught her valuable life lessons and driven her passion to help others.

"I love helping people. The Scouts is one of greatest things that I have done. It has taught me leadership, to give back to the community and compassion. It has also helped me understand where people have important needs. As for being a high school student, I am never really bothered by peer pressure," Katie said.

To earn her Girl Scout Gold Award, Katie went above and beyond helping others by painting and redecorating a room at the Women Assisting Recovering Mothers (WARM) Program at 129 Michigan Ave. in Daytona Beach.

"The Gold Award is the highest honor that a Girl Scout can have and equal to the Boy Scouts' Eagle Scout," Katie said. "With this project, I knew that I would get to help mothers in terrible situations. When I first saw the room, it was barren and uncomfortable. I was moved to make it better. The room is critical for the mothers to establish that important relationship with their children."

"Katie Miley is an awesome and amazing young woman," said Alicia Vincent, WARM Program Director. "She approached us and after a tour she felt compelled to dedicate her time and services to makeover that room for the parents and children. She recruited a team to assist her in redecorating the room with books, chairs, a rocking chair, CD player, CDs, toys, play mats and more."

WARM is a service of Stewart Marchman-ACT Behavioral Healthcare and is designed to assist women suffering from addiction and mental health issues. The program has 18 women with their children and the waiting list to get in is 30 days.

"We have a residential facility for pregnant and postpartum women with substance abuse and mental health diagnosis. They live here with their children until the kids are six years old. Then they move and visit on the weekends. The program helps with therapeutic needs through counselors and groups. We also work with them on parenting and self sufficiency," Ms. Vincent said.

County Council eyeing CRA program

By Patrick McCallister
For Hometown News

The Volusia County Council is taking a magnifying glass to Community Redevelopment Areas, looking to tighten the rules for them.

The council conducted a workshop Thursday, Jan. 31, to discuss CRAs, special taxing zones that keep some county tax dollars in cities to spur property and economic development, along with eliminating blight.

But paying for street parties?

Uses of CRA funds for events, such as Holly Hill's Hogs on the Hill last year, are giving some of the council members heartburn.

"That's not what CRA funds are intended for,"

County Chair Jason Davis said in an interview after the workshop. "They are supposed to reduce blight. They're not for parties and this is the problem we're having, one of the problems."

Last year Holly Hill spent about $40,000 from its CRA for the Bike Week event at 327 Ridgewood Ave. complete with a vintage bike show, barbecue galore, vendors, a parade and Jimmie Van Zant rocking alongside Molly Hatchet.

Several citizens and local businesspeople had tantalizing tales to tell about the event to the Holly Hill City Commission at a meeting last year. Most included a cast of Jell-O shot, massage and bike-wash girls simulating sex acts with customers, and a few had cages with vulgar dancers.

Mayor Roy Johnson said the complaints were greatly exaggerated by election-year politics and Hogs on the Hill is exactly the kind of events CRAs help cities do that increase economic activity.

"Hogs on the Hill was an attempt to attract business to the area, not just a street party," he said. "It was meant to attract the motorcycle industry to Holly Hill."

It might have done just that. Larry Steele, owner of Steele's Wholesale Motorcycles stopped by Hogs on the Hill last year. This year, the city isn't sponsoring the Bike Week event — Mr. Steele's business is.

"I'm going to relocate my business in the near future, and Holly Hill is one of the places I might relocate to," he said.

Holly Hill's CRA started in 1996, with a 30-year sunset, along Ridgewood Avenue. Businesses and residents in the CRA district pay the regular county tax rates others do. However, county taxes paid on property values higher than what they were in 1995, the base year, go to the city to spend only in that district for economic development and blight elimination.

There are 15 CRAs in Volusia among eight cities, including Daytona Beach, Daytona Beach Shores, DeLand, Holly Hill, New Smyrna Beach, Port Orange and South Daytona. Mary Anne Conners, deputy county manager, told the council that cities keep about $4.7 million county tax dollars a year through them. She said the recent economic downturn and reduced property values have several cities looking at creating new or expanding existing CRAs.

"They are lining up," she told the council. "We are in a good base year."

The seven-member council has four new faces, including Pat Patterson, who served on the council from 1995 to 1998. He said that previous county councils should have put more rules on CRAs.

"Going back to 1995, I think we were pretty loose on how these things were going to go (with CRA expenditures)," Mr. Patterson said in an interview after the meeting. "Nowadays there's going to be some changes. We're going to really clamp down on a lot of this stuff."

But CRAs pay for much more than street parties.

For example, in 2011, Holly Hill bought the old middle school on Center Avenue using $1.5 million from its CRA. The city's CRA is now paying Smith + Murray Design Studios about $98,000 to study uses for the old Holly Hill Middle School.

The city commission, acting as the Community Redevelopment Agency, also spent about $108,000 to refurbish the Holly Hill Community Resource Center, which ended up being the new home for a chamber of commerce office and historical society museum. It also approved a $126,000 grant to Sunoco to buy the blighted Rollie's Court Motel, 118 Ridgewood Ave., and tear it down to expand a store and gas station.

Kurt Swartzlander, Holly Hill's finance director, said the CRA collected about $1.57 million in the 2011-2012 fiscal year. Those funds also help pay for six police positions, a community redevelopment coordinator, and a clerk at the Community Resource Center. Salaries and other expenses for those positions cost the city's CRA about $556,000 a year.

Mr. Johnson said the council would be foolish to tighten requirements and rules on CRAs too much.

"I think the cities need to have the flexibility," he said. "The main purpose was for cities to take the dollars and remove blight and get economic development. We know where it needs to be done and the county doesn't know exactly where it needs to be done."

Forbes, who also is a partner in accounting firm James Moore & Co. "There are programs and colleges looking to grow entrepreneurship. There are a lot of new and expanding businesses. I think everyone now realizes that everybody is needed to create new jobs. There is no magic answer but one job at a time will grow the economy."

Mr. John had plenty of advice for those wanting to employ themselves.

"Don't do something because it's a passion. You must love what you do, but educate yourself," he said. "Start small and take affordable steps. Don't bet the house and farm on everything until you learn and understand the mistakes of the business. Believe it or not, you will never think of anything new, but a new form of delivery. Someone has been in the area of it and has more experience."

He also pointed out the mistakes he has seen others make.

"A lot of times entrepreneurs don't educate themselves on the business," Mr. John said. "They analyze how great the business is, but don't go make sales, find holes and fix them. That must be done before opening stores and taking loans. They gamble first instead of taking safe bets."

Taking advantage of today's technology was another point he made.

"The challenge is social media and technology. How can we use the basics of the old ways of doing business with the new technology? People who are doing it the right way are prospering. Those who are not are facing more challenges," he said.

Mr. John encouraged minority groups to find opportunities instead of barriers.

"Everyone faces challenges. Women may not make as much as men and are not always taken as seriously. African-Americans and Latinos are often told that they don't come from enough higher education and don't deserve to make as much. We all have challenges but it is about opportunities," he said.

Despite the number of entrepreneurs who amassed wealth without a college degree, Mr. John encourages education.

"There are many that have made it without school, but were they really successful? Many have made it but once they got their money they lost it because they didn't have the financial intelligence or the business sense. You still need school to find out the business sense and financial intelligence," he said.

The Daytona State College W.I.S.E. Program

LAND LINES

DAN SMITH

Recently I was invited by Maggie Thompson to talk about fishing at the Daytona State College Wisdom In Senior Education program.

That group consists of people over 50 who pay a small annual fee to take part in non-credited classes and presentations on the Florida lifestyle and folklore.

The W.I.S.E. Program is ably headed up by hard working Kent Ryan, a dean at the college. On Feb. 5, I schlepped my briefcase and a box of books to the News-Journal Center in downtown Daytona Beach. As some of you who follow my scribbling know I am asked to speak quite often, but seldom in such a nice setting. The large auditorium on the second floor of the center is a first class facility that hosts impressive acts. Undaunted, once the hundred or so W.I.S.E. members had found their seats, I went right into my "aw shucks" delivery of some of my more favorite stories from my book "I Swear The Snook Drowned."

Pretty quickly I found the group was receptive and there to have a little fun. A show of hands told me most were readers of my columns in The Hometown News, so I knew that I was among friends.

I began with the story of The Red Man, a hermit who lived a naked existence in the mangroves of Port Orange and then went to The Thinking Man tale about a fellow who had figured out a way to catch 20-pound redfish on two-pound test line.

By the time I got into The Lowest Tide Of The Century, I knew that I had them. You know whenever I appear before a group, I wind up having more fun than the audience and this was no exception.

Like most old guys, I enjoy retelling my own stories. To finish up, I read them a few jokes I included in the book and left everyone laughing (me most of all). The question and answer period that followed was interesting as the group asked for fishing tips to help them ply the local waters. That's a subject I never tire of and the discussion was lively. I closed by shamelessly plugging my new book, "The World's Greatest Beach." It was a fun afternoon and I thank Maggie and Kent for having me with them. If you would like more information on the W.I.S.E. Program, call Kent at (386) 246-4801.

Speed Weeks usually gives me more opportunity to rattle my gums and tonight (Friday, Feb. 15) I will be at the Anderson Price Memorial Building in Ormond Beach to help with a racing presentation for The Ormond Beach Historical Society. At 7 p.m., we will show "The Great Sand Speedway" a film directed by Virgil Taylor and narrated by Preston Root. Both will be on hand along with local historian Suzanne Heddy to discuss the one hour film. As a racing historian I have been involved with many pieces that attempt to cover the story of our early racing. I have been a part of productions for most of the Scandinavian countries, Germany, South Korea, Great Britain, Speed Channel and even did an interview for a Los Angeles PBS station that came here to film. "The Great Sand Speedway" is by far the best of them all.

Local racing history is filled with myths, and half-truths and many of us who care about such have worked hard for many years to set the record straight. Virgil got it and did a great job of telling the true story. Anyone who likes history will love this piece.

Admission is $5 and $3 for Ormond Beach Historical Society members. The society will be selling my book and lots of racing history related items, including the new William K. Vanderbilt T-shirt. Come on out and spend a little time with us and let's have some racing fun. Call (386) 677-7005 for more info.

County leaders looking for ways to increase tourism

By Andreas Butler
For Hometown News

Volusia County leaders are looking for ways to increase the $3 to $4.2 billion tourism brings into the county every year.

The County Council hosted a meeting Jan. 28 at the Ocean Center in Daytona Beach to introduce the Tourism Marketing Study Preliminary report.

The report was put together by the Strategic Advisory Group of Atlanta and its lead advisor Daniel Fenton gave the presentation.

"Tourism is starting to come around like the economy," County Chair Jason Davis said. "We want to promote our entire county whether it is Daytona, New Smyrna, DeLand, Pierson or anywhere. We have so much to offer and we want everyone to come and enjoy all of what we have not just the beach."

The report suggested those in the industry share resources, form task forces, share website content and more.

It also encourages agencies, such as the Hotel and Lodging Association of Volusia County, Halifax Area Advertising Authority and the Convention and Business Bureau of Volusia County to work together.

"We will have our board meeting on Feb. 13 and I will bring up the report. The will and desire of our members will decide what steps we take. We have 100 members and 150 allied members, so a lot has to be looked at," said Bob Davis, lodging association president.

The report also calls for maximizing the use of special events, such as the Daytona 500 and Bike Week as well as venues, such as Daytona International Speedway, the LPGA International golf course, the Ocean Center and the beach.

"We just have to work together and use our resources. We must target the right groups of people to come here as well as a variety of people. We must do tourism studies and see the demographics we have as well as survey our current visitors," Davis said.

According to the report, people in the industry claim the main problem is the lack of information.

The report also mentioned creating a sports commission to bring sporting events and their financial benefits.

"We have a rich sports community as well. We have venues and people but we must let others know about them. Racing is a big sport here with the Speedway. We also have LPGA as well. We have an opportunity to promote this place sports wise, too," Davis said.

Some residents on hand were skeptical of the report and feared it didn't represent the best interests of the entire county.

"It is all about the east side of the county and Daytona Beach," said Linda Dorian, past president of the Museum of Florida Art in DeLand. "We have taxpayers on the west side. This report doesn't share the interests of the entire county. Our county is also more diverse with people of all races, nationality and colors."

Former Deltona Commissioner Joe Perez said, "I love this county and we have had a lot of growth especially in the Hispanic community. Here the Hispanic market is really untapped. We need to make sure we reach out to other communities. The Hispanic Chamber of Commerce of Volusia County, which I am a member of, can get events here that will attract 20,000 to 40,000 people."

But not everyone on the east side was enamored of the report.

Ted Doran, a board member of the Halifax Area Advertising Authority, said, "I thought that the study was disappointing and it dodged the difficult questions. The general proposition is unworkable in our community. In tourism we have failed to promote our community for the past 10 years and for the past six we have lost $1 million dollars per year."

"I am optimistic and believe that positive changes are coming," Doran said. "Our convocation center will be critical in making the changes. The private sector has to take the initiative in getting tourism going. We have an overall good product on the beach side, but we have to do things and bring in things that will get more people here."

A tourism workshop is scheduled for March 8 at the Volusia County Council Chambers in DeLand.

study… and it improves the "look" of what's out there. What Mr. Speno's proposing … I think it's a much better product. That's the type of project you want Ormond Beach to look like."

But, he said, "(I'm) happy to listen to whatever else anybody has to say, but essentially I'm undecided at this point."

Zone 3 Commissioner Rick Boehm added, "I don't think this is a very easy decision … because I don't think there's any question that there's a traffic issue. I would point out … Mr. Speno is required to build a sidewalk from Airport Road to Leeway Trail."

Marshside Village is at the intersection of Airport and Tymber Creek toads.

Commissioner Boehm said in his experience living in an area with sidewalks to the schools, a number of students walked or biked to schools (with crossing guards and other safety issues provided) and the number of parents driving their children to school was significantly reduced. However he also said, "I side with Commissioner Partington about being undecided about this."

"I am not undecided", said Zone 2 Commissioner Troy Kent. "Our planning board denied this 6-1. I approved this six years ago with lots 80 feet in width … I work out there, I drive it five days a week, my little boy goes to school out there … It's a fantastic school. The traffic is hellish … I will be voting no."

Ric Goss, Ormond Beach planning director, was asked to verify the information concerning the density of subdivisions in the surrounding area. "It is true. We looked at 14 subdivisions for density and there were four subdivisions that were higher (in density), this one (Marshside) is around fifth, and the rest were lower."

City Attorney Randal Hayes clarified to the commissioners that they could vote separately on the rezoning of the annexed land. As for Mr. Speno's request for 60-foot lot widths, that would have to be either approved or denied.

Commissioner Boehm questioned if tabling the resolution for a vote at a later date once actual numbers of lots in a "hybrid" resolution were possible. Mr. Goss stated that it would take a new resolution, essentially "starting all over," including the planning board process to affect that possibility.

Before the final vote on the resolution to allow 60' wide lots, Mr. Speno said, "Certainly I'm disappointed … we've come to you, we've worked with your planning department, we've listened. They told us what is allowed in this zoning category … and we've complied. This is not a simple submission, nor a cheap one. And we're standing here discussing density (caused by) 30 lots. It's almost incredible to me that you might consider the effect of plus or minus 30 lots on an intersection in this city."

In the end, the undecideds joined Commissioner Kent in denying the smaller lots.

drug addiction issues in today's society.

"The goal is to deliver drug free and healthy babies weighing five pounds or more. There is a critical need with the current opium crises," Ms. Vincent said. "We see more and more addicted to pain medication which affects their pregnancy. The program helps both the women and the children."

To help paint the room, Katie did a bake sale which raised more than $300.

"People basically donated items. They even baked goods and dropped them off to me," Katie said. "Many were excited to assist when they knew that I was helping others."

While completing the project, Katie had a heart-warming experience she will never forget.

"We kept everyone out during painting due to the fumes. When I was finishing this little girl walked by. She was staring and smiling from ear to ear. I knew at that moment that I did the right thing. It was priceless," Katie said.

After high school, Katie will attend Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach and study space physics.

The WARM program can still use donations to better provide its services.

"We always need diapers and wipes of all sizes. We accept donations of new bottles, plastic, both four and eight ounces. We can also use cribs, toddler beds, strollers or anything along those lines," Ms. Vincent said.

For donations, call (386) 236-1732.

City has garage sale list

In response to critics of Edgewater's no garage sale signs in the right of way. The city has made it very easy to know where legal garage sales are in the city, so there will be no need to litter the city with signs.

Just go to cityofedgewater.org every weekend and print a list of the legal garage/yard sales in the city.

Also you can get your permit at the same place, placing your sale on the list. This new policy does away with the $5 fee. You still need to register your sale; the two per year limit has not changed.

Crosswalks a concern

The work on Granada Boulevard in Ormond Beach is a great idea and it will make the area look so much better when it is complete. My concerns are the new crosswalks. I hope the raised crosswalks are not complete. The height is certainly not good for cars that travel that route daily. Hopefully the work is not complete.

Way to go, Joe

I would like to give a rave to Volusia County Coastal Division director Joe Nolin.

Thank you for returning my call regarding keep off signs and other expletives on some of the beach walkovers in Ormond Beach.

I was directed through Code Enforcement to contact Mr. Nolin at the Coastal division. I received a prompt callback after leaving a detailed message. He explained in depth, the history of private walkovers verses public. We also talked about the lack of a public dog beach in the unincorporated area of Ormond Beach. He directed me to the person to talk to in the city about this issue. In the past, I have been frustrated with some of the other city/county departments, attempting to get information on various issues, often with no response at all.

Pick up after your dog

I notice the snowbirds are back and there are more dog walkers. I just want to remind everyone that it is illegal to leave dog droppings any place other than your own property. That includes public property, vacant lots and the beach. Be a good neighbor, pick it up.

In response to: 'What about The Snakes?'

Many things must be considered regarding "homeless animals". Chief among them: is the animal a threat to humans? That answer is yes. Pythons can kill babies and toddlers, and larger pythons can kill adults. Next is what foods may become in short supply due to the pythons, and what effect would this have on the other animals in Florida's natural environment? For instance, if the frogs should become extinct, the flies and mosquitos would multiply.

In the dark ages, many people called cats "evil" and managed to kill them almost to extinction, then the rats and mice, having lost their natural enemy began to multiply, and they carried the germ of the bubonic plague, which killed millions of humans at that time in history.

I wonder if only God could arrange a workable ecosystem. Man has tampered with this ecosystem, by introducing the python, therefore man must try to undo the damage he has caused.

No, to TV attorneys

Do attorneys who advertise on TV really think because they were a doctor, ex-cop, engineer, service man with bomber in background, or say their prayers at night, will really sway us to want to use them?

Enough of these ambulance chasers.

Where baby snakes came from

I have no intention of getting in the middle of the feral cat discussion but I feel there is a need to correct the writer. The problem with pythons in the Everglades is not attributable to dumping, but rather the destruction of a python breeding facility by Hurricane Andrew in 1992. This building was just five blocks from the Florida Everglades and released hundreds of breeding pairs into a perfect habitat for invasives, such as Burmese Pythons, in addition to African Rock and Reticulated Pythons.

Internet has begun spreading to many tiny, electronic devices

GEEKSPEAK

TONY BRIGGS

In the beginning, the Internet was for computers — and nothing else.

It allowed two parties to share information over long distances. At first, using big mainframe computers and later, PCs. At first, using only primitive text and later, with the development of the World Wide Web and Internet browsers, graphics.

Today, it seems almost every electronic device can connect to the Internet, from phones to refrigerators. They can share anything that can be reduced to digital form, including music and video.

So perhaps, it should not be too surprising the latest device to become Internet-connectable is the stereo receiver.

My first reaction to this concept was: "Huh? To what purpose?"

But once I got my hands on one of these things, it became a little clearer.

The focus of my attention was the Pioneer VSX-1022K, a relatively low-end model that retails for around $500 but can be found online for about $250. That's about the lowest price point you will find for an Internet-capable receiver in today's market, although expect this feature to become more common in the future.

Unlike some higher priced models, this Pioneer does not have wi-fi capability. A hard-wired Ethernet connection is required. That may be a problem in many households, which lack a direct Ethernet connection in the living room, where a home theater system is often found.

The cheapest and easiest way around that problem is a power line Ethernet setup, which costs about $50. Plug in one module in the room where your Internet connection (and router) exists. Plug in a second module in the living room where your receiver resides. Viola! Instant Ethernet.

OK. So now what? Plug in the Ethernet cord into the back of the receiver and let it make its connection. Now comes the hard part. Because the whole receiver-Internet thing is sort of new, the manufacturers still haven't developed a simple, intuitive way for this all to work. So be prepared for a steep learning curve.

On my particular receiver, I had several Internet options, which are chosen from the input menu. In the old days, that used to include a short list of devices like a CD player, DVD player and cable box. Now it also includes Pandora, an Internet-based radio service that allows you to listen to songs by your favorite artist; Netradio, which allows you to listen to hundreds of different live radio stations from around the world; and Media Server, which allows you to tap into any media center you have connected to your network. Perhaps more useful, if you have a wireless network at home, is the ability to use the wireless AirPlay function on any Apple device you own.

The first roadblock you may encounter is the requirement that you have a TV connected to your receiver via an HDMI connection. That's necessary to display the options available and/or sign up once you connect to Pandora and Netradio.

Think of it like this: Your receiver is the computer and your TV is the monitor. But where's the keyboard? Unfortunately you are stuck with Pioneer's somewhat lame remote control, which is small, lacks a backlight and is studded with dozens of tiny, oddly organized buttons. Be prepared to dig into the user manual, which, by the way, comes only on a CD in PDF format to figure it all out. Keep a laptop handy or print out the pages you need.

If you opt for Pandora, and don't already have an account, you have to set one up. That's a slow and tedious process using the remote. But once complete, Pandora works pretty well. What you see on the screen, however, is pretty primitive. Mostly text. You can see a much better implementation of Pandora on most smart TVs, blu-ray players, Xbox or Roku.

On to Netradio. This is a great idea and it works. But again, the implementation is incredibly primitive. If you remember what the command line environment of DOS looked like circa 1990, you have a good idea. Just a bunch of jittery black and white text — a folder and file format — that you must navigate using the lousy remote. Stations are organized by genre and country and there are lots of them. Once you find a station you like, be sure to save it to favorites because you have to start over every time you start Netradio and it's slow going finding the stations you like.

Apple's AirPlay provides a more pleasing experience, if you can figure out how it works. Again, it's not all that intuitive. Generally speaking, if you have a wireless network at home and the receiver is connected to the network through your router, your Apple device will allow you to play the song through the receiver when you look at the AirPlay options. Just choose VSX-1022 and, like magic, the receiver will spring to life (if you have set it to work on standby from the setup menu) and begin playing the song. If your TV is on, the cover art and song will display.

Pioneer also offers a free app via the Apple App Store that gives you some control of the receiver. But it is pretty basic and there is considerable lag time as the commands move through the network.

Pioneer really needs to spend a little more time refining the visual interface on the network functions. There is no excuse for screen displays this ugly and this primitive in 2013.

That said, the VSX-1022 is a capable receiver with good sound quality and a workable network option at a fairly low price. But don't expect to figure out how it works right out of the box. Spend some time studying the manual to better understand the options and functions. Get ready for a little journey in the wayback machine when it comes to dealing with some of the network menus.

Area's emptiness can dull optimism

VOLUSIA BUSINESS
CECIL G. BRUMLEY

Whenever I get too optimistic about the area business climate, which is difficult to avoid when you live in the area of Port Orange that I do, I take a drive around the area.

The empty storefronts, vacant offices and large swaths of failed to develop land quickly remind me how far we fell in the Great Recession and how far we've got to go. Ormond Beach has been especially moribund with little new construction. Daytona Beach was hard hit with all the big projects that have been left to dust. Throughout Volusia County there are some especially bleak sights.

But I live in an area of Port Orange that shows there is promise of better days. At the end of the road I live on, there's a large construction project that includes a road extension and a BJ's Wholesale Club. I also live not far from The Pavilion at Port Orange, which continues to grow.

There are other reasons that you can't help but think we're going to get better. Despite the decline, Volusia Mall is still more than 90 percent occupied. There are several hotels on the beachside that are getting rebuilt. Downtown Daytona Beach keeps getting new shops and restaurants. And Speed Weeks is here.

But it's going to take some time before we get enough momentum going to see widespread prosperity. There are still way too many people without jobs and not enough new jobs to attract a lot of people to the area. However, 2012 showed improvement and, so far, 2013 is looking up. In January, 1,858 workers applied for unemployment benefits, down from 2,164 in January 2012.

As expected, after a decline in November bed tax collections, December showed a big jump, due probably more to some lodging operators paying their taxes late. Countywide, collections were up about 11 percent, way more than you'd usually expect in December. A better way to look at is how well fall tourism did as a whole. From October to December, bed tax collections were up 6.3 percent, marking a successful season.

Sparton Corp. continues to do well and its DeLeon Springs plant along with it. The company reported $65.79 million in revenue and $4.4 million in net income for its quarter ending Dec. 31, but up sharply from the same quarter of 2011. Also, the U.S. Navy has just awarded another $10 million for the DeLeon Springs plant to build sonobuoys, the company's underwater detection devices.

Brown & Brown Inc. also keeps humming along, racking up big gains in the fourth quarter and for 2012. Its fourth quarter revenue was up 24.1 percent and net income was up 16.8 percent. For the year, the insurance seller and employee benefits manager hit $1.2 billion in revenue as it started its march toward $2 billion.

Worksmart MD, a medical billing service, is moving to a bigger, 7,650-square-foot space in Tomoka Commerce Center in the northeast quadrant of LPGA and Williamson boulevards, according to Buddy Budiansky and Ron Frederick, Realtors with Prudential Commercial Real Estate FL who brokered the deal. Worksmart owner Meyers Industries Inc. did have the service in a space half that size at Cornerstone Executive Park in the southwest quadrant of LPGA and Williamson.

The new Hampton Inn on Flagler Avenue in New Smyrna Beach recently had its big open house. It was hard to believe that a 112-room hotel could get squeezed onto Flagler Avenue, but the developer did it and now it provides a major upgrade to one of county's busiest tourist thoroughfares.

Denny's helping to raise funds for fallen officers

Florida area Denny's are hosting the second annual fundraising campaign for Tour de Force, a Miami-based organization that provides much-needed financial support of the families of fallen law enforcement officers.

Participating Denny's and law enforcement officers throughout the state have begun selling $5 kits containing Denny's coupon booklets representing the diner's support for the officers and their courageous service.

In 2012, five Florida officers were killed in the line of duty and through its Tour de Force campaign, Denny's hopes to raise more than $$75,000 for their families.

Denny's also will serve as the title sponsor of the 16th annual Tour de Force charity bike ride, a five day, 270-mile ride from North Miami Beach to Daytona Beach. Beginning April 14, about 500 participants will ride their bicycles up the coast, making periodic stops at cities along the route to help raise awareness for the cause and refuel with complimentary Denny's Fit Fare meals and refreshments.

Premo's Grille opens downtown on Beach Street

By Cathy Wharton
For Hometown News

As the revitalization of downtown Daytona Beach continues, a number of new shops and new ideas have been slowly filling up the once empty storefronts.

The hub of the downtown district consists of Beach Street, a north-south street that parallels the beautiful and scenic Riverfront Park, and the main east-west streets — Orange, Magnolia, International Speedway Boulevard and Bay. For more than 100 years, the shopping district has been a center of commerce in Daytona.

One of the oldest enterprises in the downtown area, Angell & Phelps Chocolate Factory, is still in operation after 88 years. The business eventually moved farther up Beach Street from its original location, later opening a cafe next door. Not long ago, however, the cafe part of the business was sold.

In mid-December, Angell & Phelps Cafe once again changed hands. The new owner, Dale Kissell, renamed the quaint cafe Premo's Grille. But it would require a lot of work before the restaurant could open for business.

The revamping marathon began Dec. 28 and concluded on Dec. 31. Mr. Kissell and his crew — including his partner, Nancy Connell — worked throughout that entire weekend cleaning, installing equipment, reorganizing and prepping so Premo's would be open for New Year's Eve.

"There's a bit of romanticism to this," Mr. Kissell said. "This is our anniversary date — New Year's Eve. You've got to celebrate our accomplishment."

Mr. Kissell is no stranger to hard work. Eight years of experience in the food service industry is something that would stay with him, and in time bring him to where he is today. He worked in construction. After serving in the military, he attended college, with an eye toward a law career.

In 2010, Mr. Kissell vacationed in Daytona Beach. He liked the area so much that he came back again — four times in all. During that time, he was driving an 18-wheeler from coast to coast and around the country. Finally he decided that Daytona is where he wanted to be. In September, he came here to stay. Soon after, he found an opportunity to open his own business — a cafe on Beach Street.

"We want to be successful and to be a part of Daytona Beach," Mr. Kissell said. "Our focus is to make things interesting, fresh and affordable."

While affordability and quality of food are top priorities at Premo's, Mr. Kissell also acknowledged there is some building to do within the community. "We're here for the residents of Daytona Beach. They are the ones who will be here (for us) 365 days a year," he said.

The interior of the cafe remains much as before: Cozy two-seaters and comfortable four-tops well-spaced throughout, and a sizable bar to one side of the dining area. Along the paneled and brick walls of the cafe is a large collection of watercolors and prints, each depicting a nostalgic or historic scene of Old Daytona. Among the artful display is the Bandshell in the 1920s, Ormond Beach Yacht Club in 1910 and a super-sized print of the North Turn of the beach-road races in 1955. There are many others, of course, including beach scenes and early downtown Daytona.

But there's more to Premo's than just the relaxing atmosphere. A quick look at the menu reflects an American Cuisine that includes an array of tempting delights. All menu items are available at any time — lunch or dinner.

Premo's also offers a generous list of libations. The wine selection includes five house wines and several premium wines.

Coming from upstate New York, Mr. Kissell will soon be featuring wines from the Finger Lakes region of that state — an often unsung part of the country that produces excellent wine.

Also in the works is a bar menu, which will be offered during Happy Hour.

Though live music is not as yet in place, Mr. Kissell anticipates that at some point there will be entertainment. As a singer and musician himself, Mr. Kissell said he "appreciates good live music." "It's on the agenda," he said.

Premo's Grille is at 156 S. Beach Street, Daytona Beach. Hours are 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday–Saturday. Happy Hour is 4 to 7 p.m. Monday–Friday and all day Saturday. Phone: (386) 257-2677.

Sheriff's Office Employees of the Year honored

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

Each year four Volusia County Sheriff's Office employees and one volunteer are carefully chosen out of more than 1,000 people for their exceptional work performance.

The five demonstrated superior work ethic and achievement, not only during the past year, but also throughout their careers.

Sheriff Ben Johnson honored these top-performing Employees of the Year 2012 during a ceremony at the Deputy Stephen Saboda Training Center Feb. 5 in Daytona Beach.

Deputy of the year Karen Pierce is the school resource deputy at both Galaxy Middle School and Deltona High School. The principals of both schools praised Ms. Pierce as an effective, professional and truly caring law enforcement representative to all of the students.

Investigator of the year Brian Cobb, who works out of the Sheriff's Office's DeLand District office, volunteered to take on a tough investigative project that required months to bring to fruition. In addition to his already demanding regular case load

Employee of the year Annette Cazella has her hands full with clerical duties, receptionist duties and data processing for the Sex Crimes and Internet Crimes Against Children units. But she continually takes on yet more responsibilities in an effort to keep the units on the cutting edge.

Shortly after midnight on Feb. 20, telecommunicator of the year Frank Sclafani was dispatching for the South Daytona Police Department when a suspicious vehicle incident started. The vehicle fled from officers, and as the incident progressed, the vehicle pursuit passed through four cities, involving several officers from different agencies. Mr. Sclafani coordinated the constant flow of information as the direction of travel changed frequently.

Volunteer of the year William Maxwell had to meet some very tough requirements in order to take on a position with the Major Case Unit's Cold Case Homicide Squad. But he has met or exceeded those expectations as he poured 230 hours of volunteer time into helping establish the new squad. Maxwell is a retired Volusia deputy.

"We appreciate you coming back and doing what you're doing for us," said Sheriff Johnson.

Vienna Boys' Choir performing at Peabody Auditorium Feb. 15

The Daytona Beach Symphony Society presents the Vienna Boys' Choir at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15, at Peabody Auditorium.

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

Boys have been singing at the court of the Holy Roman Emperor since the 14th century. In 1498, more than 500 years ago, Emperor Maximilian I moved his court and his court musicians to Vienna. Since then, the boys have become legendary for their charm and voices of remarkable beauty.

The Daytona Beach Symphony Society presents the choir on at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15, at Peabody Auditorium.

Today, there are around 100 choristers between the ages of 10 and 14, divided into four touring choirs.

The four choirs give around 300 concerts and performances each year in front of almost half a million people. Each group spends nine to 11weeks of the school year on tour. They visit all European countries, and they are frequent guests in Asia, Australia and the Americas.

The Vienna Boys' Choir delights young and old around the world and their tours always sell out. It's an evening the whole family will love. The program includes classical choral music, Austrian folk songs, international folk songs, music from popular films and music by Johann Strauss, the waltz king.

Dr. Earnest Murphy, a Grammy award winning tenor, gives a free pre-concert talk about choral music in the Rose Room at 6 p.m.

Special prices for students and family discounts are available.

For information, call (386) 253-2901. Regular tickets range from $34 to $59. To buy tickets, visit Peabody Auditorium Box Office, 600 Auditorium Blvd., Daytona Beach; call Ticketmaster (800) 745-3000; or order online at www.dbss.org.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov. 23-Dec. 21

CAPRICORN – Dec. 22-Jan.20

Capricorn, while you are glad to lend a helping hand when you are asked, the request that comes in this week could be so big that you may actually be caught off-guard.

AQUARIUS – Jan. 21-Feb. 18

It is hard to make progress this week, especially since it could feel like you're going at a snail's pace. Stick with it and everything on your list is likely to get done.

PISCES – Feb. 19-March 20

Pisces, although you can certainly use your share of the limelight, let another person shine this week and you'll have your own glow.

The Sprint Unlimited at Daytona to launch the 2013 NASCAR season

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

With a new name, the annual non-points shootout gets Speed Weeks going at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 16, at Daytona International Speedway.

With a phone company taking over sponsorship from a beer company, the race is now named the Sprint Unlimited.

The race also will be on FOX-TV and feature several new elements. Fans in attendance will be eligible to receive special upgraded race experiences from Sprint, including roles as grand marshal, honorary starter and trophy presenter. Fans can also help deliver the trophy to Gatorade Victory Lane or participate in driver introductions during pre-race ceremonies.

The Sprint Unlimited marks the first time the new NASCAR Sprint Cup Series racecars will compete. Dubbed "Gen 6," the new-look sixth generation cars highlight greater brand identity for the manufacturers and are expected to heighten the rivalries among drivers and manufacturers.

As announced earlier in the year, the format for selecting the field of drivers in the invitation-only event will return to its roots for 2013.

The eligible field of drivers will consist of pole winners from the 2012 NASCAR Sprint Cup Series season and past winners of The Sprint Unlimited who have attempted to qualify for at least one race during the 2012 season.

Tickets for The Sprint Unlimited start at $39 and are available for purchase at www.daytonainternationalspeedway.com or by calling (800) 748-7467. Children 12 and under are free in general admission grandstands and the Sprint FANZONE.
