Votran driving towards a budget shortfall for 2013-14

By Andreas Butler
For Hometown News

Votran is expecting a $1.1million shortfall in its projected 2013-14 budget.

The Volusia County Council hosted a public meeting on the matter in the Volusia Room at the Daytona Beach International Airport on June 24.

County officials, 16 mayors, Votran personnel, municipal officials and residents attended.

Rising fuel costs, the demand for more routes and providing timely service during special events are all challenges for Votran.

The lack of savings is cited as the main reason for the budget shortfall.

"We have been challenged with a number of things, but mainly the shortfall is due to us operating off carry over from previous budgets," said Steven Sherrer, Votran general manager. "We have been able to save money from previous years. That carry over will soon be gone. The cost to provide service is increasing."

Votran's operational budget for 2012-13 is $20 million while the budget for 2013-14 is expected to be $21 million.

It receives $7.4 million from the county's general fund.

Votran also gets funds from the federal and state governments, advertising, fares and miscellaneous revenue. Each route costs Votran more than $303,000 per year.

Votran was created in 1975 as the county's public transportation system. It started with four trackless trolleys and 44 paratransit vehicles.

Today it has 228 employees and is a division of McDonald Transit of Fort Worth, Texas. Votran has 55 buses, four trolleys and 44 paratransit vehicles. It covers a 1,200 square mile service area.

Eighty-one percent of Votran riders have no access to a vehicle and 85 percent earn less than $29,000 per year.

"It's just not about money. Votran is critical to our county," Volusia County Manager Jim Dinneen said. "There are so many people that don't make a lot of money and Votran is their only source of trans-

VCOG will stay as is, structure may change

Volusia Council of Governments will remain its own entity.

At a workshop June 24, focused on the results of a 360 survey of the organization, city and county officials voted unanimously to continue as VCOG rather than assemble under the Volusia League of Cities.

The survey, completed by city managers and elected officials, was designed as a complete evaluation of VCOG and its purpose.

In a June 10 email to Substance Task Force Committee members, VCOG and league executive director Mary Swiderski explained the 360 evaluation resulted from tightened local government budgets giving way to concerns among officials that costs associated with VCOG's present projects outweighs gain.

The 43-year-old organization's mission has stayed fairly constant. It aims to foster cooperation among local governments for the benefit of all Volusia County residents.

"Today's staff, in our cities and county, has great rapport with their professional counterparts in other governments," Ms. Swiderski wrote. "The need to develop consensus is not as necessary as it once was."

"In essence we have worked our way out of a job," she added.

A total of 39 elected officials and 15 managers from 14 jurisdictions, including 12 cities, Volusia County and the Volusia County School Board, returned the survey.

Nine top goals were identified, but workshop facilita-

Growing up a track kid had pitfalls

By Richard Mundy
For Hometown News

Most kids wake up in the morning to the sounds of birds singing outside their window or Mom clanging pans as she fries up some breakfast bacon.

Jill Warren woke up to backhoes, earth movers and graders; foremen shouting at construction workers to make that bank a little steeper; and the roar of 700 hp cars being tuned up in garages in the middle of a vast pile of dirt.

Summer Speed Week will bring the boom

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

With two NASCAR races, Sheryl Crow and a fireworks extravaganza, Summer Speed Week at Daytona International Speedway will provide its usual hot action.

The two races are the Subway Firecracker 250, a new name, at 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 5, and the Coke Zero 400 at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, July 6. At the mid-point of the season it's a long way from the mad dash for the championship, but drivers are still hungry for points as they jockey for position and winning at Daytona Beach is always a big deal.

The action actually starts at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, July 4, with the opening of the Spring Fanzone and then the grandstand gates open at 2 p.m. Nationwide and Sprint Cup practice starts at 2:30 p.m.

For star power, Adam Sandler, Kevin James and Shaquille O'Neal, the stars of the upcoming comedy "Grown Ups 2," will serve as Grand Marshals for the Coke Zero 400.

Sandler, James and O'Neal will give the starting command — "Drivers, start your engines" — in the Independence Day holiday classic. They also will be introduced at the driver's meeting, participate in pre-race ceremonies and ride in the Grand Marshal cars during the pace laps prior to the green flag of the 160-lap, 400-mile race.

the Daytona International Speedway.

Besides the noise, there were other drawbacks.

This week's Coke Zero 400 will be a treat for Ms. Warren, one she didn't get as a child. It wasn't until the late '80s the race was on days other than the 4th of July, which just happened to be her birthday.

The coincidence was totally unfair in Ms. Warren's view. But since her dad, Chuck Warren, worked on racecars and her mom, Dorothy Warren, was often atop the grandstand spotting for drivers, birthday celebrations took second place to the race. Only after the race was over and everyone had gone home by about 6 p.m. did the family — her, Dad, Mom and an older brother — trundle to the nearest KFC, get a big bucket of chicken, go down to the river at Port Orange and watch the fireworks.

"I got some sparklers," she said.

Somewhere between the KFC and the river, a grocery store cake would appear and then it was "Happy Birthday Jill," she said. "But I resented the Firecracker 400 (as it was known then) for a lot of my life because of that. That was supposed to be my day!"

The genesis of it all was Mr. Warren was a paint and body man and a master automobile mechanic. What he didn't know, he learned very quickly. He was much in demand among drivers and crew chiefs. Starting his career in Ashtabula, Ohio, he moved to DeLand in the early '50s, then to Daytona Beach to work in the body shop at Stephens Pontiac, a car dealership that sponsored a racecar in a fledgling circuit to be named NASCAR (win on Sunday, sell on Monday). He worked with the factory-backed Pontiac team of Ray Nichels and driver Cotton Owens. He was involved in their 1957 win on the beach. It was the first NASCAR victory for Pontiac.

Before long he drew the attention of the "Best Damn Garage in Town" and was hired by Smokey Yunick. He worked on the 1962 Paul Goldsmith Pontiac that won the final beach race and Fireball Robert's Pontiac sweep of all Daytona races in 1962. It was later his idea to have a pit crew contest, which is still around.

With Moms and Dads all involved in the day-to-day operations of the developing speedway, the kids were left to fend for themselves. In effect, they became everybody's kids. All the parents always had an eye out for the ever-growing group of kids and thought nothing of stepping in to discipline when it was needed. But by and large the group had plenty of places to play and stay out of danger of big machinery. As the speedway began to take shape (the first race there was in 1959) certain portions of the track were finished first. Most of the kids had go-carts and the budding NASCAR stars of tomorrow honed their skills on the road course after hours.

Of course, there was fishing in Lake Lloyd in the middle of the infield. It took so much dirt to build the high-banked turns, it left a huge hole in the middle of the speedway. The water table is so high in Daytona that the hole just started filling up with water, so it became a lake.

After several years "on the NASCAR weekly racing circuit" the Warrens decided to cut back on traveling to have more of a family life. A deal with Prestolite came along, enabling Mr. Warren to have his garage at the speedway and stay there full time while providing race teams with sparkplugs and other products available from Prestolite, which was run by Autolite, a division of Ford.

The overriding memory Ms. Warren has is the entire NASCAR "family" was a close-knit community. Everyone knew everyone else and everyone helped everyone else. She doesn't remember anything more than petty feuds quickly forgotten, and the camaraderie of the kids, many of whom she could call today and the 40 years would melt away and they'd be talking about the adventures they had.

"Even now," she said, "I remember back then running into the Allison Dads (Bobby and Donnie) and the Pettys (Richard and Lee) at the local restaurants and they all remembered us kids names. My Dad had the greatest respect for Lee Petty … greatest respect in the world. I grew up with Marvin Panch's kids," she continued. "We had horses together on Marvin's property (now Port Orange) where he kept all his cars."

Has she ever been on the "big oval?"

"I remember the first time," she said. "It was with Nelson Stacy (ARCA champion from 1958-1960, 1961 Southern 500 winner, 1962 World 600 Winner, beat the likeness of Richard Petty, Marvin Panch and Joe Weatherly). He took me up on the track and purposely didn't get me strapped in. The speed builds up so quickly that when we went into the first turn I literally fell on top of him. The 33-degree banking made me slide right down into his lap.

"The first time I remember doing it in my mother's car — she had an 8-cylinder Ford Maverick — and somehow we got it up to over 100 just to be able to stay up on the banking, because less than that and you would slide back down to the bottom."

Originally the Prestolite 24 hour Continental race at Daytona (now the Rolex 24 at Daytona) involved Ms. Warren's father as racetrack representative of the Prestolite Co.

Part of the traditional ceremonies involved his assignment to escort Miss Universe to all the events at the track. He claimed it was a "tough job, and I got paid for it too." One Miss Universe in particular is memorable for Ms. Warren as they developed a life-long friendship. She was Aspasra Hongskula, who was nicknamed "Pook" as a child. She was named Miss Universe from Thailand in 1965. As a term of endearment, she called Ms. Warren, Pook. They corresponded over the years and Ms. Warren was elated when she learned that her friend had married a first cousin of her Majesty Queen Sirkrit of the Royal Thai family.

"We wrote back and forth from age 8 'til about 16, sending me wedding pictures and everything," she said.

"During the Rolex 24-hours at Daytona, Mom and I would go in the garage and set out tables and chairs and her and I would serve pancakes," Ms. Warren said. "The drivers between their stints would come over and get free pancakes and eggs. The people we got to meet, not just racers but the stars and other celebrities would come over and chow down: James Garner, Paul Newman, Steve McQueen and Cliff Robertson just to name a few."

"There are many things I may have missed because of growing up in the shadow of the Daytona Speedway, but there are also many moments that I never would have had were it not for racing — moments I will treasure my whole life," she said. "The friendships, the concern on a wife's face when the loud speaker announces a crash on the track involving her husband's (or son's) car, the times my dad would come home from being on the road for a month and my mother setting aside the time for the whole family to do nothing except for and with him."

Besides, who else can say, "I grew up in Daytona International Speedway."

The document that changed the world

LAND LINES

DAN SMITH

The fact our country was founded by criminals is beyond debate.

The 56 men who signed the Declaration Of Independence knew affixing their names to that document would be considered an act of treason by the British crown.

Twenty-six copies were made and the colonists made sure one went to England and King George III.

Famously John Hancock insured the king would notice his name by signing in a very large hand.

It was an ultimate act of defiance.

Each man knew their actions would result in them being targeted for hanging. Most of the signers were men of means who were not subjected to the injustices of the common man and yet each risked his life in order to do the right thing.

Of the 56, five were captured and tortured to death, 12 had their homes ransacked and their property destroyed, and nine died fighting in the war.

After the revolution, most of the survivors served in the new government, while Thomas Jefferson and John Adams would go on to become president.

As for Hancock, he would survive the war for independence and become governor of Massachusetts.

The declaration itself was carefully crafted by Thomas Jefferson with slight revisions by Adams and Benjamin Franklin. Not only did it declare the colonies free, but it would also change the way governments would operate forever.

At that time, most of the world's peoples were ruled by either monarchs or dictators. The American paper promised the new country would be governed by the people and for the people. As you might imagine that concept made many of the world's absolute rulers very nervous. King George would have little trouble convincing the heads of other countries to join in the fight. The world's rulers hoped this was an idea that would not catch on. The declaration also insisted the new government answer to its citizens for its actions.

Jefferson's document demanded that henceforth each of the 13 colonies would be states. At that time the word "state" referred to an independent and sovereign nation. The Declaration Of Independence said America would consist of 13 independent countries each operating their own government.

This way of thinking was new to the world. While Jefferson referred to the 13 colonies as states in his Declaration it noted England was also a state itself. Old Tom knew just how to stick it to the king and was not shy about doing just that.

In his most famous line from the Declaration Jefferson said: "We hold these truths to be self evident —." Mr. Jefferson was saying to the king, look the fact that all men are created equal and deserve the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness should be obvious. Evidently those rights had not been obvious to King George. The citizens of the colonies were so over taxed and deprived of necessities they were forced to seek them elsewhere.

At the time of the American Revolution, piracy on the high seas was at an all time high. The colonists could hardly afford the goods shipped in from England, so they did business with the pirates who intercepted the British vessels in the Atlantic. After the successful revolution, The Declaration Of Independence was hailed as the outline for our great Constitution. People around the world began copying the success of the upstart Americans. The world would be forever changed.

These days we have allowed some of the ideas put forth in the Declaration to be lost. Our central government is now much more powerful and intrusive into our daily lives than the signers ever intended.

Yet, the United States of America remains the flagship for democracy admired around the world. While we are despised and envied by our enemies, the religious zealots who sometimes manage to deliver a blow should know by now their actions only cause Americans to come together in renewed patriotism.

The Declaration of Independence as a paper could be easily destroyed, but the ideas it contains will live forever.

There is no going back. Modern patriots continue to put their lives on the line to see to it just as the 56 signers did in 1776.

Social Security Disability Hearings: Why Representation is a Necessity

Article Submitted By: Attorney Luis Gracia

Volusia County Social Security Disability Attorney; Rue, Ziffra & Caldwell

When it comes to Social Security Disability (and possibly all legal claims in general), there is nothing that places individuals on edge more than the word "trial". A trial, which can be defined as the process where parties to a dispute come together to present evidence in a tribunal with the authority to adjudicate those disputes, is a serious and important event in the life of any claim. Both plaintiffs and defendants understand this importance. As a result, very few trials take place without attorneys present to represent the interests of their clients. Yet, when it comes to Social Security Disability cases, it is surprising to know that many individuals don't seek representation from a lawyer when going to their disability hearing.

Social Security Disability hearings are intended to be informal events designed to allow the claimant to tell the judge the reasons why he or she can no longer work. However, many individuals (mistakenly) overlook a hearing because they do not relate it to being a "trial". Unlike a trial, a hearing doesn't follow the rules of civil procedure or evidence, is supposed to be non-adversarial and lasts only about 30 minutes to an hour. On the other hand, trials are much more formal, where procedure is strictly followed, and can potentially take months to resolve. Also, parties are typically subjected to examination from attorneys on both sides.

Although a hearing and a trial may seem obviously different, the reality is that when it comes to someone's Social Security Disability claim, their hearing is really their trial.

Claimants filing for disability benefits often claim that they want their day in "court." What they don't realize, though, is that they will get it, albeit in a different way. If you look deeper at the hearing process, you will begin to see how it relates to a court trial:

Before a hearing, claimants will have to first review their file and decide whether their record is complete and accurate. This is because if they fail to point out inaccuracies or incompleteness of exhibits in the record, they may receive a waiver of that issue.

They will be placed under oath.

They may be expected to make an opening statement where they will have to state the theory of their case, i.e., under what basis or authority they claim to be disabled.

They will be subjected to questions from an administrative law judge. Although not often, sometimes judges can ask totally objectionable questions and just like in the case of exhibits, failure to object to the questions can result in a waiver.

They may face vocational experts and/or medical experts and will have the chance to examine or cross-examine them. A claimant's inability to properly question an expert can be fatal to their claim.

Finally, claimants are many times asked for a closing argument. Not knowing what to argue may leave the record devoid of important issues for appeal.

So, with all of that said, the question is simple: being that Social Security Disability hearings are basically "light" versions of bench trials, why would anyone go to a hearing unrepresented? Considering that the disability process is so long and daunting, it makes sense to be as prepared as possible. A Social Security Disability attorney will make sure that his or her client's interests are well protected. After all, lawyers representing disabled individuals only get compensated if they secure benefits for their clients.

Don't make the mistake of trying to go through a hearing alone. Remember the old saying that goes "He who represents himself has a fool for a client"? Well, that is certainly true in Social Security Disability law. Going through the process alone is a risk that you should not bear. You have too much to lose.

If you or a loved one would like to receive more information about Social Security Disability representation, please contact the Volusia County personal injury attorneys at the law firm of Rue, Ziffra & Caldwell for your free consultation today.

Now Available: A Non-Surgical, Drugless Method Of Relieving Pain...

IF YOU'RE OVER THIRTY – THIS IS THE BEST TREATMENT YOU CAN USE FOR YOUR SCIATICA, BACK PAIN, AND HERNIATED DISCS!

Severe back pain and sciatica puts a halt to any enjoyment in life. But now there is hope...

Finally, there's a treatment to conquer back and leg pain without dangerous medications or painful surgery.

My name is Dr. Bill Labonte, D.C. owner of Labonte Disc Institute in Ormond Beach. I understand what it feels like to live in pain, because I see it every day.

I've seen hundreds of people with disc herniations and sciatica leave the office pain free.

When cushions in your back joints, called discs, get injured or wear out, they begin to degenerate and cause pain. Bulging and herniations begin to form, pressing on the nerve roots.

The most common invasive treatment for disc herniations is surgery. Even with health insurance the patient can be left with their own portion of the bill, in excess of $10,000-$15,000, and sometimes more.

In addition, the recovery time and missed work can be anywhere from 3 to 6 months, not to mention the obvious severe risks associated with all surgeries.

Before You Go Under The Knife And Opt For Spinal Surgery...

You should seriously consider a less invasive approach called spinal decompression.

Non-surgical spinal decompression is a technology that has been proven to help disc herniations. It creates a vacuum effect on the disc, which pulls the disc back into its normal position and brings in a fresh blood supply to promote healing.

The conditions this amazing treatment has proven successful are:

- Herniated and/or bulging discs
- Degenerative disc disease
- Back pain
- Sciatica
- A relapse or failure following certain surgeries
- Lumbar Facet syndromes

Proof This Treatment Works

While non-surgical spinal decompression is a rather new treatment, there's plenty of research to back up its claims. Here are just a handful of scientific studies…

"We thus submit that decompression therapy should be considered first, before the patient undergoes a surgical procedure which permanently alters the anatomy and function of the affected lumbar spine segment." – Journal Of Neuroscience Research

"86% of the 219 patients who completed the therapy reported immediate resolution of symptoms" – Orthopedic Technology Review

"vertebral axial [spinal] decompression was successful in 71% of the 778 cases" – Journal of Neurological Research

"good to excellent" relief in 86% patients with Herniated discs" – The American Journal of Pain Management

"decompression therapy reported a 76.5% with complete remission and 19.6% with partial remission of pain and disability" – Rio Grande Hospital, Department of Neurosurgery

Another study presented at the American Academy of Pain Management in 2007 showed…

"Patients reported a mean 88.9% improvement in back pain and better function…No patient required any invasive therapies (e.g. epidural injections, surgery)."

As you can see, spinal decompression has a high success rate . What this means for you is that in just a matter of weeks, you could be back on the golf course, enjoying your love life, or traveling again.

In response to: 'Trash can Destruction'

I had to laugh when I read the rant about trash can damage from the person who apparently buys designer cans for $50. I bought my trashcan (on sale) for about $10 when I moved here 15 years ago and it's still going strong.

Bicycle and bar event was ridiculous

The bike and bar event in New Smyrna Beach was absolutely ridiculous. Our beachside was riddled with about 1,500 drunken people on bikes; there was urination in the streets, open containers, trash in people's yards. It looked like the police turned their heads to a lot of DUIs.

The merchants and bars have a good thing going here. Why jeopardize this by drinking and driving? You can get a DUI by driving a bike. It is only a matter of time before someone gets killed and the city and the bars will be open to lawsuits. New Smyrna Beach doesn't need that kind of craziness.

I wondered what Mothers Against Drunk Driving would think about that and we certainly don't need them picketing in our streets.

It is such an inspiring photo. You look at it and it just makes you feel like there is something right in the world after all. I wanted him to know it made, not only myself, but also a lot of people feel really good.

Legal drinking and riding?

Legal drinking and driving approved in New Smyrna Beach — that's sure what it appeared to be Saturday, June 22. I am, of course, referring to the bike and bar fiasco supported and encouraged by an excess of 1,400 cyclists swerving all over New Smyrna Beach, including heavy traffic areas A1A, Saxon and the crowded roads on beachside.

Alcohol was in abundance and no law enforcement seemed to be prevalent to monitor their alcohol level. These cyclists were on main roads. This would have been done if the bikers were behind cars and they were on motorcycles. Many of these cyclists were underage with alcohol ready and wanting for them. It was precarious from automobile drivers, who not only had difficulty navigating these alcohol influenced vehicle operators, but also had to navigate with cyclists clearly not obeying the rules of the road. To top it off, the area was littered with debris. Who came up with this dangerous idea? Where is our town leadership?

Do we need that post office?

If a post office is only open four hours a day on weekdays, then I say that post office doesn't need to be open at all.

ORMOND BEACH

Market stroll

Thanks to the Ormond Beach commissioners

I haven't driven up the beach in a while, so after dinner with my wife the other night we drove up the beach toward the Granada Street exit. I want to say thank you, to the Ormond Beach commissioners and Volusia County administration, for granting a permit to close down the beach.

Once again the commissioners have asked the people of Ormond Beach to vote to spend money on a new park. It's a nice new park. We did not vote on closing the beach to residents. "But it is for the children," I can hear you say. Yea, yea, it's the old Democrats "it's for the children" ploy. And we really believe you. If it's for the children, where have you been for all these years?

I am personally fed up with the political elite class that think they are the grantors of liberties that continue to dupe citizens and take away the people's rights. Perhaps they are rousing up the citizenry to elect people with a brain and reverse the abuse of the power-hungry political class.

Is it true you are considering a beach tag system to additionally tax the people that want to just walk on the beach or enjoy the sun and sand? How many people would you have to hire to walk the beach and hand out tickets?

In response to: 'Cruises are a curse'

My husband and I have been on 13 cruises and are going on our 14th in September (can you believe Carnival?) We have cruised four different lines and have never experienced any of the problems that "Cruises are a curse" had. We have had a couple of cancelled ports, one due to weather and another a medical emergency on board, but these things cannot always be helped.

Cruising is a business and you can bet they don't want to make a lot of passengers unhappy if they can help it. We feel so fortunate to live in an area where we can drive a few hours and have access to so many ports. We also get great rates by being Florida residents and watching the prices. We just drove to New Jersey and back and it cost us $1,400 for a week. Four of the nights we spent with family and three in a hotel. You can do a seven-night cruise for that with all of your meals, room, transportation, entertainment and even tips.

Speaking of tips I find it hard to believe your server said he shouldn't even serve you dinner the last night on board! You usually don't tip until the last night, or if you prepaid he had no way of knowing if you were going to give him extra the last evening.

We've never had a toilet that wouldn't flush. We did have one run over in the middle of the night once and within 30 minutes there were plumbers in our room fixing the toilet while my husband and I laid in bed. We have always had great food and service and have never gotten sick from the food. My husband has picked up a couple of airborne colds though. We are always careful to wash our hands and use the sanitizer every time we pass it.

To sum this all up, I am sorry that "Cruises are a curse" had such a bad experience. I hope that he will give it another try for his wife's sake.

No junk on food stamps

I purchased gas the other day. While I was paying, there was a girl in her 20s paying at the next register. I heard her ask the cashier, do you accept EBT? The cashier said yes. The girl was purchasing two Red Bulls and some Starbursts. She paid using her EBT card. I asked my cashier what EBT was. She said food stamps. I said, "I as a taxpayer, just paid for her Red Bull and Starbursts." If someone is on food stamps, I don't deny them, but it should be for basic food groups not Red Bull and candy. This is a travesty. Why aren't people revolting over this?

Fireworks and safe grilling for the 4th of July weekend

Every year in the United States, we celebrate the Fourth of July with community parades, picnics, barbecues, and fireworks — the things of which happy memories are made. But sadly, Independence Day also includes tragic events resulting from fireworks use. The safest way to enjoy them is through public displays conducted by professional pyro-technicians hired by communities.

Learning fireworks safety tips also can help ensure that everyone has a happy and safe summer holiday.

What Can I Do?

•The best way to protect your family is not to use any fireworks at home — period. Attend public fireworks displays and leave the lighting to the professionals.

•Kids should never play with fireworks. Sparklers can reach 1,800 degrees Fahrenheit (982 degrees Celsius) — hot enough to melt gold.

•Steer clear of others — fireworks have been known to backfire or shoot off in the wrong direction. Never throw or point fireworks at someone, even in jest.

•Don't allow kids to pick up pieces of fireworks after an event. Some may still be ignited and can explode at any time.

•Think about your pet. Animals have sensitive ears and can be extremely frightened or stressed on the Fourth of July. Keep pets indoors to reduce the risk that they'll run loose or get injured.

Grilling Fire Safety Tips

•Propane and charcoal BBQ grills must only be used outdoors. If used indoors, or in any enclosed spaces such as tents, they pose a fire hazard and a risk of exposing occupants to deadly carbon monoxide poisoning.

•Do not overfill the propane tank.

•Place the grill a safe distance from lawn games, play areas and foot traffic. Grills should be positioned at least 10 feet away from siding, deck railing, and out from under eaves and overhanging branches.

•Keep matches, lighters and starter fluid out of the reach of children in a locked drawer or cabinet.

•Keep children and pets away from the grill area: declare a three-foot "kid-free zone" around the grill.

•Use long barbecue mitts and long-handled grilling tools to protect the chef from heat and flames when cooking.

•Periodically remove grease or fat buildup in trays below the grill so it cannot be ignited by a hot grill.

On behalf of Interim Chief Dru Driscoll and the Daytona Beach Fire Department, have a happy, safe, and enjoyable Independence Day.

Economy got only slight push in 2012

VOLUSIA BUSINESS
CECIL G. BRUMLEY

A definitive report on the jobs and wages was just released and it showed about what I expected. The Volusia County economy was growing in 2012, but not much.

For the year, Volusia employers had 149,947 workers in an average month compared to 149,146 in 2011. The monthly average for wages, on an annualized basis, was $34,847 in 2012 compared to $33,858 in 2011. The numbers are based on reports that employers file with their unemployment compensation insurance premium payments.

While the gains weren't much, they did set up the county for more improvement in 2013. So far that's what the estimates are showing as the state labor department has the unemployment rate steadily declining. The jobless rate was at 7 percent in May and the more it edges toward 5 percent, the more wage gains you'll see, which, added to what the tourists and retirees spend, should reverberate throughout the county economy.

Home builders aren't slowing down any in Volusia. In May, permits were obtained for 98 new houses, nearly double the 55 that were obtained in May 2012. It's still not exactly booming, but there's hope the monthly average will get above 100 before this year is over.

The big change is that Daytona Beach and Port Orange are no longer the areas seeing the most new home construction. In Daytona Beach, nine houses were started compared to eight last year. In Port Orange, eight new houses were started compared to 12 last year.

So where are all the houses getting built? In May, 31 houses were started in DeLand compared to 10 last year. In New Smyrna Beach, there were 28 housing starts compared to five last year.

One reason you'll continue to see a lot of houses going up in DeLand and New Smyrna Beach is that both cities have huge developments with Victoria Park and Venetian Bay, respectively. Both also have some smaller subdivisions with plenty of buildable lots. That doesn't mean home building is going to stay down in other areas, though. There are still plenty of places to build in Daytona and Port Orange. You also can expect housing starts to pick up in Edgewater and Ormond Beach.

Commercial real estate has been extremely active lately, especially with SunTrust continuing to sell its bank offices. The Atlanta-based bank is still trying to recover and one easy way is sell real estate, and then lease the offices back. Recently it sold five offices in Volusia – two in DeLand and one each in Daytona Beach Shores, Holly Hill and Edgewater – to Orlando-based National Retail Properties for a total of $8.17 million.

In an interesting, but not that huge of a deal, Douglas Martin and Garrett Klayer bought the former Nevada Bob's building at 155 W. International Speedway Blvd. for $570,000. Buddy Budiansky and Ron Frederick of Prudential Commercial Real Estate FL represented the seller of the 12,039-square-foot building, PYF LLC. Robert Martin of Exit Realty Martin Group represented the buyer Martin Klayer Properties LLC. Mr. Martin and Mr. Klayer will move their accounting firm, Martin Klayer & Associates PL, there from Martin Business Park on Nova Road.

So, naturally, Mr. Budiansky and Mr. Frederick then negotiated the sale of the Martin Business Park, 1440 N. Nova Road, Holly Hill, from Robert Martin to Nova Commerce Center LLC, which is led by Michael Mollis, for $1.55 million. The Prudential brokers represented both the buyer and the seller. Tenants in the center, which consists of three brick buildings with a total of 45,000 square feet of space, include Exit Martin Realty, Fastenal and Coast to Coast Marketing. Exit Martin also manages 7,000 square feet of executive office space there.

In a couple of other deals, California-based Realty Income Corp. bought the Walgreens property at 1925 Providence Blvd. in Deltona for $2.86 million and Global Signal of Houston bought the RaceTrac property at 2080 S. Woodland Blvd. in DeLand for $900,000.

Finally, a spot to keep an eye on, an investment firm has taken possession out of bankruptcy the large commercial parcel at Airport Road and Williamson Boulevard, across the road from Cypress Head in Port Orange. The property was valued at $1 million and you can't help but think something could get built on it soon.

Despite its budget shortfall, Votran is seeing an increase in riders but not enough increase in revenue.

"The fair revenue and revenue that we are generating to offset those costs isn't increasing at the same rate," Mr. Sherrer said. "It's becoming more expensive to provide service and we are running out of carryover from previous budgets."

The increase in special rates such as all day passes and 30 day passes is also increasing.

"The one day pass is $3 to board the bus as much as you want for a 24 hour period. The use of those passes is increasing. That means we generate less revenue per boarding," Mr. Sherrer said.

There are several options being considered to address the budget shortfall.

"The options that are on the table for the County Council are multiple. Not one thing can solve the issue, it will take multiple solutions," county spokesman Dave Byron said. "We have talked about increasing rates, cutting costs and raising additional revenue through a sale tax of some kind. We get more revenue or we cut through."

Votran will also face a new challenge in 2014 when Sun Rail opens a train station in Debary.

"We will provide access to the station. It will be funded by the Florida Department of Transportation, but that will be a small amount," Mr. Sherrer said. "The challenge will be providing a service which people can utilize because it's going to be limited."

Residents showed their support, but also addressed concerns at the meeting.

"I use Votran. I like that we have night and Sunday service," Scott Larsen said. "Whatever the county decides, be aware of those with disabilities."

"We use Votran a lot for our students," said Doug Hall, a case manager for the Division of Blind Services. "I am amazed at the changes made over the years since it first started in the 1970s. My hope is that they find out ways to address the funding problems."

"We need to keep Votran going to keep our restaurants, hospitals and hotels fully operational," Skip Keaning said. "I don't think we want another tax to do so, but we do need the services."

"Votran is a bedrock of our community. The riders are hard working people who want to work," Robert Kelly said. "This is important to people who cannot drive."

"I always use the paratransit service. I don't want it to go away," Patricia Lipopski said. "I have used other transit systems across the state while traveling and Votran is the best."

County officials were optimistic following the meeting.

"I think we met our goal to provide a broad understanding of the challenges that Votran is facing," Mr. Byron said. "We had a lot of Votran support here. The constituents of Votran for the most part have no other options. The problem is wherever we cut we are taking transportation from those that don't have another option. It's a difficult situation. Any increase will have a significant impact on our riders."

tor Mike Abels, IMA-CM, encouraged the group to narrow them down.

"You don't have the resources to do all of these," Mr. Abels advised. "What I would propose is that you do no more than three or four."

The group agreed to:

•Identify critical county or regional issues, bring together more stakeholders, develop solutions and explore funding.

•Achieve communication, coordination and cooperation among local governments.

•Foster partnerships to create innovative solutions to emerging county and regional challenges.

There is a tendency for the lines between VCOG's and the league's purposes to overlap in people's minds, Ms. Swiderski said in a phone interview.

"The League of Cities deals with educating the individual official on how to be a better leader," she explained. "VCOG is for local governments to deal with issues which cross jurisdictional borders."

Issues such as homelessness, spay and neuter programs, and airport noise abatement to name just a few.

New Smyrna Beach Mayor and VCOG Chair Adam Barringer said he liked the idea of a less structured meeting format, which would be allowed under the league — a 501c4 organization not held to the Sunshine Law.

"You wouldn't have the media taking something way out of context if you have a glass of wine or a drink," Mayor Barringer said.

Orange City Mayor Tom Laputka said he likes the way VCOG meetings are structured because there is an agenda.

Ormond Beach Mayor Ed Kelley is in favor of cooperation between himself and his peers throughout Volusia, whatever the forum.

"Together we can do more than we can individually," Mayor Kelley said, "whether it's VCOG or COGV or V League."

Deltona's absence bothers him.

Last August, Volusia's most populous city opted out of the intergovernmental alliance, instead retaining membership in Team Volusia, an intergovernmental agency aimed at economic development, Deltona's mantra.

At the time, commissioners cited the city's $30,000 annual expenditure for membership as the primary reason for leaving.

At the VCOG 360 workshop, Deltona Commissioner Heidi Herzberg said she was "the lone no vote" in Deltona's decision to drop out.

"We can't continue without the largest city in Volusia County," Mayor Kelley said.

City officials agreed the economic climate and changes in elected leadership have threatened the organization.

DeLand Mayor Bob Apgar said VCOG must be structured to sustain regardless of economic and political conditions.

"My commission seemed to want to be isolationists from the beginning," Commissioner Herzberg said. "When you have a representative that doesn't want to be part of an organization, the information is going to be very filtered and very one sided."

She said it's possible Deltona's newer elected officials will reconsider the decision made by their predecessors and opt to re-join VCOG.

Ms. Swiderski said when Deltona left "it started other (same-way leaning) conversations."

Edgewater Mayor Mike Thomas illustrated the need for unity by drawing a picture of Volusia County with dots representing each city to depict the county's somewhat unique geographical divergence.

His point: space creates distance, not just logistically but also in mindset. Without a common-ground meeting of the minds, the mayor said he fears more isolation.

"It's an hour from my house to Pierson," Mayor Thomas said. "I've learned so much from these meetings. I say if it ain't broke don't fix it."

Volusia County Councilwoman Deb Denys agreed with Mayor Thomas.

"We're geographically the size of Rhode Island," Councilwoman Denys said. "It's the equivalent of trying to get every city in Rhode Island to sing Kumbaya and all get along."

Mayor Barringer said Volusia County Council Chair Jason Davis has caused a deeper divide between cities and the County.

"When Frank Bruno was here … if there was ever an issue we felt very comfortable with Frank Bruno. That's changed," Mayor Barringer said. "Whether you liked it or whether you didn't you could always talk to Frank Bruno."

Councilwoman Denys said VCOG member cities have the right to request a new council representative.

"I'm here," she said. "Don't let a personality get in the way of us doing business."

In a phone interview, Council Chair Davis said he received a letter from Ms. Swiderski after the meeting requesting a new county representative.

"If they want another representative, they can have another representative," he said. "As the County Council Chair, I'm very, very busy all of the time and I can't get to every single meeting. It's very difficult for county officials to run all over the place to get to all of these meetings."

He explained many meetings are conducted simultaneously and he has to prioritize.

Council Chair Davis said he has never turned away any discussion with city officials.

"I've been open and honest with every mayor and I've been available for every single mayor from Ormond Beach all the way down to Oak Hill and Edgewater, New Smyrna, Port Orange … all of them," he said.

As far as VCOG is concerned, he said Volusia County Government is the council.

"I don't like redundancy in government," he said. "I was hired by the citizens of Volusia County to (eliminate) waste and balance the budget, deal with issues which are pertinent to citizens."

"They do charge us a very large amount of money every year to be a member of their little organization," he added.

He said he believes the league should be held to the Sunshine Law because elected officials are present at the organization's meetings.

"There's a gray line there and I'm going to err on the side of caution," he said.

Volusia County School Board Vice Chairwoman Candace Lankford said "naming is power" and VCOG is a positive brand.

She said combining VCOG and the league could dilute emphasis.

"There's nothing wrong or negative with Volusia League of Cities," Ms. Lankford said. "It's a different connotation."

Recent issues with community redevelopment areas and the gas tax linger in Mayor Barringer's mind.

"When CRAs faced us throughout Volusia County, we all came together and addressed the county together," he said.

Ultimately Mayor Barringer and everyone seated around the table agreed there is safety in numbers.

Going forward, the organization may look at changes, including whether or not they will retain the building used for staff offices and meetings.

Mayor Barringer suggested the possibility of meeting in the different cities, saying Ms. Swiderski could have an office at DeLand City Hall.

"As long as New Smyrna Beach pays the rent," Mayor Apgar joked.

"They said 'we want to keep VCOG' and that was heard loud and clear," Ms. Swiderski said. "I was willing to play ball any way they want. The most important thing is that we use this tool that's available to local governments."

The big name entertainment this year is Sheryl Crow, whose long list of hits include "All I Wanna Do," "Soak Up The Sun" and her latest single, "Easy," will perform a 60-minute concert at about 5:30 p.m. before the Coke Zero 400. The summer race weekend at DIS always includes a lot of patriotic activities.

For the fifth consecutive year, DIS will honor four Congressional Medal of Honor recipients. This year's honorees, all U.S. Army veterans of the Vietnam War, are 2nd Lt. Walter J. "Joe" Marm, Sgt. 1st Class Gary Littrell, Spc. 4th Class Robert Patterson and Major Bruce Crandall.

After the Coke Zero 400, Fireworks By Santore will illuminate the sky above DIS with a 15-minute show shot from 15 different locations along the backstretch.

Traffic will be heavy with 100,000 race fans expected. Daytona Beach Police suggest drivers wanting to avoid peak traffic from 3 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Friday and 1 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. Saturday, to take roadways, such as Nova Road, Ridgewood Avenue and Atlantic Avenue for routine travel. Motorists on Interstates 4 and 95 and U.S. 92 trying to get to the beach, are urged to use Granada Boulevard (State Road 40) or Dunlawton Avenue (State Road 421). For complete traffic information, visit http://www.daytonainternationalspeedway.com/Articles/2013/06/Public-Service-Announcement.aspx

DIS has several special ticket offers for the races, including the 88 Experience with Dale Earnhardt Jr., the 48 Experience with Jimmy Johnson and the Kasey Kahne Combo. However, some special offers may already be sold out. There also are special sales connected to charities, including one that donates $20 of each adult ticket sold to the Moffitt Cancer Center. For that ticket, go to daytonainternationalspeedway.com/Moffitt. For more ticket information, call (800) 748-7467 or visit http://www.daytonainternationalspeedway.com/Tickets-Events/Events/2013/Coke-Zero-400/Ticket-Info.aspx

Also during the weekend, DIS will officially break ground on the $400 million reconstruction of its grandstands with actual work starting on July 6.

Art notes

Social messages abound in new show at Ormond Memorial Art Museum

For artists Artuco Chicaiza and Pat Kumicich, the messages in their work are far from subliminal.

Mr. Chicaiza's paintings contain social messages that are often quotes from famous people. Starting with one of her very first quilts dedicated to her mother's decline into Alzheimer's, Ms. Kumicich decided to tell her own stories on fabric.

Works by both artists will be on display at the Ormond Memorial Art Museum, 78 E. Granada Blvd., Ormond Beach, starting July 6, followed by a formal opening July 12. The exhibit will close Aug. 30.

The museum and gardens are open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily and from noon to 4 p.m. on weekends.

Museum publication, 'Reflections II,' receives Florida Book Award

The Museum of Arts & Sciences publication "Reflections II, Watercolors of Florida 1835-2000 from the Collection of Cici and Hyatt Brown," authored by Gary R. Libby, received the Bronze award in the Visual Arts category of the 7th Annual Florida Book Awards.

The book accompanies the exhibition of the same name, which made its debut at the Museum of Arts & Sciences in November 2011.

The Reflections II volume presents a broad, full-color survey of watercolors of Florida in all styles, cataloging 165 years by the most significant artists working in Florida.

The award-winning book is available at both the museum gift shop and at www.moas.org.

Pollution in one river, shrimp in the other

FISHING WITH DAN

DAN SMITH

There has been a lot written about the poor quality of the water in the Mosquito Lagoon.

All of it has been understated.

Recently I spent a morning on the Northern Lagoon and I won't soon forget what I found there.

A while back Capt. Leo Hiles had called me to say that a brown tide was creeping up from the Indian River Lagoon System to the south. He said when you couple that with the algae bloom that had plagued the Lagoon for over a year, trouble was on the horizon. I had made one recent trip to the extreme Southern part of the Mosquito Lagoon and sure enough the water was off, but I was less than worried.

Now on this morning, I dropped my 16-foot Carolina Skiff in at the free ramp at Turtle Mound and right from the get-go I knew there was a problem.

The deep water around the mound was unusually murky. First, I ran south toward Eldora, turning west to fish around Orange Island. I stopped at a little point that has provided me with schooling trout action for many years. I was stunned at what I encountered.

The always clear shallow water was now a thick mustard colored emulsion. A dank odor hit my nose as soon as the boat slowed. When I did cast, I had nary a bite. That would be the first time I had ever fished that spot without a hit.

Thinking the water had to be better to the north, I put the Carolina up on plane and headed for Government Cut. Moving into the Cedar Creek area, I found the water quality to be no better and maybe even worse.

In all of my 45 years of fishing the Mosquito Lagoon, I have never witnessed such a mess.

Down through the years, I have come to expect poor water quality in the Northern Halifax where I live.

As I have complained for many years, the construction of bridges and causeways has dammed up the river until there is little tidal flow. Each time we have a big rain event, the Halifax becomes polluted from runoff and remains that way for months until a strong storm comes along to flush it out to the inlet.

Whenever that happened, I was always envious of the swift tidal flow in the Mosquito Lagoon. It had always seemed to me that area could dump any pollutants into the Atlantic with each tide.

Apparently I was wrong.

The nasty, yellow water has been there for some time with no signs of leaving.

According to Capt. Leo, the Lagoon will also require a storm to finally clean it out. The scientists are saying the brown tide and algae will not harm the fish. I can't buy that.

At the very least, it will affect the very bottom of the food chain. The filter feeding shellfish will surely die. I don't know what the solution is, but smarter folks than I must do something and quickly.

Mosquito Lagoon is the gem of Volusia County and responsible for many millions of dollars in commerce. We can't let it die.

In the Halifax, the water quality is surprisingly good. No signs of brown tide or an algae bloom and the recent heavy rains did little damage there.

Big reds are around north of Granada, but the great trout bite we have enjoyed for the past year and a half has slowed.

There is still some spotted sea trout around the docks and bridges, but you must fish in the dark.

The shrimp are gearing up for a summer run. A few days ago, I took my 17-foot Polar up to High Bridge to see if the guys were doing any good. I joined six or seven other boats there, but soon found the work was too much for the yield. In two hours, I had only around 100 bait shrimp. That won't do it for me. By the time this gets to print, I hope the shrimp run is in full swing.

If you see the boats gathering in the Halifax, join them and get your share.

Dan Smith has fished the waters of Volusia County for more than 40 years. Email questions and comments to fishwdan@att.net. His book, "I Swear the Snook Drowned," is available for $10.95 at (386) 441-7793.
