TREASURE COAST — The goal was to hire 100 veterans in 100 days.

But days short of the Nov. 11 deadline, Workforce Solutions has already hired more than twice as many veterans across the Treasure Coast.

"We're actually shooting toward 250," said Debby Coxwell, director of programs at Workforce Solutions.

Scientists aim to grow bird population

MARTIN COUNTY — Biologists have released 10 red-cockaded woodpeckers in Martin County as part of an effort to save the federally endangered species.

Officials from the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Committee released the birds in the John G. and Susan H. Dupuis Jr. Wildlife and Environmental Area, which straddles Martin and Palm Beach counties.

They also released three pairs in the J.W. Corbett Wildlife Management Area, just south of Martin County.

"The goal is to basically boost populations in areas that don't have a lot of birds," said FWC spokeswoman Carli Segelson. "These woodpeckers are very rare, because they require open stands of old-growth pine."

MARTIN COUNTY — After almost two years of planning, the Vietnam Veterans of America Chapter 1041 in Martin County succeeded in bringing the Vietnam traveling memorial wall to Martin County for what was a very emotional four days.

Ed Maxwell, first vice president of Chapter 1041, said the replica has been in existence for about six to eights years and originated in Melbourne. This is the first time the wall made the trip to Halpatiokee Regional Park in Martin County, though.

"It's a physical monument you can look at and say 'at least their names will live forever'," Mr. Maxwell said.

From Oct. 25 through 28 Mr. Maxwell explained that any time, rain or shine, he could look out at the 300-foot-long wall and see 60 or 70 people. Even Hurricane Sandy, which brushed the area on Friday, Oct. 26, didn't deter visitors, who came from across the state, he said.

"Some of these people were coming to grips with a friend or a loved one killed in the war," Mr. Maxwell said.

"It's a healing experience for some vets, but some still can't even go to the wall because it's just too hard."

Vietnam veteran Thomas Cundy was one of this year's visitors who had never been to the wall in Washington.

Nonprofit to provide holiday meals for 100

By Samantha Joseph
sjoseph@hometownnewsol.com

MARTIN COUNTY — On Nov. 16 about 100 guests will sit down for a hot Thanksgiving meal, courtesy of the Salvation Army of Martin County.

For many of the guests, this will be their only opportunity for a traditional meal that holiday.

In recent years, nonprofits across the county have reported sharp growth in their client rosters as area families struggle in a tight economy.

And with the holidays approaching, officials said local groups want to provide meals for some of the hardest-hit residents.

"The majority are homeless or low-income people," said Judith C. Jones, public relations and volunteer coordinator for the Martin County arm of the Salvation Army, an international Christian organization.

The dinner is set for between 5 and 6 p.m. at the local group's Stuart offices, 821 Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd. No reservations are required.

"It's open to anyone who wants a hot Thanksgiving meal," Ms. Jones said.

House of Hope, a local nonprofit working to empower people to overcome hardship and hunger in Martin County, is also doing its part to ensure clients have Thanksgiving meals.

Through its annual holiday program, the group gives hundreds of qualifying clients free turkeys and gift cards for area grocery stores.

Last year, the program distributed cards to 250 households during Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter.

The cards had an average value of $25, and clients got them in addition to free food and other services from the organization.

"About 100 families might come at Thanksgiving time and get additional assistance," said Diane Tomasik, House of Hope's communications director.

arrest affidavit.

Police said the man tried to barge into the guests' room and threatened them with his handgun until police arrived on the scene.

"During their investigation officers learned that Rollinson had been involved in a verbal confrontation with a couple staying at a room in the hotel during which he had attempted to push his way into the room. After unsuccessfully gaining entry into the room Rollinson stated he was going to get his gun," Stuart Police Department spokesman Mike Pope said in a statement.

"Shortly thereafter, Rollinson returned with a duffel bag and when the male in the room opened the door, Rollinson pulled the gun from a duffel bag, chambered a round and pointed it at the male's head. Rollinson then ran away and was observed by a security officer going in to another room."

Police searched the room and found the gun hidden in a bag.

Officer Andrew Pine arrested Mr. Rollinson, of 9854 Perfect Drive, Port St. Lucie, and charged him with possession of a firearm by a convicted felon and aggravated assault with a firearm.

At press time, Mr. Rollinson remained at the Martin County Jail pending $25,000 bond.

Sheriff

For more than half a century it has guided many of his major decisions, including the controversial ones of recent months that put a wedge between the longtime sheriff and some in his political party.

"I try, whenever I've had an important decision to make, to get some insight from the teachings of the Bible," he said. "It's generally kept me from making some mistakes."

Every deputy the sheriff has sworn in has taken the oath on this book, and he's read it before making every major decision.

He read it before he made the unpopular decision of backing Democratic gubernatorial candidate Alex Sink over Republican Rick Scott in a mostly Republican county — in a move that many thought cost him the Republican congressional nomination.

He read it again before endorsing Democrat Patrick Murphy over Tea Party favorite Allen West for Congress because he said the area needed more moderate representation.

"You have to take risks. Every law enforcement officer who serves has had to risk his own safety to serve the ultimate good and protect other people," he said. "I've done that much of my life, even in elementary school, standing up against bullies."

Decades in the spotlight taught him to measure risk and spot opportunities for change.

When the sheriff first took office, the average deputy earned less than $20,000 annually, and many officers were on food stamps. He worked with county commissioners to increase salaries, education and training for staff. The office's budget grew to $55 million, up from a few hundred thousand. Departments have emerged with chains of command and structural order.

Over the years, the office has evolved into an operation where teams of about six serve under sergeants and about 15-18 percent of the personnel have significant ranks.

One of the region's longest serving sheriffs, Mr. Crowder was responsible for getting state and national accreditation for the sheriff's office and jail. But his accomplishments came amid harsh criticism for some of his controversial political choices. As he looks back though, the sheriff says he wishes his job had nothing to do with politics.

"The office of sheriff is a partisan-elected office. I think it should remain an elected office, but I'm starting to seriously question whether or not it should be partisan," he said.

"There are people today who want to press issues and want to enforce political issues. If the sheriff was a nonpartisan office, he wouldn't have to consider pleasing certain people to get their favor."

He is set to leave office on Jan. 7, 2013. He said he has no plans to pursue other political posts, but will instead spend time on recreational pursuits.

Nominees must be Martin County public school students in seventh, eighth or 12th grades. The deadline for nominations is noon Dec. 10. Nomination forms and guidelines are available at character-counts.net or by calling (772) 283-4800, Ext. 234.

have really mixed feelings," Mr. Cundy said. "I feel like my friends shouldn't be on that wall, but I'm happy they're at least being honored for what they went through."

The wall was free to visit and was brought to Martin County because of donations collected over two years of planning by the vets themselves. There are no current plans to bring the wall back to the area.

There was an opening ceremony and entertainment from local musicians. Chapter 1041 raised funds for its organization through beverage sales, raffles and different vendors that participated at the event.

"Not everyone can go to Washington and it's important because it helps everyone realize the cost of war," Mr. Maxwell said.

embraced the program, organizers said, taking advantage of incentives and welcoming the skill sets that former military personnel bring to the workplace.

"We're very pleased," Workforce Solutions spokeswoman Odaly Victorio said. "We're excited that employers have stepped up. The campaign helped to raise awareness that our veteran population brings certain skills to the table and this is giving them an opportunity."

Among those hiring veterans were Papa John's Restaurant, Aegis, AMI Staffing, The Continental Group and Best Buy.

Workforce Solutions, a state-charted agency launched the campaign on Aug. 3 to put 100 veterans to work in as many days in Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Okeechobee counties.

The group was responding to widespread unemployment among the region's veterans.

Its "100 Heroes 100 Days" campaign lets it work with local businesses to find qualified ex-military personnel to fill vacant job slots.

The group launched the campaign to put veterans to work by reaching out to businesses in Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Okeechobee counties.

It works with qualified ex-military personnel to fill vacant job slots.

Plus, hiring veterans could lead to financial benefits under the Vow to Hire Heroes Act of 2011.

It's a win-win because employers can receive federal credits of up to $9,600 for every veteran they hire.

Across the region, more than 5,100 veterans are looking for work, according to Workforce Solutions' counts.

"There are many ceremonies and opportunities to thank a veteran on Veterans Day, but I can't imagine a better way to thank them then to give them an opportunity of employment," Richard Stetson, president and CEO of Workforce Solutions said.

Hooking your computer to your TV

COMPUTE THIS
SEAN MCCARTHY

About 10 years ago, I wrote a column about hooking up a computer to the TV in the living room so you could switch over to email, video chat or do a quick web search during commercials.

Sure, it could be done, but was it really worth it? Well, in retrospect I don't think so, at least not then anyway.

What I found after the project was completed was that it was just too much of a pain to switch over to the computer so it hardly ever got used. The "old school" TV that I successfully hooked my machine just didn't have the clarity to be able to read and having a loud tower humming away in the entertainment center was too much of a distraction.

Fast forward to 2012 and things are a little easier and a lot more practical.

Today's high-resolution TVs are a far cry from the old heavy picture tube monsters that we were stuck using back then. And most of the TVs available today already have the proper connections already in the back so you don't have to go out and buy a special video card to make it work.

Most new TVs today have a standard PC video input connector in the back as well as two, three or even four HDMI connections available.

And even more encouraging is the fact that most new laptops also come equipped with an HDMI output connection meaning you can connect to the TV with just one cable to carry video and sound.

OK let's go over what is needed in a typical set up to connect your computer to your new TV.

First, you'll need a laptop (preferably one with an HDMI out jack). Yes, a desktop or tower will work, but I've found it's easier with a laptop simply because it's quieter and doesn't require a permanent space in your entertainment center dedicated to computer that's always on. Plus, you can quickly unplug the laptop and take it with you for more up-close-and- personal use when you need to.

Looking at the back of your TV you will want to find either a "PC in" connection or (if your laptop has HDMI) an open HDMI connection. Usually, right next to the PC in connection on the TV you will find an audio in jack that you can use to connect your computer's speaker (or headphone) output into the TV so you can control the volume with your TV remote. If you use an HDMI cable you won't need this, HDMI transmits audio as well as video.

If you choose to connect to the TV with the "PC in" connection you will need a standard 15 pin VGA cable and a 3.5 mm male to male audio cable. But if your laptop does have an HDMI output jack, that's the better way to go.

Next you will probably want to use a USB wireless keyboard and mouse. You can set things up without it, but a wireless keyboard and mouse combination means you can control things from the comfort of your easy chair without having to stretch cables across the room.

Power the computer up and set the TV's input selection to either PC in (or HDMI if you've gone that rout) and at this point, you may be looking at your computer's desktop on your TV. Or you may not.

Once you've connected your laptop to your TV there are a couple changes you may need to make. Some laptops automatically transmit the video out when connected to an external monitor but some require pressing the "Fn" button along with the monitor button to send the signal out to the TV.

Others may require you to go into the computer's control panel and access the video settings to tell it you are using an external monitor.

Another adjustment you will want to make is in the power settings. Frequently,

We dodged a bullet

While the north was completely devastated by hurricane Sandy, the south continued about its daily business of griping about politics and the cold front.

It amazes me how nobody seemed concerned about the welfare of those up north. More emphasis was put on the cooler temperatures and the election than the destruction that was taking place up north. Are we numb to the news? Are we turning a deaf ear? Maybe so. But, with the holidays around the corner, we need to step up.

Bring back the commercials

I don't care who won the blasted election, I just want my commercials back.

Does it matter who wins?

Well, by the time people read this one we will have elected a new president. Now the people who just want that hand out, it really doesn't matter who's president, if they said they believe in handouts that's all the takers want.

Heck, just look at the city we live in. Kids having kids. They were trained real well in how to get onto the welfare wagon. Hey here's an idea: stay with school and learn to be a productive citizen. Your way of life will eventually catch up with you. Government is not designed to foster peoples' livelihoods and we got to get rid of the entitlement mentality that just creates laziness. The trouble with some people is they deep down inside know the truth and it scares the heck out of 'em. Pretty much a case of denial. Time to wake up the people who do want to keep the money they earn, don't want to be supporting freeloaders, better known as welfare, so stop with your dishonesty.

Oh, by the way, either way this election goes our country is in a great deal of trouble, it will take an act of courage to put it on the right track. Oh, for the Obama supporters Obama's plan is a job killer for Florida so when they have to print up more money to pay for stuff and the ones who misuse food stamps buying candy and other junk, when you wonder why you can't buy as much cause the value of the dollar dropped just look in the mirror. Entitlement programs created that chaos. Just so you're aware of the welfare repercussions. You would have known that if you paid attention and not just to stupidity commercials and reality shows.

Illegal statistics

Some 1.7 million young illegal immigrants are poised to come out of the shadows and live and work openly in the U.S. as a result of a sweeping executive order signed by President Obama. His executive order sidestepped a Congress that failed to pass the Dream Act and was a major peace offering to Hispanic voters after the administration deported 1.2 million illegals in the last three years.

The order grants two-year deportation deferrals, work permits, and other benefits such as driver license and Social Security numbers to illegals brought to the United States as children.

The Migration Policy Institute estimates that about 1.2 million people are eligible to apply now, with another 500,000 reaching the minimum eligibility age of 15 in coming years, the Times reported. The largest number of eligible applicants are in California, Florida, New York and Texas.

Editor's note: The Migration Policy Institute states that 1.7 million unauthorized immigrants who were brought to the U.S. could potentially be eligible for a grant of relief of deportation. It further states the deferred action policy will be implemented on a case-by-case basis.

An opinion on Obama

Here is Obama's response when he backed off from his decision to require the military pay for their war injuries.

With bad press, including major mockery of the play by comedian, Jon Stewart, led to Obama's abandoning his proposal to require veterans to carry private health insurance to cover the estimated $540 billion annual cost to the federal government of treatment for injuries to military personal received during their tours of active duty.

The president admitted that he was puzzled by the magnitude of the opposition to his proposal.

"Look, it's an all-volunteer force," Obama said. "Nobody made these guys go to war. They had to have known and accepted the risks. Now, they whine about bearing the costs of their choice. It doesn't compute.

"I wasn't asking for blood, just money. With the country facing the worst financial crisis in history, I'd have thought that the patriotic thing to do would be to try to help reduce the nation's deficit. I guess I underestimated the selfishness of some of my fellow Americans."

How dare this man compare himself as a fellow American? He had a great four-year head start in turning American into a Communist state. Most level-headed Americans now know him for what he is, what he stands for and what he intends to do if he gets another four years.

This cannot and must not happen. To the rest of you mesmerized and uneducated I say, "If Obama does get another four years just remember, we will all be in the same boat. He will no longer play favorites because there will be no favorites."

Editor's note: These "quotes," which are unattributed, were made up and intended as satire by conservative humorist John Semmens on March 21, 2009. They were published as part of his column 'Semi-News, a Satirical Look at Recent News' and were posted online at The Arizona Conservative. For more, go to www.factcheck.org.

Prize is a joke

The European Union was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize last week. This demonstrates the irrelevancy of the Nobel Committee. Many members of the EU are bordering on bankruptcy, experiencing riots and pleading for more bailouts. Many European governments are run by socialist misfits. Our President Obama was given a peace prize when he had barely been in office. It is painfully obvious that the entire exercise is ridiculous. It is a joke, but it ain't funny.

Bad economy worse

During his term in office, we have seen our president make a bad economy worse, much worse. His leftist sound bites may sound good from the pulpit but in the real world, economics rules.

With no better excuses, he has doubled down on his socialistic rhetoric. He has permitted his spokesmen, such as Biden and Reid, to denigrate his opponents.

America cannot afford four more years of this. We could be doing so much better.

Personalized care sets pediatricians apart

By Samantha Joseph
sjoseph@hometownnewsol.com

PALM CITY — When it comes to taking care of the area's smallest patients, little things count to the staff at All About Kids Pediatrics.

The Palm City office is an independent practice that delivers personalized care in a setting designed for comfort.

"We don't have straight-up exam tables, because we don't want kids to be scared when they come to the doctor," said office manager Patricia Cassidy. "Each room is themed to the community, with skate boarding, horse-back riding, school bus, fire truck, western, ocean and sports. It's great for children of all ages, from birth to adolescence."

Opened on Feb. 1, 2008 by 16-year pediatrician and mother of two, Dr. Kristen Walker, the practice's mission is to deliver superior care to children in Palm City and surrounding communities.

The practice has since tripled in size and welcomed onboard Dr. Amanda Peck and nurse practitioner Joan Gautreau.

Its physicians have previously worked for Martin Memorial Health System. But what they bring to patients is the ability to deliver personalized care in a small setting, the office manager said.

"We're a small practice. We're not hooked into to a huge corporation. This gives the pediatricians more freedom to practice medicine as they want to," Ms. Cassidy said. "We can perform circumcisions, frenectomy, treat attention deficit disorder and perform other medical procedures Other doctor offices might send patients to emergency rooms or urgent care cents. Our mission is to provide care to all of the adolescents and newborns in our community. We wanted it to be a smaller practice with more intimate relationships with the people in Palm city and the surrounding communities."

When it comes to payment choices, the practice accepts many different insurance plans and all state insurance programs are welcome. Patients seem to be taking notice.

The practice continues to grow and has increased its staff from three to 12, with hopes of adding another physician next year.

The doctors believe their practice's policy is simple: patient care comes first. For instance, the practice doesn't use a nursing service to field its after-hours calls, like some larger groups.

"If you call you will get one of the doctors. And if they have to meet you in the office on the weekend they will," Ms. Cassidy said.

All About Kids Pediatrics is located at 3573 S.W. Corporate Parkway, Palm City. For more information, call (772) 283-5431.

Tips to help students prevent backpack pain this school year

For Hometown News
NewsFP@hometownnewsol.com

TREASURE COAST —

There are ways to prevent children from developing an injury due to an overloaded backpack.

It is important to make sure students are properly carrying their school supplies in order to prevent muscle fatigue and strain.

The following tips are recommended to prevent injury:

•Use a backpack with wide padded straps and a padded back.

•Firmly tighten backpack straps so the backpack is held two inches above the waist.

•Use a hip strap when backpacks are overloaded to minimize muscle strain.

•Encourage children to make frequent stops at their lockers to unload books between classes.

•Make sure children know how to properly lift a heavy backpack. A child should bend at the knees, use their legs to lift the backpack, and place one shoulder strap on at a time to avoid injury.

Parents should watch for warning signs that a backpack is too heavy. Those include a change in posture , pain, struggling when putting on or taking off the backpack, red marks on the shoulders and tingling or numbness in arms or legs.

Woodpecker

About 25 percent of the country's red-cockaded woodpeckers live in Florida, with the majority living on state-managed land.

The medium-size birds have distinctive white cheek patches and black-and-white barred backs. They get their name from the tiny red patch or "cockade" on males' eyes.

Wildlife officials said the birds live in small family groups with one breeding pair and one or two helpers.

They typically hunt in packs for ants, beetles, caterpillars, wood-boring insects, spiders, cockroaches, fruits and berries.

The helpers, usually males from previous breeding seasons, share responsibility for raising the young. They feed the nestlings and defend them against predators and other dangers.

Biologists working to increase Martin County's woodpecker population relocated the five pairs from Fort Stewart, Ga., where about 300 of the birds make their home.

"They're coming from areas with robust populations that could afford to lose a few and still have healthy numbers," Ms. Segelson said.

For more information about red-cockaded woodpeckers, visit MyFWC.com/Wildlife.

Walk aims to raise awareness of suicide prevention

By Samantha Joseph
sjoseph@hometownnewsol.com

MARTIN COUNTY — Local relatives of a 26-year-old man who committed suicide are turning their family's tragedy into a regional cause.

Rosemary Knight and her teenage daughter, Samantha, have organized a fundraiser to support suicide prevention, after a relative ended his own life last May.

The pair has planned a fundraiser called the Martin County "out of the darkness community walk" to benefit the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention.

The event is set for Dec. 2 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the IndianRiverside Park in Jensen Beach.

"We felt very strongly about it, wanted to raise awareness, raise some funds and get the word out," said Ms. Knight, whose sister married into the family of Danny Martinez, a Broward man who ended his life this year after a long and silent struggle with depression.

"There are so many stories about people committing suicide, even kids," she said.

Organizers are hoping to attract at least 100 walkers who will get sponsors for next month's walk in a bid to create awareness about suicide, and save tens of thousands who end their own lives each year across the nation.

"What I want is for people to see suicide and depression like they see cancer nowadays," said Marisol Martinez, whose son, Danny, committed suicide last May.

"Cancer used to be taboo. If you had it you hid it. But now, you see it, you recognize the signals and get help. That's where I hope we're getting with depression."

The family has created a message they're taking across the region, Ms. Martinez says she's raised about $10,000 for suicide prevention.

Next month's walk is the first of its kind in Martin County, with organizers saying they are passionate to remove the stigma associated with depression.

"The reason I've been involved is I want to bring awareness. The biggest disservice we do is there's no discussion," Ms. Knight said. "There's the impression that you can't suffer from depression. You can't talk about being suicidal because you're weak. There's just a big hush-hush. Suicide is 100 percent preventable."

this week is to escape the confines of the four walls and simply spend plenty of time outdoors, Libra. Your mind will be cleansed.

SCORPIO – Oct. 24-Nov. 22

Scorpio, adventure brings excitement and you are ready for some creative flow of energy and a change of pace. Keep your eyes peeled for all of the opportunities coming your way.

SAGITTARIUS – Nov. 23-Dec. 21

Sagittarius, this week you will take steps toward getting more organized at work and at home. Clean out drawers and closets and remove any clutter that has accumulated.

CAPRICORN – Dec. 22-Jan. 20

You may face a decision that gives you pause from an ethical or humanitarian standpoint, Capricorn. Give it some thought before deciding what to do.

AQUARIUS – Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Aquarius, this week you may want to make a second attempt at something that didn't quite work out the first time. You may be surprised by the results this time around.

PISCES – Feb. 19-March 20

Pisces, your innovative approach could certainly work in your favor this week. Don't be afraid to apply this approach to your finances.

Fishing not great, but not bad, either

FISHING
HENRY CAIMATTO

Well, fishing wasn't quite what I thought it would be for the offshore angler. One thing I kept hearing was the water is cold. Not sure why, but at least there are a few fish to catch.

Trolling was the best, covering from 80-feet out to 150 feet — that was the zone. It was sails and dolphin. Was fishing great? Not exactly but not that bad. Anglers reported two to three sails and the same number of dolphin and no wahoo. Are the wahoo getting smarter or just no one is on target?

If you are out there, please fish the column from top to almost the bottom. Ten percent of the fish feed in the top 10 percent of the water, so what's the problem? No tricks to it. If your baits are swimming well on top, the one below is doing the same. Put some weight at the leader, 24 to 36 ounces will get it done and maybe next week I can talk about wahoo.

Dolphin in the 10- to 20-pound class, a few black fins and plenty of bonita. Look real close at the Bonita there has been some real big black fins taken as of late.

North of the inlet, south of the inlet, on the color line of garbage water from our inlet, there have been reports, no patterns to follow, but one thing that keeps coming up is that 100 feet of depth sounds like a good start.

Beech has settled but the cooler mornings have kept a lot of anglers away, not sure why. It is blue fish and pompano with a mix of Spanish macs weather. Spoons are the preferred baits and clams for the pompano, weighted four macs over 4 pounds, one from the river and the others from the beach.

Still plenty of bait on the

surf's edge and the fish were from north to south. Pomps at the Hobe Sound beach, but there were pompano at just about every other beach. One just has to wait until they find your bait. Long cast then work your bait back slowly, they will find you; they are there. Not a word on snook the jacks are faster.

Red fish in the river, that is the target, and these fish have not been disappointing, all sizes eating all your favored trout lures. Bite time has been most of the day depending on the bait schools. These fish and most of the rest are on the baits to the point that they do not scatter when a boat gets in the mix.

Anglers report reds, snook, trout just hanging around the edge just looking at them. Fat and sassy is a good description. A cast in to the school will find the blues, jacks and lady fish, casting to the edge and you find a hungry one of the other three.

Best get away form the schooling baits, look to the docks, look to the bridges any grass edge, the less light the better, although the water temps are perfect.

Trout is now open all year with the same limits, 15 to 20 inches, four in the bag with one over 20 inches, easy bag to fill.

Reds one a day, but with so many being caught, put them back until it is time to go.

Snook are back to normal from the "great storm." Pick a bridge, wait for the sun to go down and start fishing. Small baits this week, Yozuri crystal minnow has the profile, slow down.

Black drum at the Jensen Bridge have kept many anglers happy with some blues and plenty of macs to make a good day even better. Shrimp is the bait, anytime made it even better.

Cool mornings, time for the jackets. Yuck, this means I may have to put the top up on my car.

Henry Caimatto is the owner of the Snook Nook Bait and Tackle shop in Jensen Beach.
