Nova Canal project aims to solve flooding problems

By Wayne Grant
 wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

VOLUSIA COUNTY — Two months ago East Volusia residents were wading through floodwater and tearing out ruined carpet.

Imagine if that water, instead of flooding streets and homes, could have been sent to West Volusia to recharge wetlands. That could happen if a long-range plan by the new East Volusia Regional Water Authority is successful.

Daytona Beach City Commissioner Richard Shiver, who is on the oversight committee, said he is excited about the project.

"After many, many years of flooding in Daytona Beach, we could finally solve the problem," he said.

The plan, called the "integrated water resource project," calls for a series of pumps and pipes to transport water from the Nova Canal to West Volusia

City is all a Twitter

By Andrew Norris
 For Hometown News

PORT ORANGE — Governmental communication is not usually known for being short and sweet, but a new outlet city officials are taking advantage of will guarantee brevity.

Port Orange has a Twitter page on which they will update residents and businesses about city meetings and events through "tweets."

Tweets are short, 140-character maximum updates posted to a Twitter page, one of the hottest new things in social networking.

"We have the TV station, we have the Web site, and we have the newsletter, but this is just another avenue to communicate with our citizens in Port Orange," said Kent Donahue, special assistant to the city manager. "The idea is to provide instant updates at any time."

Twitter is what's known as a micro-blogging Web site and allows its users to update with tweets either by computer or SMS texts. The Web site allows for the page to have followers, and at press time, the city had 97, many of them local businesses.

Adopting a Twitter page is becoming a more common thing not just for city governments, but educational institutions and large organizations as well.

Steve Orlando, print director for the University of Florida News Media Office, said his department recently acquired a Twitter page.

"It's a new form of social media, it's a new form of communication," Mr. Orlando said. "We're always trying to take advantage of what the new thing is."

City officials have only posted a few tweets so far, with information about events and meetings.

"I guess it's something I would be interested in. It's a faster and easier way to get informed about what's going on," said Port Orange resident and Spruce Creek High School student Brandon Sanichar. "On twitter you can go through and just read the updates, it's a lot more concise."

Port Orange's Twitter page can be accessed at www.twitter.com/cityportorange.

Residents target government spending

By Wayne Grant
 wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

ORMOND-BY-THE-SEA — A presentation on property tax almost became a public uprising over government spending recently in Ormond-by-the-Sea.

Morgan Gilreath, Volusia County property appraiser, explained how property assessments work, and said that taxes could rise dramatically this year for homesteaded properties.

Mr. Gilreath told the public gathering at Riverview United Methodist Church that government spending rose sharply during the housing boom when values kept climbing and bringing in more tax revenue.

Home values have now declined, so there is pressure to raise rates so the county can collect the same amount of money.

The problem is spending, Mr. Gilreath said.

"We're in a world recession for everything except gasoline and government spending," he said.

When Mr. Gilreath explained that county government spending rose from $400 million in 2001 to $800 million in 2006, the audience began discussing what they could do to get spending reduced.

"The only thing we can do is take action," one audience member said. "We have to spread the word that we want a 10-percent cut in spending."

"We need to let them know we'll be at the budget hearings and there will be a fight," said another.

Mr. Gilreath said he didn't mean to cause an uprising. "I didn't come here to start a rabble," he said.

The Save Our Homes Amendment prevents homesteaded properties from increasing in value more than 3 percent per year.

This offers protection from higher taxes when values are rising. When values drop, there is no protection and increased tax rates mean higher taxes, Mr. Gilreath said.

"The Save Our Homes amendment is supposed to solve problems but the real problem

Sam Roberts of South Daytona enjoys the surroundings at the newly opened Sensory Park Gardens off Olive Street in South Daytona.

South Daytona's Sensory Park more than just trees and a pond

By Andreas Butler
 For Hometown News

SOUTH DAYTONA — It may look like just another park, but the Sensory Park, which sits on two and a half acres at 755 Olive Street, offers something different in recreation.

It is designed to engage the senses of smell, touch, sound and sight.

The park's features include several gardens, a retention pond, benches, a trail that circles the entire park, a gazebo, picnic table and a fountain with a distinct sound. Both the fountain and pond are lit at night.

The park aids in storm water retention, is more handicap accessible and can serve as an educational tool.

"It's just a beautiful place for people to come out and enjoy," said Greg Bartholomew, South Daytona Parks and Recreation director. "There really isn't any other park like this in our area. The Museum of Arts and Science and Conklin Center for the Blind have similar trails but not quite like this."

The park opened this spring after a year of construction costing $400,000.

Funds came from a Volusia County Echo grant and the Florida Recreational Assistance Program through the Florida Department of Environmental Protection.

Storm water retention was originally the only intent for the park, Mr. Bartholomew said.

"We bought this piece of property with that in mind," Mr. Bartholomew said. "We have had flooding issues on the north side of the city in the past."

Adjacent to the park is Stevens Canal, which runs north to south. Historically, it took storm water from Beville Road but often overflowed and flooded homes on the other side of the canal.

Mr. Bartholomew said the retention pond in the sensory park should help put an end to the flooding issues.

"Water is piped into the retention pond and if it fills, water is diverted to the canal," he said. "This allows us to retain more water and recover faster."

The beautiful property prompted city officials to consider more than just a retention pond.

"When we obtained this property it also contained some oak trees and playground equipment. We decided to create a park instead of fencing in the pond," Mr. Bartholomew said. "We saved the upland area and wanted to provide something nice for the community."

The main attraction of the park are the gardens, which contain a wide variety of plant life that are both native and foreign to Florida.

Three oak trees provide shade for the Shade Garden. The garden contains plants that thrive in shade like the English ivy, lady palm, purple queen and Boston fern.

The Fragrance Garden goes straight to the nose. There are the scents of gardenia, night blooming jasmine and anise, which smells like licorice.

Flexible hours help workers, community

By Wayne Grant
wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

Like many young people growing up in Volusia County, Leanne Siegfried didn't know if she would stay or leave for greener pastures after college.

But the young attorney has found a fulfilling career, and has stayed in the area she calls "an amazing place to live."

Ms. Siegfried said her employer, Cobb Cole, a local law firm, has a "Working Smarter" program that helped convince her to stay in the area.

The Working Smarter program allows employees to spend time outside of the office during business hours to do volunteer work.

"Being able to volunteer lets me give back to the community that gave me such a good start," Ms. Siegfried said.

She is able to pursue her career in law, plus get involved in community organizations such as Pace Center for Girls.

Heather Vargas, a partner at the firm, said that while many law firms concentrate on billing hours, Cobb Cole wants its young attorneys to be "well-rounded people who are known in the community."

The company received the Michael K. Reese Quality of Life Award in June from the Young Lawyers Division of the Florida Bar.

The award is given annually to a firm that advances balance and fulfillment in lawyers' lives, Ms. Vargas said.

All of the associates at Cobb Cole are expected to get involved in community organizations, Ms. Vargas said.

"We want our associates to be happy and have a commitment to something greater than themselves," she said. "We want them to be both competent attorneys and good people."

Cobb Cole has a long tradition of public service and the Working Smarter program was started at the company several years ago, Ms. Vargas said.

"We're very flexible," she said. "As long as the associates are handling their work load there's no supervision."

Lynn Sinnott, president of Easter Seals, said the flexible hours at Cobb Cole are very helpful to her organization.

"It gives us access to these individuals and their expertise," she said. "Our committee meetings are in the morning. Several volunteers from Cobb Cole play key leadership roles in our organization."

"I think when you're happy you're more productive. This program is one of the reasons I came to Cobb Cole. A company that encourages you to be a better person is where I want to be."

Leanne Siegfried
Cobb Cole Attorney

"The young attorneys from Cobb Cole have been wonderful," she said. "They do a lot of mentoring."

Katherine Hurst Miller, an associate at Cobb Cole for the past three years, is involved with the American Heart Association and Junior Achievement.

"We are able to pursue whatever interests us," Ms. Miller said. "I do feel more well rounded and that I've made a contribution. I've met many great people in the community who are caring and believe in giving back." Employees at the company have a "play hard, work hard" mentality, said associate Kelley Parsons, who is on the board of Easter Seals and Ormond

Memorial Hospital Foundation.

"I think when you're happy you're more productive," she said. "This program is one of the reasons I came to Cobb Cole. A company that encourages you to be a better person is where I want to be."

Cobb Cole play key leadership roles in our organization."

Tammy Hayward, education manager for Junior Achievement of Volusia County, also appreciates the program, because the J.A. classes are held during school hours.

This salon's most popular color is green

By Andrew Norris
For Hometown News

SOUTH DAYTONA — Eight years ago, Tracy Karnavas was living her dream, working as a hairstylist, a job she started at the tender age of 20.

"It was what I always wanted to do," she said.

So for a while, she tried to ignore the sinus problems, skin rashes and headaches that had become a constant part of her life.

"At first I didn't know what it was," Ms. Karnavas, 37, said. "Then I realized it had to be the products we were using in the salon."

She reluctantly quit her job and the problems cleared up immediately. A stint as an accountant kept her allergy free, but did not make her happy.

"It was OK," she said. "But it wasn't my passion."

Recently, she learned that Farouk Shami, the founder of Chi, which makes hair styling tools and products, had the same allergy problem she suffered from and had created a line of products that are free of ammonia and other harsh chemicals. Then she came across the Onesta line of products, which are naturally derived and free of parabens, which are potentially a cancer-causing agent.

She saw her opportunity to get back into the business she loved.

The result is the Ecocentric Green Salon and Spa Ms. Karnavas recently opened in South Daytona.

The salon offers all of the same services other salons do, such as color and perms, but the products are different.

"We're not chemical free, that's just not possible," Ms. Karnavas said, "But we're much better."

The products, she said, are not just better for her clients and stylists, but the environment as well.

"(Normal products) are not good for you, that's why doctors tell you not to get your hair colored or permed when you are pregnant. And it's not good to wash them down the drain."

Tracy Karnavas
Ecocentric Green Salon owner

The "green" element of the salon does not end with the products; it extends to all elements of the salon.

"Our sign is not neon, it's LED, we have all compact fluorescent lighting, we have all energy star appliance and we do cold water washing," Ms. Karnavas said. "We've used re-purposed materials and we've purchased a lot of things from Habitat for Humanity. Some of our salon equipment is used, so instead of sending it to the landfill we've been able to use it."

Ms. Karnavas said that while the recent trend of going green has probably helped the salon, a misperception that it has to cost more has not.

"I know people think that because we are doing these things and using better products with less chemicals they think that we're more expensive, but we're not," Ms. Karnavas said. "We wanted everyone to be able to afford what we can do for them."

The cost for a single-process color at the salon is $55.

Being 'green' is something that has become more common in the beauty industry. The Web site for the Professional Beauty Association lists going green as a main issue it's trying to tackle, and even offers articles for salon owners on ways to make transitioning to a 'green business' easier.

Samsula resident Madison Schmidt said she would like to try a green salon.

"I'd be more inclined to go there over one that isn't (green)," Ms. Schmidt said. "Just because typically salons seem like they'd be wasteful places anyway and I'd feel guilty going to pamper myself at one that wasn't green when I knew I could be at one that was."

Ms. Karnavas' mission to make her salon as environmentally friendly as possible isn't over, she said.

"We're always looking for new ideas, we're always trying to reduce, reuse, and recycle," she said. "That's really important to us." Ecocentric Green Salon and Spa is located at 1780 S. Nova Road in South Daytona's Portofino Square.

Dr. Stan Beitscher underwent a partial knee replacement at Halifax Health in 2008.

I chose the hospital ranked #1 for orthopedic outcomes.

Dr. Stan Beitscher underwent a partial knee replacement at Halifax Health in 2008. In order to provide patients with the very best care, we made sure to bring in the most accomplished orthopedic surgeons. We put the most sophisticated technology in their hands, and developed the safest, cleanest operating rooms. The result is an artificial implant that is more precise. A joint repair that comes with less pain. A hip fracture with a shorter recovery, and everything else that goes hand in hand with ranking #1 in the state for orthopedic outcomes. People travel hundreds of miles for care like this. But with Halifax Health right here, you don't have to.

Opinions clash over need for social services center

By Wayne Grant and Jeannine Gage
wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — No one would deny that the stretch of Ridgewood Avenue in between International Speedway Boulevard and Mason Avenue is home to more than its fair share of the homeless and down-trodden. With several agencies catering to the needy, including a homeless shelter and a few drug rehabilitation centers, some residents feel the area has become a haven for East Volusia County's down and out.

The question put before city commissioners recently was: Will another center catering to those in need help or hurt the situation?

For the second time, Catholic Charities asked commissioners for permission to build a social services center on the grounds of the Basilica of St. Paul on Ridgewood Avenue and Mullally Street.

And for the second time, it was refused.

Services intended for the center included emergency financial help, medical referrals, job training and elderly support.

There also would have been counseling services for mental health, marriage and pregnancy.

Opponents of the center said another social service agency would further degrade the neighborhood. Supporters said the center will help alleviate homelessness and therefore improve the neighborhood.

Edith Shelley of the city's Planning Board said it is up to the City and not Catholic Charities to decide where services are needed.

"The area is blighted and needs development," she said.

Ted Brown, attorney for the Diocese of Orlando, which runs Catholic Charities, told the commission the Outreach Center would be a service center and not a soup kitchen.

"We're helping families and those in need in a professional way," he said.

Several supporters of the center emphasized it would provide services that would prevent homelessness.

"It will help working class people," said Annette Porter of Port Orange. "This will be a major asset for our community."

Commissioner Robert Gilliland said the service was needed but the area was saturated.

"We've exceeded the threshold. Other communities apply spacing standards," he said.

"I applaud Catholic Charities. I would pray we find another location. Prince of Peace has a lot of land," he said. "There are too many of these agencies in that particular corridor."

Catholic Charities is evaluating its options for expanding services in the area but will not try for the same location, said Brenda K. Loyal, Catholic Charities marketing director.

The City Commission had to reevaluate the need for the Outreach Center because of a court order.

After the first denial, Catholic Charities took the case to court and a judge ruled that "any objective view would indicate that the proposal is totally consistent with the character of the neighborhood."

However, the ruling said the commission could consider the case as if hearing for the first time, but would need to consider any new evidence, according to documents filed with the City.

The commission voted to deny the center five to two. Commissioners Cassandra Reynolds and Richard Shiver voted in favor of the center.

'Operation Chill' on the lookout for good deeds

For Hometown News
Volnews@hometownnewsol.com

Area youngsters may be looking forward to a run-in with Volusia County Sheriff's deputies during this hot summer.

Deputies will be "ticketing" kids whom they observe doing something helpful, deterring crime or participating in a positive activity in the community with Slurpee coupons.

The coupons can be redeemed for a free 12-oz. Slurpee at any 7-Eleven store. The Sheriff's Office will distribute 5,000 coupons as part of this year's "Operation Chill."

Sponsored annually by 7-Eleven stores, "Operation Chill" is a statewide program designed to promote good deeds in the community and enhance relations between law enforcement officers and the young people they meet on their neighborhood patrols.

"This is a wonderful program that creates opportunities for our deputies to have positive interactions with children and reinforce good behavior," said Sheriff Ben Johnson.

Almost any act that demonstrates kindness, compassion or responsibility can qualify for a Slurpee coupon — anything from helping a stranded motorist, showing friendship to a visitor or wearing a bicycle helmet to picking up trash, assisting someone with their groceries, observing proper safety habits, or simply doing the right thing.

Deputies also will distribute the coupons to young crime victims or hand them out to youngsters who simply need a pat on the back. No purchase is necessary to redeem the coupons.

Who should serve and protect?

"Serve and protect" is a phrase you generally associate with the military, police or fire and rescue.

What if I asked, who is responsible for protecting our property values here in the City of South Daytona?

What is the value of a home in Big Tree Village that has attached to it the stigma of being flood prone?

The mayor has called the recent flooding an inconvenience to the residents.

The two rolls of pictures that I have taken paint an entirely different image. It is an image of endangerment to people and property.

For two days, only people with SUVs and pickups were able to enter or exit the subdivision safely.

The homes along the southside of the 700 and 800 blocks of Aspen Drive were subject to unnecessary waves of water.

The wakes created by those vehicles made the water approach within four to six feet of the homes including my own.

The mayor said this was the ultimate test. In my opinion, I believe that statement is incorrect.

Since Tropical Storm Gordon in '94, years of drought conditions have masked this problem.

Last summer, a storm by the name of Fay stalled over the Daytona Beach area producing very little rain as we sat in the eye wall of the storm.

If that storm had tracked 60 to 80 miles up the coast before it stalled, I believe the outcome would have been much different for us.

I believe Fay would have wiped out the interior of Big Tree Village and possibly the entire subdivision.

The recent storm had long periods of no rain and the storm was spread out over a longer period of time.

I saw the flooding in the business area along Nova road. The water in that area plus the water build up in Big Tree Village brings to mind the words from a movie classic, "You're gonna need a bigger boat."

A recent article talked about moving water westward, away from the Nova canal. However, our city has adopted the three Ps concept, ponds (retention), pumps and prayers.

The retention pond along Silver Pond failed again sending water rushing towards Aspen Drive, the pumps were shut off more than they were on (no place to pump the water) and I would like to think it was divine intervention that saved us from another Gordon cleanup.

I'm sure our city commissioners are relieved that they don't have to represent any particular area of the city. Since all of our commissioners are at-large delegates, who does protect our neighborhoods? Maybe FEMA can help us. Would FPL be interested in taking over our storm water system?

Editor's note: Response from John Dillard, South Daytona community development director:

The recent unnamed storm event was the worst rainfall event in this area since 1922, when a similar storm dumped 22 inches of rainfall over a four-day period.

This recent storm generated over 20 inches of rain in five days, with 19 inches of its rain falling within a three-day period. The last major rainfall in this area occurred during Tropical Storm Gordon in November 1994. That storm produced more than 10 inches of rainfall in a 24-hour period. At that time, South Daytona residents witnessed 300 homes damaged by floodwaters. Some homes in Big Tree Village had over four feet of water inside the living space.

After Tropical Storm Gordon's cleanup was complete, the city set an aggressive course to eliminate flooding of homes. To achieve this, South Daytona increased storm water utility fees to fund many of the needed improvements to protect residents and their homes and made major changes to the building standards. While the system is still not perfect, the number of homes with storm water damage in the most recent storm dropped from 300 homes during Gordon, to 16 homes with water 8 inches or less in depth during this recent storm. This reflects an 87 percent reduction in homes flooded, while

Riverside rewards

Marcus Stokes of South Daytona was presented with a check for $1,000 from Riverside National Bank's annual scholarship program in Daytona Beach last week. our neighboring cities saw increases in home flood damage of as much as 250 percent over the Tropical Storm Gordon numbers.

The city is currently bidding a major storm water improvement for the Stevens Canal Basin. This Canal, through the heart of the city, was the single largest cause of residential flooding during the recent storm. Low elevations combined with the inflow of runoff from neighboring areas and a state road created a unique problem. The proposed construction will give the city the ponds and pumping facilities needed to greatly reduce flooding in this critical part of the City.

The city council, city manager and staff have always made "service and protection" of the citizens in South Daytona its highest priority. This recent storm generated the most rainfall this area has seen in the past 87 years and South Daytona fared far better than any other community in the area, and that fact underscores the City's commitment to its residents.

Let people enjoy the concert

Most people who attend concerts go to hear the performers on stage. They do not go to hear those people sitting in the audience sing along with the performers.

This is most irritating and interferes with our enjoyment of the concert.

In response to 'How I can find the America Dream?'

If you are a veteran, there used to be a federal law that said a veteran will not be denied the right to sell on a street corner.

They wouldn't want you to know about it in Volusia County. You may be able to go in through the back door. They would be forced to give a permit. Check with the federal Veterans' Administration.

This law existed years ago. It may still exist.

Courtesy titles should reflect marital status

I have noticed another change in written English that the Hometown News has also adopted — the use of Ms. as an all-encompassing title preceding a woman's surname. For example, Wayne Grant's article on Ima Ikon Jackson, he referred to her as "Ms. Jackson." He then mentioned her husband in the article as well.

I know it has always been confusing to tell whether a man is married because he is always called mister, but are we all comfortable in dropping Mrs. and Miss to add to this confusion?

Take care of worn flags

Did you know it is dishonorable and improper to throw your worn flags away in the trash and not provide flag lighting after dark?

Worn American flags must be honorably cremated.

Call your Disabled American Veterans for pick up of worn, torn and faded flags.

People should have a chance to vote on new laws

I don't think it's fair that the legislature sets forth laws, without giving the people the opportunity to vote on them.

If they want to make something into a law, it should go on the voting ballot for, as the constitution says, "we the people of the United States" to vote either for or against.

The legislature is a waste of the people's tax dollars. This is supposed to be a democracy, not a dictatorship.

But more and more laws seem to be heaped upon us, without getting our input.

Our forefathers are probably churning in their graves at what has become of this country.

We have taxation without representation. Laws are forced on us. The government wants to tell us when to jump, how to jump, where to jump and how high to jump. I'm tired of jumping. If anyone feels the same as I do, please let us know. The people must start speaking up for themselves.

In response to 'Boat launch fees are too much'

I am in favor of boat ramp tolls. It is a good way to raise needed revenue from Orlando and out-of-town people who use our facilities, provided that locals could get an annual pass.

Local utility company should offer same services as FPL

The utilities commission should offer the same rebates as FPL for air conditioning installation. This rebate is not available from the utilities commission.

There is no benefit in having our own utilities company, if they do not provide the same services as FPL.

Utility workers and city employees should freeze hiring and freeze wages. If city officials want to be re-elected, they should take up the cause to freeze their wages.

The wages of the police, fire and utilities workers is too high compared to other areas.

In response to 'City changes golf course membership again'

For many years the New Smyrna Beach Golf Course operated on a profitable basis, often giving a large portion of the profits to the New Smyrna Beach general fund.

Remaining profits were used for golf course renovations. Total membership was very high. In fact, there was a long waiting list.

The 19th hole and dining room did a great business. The camaraderie was evident by the many members using the facility.

Then, a very inexperienced person from the parks and recreation department with no management or business skills was appointed course manager. His attitude caused memberships to decline, and for the first time the long waiting list disappeared.

That manager was replaced by another who had no business or management skills. His total lack of tact and listening skills resulted into another exodus of membership.

Then, without any thought regarding financing or club membership input, a major renovation was pushed down the throats of the membership. This major fiasco resulted in many members not rejoining. Also resulting in a course that was previously profitable now drawing a considerable amount from the city general fund, to survive. How could this happen — stupidity? In my opinion the same mentality that put the course in this mess is trying to fix it.

The golf advisory board chairperson said, "We have looked at other courses in the area." All the other courses in the area are private courses on private property that pay a great deal of property taxes, which New Smyrna Beach golf course does not pay.

Therefore, equating the New Smyrna Beach golf course with privately owned courses in the area is convoluted logic.

Further, she states raising the cost of 50 rounds of play from $500 to $600 is a slight raise. Thirty percent is not a slight raise.

Therefore, the city is saying we are really losing the membership that has supported this course for so many years.

Their solution is to raise membership fees, and the members will be happy to rejoin.

I suggest all concerned review Economics 101 and supply and demand. When there is no demand, you lower prices. When there is excessive demand, you raise prices. It's that simple.

City should take oceanfront property

Residents of Ormond Beach have been pleading with their commissioners for years for a city beach on the east side of A1A.

The commissioners have repeatedly ignored these requests and attempted to pacify their constituents with parking proposals on the west side of A1A.

For nearly five years, since the hurricanes of 2004, the decaying shell of a former hotel across from the Peninsula hospital has been permitted to remain an eyesore in Ormond Beach while the city commission goes forward with continual beautification projects.

The blighted condition of the A1A property should make it a priority for the city to take over using its power of eminent domain (which it can use for the good of the people) and turn it into the eastside beach the residents have requested for so long.

During the last city election Ed Kelley was asked in a radio interview why this property was allowed to remain in this condition.

His response was that the city was trying to work with the owner but he had heard that they had just received permission to tear it down.

To this date this has not happened and the place looks worse and worse every day. If these owners were private citizens, wouldn't our zoning code enforcement officer be fining them on a daily basis until something was done or the city took over the property?

Head south for outdoor surprises

By Samantha Joseph
Joseph@hometownnewsol.com

MARTIN COUNTY — It's always the quiet ones, the saying goes, that hold the most surprises. And the seemingly sleepy towns in the south of Martin County seem to prove that point.

Just south of the faster-paced Stuart center, are Palm City, Port Salerno and Hobe Sound, three small communities brimming with pleasant surprises for adventurous travelers.

Saddle up in Palm City for a day of horse riding, racing and polo at area stables that offer riding lessons, sightseeing tours on horseback, pony rides for children and classes to show visitors how to befriend, train and care for the animals.

offers picnic lunches, polo games and instruction, while Greenridge Stables caters to novice and experienced riders at rates beginning at $25 per hour. Call them at (772) 781-5429 and (772) 288-7234 respectively, to arrange rides around area parks and preserves.

"There's a whole world of horses here in their backyards, but people aren't aware of it," said Rozeta Mahboubi, executive director of the Martin County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Martin County offers several area locations for freestyle skateboarding and competition.

CHECK YOUR AIR CONDITIONER

But Beware of Telemarketing Scam Artists

As summer arrives, so does the hot weather and the need to use our air conditioning system. It is wise to have your air conditioner system serviced to help avoid unnecessary breakdowns, extend its useful service life, and reduce energy consumption, but beware!!

As the temperature increases so does the barrage of unsolicited telemarketing calls and questionable advertising claims. These marketing methods tend to promote low cost or even no cost service inspections on your air conditioning system.

Telemarketing fraud robs U.S. Citizens of an estimated $40 billion every year. AARP surveys indicate that more than half of the victims are age 50 or older.

If you are contacted by a telemarketer, know who you are speaking to and verify any claims or statements made before agreeing to anything.

Unscrupulous telemarketers will say anything to set up an appointment. If you tell the telemarketer you "use ABC company for your air conditioning service needs" they may say, "We are doing all the service work for company ABC" or "Company ABC no longer is in business or no longer does residential service calls".

If the telemarketer says he is from Progress Energy or Florida Power and Light this should be a red flag. Progress Energy may call between 8:00 am -5:00 pm to follow up on a program you have participated in or a flyer recently sent. They do not come out to sell you air conditioning. Florida Power and Light will only be calling to respond to an inquiry made by you.

Before you consider buying anything over the telephone or setting an appointment make sure you are familiar with the company, insist on receiving written material about any offer, take time making a decision and don't let yourself be pressured. Never give out any personal information to anyone unless you initiated the call.

Be wary of advertisements that tout low cost service inspections. The cost to do business by a reputable legally licensed contractor includes labor, insurances, licensing, business, truck, and advertising expenses. "If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is". Many times low price labor results in high priced, unnecessary parts or service. Dealing with a reputable air conditioning contractor who is state certified is a consumer's best option for fair and honest dealings when taking care of their air conditioning or heating needs.

he allowed and even encouraged the victim and the victim's friends to be naked around him, allegedly providing alcohol and offering to provide video equipment if the victim wanted to record himself and other teens having sex. According to the complaint affidavit, Wilhite denies the allegation and said though the victim came on to him, he repeatedly refused to have sex with him. Wilhite was released from jail on $100,000 bond. Wilhite has been in the news before accused of defrauding listeners of a travel show he hosted. Though Ormond Beach police found no criminal wrong doing, some listeners have taken civil action against Wilhite.

Drive by shooter arrested, more suspect sought

South Daytona police released a disturbing video of a drive-by shooting outside an apartment complex in that city. The shooting was caught by a camera at a residence across the street from the Cedar Village on Eastern Road. The accused shooter in the drive by, 19-year-old Jerry Johnson Jr. was arrested shortly after the incident, but police are still looking for the driver of the vehicle and say their may have been a third person in the vehicle. Lt. Ron Wright told WESH 2 the video demonstrated just how callous criminals can be. He said the gunman fired a dozen or more rounds into a crowd of people outside the complex in retaliation for an earlier confrontation. Bullets hit a vehicle, the building; one bullet flew over the head of a woman watching television in her unit. Neighbors said they are outraged by the shooting and said there have been other problems at the complex that make them feel unsafe in their own homes.

Tattoos lead to suspect ID

In Daytona Beach Shores, police say a pair of thieves made it all too easy for them to solve the crime, because they say one of the suspects literally had his name written all over it. Sgt. Michael Fowler told WESH 2 two men loitered on the beach behind the Sand Dollar Condominium Complex, finally stealing two beach bags and making a run for it. The suspects found a numbered condo key in one of the bags and in minutes, cleaned the place out, stealing cash, credit cards, cell phones and more. A family on the beach thought the men were up to something so they took notice of them and told officers one of the men was shirtless, but had the name Casey tattooed on his back. Witnesses said he also had a distinctive ying yang tattoo on his arm. Sgt. Fowler told WESH 2 they ran records and within 15 minutes of the theft, identified one of the suspects as 29-year-old Matthew Casey. Casey had been previously arrested and his distinctive tattoos were listed in the system. Police are still looking for a juvenile in connection to the case.

Men arrested for attempted murder

Daytona Beach Shores police said the owner of a local bar and another man are under arrest for attempted murder and aggravated battery. Police said the suspects beat a man nearly to death outside the Drunk-N-Monkey bar at 3400 S. Atlantic Ave. and dumped him in the bushes in front of the bar. The victim, Mark Baird, 44, was rushed to the hospital, but was later able to identify his attackers as bar owner John Bishop, 29, and Bishop's friend, Robert Casey, 52. Police say a witness told them Baird came into the bar and got into some kind of argument with the suspects. She told police the suspects beat Baird for 10 minutes though she begged them to stop and call an ambulance. The witness told police the men refused to call for help, dumped the victim in the bushes, then locked up and left.

Residents looking for injured eagle

Bird rescuers and concerned citizens are on the hunt for a bald eagle they believe is wounded and at risk of dying if he's not found. Mary Tarrent and her husband George first noticed the majestic bird by the side of a pond in Port Orange's Waters Edge community. The couple said they watched the bird try to fly several times and fall back to the ground. A volunteer with local bird sanctuaries came to the scene, but the eagle had gone into some woods. She said an eagle that can't fly may not be able to hunt and could die as a result. Residents are keeping an "eagle" eye out for the bald eagle, hoping that if it can't save itself, they can direct rescuers to his location and the experts can save the bird.

Turtle release successful

Another success for the turtle rehabilitation team at the Volusia County Marine Science Center in Ponce Inlet, the team released a 92-pound loggerhead named Cluster after the near adult was stranded along the Canaveral National Seashore in April. Specialists said the turtle was very sick, and they later found foreign objects in him that caused an intestinal impaction. After three months of care, Cluster was healthy enough to return to the sea, but the folks at the center said it's a reminder that trash left behind by humans on the beach and dumped into the ocean can often be life threatening for marine life.

Beach patrol reviewing safety tips

A recent lightning death on a beach south of Volusia County has our own beach patrol going over safety tips to ensure beach-goers here are safe from the almost daily afternoon storms. Though Volusia County makes headlines as the shark bite capitol, beach patrol officers say bathers face a far greater risk on the beach from lightning because a direct strike is so often fatal. In the last couple of decades, beach patrol officers recall a half dozen fatal lightning strikes on the beach and a dozen or more injuries. Beach patrol Captain Scott Petersohn says because the beach is flat, people become the tallest objects out there and when lightning rolls in, people are targets. The Volusia County Beach Patrol has an organized plan when storms threaten, called red light alert. Lifeguards on towers up and down the beach order swimmers to safety, officers from various zones on the beach cruise up and down with loud speakers to warn swimmers off the beach and every beach control tower has a red strobe light that pulses and can be seen for miles during lightning storms.

Police search for attempted rapist

Daytona Beach police continue to search for a man who tried to rape an 80-year-old woman out raking leaves in her front yard on Fulton Street. The victim actually thought the suspect was coming to lend a hand, but instead he dragged her to a shed in the back of the house, tore at her clothes and pushed her down to the ground. The woman, a retired school teacher, did her best to resist the suspect, screaming and trying to fight him off. She told WESH 2 she repeatedly told him she was 80 years old and asked why he would want to rape her. Eventually, her resistance paid off and the suspect left but the attempted rape has other neighbors in the area, many of them elderly as well, unnerved. Police said they are working the case hard in an effort to identify the suspect and get him off the streets.

Armed men rob convenience store

Two 7-11 clerks went through some frightening moments when armed men robbed the convenience store on Beach Street. The suspects, one armed with a sawed off shotgun, targeted the store in the overnight hours. One swept through the store to the back where he confronted a clerk demanding money. A second suspect ordered another clerk, who was outside discarding boxes, back into the store and demanded he turn over cash as well. The men, though caught on surveillance video, wore dark hooded jackets and ski masks, but police are asking anyone with information to come forward. They say suspects often brag about these brazen types of crimes. Though shaken, the store clerks were not physically hurt.

wetlands near well fields. Also serving on the oversight committee are City Commissioners Mark Reed of Holly Hill and Ken McMillen of South Daytona. The cities currently on the panel are Daytona Beach, South Daytona and Holly Hill. Members of city staff from Ormond Beach and Port Orange have been involved in recent meetings and Mr. Shiver said he hopes they officially join the authority soon. The County of Volusia has been very much involved in discussions, Mr. Shiver said, as well as the St. Johns River Water Management Authority, Department of Environmental Protection and the Department of Transportation. The cities are represented on the panel by utility managers and staff. The 10-to-15 year project is estimated to cost between $100 million and $120 million. The authority is planning to apply for grants to help pay for the project. The water authority has hired GAI Consultants of Orlando to work on the design. At a recent Daytona Beach City Commission meeting, Jerry Hartman of GAI made a presentation of the plan. "We don't need any more studies," he told the commission. "It's time to start putting facilities in place and start building things." The main focus of the project is the Nova Canal, which overflowed during the May rain storms. Mr. Hartman said rather than discharge all storm water into the Halifax River, water would be placed in two large storage areas that will allow management of water levels and avert flooding. This will help the environment, he said, because the river will receive less polluted runoff. He said excess water could be piped to West Volusia and after natural filtering, it could be treated for drinking water. This will help make sure there is water for the future, Mr. Hartman said.

Mr. Shiver said the biggest obstacle to the plan is money. The project will be handled in phases, he said. The cities will need to approve spending for each phase. Also lying ahead is the permitting process. Several agencies, including the DOT and DEP will be involved. Daytona Beach Mayor Glenn Ritchey told Mr. Hartman to be sure all the stakeholders are at the table. "FEMA should be there," he said. "They would have to write more checks if the flooding happened again." Mayor Ritchey said he thinks the plan satisfies everybody. "We can't find anybody that opposes this," he said. "We're going to help clean up the river and provide more drinking water but let's make sure we remember the No. 1 priority is to resolve the flooding issues in Daytona Beach," he said. The East Volusia Regional Water Authority was formed several months ago and was working on flooding solutions before the May rainstorm.

In the Sun Loving Garden, plants that thrive in the sun include the cardboard palm, which is known for its texture; purple fountain grass, muhly grass, the rough feeling compact papyrus and the native lantana. Mr. Bartholomew said the plant groupings are not only good for them, but the environment as well. "We put plants together with others that have similar likenesses to soil and water conditions. This reduces the amount of water that you have to put on them," he said. Other distinguished trees and plants featured there: cypress, palms and the native blueberry bush. Sensory Park is arguably more handicap accessible than other parks and may be really appealing to the blind, deaf and those confined to wheelchairs. "All parks are handicap accessible but this one may be even more so," Mr. Bartholomew said. "We have sounds that the blind can pick up and signs that they can understand and wider spaces for those in wheelchairs to move about. Mr. Bartholomew said he would like the park to become a learning opportunity for residents and students. "We would like to build partnerships," he said. "Maybe with the kids at the elementary school down the street (South Daytona), maybe they can walk to the park on a field trip and take advantage of the horticulture opportunities there." Residents can learn a thing or two as well. "People can come here and figure out how certain plants, flowers and herbs bloom," Mr. Bartholomew said. "They can also see which plants grow better in sunlight or shaded areas as well as learn how to identify certain types of vegetation." There is no grand opening of the park scheduled at this time, but officials say they will probably plan something for the fall when the heat lets up.

Spending

is spending," he said. The government is programmed to spend, Mr. Gilreath said. "People are always suggesting good things for the government to do," he said. "It's a question of 'want' versus 'need.'" Mr. Gilreath said the increase in spending during the boom years could not happen again because a law passed in 2007 forces governments to lower the tax rate when values rise. The moderator of the event, Al Weeks, a prominent Realtor in Ormond-by-the-Sea, offered to ask County Councilman Carl Persis to meet with residents. The audience agreed they would attend if Mr. Weeks arranges a forum with Mr. Persis to discuss tax and spending issues.

Talent competition benefits schools

For Hometown News
Volnews@hometownnewsol.com

Budget cuts this past school year in the Volusia County school system affected all areas including special education, sports and the performing arts.

Supporters of the performing arts have created a talent competition, which is also a fundraiser to benefit school programs.

SuperStars of Volusia is open to all Volusia County students who are enrolled in public, private or home school programs.

The students must be between the ages of 12 and 18.

All performing arts acts are eligible to enroll. SuperStars of Volusia anticipates acts will include singers, dancers, monologues and instrumentalists.

Students can audition as soloists or as part of an ensemble that does not exceed 26 individuals, all of whom must meet all the eligibility requirements.

Registration deadline is Saturday, Aug. 29.

The live auditions will take place Saturday, Sept. 19, at Silver Sands Middle School. These auditions are closed to the public.

There is a nominal audition fee of $20 for solo performers and $40 per ensemble.

If that fee creates a hardship for a performer, there is a scholarship waiver program.

Audition performances cannot exceed five minutes. A piano accompanist will be provided or the performer can bring a CD for accompaniment.

First-round finalists will perform on Saturday, Oct. 10, at Seabreeze High School.

The finals will be Saturday, Nov. 21, at Mainland High School.

First place is $2,000 or 25 hours in a multi-track recording studio in Orlando. Second place is $1,500 or 15 hours in recording studio. Third place is $500 or 10 hours in recording studio.

The net proceeds from the event will be funneled back to public and private schools in Volusia County designated for performing arts programs.

For a registration form and for more information, visit the Web site at www.superstarsofvolusia.org.

The competition is sponsored by the Daytona Beach Symphony Society and is produced by R. Martorano Productions, LLC.

How about a peck of pickles or pickled peppers?

Hello smart shoppers, hope you had a good week. If you are diabetic, so many foods are forbidden to you, such as one of my favorite snacks: bread and butter pickles. If you make them yourself you can use a sugar substitute. Sugar substitutes work in all sauces, dressings, desserts, etc. It's only in baked goods that you must use at least half real sugar. You do know that sugar is a carbohydrate. Making your own pickles, the sugar-free way, means no carbs. We'll make kosher pickles and bread and butter pickles, and if you really want to work, then do as my late husband, Bill, did: grow your own cucumbers and peppers.

While we're at it, how about a jardinière? Love jarred hot peppers but hate the price? We'll make them, too!

The best thing about making your own pickles is you can also reduce the salt. In my opinion, nothing compares to a real kosher dill pickle.

Years ago, kosher delis in New York had huge wooden barrels filled with pickles. You would select the one you wanted and the proprietor would reach in with huge tongs and retrieve it.

Today that's not considered sanitary, but you can still get a real kosher pickle in the refrigerator section of the supermarket. What really bothers me is the price.

Did you know that one large cucumber will fill the jar of pickle spears? Here's a trick to save money. Once the jar is empty, scrub and cut a cucumber into spears and put it in the jar with the brine. Cover and leave on the counter overnight; turn jar over (on its lid) and let sit another day. Have a pickle, if it's just the way you like it; refrigerate.

For bread and butter pickles, bring the brine to a boil and add slices of cucumber; cook as directed in recipe.

NOTE: To prevent breaking, always put a utensil into a glass jar before pouring in hot liquid. Enjoy. See you next week.

KOSHER PICKLES (NIB) makes 2 quarts

- 8 to 10 small cucumbers, or 2 large cucumbers, cut into spears
- 2 tablespoons kosher salt
- 2 whole sprigs fresh dill
- Crushed red pepper, optional
- 2 tablespoons pickling spices
- 4-6 cloves of garlic, peeled and cut in large pieces
- Cold water
- 2 one-quart canning jars

Wash jars in hot water. Scrub cucumbers and pack tightly in jars.

Add 1 whole sprig dill, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon pickling spices, half the garlic and a few shakes of red pepper to each jar, pushing ingredients halfway down. Fill to top with cold water, leaving a 1/2-inch space.

Cover tightly, turn upside down and store in a cool place for a couple of days. Test a pickle for doneness. When cured to your liking, refrigerate the jars.

BREAD AND BUTTER PICKLES (NIB) makes 4 pints (2 quarts)

- 4 cups sliced cucumbers
- 4 tablespoon kosher salt
- 1 small onion, coarsely chopped
- 1 cup white vinegar
- 1 cup sugar or equivalent sugar substitute
- 1 teaspoon each of celery seed and mustard seed
- 3/4-teaspoon turmeric

Place cucumbers in cold water. Add salt and ice cubes. Soak for at least 1 hour. This will keep them crisp. Drain.

Meanwhile, place all remaining ingredients, except onions, in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Add sliced cucumbers and onions and cook for about 10 minutes. Place in clean canning jars, seal and store.

JARDINIÈRE (NIB) makes 5 to 6 pints

- 4 cups sliced cucumbers
- 1 cup sliced onions
- 4 tablespoons kosher salt
- 1 red and 1 green bell pepper, sliced into rings
- 1 cup white vinegar
- 1 cup sugar or equivalent amount sugar substitute
- 1 teaspoon each of celery seed and mustard seed
- 3/4-teaspoon turmeric
- 2 cinnamon sticks

Place cucumbers, onions and peppers in cold water. Add salt and ice cubes. Soak for 1 hour. Drain.

Place remaining ingredients in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Add vegetables and cook for 10 to 20 minutes, depending on how crisp you want them. Discard cinnamon sticks.

Place in clean canning jars; seal and store.

Cauliflower flowerets, sliced carrots and any other vegetable you choose can be added to the mix.

PICKLED PEPPERS

To make your own hot or sweet jarred peppers, simply prepare a vinegar wash, 1/2 water, 1/2 white vinegar. Bring to a boil in a non-aluminum pan.

Add peppers, whole and cook until tender-crisp. Place peppers in jars, pour in the vinegar wash. Liquid must come almost to the top. Prepare additional wash if necessary. Cover and store.

Hometown News $UPER BUY$ of the week

Best-kept secrets: Use two coupons on BOGO items

Last week, I introduced you to some of the fun ways shoppers can make buy one, get one free sales even more rewarding. Anytime we can buy one item and get another free, we're essentially buying two at half price each. So how do we make a half-off sale even better? With coupons, of course.

Here's the third "best-kept secret" of couponing: use two coupons during a BOGO sale.

At most stores, you can use one coupon per purchase. Even though you're buying one item and getting another "free," it's not truly free. You still have to go through the act of "purchasing" it at the register (the store won't allow you to just pick up the "free" jar and take it home, will they?) If you live in an area that collects sales tax on groceries, you must still pay sales tax on the "free" item.

So it's best to think of BOGO sales as buying two for the price of one. As long as you're buying two items, even if one is full-price and one is free, you can use a coupon on each item you're buying. You're buying two items, so you can use two coupons. Here's an example illustrating why this is a great idea.

COUPON QUEEN

My grocery store has organic pasta sauces on sale for $3, buy one, get one free. And even though the register rings them up as $3 for the first jar and $0 for the second, it is still possible for me to present a coupon on each jar for additional savings.

For this sale, I have two $1 coupons for the pasta sauce. Using one coupon for each jar I purchase brings my cost down to just $1 for two jars, or 50 cents each. That's a great price for any pasta sauce, especially organic.

Now, many grocery stores handle BOGO sales differently. With a sale such as the one I outlined above, most stores' registers will ring the sale as one $3 jar and one $0 jar. Other grocery stores may approach the same BOGO sale by ringing up each item at $1.50 each.

Either way, you can still use a coupon on each item and get each jar of pasta sauce for 50 cents.

Are you ready for a bonus tip? If your store "splits" BOGO prices into half for each item, you only have to buy one of the items to get it for that price. So if you only had one pasta sauce coupon, you could buy just one jar, get it for the $1.50 price, use a $1 coupon on it, and still take it home for 50 cents.

To determine which way your store handles BOGO sales, look at your receipt the next time you buy items promoted in a BOGO sale. If the register rings one at full price and one at zero, you must buy two to receive the price. If it rings each one at half of full price, you will be able to buy just one of the items involved in the sale and receive it for half the price without buying the second item.

Calcium, vitamins, caffeine: medical news you can use

Medical news comes across my desk fast and furiously. Here's some news you can use from health newsletters.

High calcium intake may offer colon cancer protection

From the Duke University Medical Center Health-News, June 2009:

High dietary calcium intake may reduce the incidence of colon cancer, especially for women, but doesn't seem to affect other types of cancer. Higher calcium intake was associated with lower incidence of colon cancer in both men and women, but the effect was greater in women, for reasons that are not clear.

For adults 50 and older, the recommendation is for 1200 milligrams of calcium daily, which is the amount found in three cups of dairy products and non-dairy sources including sardines and green, leafy vegetables. Talk to your doctor about calcium supplements, especially if you are at risk for osteoporosis.

Limit alcohol, caffeine for restless legs

From the Mount Sinai School of Medicine "Focus on Healthy Aging" newsletter, July 2009:

Restless leg syndrome, or RLS, affects from 5 to 15 percent of the population and keeps many people awake. The neurological disorder is associated with nerve damage from diabetes and kidney disease, as well as iron deficiency.

ALIVE & WELL

Mild cases can be treated by exercises to work and stretch muscles, biofeedback and rubbing the legs. Some medications used to treat Parkinson's disease may also be prescribed.

If you have RLS, doctors advise limiting consumption of alcohol and caffeine, as both can make symptoms worse. Try heating pads and cool packs in the evening.

Multivitamins don't reduce cancer or heart risk

From the Mount Sinai School of Medicine "Focus on Healthy Aging" newsletter, May 2009:

A large study conducted for more than eight years, has found the long-term use of multivitamins does not lessen the risk of developing common cancers or heart disease. The study, one of the largest ever carried out on health and diet, found no significant difference in risk of these diseases between users and non-users.

We spend a lot of money on these supplements, on the theory that it couldn't hurt. Unless your doctor has told you to take a multivitamin, take the money and use it for fresh fruits and vegetables. You'll be taking better care of yourself and your wallet.

Energy drinks high in sugar, caffeine

From the Mayo Clinic Health Letter, April 2009:

Many energy drinks contain high amounts of caffeine and sugar, as well as herbal stimulants. They can lead to serious side effects including a much faster heartbeat, irritability, nervousness, impaired sleep and nausea.

Large amounts of caffeine can trigger abnormal heart rhythms, which can be life-threatening, especially if the drinks are combined with alcohol or consumed when the person is dehydrated or just before playing sports.

Turtles take over New York!

Spend any time surfing the Web and you are bound to find stories that are just too bizarre to be true. Here's a sampling, edited for length. And remember, just because it's online doesn't mean it's true!

From www.sfgate.com: Man doesn't pay for 'Only God can judge me' tattoo. God might not be the only one passing judgment on a man who skipped out on paying $200 for a religious tattoo at a parlor.

From www.msnbc.com: Cops: Man went naked to dental appointment. Man was late for appointment; he ran when the receptionist screamed.

Police say a Connecticut man was arrested because he showed up at a dental office naked. Police say 41-year-old Christopher Hoff, of Stratford, also was five days late for his appointment.

Authorities say Hoff entered the dentist office Monday with nothing on. A startled female receptionist screamed, and he ran away.

HOW WEIRD IS THAT?!

From www.news.aol.com: Prank leads Florida couple to trash hotel room. Authorities say a prankster persuaded a married couple to smash their Florida hotel window after falsely telling them the room had a gas leak.

Police say a person claiming to be a front-desk clerk at an Orlando hotel convinced the couple to break a wall mirror and use a lamp to punch a hole through the wall. The couple also threw a mattress out the window, but a hotel manager came to the room before they could jump.

From www.weirdnews.about.com: No Wienermobile at Oscar Mayer's funeral. In case you missed it, amid all the Michael Jackson coverage, Oscar Mayer, grandson of the lunch meat icon, died Monday, July 6. He was 95. TMZ.com, which has been ahead of so much of the Jackson coverage, confirmed that Mayer's famous "Wienermobile" will not make an appearance at the funeral.

From www.metro.co.uk: Woman lights crack pipe on arrest. A woman who led police on a high-speed chase compounded her troubles after lighting up a crack pipe as police moved to arrest her.

And another from www.news.aol.com: Turtle invasion shuts JFK runway. A runway at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport was shut down on July 8, after at least 78 turtles invaded the tarmac.

Ground crews eventually rounded up the wayward reptiles, which had crawled from a nearby bay, and deposited them back in the water farther from airport.

But that wasn't enough to stop the turtle incursion from disrupting JFK's flight schedule, and contributed to delays that reached nearly 1-1/2 hours.

FATIGUE MAY BE A SYMPTOM OF A SLEEP DISORDER

If you feel like you do not have enough energy during the daytime, you may have a sleep disorder. Obstructive sleep apnea is an extremely common disorder and can present with fatigue and daytime sleepiness.

The diagnosis and treatment of OSA is even more important if you have:

- Heart Disease
- A History of Stroke
- High Blood Pressure

Patients with OSA typically have one or more of the following symptoms:

- Snoring
- Unrefreshing sleep
- Excessive daytime sleepiness and/or fatigue
- Dry mouth on waking
- Frequent urination at night
- Stopping breathing during sleep

Treating sleep apnea may

- Reduce or eliminate daytime sleepiness

Florida offers bounty of shellfish, so get out there

Just back from a fun week in the Keys with lots of snorkeling and fishing. Lots of lobster about, but I was a bit early for the two-day mini season that will be on July 29 and 30 this year.

If you have not tried diving for spiny lobster, you should. It is probably a lot less difficult than you may imagine and the payoff makes it well worth it.

Here in Central Florida most of the lobster are taken in deep water by those proficient with scuba gear, but in the Keys you might find them in water as shallow as five feet.

There the water is so clear that the tasty critters have a tough time hiding.

Any coral, debris or hole will be a good place to look for those telltale tentacles.

Please take heed. All lobster and boating rules are strictly enforced during the two-day season.

Keepers must be at least three inches long at the carapace (body) and a measuring device must be with you while you are in the water.

You may not spear, gouge or hook any lobster. The preferred method is to gently prod them into a net with a tickle stick. Gently, because most are undersized and must be released.

The limit is six per day per diver and that does not mean you can collect six for each person on your boat. In order to take a limit you must be actively involved in the harvest.

FISHING WITH DAN

The daily boat limit is 24. Any time you have people in the water your boat must display a dive flag with a minimum size of 20 inches by 24 inches. Be forewarned: if you go during the mini season your boat will be boarded, inspected and your catch measured each day.

My own personal best was several years ago when we were boarded five times in one day. Obey the laws and the rules or you will leave a lot of your hard-earned cash in the Keys.

The regular lobster season opens August 6 and runs until April.

The season for bay scallops opened on July 1.

Florida's West Coast is the target area for these delicious little mollusks. My favorite spot is the near shore between Homosassa and Crystal River.

This is a much kinder and gentler sport than lobstering. Take the whole family along and enjoy the clear, warm waters of the calm Gulf.

Law enforcement will be on hand to insure that you only take the two and a half gallons per person allowed but they won't be nearly as aggressive as they are in the Keys. Once you get out into the bay all you need do is watch for a pod of boats and join them.

The scallops lie on the bottom like stones until you approach them and then a select few will begin to "run" by rapidly opening and closing their shells for propulsion.

That is an act that never fails to entertain the kids. My son who is now a middle school teacher began when he was 9 years old. We made him wear a life vest but he enjoyed pointing out the ones that he had spotted. It's just a good time and a good swim.

My next favorite place to scallop is a bit north of the Suwannee River near the little fishing village of Steinhatchee. You will need the dive flag once more and a mesh bag to collect the scallops.

The season runs until Sept. 15. I hope you get out and enjoy the great Florida summer weather and who knows, you just might take home a bounty of gourmet shellfish.

Use proper precautions during summer months

In case you have yet to notice, summer is here. By the feel of things and the look of my electric bill, we're in for a smoldering hot one.

Your main concern when playing any sport in the summer heat should be to avoid heat exhaustion, stroke and dehydration.

Sweating is the most significant way the body cools itself to maintain a safe and stable temperature.

In humid climates, sweat doesn't evaporate easily and our bodies don't cool as efficiently as possible. We sweat more and need to consume more fluids to help stay cool and perform optimally.

It's important that you drink before you're thirsty. You'll even play much better when you're not constantly looking for the next water cooler.

Sports drinks, such as Gatorade and the like, help replenish your body with the fluids and electrolytes it loses while perspiring. These drinks are also loaded with carbohydrates to provide energy your body needs.

Fruits are best for giving you a boost of long-lasting energy. Candy bars provide quick energy, but their effects diminish just as quickly. Bananas, apples or peaches are easy to carry and eat. Bananas also help prevent the buildup of cramp-causing lactic acid in the muscles, a frequent occurrence during exercise.

The most important concern for yourself and your playing partners should be avoiding heat exhaustion or, even worse, heat stroke. There are many ways to do that.

Always wear shorts and light colored shirts. It may sound crazy, but wearing an undershirt will also help. The undershirt helps get perspiration away from your body where it can evaporate more quickly, helping the cooling process.

If you feel too warm at the turn, stop by the clubhouse, grab a cold drink and soak up some air conditioning.

While hats are great for keeping the sun off of your head and face, they will make you warmer. Your body discharges most of its heat through your head. Medical experts say as much as 70 percent of your blood is in your head at any given time. If your head is hot, so is the rest of your body.

Therefore, if your head is cool, the rest of your body will be, as well. I like to take my cap off when I'm riding along in the cart. The sun isn't beating down on me and the breeze created by the moving cart helps cool me.

Some people like to take along an extra towel or two. They dampen these towels at every water cooler and lay them across the back of their necks or over their heads when not hitting a shot, or wipe their face and arms with them in an effort to keep cool.

If you are taking medication, your body may need even more assistance to keep cool. Some medications interfere with sweating, putting you at a greater risk of having a life-threatening heat stroke.

Check with your doctor to see if your medication could be putting you at risk and what measures you should take to lessen your chances of heat-induced illness.

If you begin to feel the effects of extreme thirst: nausea, dizziness, headache, elevated temperature, if your skin looks pale, your pupils appear dilated or your muscles start to cramp, there is a good chance that you are suffering from heat exhaustion.

The best thing to do is immediately get to a cool place and rest. Replenish your body by drinking large amounts of fluids and eating generously salted foods to help your body return to its normal balance.

Heat stroke is much more serious and can quickly become deadly. Symptoms of heat stroke include: hot, dry skin with a grayish tint, dilated pupils and a body temperature that may rise to more than 104 degrees.

Anyone suffering from heat stroke must be treated quickly. Immerse the victim in a cool water or ice bath and call 911 immediately.

Finally, a step many of us forget. Remember to put sunscreen on every exposed body part. The effects of sunlight on our skin can be deadly. Skin cancer is becoming more prevalent with the depletion of the Earth's protective ozone layer. A few minutes spent putting on sunscreen could save your life.
