Residents get help with tornado cleanup

The storm blew in fast and the tornado came in quicker still. Port Orange was a bull's-eye when a twister touched down along Madeline Avenue around 6:30 p.m., a week ago. Port Orange keeps tax rate, makes several cuts to budget

PORT ORANGE — In an effort to soften the blow of the flailing economy, Mayor Allen Green and the City Council have proposed to cut the property tax rate 16.9 percent for the 2010 fiscal year.

In a budget workshop Saturday morning, City Manager Ken Parker discussed with the council and community the proposed budget for the coming fiscal year. Mr. Parker presented a preliminary budget of $30 million, almost $3 million less than in 2009.

Councilman Dennis Kennedy said it was difficult to make the cuts.

"Everything was made internally," he said. "We've reduced where we could, we've not filled some positions, we've curtailed some of the projects we

Governor promises help for tornado damage

By Andrew Norris
For Hometown News

PORT ORANGE — On Monday, Governor Charlie Crist, visiting the areas hit hard by a tornado, promised those who lost homes or property that they will get help.

On Tuesday, the governor asked the Small Business Administration for a disaster declaration for the area, which would allow affected residents to get low-interest loans for property repair or replacement.

The tornado, which touched down early Friday evening, only took a few minutes to do $2.6 million of damage in the Port Orange mobile home communities of Laurelwood Estates and Lighthouse Pointe. The storm damaged 181 homes, leaving 60 of them uninhabitable.

The Governor gave a briefing and following that toured the damaged areas, afterwards holding a small press conference in Laurelwood Estates.

"Obviously this tornado has done some significant damage here, and it's important to have the opportunity to get a first hand look at what has happened and be able to assess the damage," Governor Crist said.

The Governor, State Representatives Dorothy Hukill and Dwayne Taylor, and interim director for the Florida Division of Emergency Management Ruben Almaguer all addressed the press and the community in front of a home destroyed by the tornado, focusing on the absence of serious injury or death.

"Several thoughts come to mind. Number one, thank God (there's) no loss of life, and number two, apparently no serious injury," Governor Crist said. "That's the most important thing of all."

Both the Governor and Mr. Taylor talked about the importance of community support in times of need.

Governor Crist lauded the efforts of volunteer groups like the Red Cross, Salvation Army, and the local VFW for their efforts to help their community.

"We can replace a number of homes, but we can never replace a life," Representative Taylor said. "So with that I'm grateful for all of our residents and neighbors helping neighbors. This is an opportunity for all of us to get to know each other a little better under unusual circumstances."

Governor Crist and Mr. Almaguer also ensured the citizens effected by the event that whether they are covered by insurance or not, there will be means of providing aid to them in their time of need.

"I think it's important to note that there are mechanisms for every single person that was effected by this event to have means to be taken care of," Mr. Almaguer said.

FEMA, state and local governments and the Small Business Administration have been on the scene surveying the damage and doing preliminary assessments.

WELE owner to enter plea

By Jamye Durrance
Durrance@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — A local radio show host accused of sexual battery is scheduled to appear in court for the first time on Aug. 5.

Doug Wilhite, owner of WELE in Ormond Beach, will appear before a seventh circuit court judge to enter a plea in the case after he was arrested earlier this month following a Volusia County Sheriff's Office investigation.

According to the arrest report, Mr. Wilhite said he was a nudist and allowed teenage boys to come to his house while he was nude.

Mr. Wilhite said the boys made sexual advances toward him but he refused them. Also in the report, Mr. Wilhite said he offered one teenage boy money to engage in sexual acts with another boy. Mr. Wilhite also told the teenager he had photography equipment in his home if they wanted to use it while naked.

According to his Web site, Mr. Wilhite is the founder of the Ormond Beach Symphony.

He is also the host of "The Premier Travel Show," which sells discount travel packages. The show came under investigation after listeners complained the rules to get the packages were confusing, leaving many without their money.

An investigation by the Ormond Beach Police Department found no criminal wrongdoing.

Mr. Wilhite is suing the Hometown News, saying a July 2008 story about the complaints has hurt his business. The case is pending.

Local police hold 'National Night Out' Against Crime events

By Andreas Butler
For Hometown News

VOLUSIA COUNTY — Local law enforcement will join others across the nation to celebrate the "National Night Out, America's Night Out Against Crime 2009" on Tuesday, August 4.

More than 34 million people in 11,000 communities nationwide are expected to participate.

The event is designed to highlight crime and drug prevention and encourage partnerships between law enforcement and the communities that they serve.

"It's a great event for the public to come out and meet law enforcement officers, said David Miller, crime prevention officer for the Port Orange Police Department. "This allows the community to see law enforcement and gives us a chance to work together to chase out crime and drugs."

Police: Beware of several scams making their way around area

By Officer Rommel Scalf, HHPD
For Hometown News

Citizens should be aware that criminals can find an opportunity to turn them into victims in nearly any circumstance! Right now there are several financial scams being operated that are particularly evil. These scammers are taking advantage of the troubled economic times and the technology that is readily available.

No. 1: "Government Grants" Scam - Newspaper, magazine, Internet and mass media advertisements "guarantee" access to grant money and Federal Government stimulus program funds. They require the victim to send "application" or "processing" fees of as much as $500 to $1,000. If they do respond; and don't simply take the money and run; they may send copies of genuine application forms that would have been available FREE from the official Government websites. Solution: Check the official sites for any supposed "Government" programs. If it is real, they will have an official site and the information will be free.

No. 2: "Mystery Shopper" Scam - Classified ads for persons wishing to be "Mystery Shoppers" promise big money for easy work. They send a check for several thousand dollars to the person who answers the ad. They instruct the victim to cash the check, make a purchase or several purchases locally; keep $50 - $100 for the assignment; and wire the remainder of the funds back to another address with a report on customer service, value, etc. The check was worthless. The bank will legally charge back the worthless check to the victim. The victim has spent money from their own account they could not spare, and wired the rest to a money transfer station where someone picks it up immediately and disappears. Solution: Nothing is free or easy. If it is too good to be true; it isn't true! A genuine "mystery shopper" is a regular employee that has attended training on evaluation criteria, company policies, documentation requirements, completed a W2 and gets paid like any other employee since they work for the company they evaluate.

No. 3: "Cash-for-Gold" Scam - For every offer to "send in your unwanted gold" there are complaints and unsatisfied victims.

The companies offer to send the victim a check within a short period of time, and even offer to provide the envelope and pay shipping and handling! When the check arrives, it is for pennies on the dollar for the actual value of the weight of gold sent. The fine print reveals their appraiser sets the value and you have only a limited time to cancel the deal. The trick is that they don't usually send the check until it is impossible to receive it and comply with their rules to decline the transaction in the time specified. The gold has been melted down; the victim has a check in hand for pennies-on-the-dollar; and no recourse they can afford to pursue. Solution: If you want to sell jewelry or precious metals, take them to several reputable local dealers to have them appraised. Compare these appraisals against the published market price and make a deal for the best offer.

The Holly Hill Police Department conducts Crime Prevention and Awareness training free of charge on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at Sica Hall located at 1065 Daytona Avenue, Holly Hill, FL 32117.

For more information contact Officer Rommel Scalf at 386-248-9419 or e-mail him at Crime-Watch@HollyHillFL.org. You can also follow the Department on Twitter at www.Twitter.com/Holly-HillPolice.

National Night Out. This unique crime and drug prevention event was first created in 1984 by The National Association of Town Watch, which is the main sponsor. Locally, businesses and organizations also sponsor the event.

The National Association of Town Watch is a non-profit organization that specializes in crime prevention and encourages cooperation between crime watch and law enforcement agencies.

The goal is to unite law enforcement and the community against crime.

"This puts a message out that law enforcement is here to take the streets and make them safe. We will not let crime take our streets. We are here to protect and serve," said George Rizzuto, crime prevention officer for the South Daytona Police Department. "This breaks down walls. The community often does not know what we do or why we do it. We use this event and others to open up to the community."

In Ormond Beach, the Night Out events help to support community programs such as the Police Athletic League, said Crime Prevention Officer Lloyd Cornelius.

There is no direct evidence that these events lower crime, but law enforcement believes it helps.

"It's impossible to actually know," Officer Cornelius said. "When we get the community together, we want to raise crime awareness. We want to let them know not to be afraid to come to us or call us."

Officers Rizzuto and Miller agreed.

"I think such events builds trust between law enforcement and the community it serves," Officer Rizzuto said. "It shows that we are united against crime."

Officer Miller added, "I think that getting the word out and having events where we can work together helps fight crime. I believe that it also makes the community feel more comfortable about cooperating with local law enforcement in reporting crimes where they can be solved."

National Night Out events

During National Night Out on August 4, area law enforcement will be teaming up with the community and holding various festivities including: cookouts, entertainment, block parties and more.

In Ormond Beach from 5:30 to 9 p.m. there will be a party held at the North Nova Community Center located at 440 North Nova Road. Ormond Beach Leisure Services and the Ormond Beach Police Athletic League are joining in.

The Daytona Beach Police Department will be holding a family fun night from 5-8 p.m., at the Cypress Aquatic Center and Park, located at the corner of George Engram Boulevard and Nova Road.

Festivities in South Daytona will begin at 5:30 p.m. at the South Daytona Police Redevelopment Area/Community Relations Office located inside the Sunshine Park Mall. Refreshments will be served. The 'Light Up the Night' event will start at 7 p.m. with a caravan around the city.

Port Orange will hold a block party at the Port Orange City Center located on Dunlawton Avenue from 6-8 p.m. They will have free food and music at the event.

In Holly Hill, a neighborhood event will be held at Sica Hall from 6 to 8 p.m. Residents can learn about neighborhood watches, get personal safety tips and meet face-to-face with police officers and investigators.

For more information about Night Out events in these and other area cities, contact your local police department.

Teacher wins national math award

By Wayne Grant
wgrant@hometownnewsol.com

ORMOND BEACH — Becky Pittard, a teacher at Pine Trail Elementary School, says the secret to teaching is truly listening to your students to find out what interests them.

"That's when teaching is really fun," she said. "When you get that spark of interest, you can lead them to learning."

Her skill at reaching young minds has been recognized.

She will receive an award this fall from President Barack Obama for being one of the top 50 math teachers in the U.S. for kindergarten through 12th grade.

Ms. Pittard will receive the Presidential Award for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching in a White House ceremony.

Two teachers from each state receive the award, one for science and one for math.

The program is sponsored by the National Science Foundation on behalf of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy.

Nancy Wait, director of communications for Volusia County Schools, said it's a very prestigious award.

"It's the highest award you can get for math and science," she said. "Ms. Pittard is an excellent teacher. She was one of five finalists for teacher of the year last year in our district."

Mike and Robin Kitaif of Ormond Beach said they were "tickled" to have both their children in Ms. Pittard's class.

Ms. Kitaif said she believes the class was a turning point for both of her children.

Her daughter Mariel was a student in Ms. Pittard's class the last two years, and her son, Eric, was in her class many years ago.

"Mariel was unsure about math but now is very confident," Ms. Kitaif said.

"Eric is now 23. He has always been good at math and recently graduated from the Air Force Academy as a graduate of distinction."

Ms. Kitaif said Ms. Pittard's classes are not just book-study.

"To learn fractions, she might use chocolate bars," she said.

Mr. Kitaif said he writes software for NASA but has learned a few things about math from his daughter.

"Mariel would come home and show me new ways of doing basic math," he said.

Pine Trail principal Barbara Paranzino said Ms. Pittard is an active leader of other teachers and always works to find better ways of leading a class.

"Teaching is her passion," she said. "She is lead teacher for Lesson Study, a professional development activity for teachers at Pine Trail."

Ms. Pittard said sharing

ideas and new strategies with other teachers is highly valuable.

"Everything I've learned about teaching, I've learned from other teachers," she said.

Ms. Pittard takes her class to an annual trip to Tomoka State Park where the students identify plant and animal life, perform experiments and analyze the data in the classroom.

"It helps to get out in the world and see and touch things and not just read about them in a book," Ms. Pittard said.

"I can't imagine anything more boring than standing in front of a class and lecturing," she said. "If you get ideas from the students and get them involved, you never know what's going to happen."

Ms. Pittard said she was elated when she won the award and very happy for her team. She "team teaches" both 4th and 5th grade with another teacher, Kip Best.

She said having students for two years is beneficial.

"You get to know their learning skills and build a bond," she said. "Any time you form a bond or trust you're going to be a successful teacher."

In addition to a certificate, Ms. Pittard will receive $10,000 and an all-expenses-paid trip for two to Washington, D.C.

The winners are selected by a panel of scientists, mathematicians and educators. The panel not only looks at nomination and application papers, but also observes in the classroom.

Volusia Health Department welcomes new HIV/AIDS doctor

For Hometown News
Volnews@hometownnewsol.com

The Volusia County Health Department has welcomed Dr. Ronald Rusiecki to the staff.

Dr. Rusiecki will serve as the senior physician for the HIV/AIDS clinic.

Dr. Rusiecki joined the health department from Shands Hospital in Gainesville where he practiced infectious disease medicine. Infectious disease medicine deals with communicable diseases caused by viruses, bacteria or parasites. An infectious disease physician is one who deals with the full scope of communicable diseases of all types and in all organs, from the common cold and flu to HIV and respiratory infections.

At the health department, Dr. Rusiecki's responsibilities will include treating HIV/AIDS patients at clinics located in Daytona Beach, New Smyrna Beach, DeLand and Deltona. The health department offers the only public HIV/AIDS clinic in Volusia County serving those in need of care. The health clinic treats clients who may not otherwise have care.

The health department's AIDS Program also offers testing and counseling as well as the AIDS Drug Assistance Program and HIV prevention education. The addition of Dr. Rusiecki to the staff allows the AIDS clinics to have additional hours. The doctor will work two days at the health department's largest clinic in Daytona Beach and split the remaining time at the other locations.

HIV/AIDS continues to be a major concern in the community. There are an estimated 1,400 people living with HIV/AIDS in our area.

Office staff was not helpful

I called Representative Suzanne Kosmas' office in Washington D.C. I asked the young man who answered the phone what Rep. Kosmas was doing. He said she was trying to get government loans for small businesses. I said what small businesses? They are all going out of business because they don't have customers. They don't need to have more debt. They need to be relieved of their taxes and restrictions that keep them from hiring. We all need customers not more government loans.

People who pay debt should be rewarded

We see in newspapers the credit card companies along with the federal government (taxpayer money) are paying off credit card holders that have multiple cards and are in thousand of dollars in debt.

Where does this leave the credit card holders that pay their debts in full each month?

We got smart and have only one credit card that we pay off in full every month.

What kind of reward are we entitled to?

We should get a reward for paying in full on a monthly basis. Congress and the credit card companies should consider this. We are going to bring this up to our credit card company.

In response to

'Courtesy titles should reflect marital status'

Talk about confusing! Apparently the responder to the Wayne Grant article has missed the entire purpose of the title Ms. when preceding a woman's surname.

Did you somehow overlook the feminist movement and the desire by women who do not wish their title to reflect their marital status, but to simply refer to them as an individual regardless of whether they choose to marry or not?

In response to

'Would you vote for President Obama again?'

As for healthcare, if this was such a great deal, how come those who are putting it together want to be exempt from it?

It is good enough for us, but not the for the elite. Wake up America. This president and politicians in general (both parties) do not care what the American people are going through or how we feel about all this money they are spending at our expense.

Politicians divide us into political parties, when it should be the average American against an arrogant, corrupt and uncaring government.

They do not live in our world and have no desire to do so. It is beneath them.

What is happening now is not change. It is just more corrupt Washington politics. It is time to stand together as American against those who are trying to bankrupt and destroy this country. Hopefully, more people will speak out before it is too late.

Is tax increase justified?

The solid waste division wants a $197 per year tax increase.

How is this assessment justified given the record number of vacant households in our community and the corresponding record decrease in solid waste? How many more increases in taxes, utilities and insurance do you think can be imposed on the remaining Florida residents in the midst of 10 percent plus unemployment, and on senior citizens on fixed incomes, before this area is turned into a vacant wasteland?

Why are there continued increases in hurricane insurance when there have been no hurricanes, and proposed increases in FPL electric rates at a time when fuel prices are down (could it be to recoup lost revenues due to lost customers)? Will our water bill be next?

What plans did the Volusia County Council make for the local impact of the foreclosure crisis that began years ago? What plans have you made for growing and thriving our communities during this crisis so you may obtain more revenues on a justified basis — revenues that would justify your salaries and staffing level? When will you make deep cuts in your salaries and budgets as the rest of us have had to endure? Would a hotel facing lost revenues from increasing vacancies raise its rates on rooms to make up for the loss? Ridiculous.

Enough questions. It's time for answers.

It's time to get serious and work together

What a year and a half or so it's been. Times like we have experienced are fortunately just once, or less, in a generation. The good side to these trying times is that those of us who make it through this will be a lot smarter and better business people than we might have been going into it. We have learned from our mistakes. We will know how to better plan and prepare for tough times in the future. We will appreciate the good times and not take them for granted, knowing that nothing lasts forever.

So OK. We've been through the worst of it. All signs point to a renewed economy. Some of us have even prospered through this. Some have fought hard to make it through. Some who didn't make it can blame themselves. If a business owner isn't willing to make tough decisions, sacrifice and commit to their business, they probably shouldn't have been in business in the first place. Success is not easy, though during the boom years some made it look easy. Success does not come without some pain, suffering and sacrifice.

One of the things I have seen and discovered over the past 18 months is that if we all work together we can survive and thrive. All of the communities we cover, from Martin County north to Volusia County are filled with local businesses doing business with the locals. We wrote a column for our annual gift guide touting the benefits of shopping local. Now it is time to get serious. We know there are enough local people living here year-round in our communities (more than were here during peak season less than five years ago), that if we can generate regular, consistent business from the locals, we will be successful. It's time to promote local. It's time to get creative, come up with special offers for the locals, those year-round residents who can shop your place of business two, three, four times a week.

Now, you must know, no one is paying retail anymore. I am not sure that they will again. So you have to come up with a new strategy to get them into your place of business.

Our local people, your friends and neighbors, who make up Hometown News, are going to help you.

Hometown News is going to give all business owners FREE ADVERTISING. That's right. FREE ADVERTISING for up to a year.

We are going to help all businesses end the recession right now. Hometown News and our approximately 100 local resident employees, the team who provides you with the most local news available each week for free, are going into partnership with each and every business owner in the communities we serve.

As a business owner, you have to be willing to invest in the future of your company. If you are, Hometown News will match that investment each and every week. Whatever amount a business owner is able to commit to the future of their business, Hometown News will commit an equal amount to that company's future. We know that it has been tough. It has been for all of us. But we believe in the power of partnerships. If we all work together, we will get out of this and get out of this sooner rather than later and stronger than ever.

Hometown News will continue to be free to our readers. Over the past 18 months we have signed up more subscribers than any other newspaper in the country. Nearly 150,000 of your friends and neighbors have signed up for a subscription to HTN. If you haven't signed up yet, do so today. Go to our Web site or call us at (866) 913-6397.

Hometown News is also helping the local residents with our 50 percent off gift certificate program. We have hundreds of local restaurants, golf courses, hotels and more on our Web site offering full-value gift certificates for half price. If you are one of the few folks out there that haven't taken advantage of this yet, check it out today. It is a great value and can stretch your budget considerably.

Your team here at Hometown News is local. We are the only locally owned newspaper in our community. We value the relationships we have and the ones yet to be discovered. We know that together we can make a difference and together we will prosper. Let's partner up!

Steve Erlanger is publisher and chief operations officer of Hometown News.

'Let people enjoy the concert'

To the person who thinks that concerts held in the park are just for the audience to sit still and listen, I disagree.

Being held in a park says to me people are there to visit, sing, dance or just plain enjoy the music.

To most it is participating in some way. To some it's being quiet or maybe knitting and listening at the same time that makes it pleasurable. After all, it is a park, not a church. Oh wait, we sing along and enjoy the music at our church too. Stop being such a fuddy-duddy and let others enjoy themselves.

I bet if you ask the performers if they like it quiet or having audience participation, they'd agree with me.

Thanks for governor for finishing his term

Unlike Sarah Palin, our governor is not resigning his office. Liberals like Charlie Crist see things through to the end while conservatives like Sarah Palin are quitters.

I am so glad we have some real liberal Republicans running who won't quit in the middle of their term.

In response to 'City should watch spending'

Every city has a few discontents who object to the positive events and projects that the vast majority of residents approve of, enjoy and which make a community special.

Thousands came out for the fabulous Ormond Beach Fourth of July celebration. The fun, entertainment, holiday atmosphere and spectacular fire works display was the best to date.

In regard to the renovation of Rockefeller Gardens, it was long over due and the finished project looks great. It really enhances the gardens for the many city functions which are held on that city property to the enjoyment of most residents.

For the few residents who do not participate and enjoy the many community functions, but complain, it is suggested that you consider a place like Barberville for your new residence.

To the city of Ormond Beach officials and hardworking employees, who make the affairs possible, a sincere thanks for the job well done. Keep up the good work.

Keep New Smyrna Beach nice

Does New Smyrna Beach need to advertise on the Disney network?

We don't want to be another Mickey Mouse town. One is enough in Florida.

Now we have ads in the Macon and Atlanta newspapers. Enough is enough. Save New Smyrna. Keep it nice.

In response to 'city shouldn't allow dogs in garden'

Rockefeller Gardens is beautiful, and it is there for the enjoyment of everyone.

Why are people already complaining about dogs in the park? We pay taxes and therefore helped pay for these renovations. Therefore, we have a right to enjoy this park with our dog, just like everyone else. Also, there is already an ordinance in place to leash and pick up after your dog. Simply enforce this ordinance and don't penalize those who abide by the law.

Skateboarders are more of a nuisance and destructive than a dog on the leash.

Fire station needs signal

The new fire station at 500 Third Ave., New Smyrna Beach, beachside is a beautiful addition and an asset to the community.

Since Third Avenue is a busy highway to and from the beach, it would be a good idea to have signs warning people traveling this street of the fire station. The station should have an outside signal flaring to make travelers aware the fire trucks are leaving on an emergency.

Response from Dave McCallister, deputy fire chief: First I want to extend a sincere thank you to our entire community for their support of our department. There is no better recognition than by those you serve.

Our traffic management plan on this project appears invisible, but I can assure you it is in place. In doing our homework

Blahnik Eye Care – see the difference

By Suzanne Grill
For Hometown News

PORT ORANGE — Eye care is not a recent career choice for Doctors Greg and Suzette Blahnik. Greg's father and brother are in the business, and his wife Suzette started working in an eye doctor's office when she was in high school.

"It wasn't a conscious decision we made, but it just sort of happened that we both followed that path," said Dr. Suzette Blahnik from the new offices of the couple's practice, Blahnik Eye Care, 3740 South Ridgewood Avenue, Suite 103, in Port Orange.

Greg and Suzette Blahnik met in 1987 while they were both students at the Southern College of Optometry in Memphis, Tennessee. After graduating, they married in 1991 and moved to the Daytona Beach area. The Blahniks practiced optometry here for 17 years before going out on their own, opening Blahnik Eye Care earlier this year.

"It was both a challenge and an accomplishment," Suzette Blahnik said. The mission of Blahnik Eye Care is to provide modern, quality, full scope eye care while offering up-to-date and fashionable eyewear. Blahnik Eye Care offers full scope optometric services, including comprehensive eye examinations, contact lenses, eyeglasses, and treatment of eye infections and diseases, minor eye injuries, dry eyes, cataracts, and glaucoma. They also address health dangers such as diabetes and high blood pressure.

The Blahniks' commitment to total eye health is clear. The Doctors Blahnik, who strive to keep up with all of the latest technology and run a "green" office, are dedicated to their practice and their patients, because they see the bigger picture of how eye health and appearance relates to quality of life.

"We want to provide a better quality of life for our patients," Suzette Blahnik said. "And for us, that goes beyond just providing the best eyewear. It's making a commitment to improving every aspect of our patients' ocular health. We believe in personal attention and compassionate care."

Pat Proax and her husband have been clients of Suzette Blahnik for three years, since they first moved to Port Orange.

"She's very thorough," Mrs. Proax said, "and very dedicated to her patients. We are so glad we found her."

The Blahniks said running a practice together is rewarding.

"We like to think we have a great working relationship as doctors, spouses and parents," Suzette said of her husband and business partner. "One of our secrets to success is we try to keep business and family life separate, but working together is great! We are all about family, so it's a modern, yet old style practice."

An important aspect of the practice is getting out into the community, both for charitable work and to create partnerships.

"Greg travels to perform eye exams for people in nursing homes, assisted living and institutional care facilities, when they can't come to the office," Suzette Blahnik said.

Greg Blahnik has worked with Special Olympics, Lion's Club, and the Center for the Visually Impaired. He is also the staff Optometrist for Tachachale, the largest facility for mentally challenged individuals in the state of Florida.

Blahnik Eye Care accepts many types of vision insurance. Its user-friendly Web site, www.BlahnikEyeCare.net, offers an Eyeglass Guide to help you better understand the many lens choices available. Patients can also save time in the office by printing and filling out new patient, we found that standing emergency signals are effective when given no other choice, however they are not without consequence. There are installation costs, including engineering, and future maintenance costs. The other issue can be that folks get numb to the blinking yellow light and are not prepared to stop on the occasion they see a red light where it is typically yellow — they kind of expect it to always be yellow.

We found that if we coordinated existing resources instead of adding to what was there, it would be a big savings for everyone in money and time, and we could still provide effective traffic management for our need. In this application, we had two perfectly good intersections to work with that were already suitable and drivers would expect and be more responsive to light changes at the intersections.

We had a single button installed in the station. When the firefighters get a call, they activate the button that begins changing both intersections permitting traffic to flow in certain lanes and stop in others clearing the intersections at Third and Peninsula and Third and Saxon. Though the interruption is only 40 seconds, it gives us the time we need to get the desired result, which is a flowing intersection in the direction needed.

When the truck gets to the intersection, it is clear of cars and can move more effectively without stopping. If we had the light in front of the station, we would still need to coordinate the two additional intersections or the cars would just be bunched up at the existing intersections. The emergency light would have only allowed us to access the street, not the intersections.

By controlling the intersections, we avoided the cost of the emergency signal and still achieved a good effect for the money spent.

The only cars we cannot stop are the ones coming from the businesses adjacent to the station, which is usually minimal and are easily controlled by the emergency lights and sirens on the fire truck.

Since the station opened, crews have consistently reported green intersections and minimal traffic impediment when moving both North and South.

In reference to warning signs on the street — that request will be taken care of as soon as possible via the Florida Department of Transportation.

If you have any other questions or comments, keep them coming as it helps us all to stay vigilant in protecting our city.

tearing a 50-yard path through several streets in both communities. 181 homes were damaged, about 60 of them so significantly, they are unlivable right now. The weather service agreed it was a tornado that touched down, and residents had no doubt. Charlie Rago saw the tornado coming, twisting and turning with debris flying all over the place. Bob Hurlburt saw it too, as debris flew high into the air well over the trees. Then Hurlburt said the landscape was lost in the storm. Terrified residents rushed for cover, many of them weathering the storm in the bathroom. Phyllis Keddy at Lighthouse Pointe said she was going into a room that was destroyed by the tornado, but she said her dog coaxed her into the bathroom and seconds later, the house was shaking. Incredibly, there was only one minor injury reported in Port Orange when someone was injured by flying glass. Help swarmed into the area quickly with police and firefighters protecting the area, Red Cross volunteers organizing food and shelter and members of Veterans of Foreign War organizations and many others lending a hand. The city council has declared a state of emergency as residents pick up the pieces and try to return to some semblance of normalcy and the governor and staff toured the impacted area. Governor Charlie Crist didn't have specifics, but said some state help will be in place for the uninsured or under insured.

Storm causes funnel cloud on ocean

The system blew up north in Ormond Beach where at least one and perhaps more funnel clouds formed over the ocean. Dozens of residents along the beach took remarkable pictures and video of the funnels over the water. A funnel briefly danced onto shore, sucking up an empty catamaran and spitting it out again. Lightning bolts shattered through the storm and there were several reports of homes being hit. One man was reportedly an indirect lightning strike victim and was treated at Halifax Medical Center for injuries.

Lifeguards busy with rip current rescues

Before the tornado roared through, the area was enjoying fairly quiet weather, though a low-pressure system sat far off our shore for a week. It brought with it a swell that surfers said gave them the first opportunity all summer to get some good rides in, but pounding surf opened new holes in the sand bar that rip currents have been running through in the days after the tropical wave moved out. Lifeguards have been busy making rescues when swimmers get caught up in the currents that panic them when they get pulled out.

Burned cross found

City workers in Ormond Beach made a disturbing discovery on city property along Leeway Trail North of Airport Road. They found the remnants of a burned cross in the shadow of a water tower and the letters KKK scrawled in the dirt at the base of the cross. Though the area has some fencing, there are plenty of ways in and city officials said the area around the water tower and plant are often used by folks on ATVs and dirt bikes. Police said the cross-made from two-by-eight pieces of lumber had clothing on it that was also burned. They suspect the offensive sign and wording was likely the work of teenagers, but nearby residents said it's a shame that anyone would use images that invoke hate. Mayor Fred Costello told WESH 2 that he is very upset because that's not what Ormond Beach is about. He hopes whoever left the cross and scrawled the ugly words gets mental health help. Local Homeland Security officials were called in to ensure nothing had been tampered with at the water plant and they said there was no sign of a break in.

Splash into fun at Cape Canaveral

Fun and relaxation can be found in the waters surrounding city

By Jenet Krol
Krol@hometownnewsol.com

CAPE CANAVERAL — Covering only 2.9 miles of Brevard County, it's hard to believe so many recreational opportunities can be packed into Cape Canaveral.

But, with the Atlantic Ocean to the east, Port Canaveral to the north and the Indian River to the west, it's all about water in Cape Canaveral.

One of the city's main attractions is Port Canaveral, where visitors can watch enormous cruise ships glide through the waters, get a look at a Coast Guard Cutter, or view wildlife such as dolphins and turtles, all while sipping a cocktail or enjoying fresh seafood from one of the many restaurants lining the port.

In the evening, the restaurants take on a nightlife of their own, with DJs, karaoke and dancing.

"It gets livelier when the sun goes down," said Rosalind Postell-Harvey, spokeswoman for the Canaveral Port Authority.

For those who enjoy playing in the water, Port Canaveral is a gateway to water adventures, with a four-lane boat ramp which allows boaters access to the ocean and Banana River.

Boat ramps can also be found at Rodney S. Ketcham Park and Freddie Patrick Park on the north side of the port.

Deep-sea fishing charter boats will take anglers miles out into the ocean in pursuit of trophy fish and Cocoa Beach Parasail offers highflying adventures over the waters, offering views of the beaches and of Kennedy Space Center.

Those who would like a closer look at the aquatic side of Cape Canaveral can take a two-hour cruise with Space Coast River Tours, which travels through the Canaveral Lock System, which keeps the port waters separate from the river.

For those fancying a date with lady luck, Sun Cruz Casino Lines offers six-hour day and evening cruises, seven days a week. After traveling out of state waters, passengers can try their hands at card games, roulette and slot machines.

Just a few feet down the road is the Port's playground, Jetty Park.

Andy Stefanek/staff photographer

Jason Ni of Merritt Island watches the casino ship leave the port while he does some fishing from the pier at Jetty Park in Cape Canaveral. Jetty Park is a popular place to enjoy the beach, fish and camp out.

With 126 campsites, a trip to the park's 4.5-acre beach can span an entire weekend. A 1,200-foot fishing pier is open 24 hours a day and includes fish cleaning tables with running water.

Jetty Park also owns two beach wheelchairs so disabled visitors can access the sands of Cape Canaveral. Large, pneumatic wheels roll easily through the soft sand and a built-in beach umbrella holder offers shade.

For thrill-seekers, a water park is closer than they think. There is no need to drive to Orlando and battle the crowds when Ron Jon's Cape Caribe Resort boasts its own.

Book a room at the hotel and try out the lazy river ride and a 248-foot water slide. The pool, which features a sheer-descent waterfall, is heated, so even when temperatures drop the water can be enjoyed.

The resort also has its own mini golf course and movie theater, so hotel guests can completely take a vacation from their normal surroundings.

Surfing, skim- and boogie-boarding, sunbathing and swimming are always free and available year-round on the beaches at Cape Canaveral.

Travel east down almost any street in the city to find free beach access and parking.

would like to be doing."

The proposed property tax rate will remain at 4.6, or $4.60 for every $1,000 of a property's taxable value. This is the same rate as the 2009 fiscal year, but a 16.9 percent decrease in property value means a 16.9 percent decrease in revenue for the city.

A Port Orange resident with a property appraised at $150,000 with a $50,000 homestead exemption would pay $460 per year.

Although some property values in Port Orange have actually risen since the last fiscal year, most residents should see a tax break due to declining property values Mr. Parker said.

The proposed cuts and rate reduction were met with reservation from the Council.

"My concern is that we're putting off capital projects that are going to come back and bite us in the future," Vice Mayor Mary Martin said.

Keeping the millage rate at 4.6 has presented some problems for the city. The property tax is 36 percent of the city's revenue and is part of the reason cuts and budget reductions are necessary, Mr. Parker said.

Some of the steps necessary to cut the budget include no salary increases, a reduction of 19 full-time jobs, and having some services like spraying and mowing done by city staff instead of private companies.

"There will be some things felt, there will be some programs that won't be able to be done, but this year we felt this was the right thing to do," Mr. Kennedy said.

Despite apprehension over the cuts, Councilors seemed to feel it was the right decision.

"Do I feel concerned? Absolutely. If we were to have a major event like we did back in '04 we'd have to go back and find some money somewhere. We're going to keep our fingers crossed and continually work together to get through this," Mr. Kennedy said. "We're hoping next year is going to be better. We're not expecting a big improvement, but if we can hold on without having any more drastic changes we can make it through this."

Public hearings to discuss the property tax rate as well as the budget for the year will be held September 8 and 22. The new fiscal year starts October 1.

Your wonderful heart gives you a never-ending supply of motivation. You will make it in life, no matter how many challenges. Why? You never give up. Quitting is not in your vocabulary. Challenges make you stronger, lift your spirit, put joy in your heart and continue to create new causes. We all need your leadership and humanity.

Taurus-April 20-May 20
Stand tall with your beliefs. Plan for tomorrow's activities the evening before. Miracles happen tomorrow because the universe has time to get involved in the action. This is an excellent way to live. The excitement of unexpected results happening is directly related to this plan. Let spirit help you and continue to soar.

Gemini-May 21-June 21
At the last minute, when it seems like things are not going to work out, they usually turn around and work in your favor. Why? Because the universe has a mind of its own. It is far greater than our own. When a Gemini begins to accept this over the struggles in the mind and heart, true magic happens. Try it. You might like it.

Cancer-June 22-July 22
You have so much respect and love from family and friends. You are always there to lend a helping hand. The question is, do you let others know about your needs? Do you ask for help when needed? You are not an isolated island, you know. This is what friends are for. Yeah! It's celebration time. Now everyone feels loved.

Leo-July 23-Aug. 22
You know what you want. You know what you need to do to get it. The only step needed is to refocus on the top priorities and take action. You excel at this. 'Groovy' concert and festival come to the Peabody Auditorium

For Hometown News
Volnews@hometownnewsol.com

The fourth annual Hippiefest tour "A Concert for Peace & Love" will be held at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Aug. 7, at the Peabody Auditorium in Daytona Beach.

Performers include Chuck Negron, formerly of Three Dog Night; Felix Cavaliere of the Rascals; The Turtles featuring Flo and Eddie; Dennie Laine, formerly of the Moody Blues; and Badfinger featuring Joey Molland.

The performers' bands have amassed a total of more than three dozen Top Twenty singles, with seven of those hitting No. 1 on the U.S.

charts. "I'm so looking forward to performing with the fine artists participating in this year's Hippiefest and singing my 1971 Song of the Year, 'Joy to the World,'" said Mr. Negron.

Three Dog Night became one of America's most successful bands of the late sixties and early seventies. Three of their songs, including "Mama Told Me Not to Come," "Joy to the World" and "Black and White," hit No. 1 on the charts.

Felix Cavaliere of the Rascals also has a catalog of popular songs. Mr. Cavaliere and the (Young) Rascals had three No. 1 hits: "Good Lovin'," "Groovin'" and

Felix Cavaliere

"People Got to Be Free."

The Turtles first hit the scene in 1965 with their rendition of the Bob Dylan-penned song, "It Ain't Me Babe," which landed in the Top 10. However, it wasn't until two years later that they would release their massive number one hit, "Happy Together." The song remains a staple on classic rock radio more than 40 years later.

Original vocalists Mark Volman (Flo) and Howard Kaylan (Eddie), who host the Hippiefest shows, have carried on the classic music of the band since its inception.

From 1970 to 1972, Badfinger had three Top 10 songs with "Come and Get It," "No Matter of his roommate Jacob, he might be content to spend the holiday alone on his couch. But with some prompting, Wilson posts a personal ad on the online site Craig's List, which leads him to a date with Vivian. The seemingly mismatched pair wanders the streets of Los Angeles as midnight — and the possibility of a kiss — approaches.

Mixed fry recipe is a delectable summertime treat

ROMANCING THE STOVE
with the Grammy Guru ARLENE BORG

Hello smart shoppers, it's time to get even smarter. When the newscaster warned about not putting outgoing mail in your box the night before, I knew it was time for a repeat warning. It works like this: The crook steals outgoing paid bills from your mailbox and places a piece of cellophane tape over the front and back of your signature. Then the check is placed in a pan of nail polish remover for about 30 minutes, which lifts anything that's not printer's ink, except for your tape-protected signature. The check is then blow-dried and flattened in a book and the tape is carefully removed. Voila! A blank check, signed by you. Only one type of ink, the kind in gel pens, is counterfeit-proof. I purchased a pack of gel pens in an office supply store and, of course, before I passed the information on I had to test the inks. The information was right.

Summertime calls for finger food and there's nothing to compare with a mixed fry. It's not low fat, that's for sure, but occasionally, you just gotta have it.

Vegetables, breaded and fried are delicious and always a summertime treat. The one I miss the most is pumpkin flower or squash blossom fritters. Years ago you could buy them at local produce stands. Now I think the only way you can get them is if you grow the vegetable yourself.

While some veggies need to be precooked, others can be cooked raw.

Enjoy. See you next week.

1/2 cup milk
1 tsp. parsley flakes
1 tbsp. grated Italian cheese
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. each, black pepper and garlic powder
Beat all ingredients together.

SEASONED BREAD-CRUMBS

1 cup plain bread crumbs
1 tsp. parsley flakes
1 tbsp. grated Italian cheese
1/2 tsp. each, salt and garlic powder
1/4 tsp. black pepper
Blend well. Fry in a small amount of canola oil until golden on all sides; drain on paper towel. Fried zucchini may be prepared the same way. Other vegetables must be partially cooked first.

Asparagus is one of the finest vegetables you can eat. It is packed with folic acid, potassium, fiber and vitamins A and C. From the Food Channel comes this interesting bit of information. Asparagus was first cultivated about 2,500 years ago in Greece. Meaning "stalk" or "shoot" in Greek, it was thought that asparagus contained medicinal components.

Believe it or not, it is a member of the lily family. Prepare them whole; your kids will think they're eating little trees!

FRIED ASPARAGUS SERVES 4

1 lb. fresh asparagus

To prepare asparagus, hold the top with one hand and a little above the white stem end with other. Break off stem end and discard. Asparagus will break at proper spot. Soak in cold, salted water for a few minutes. If asparagus appear very sandy, you may have to scrape off the little "petals" along the shaft; if not, soaking should be enough.

Drain, rinse and drain again. Cook asparagus (whole) in a small amount of water, a covered skillet works best, for 10 minutes until almost tender. Plunge into cold water; drain. Prepare as for eggplant stix using the flour, egg wash and breadcrumbs.

FRIED CAULIFLOWER

Cut into flowerets, steam until almost tender and proceed. Green beans, celery stalks, etc. all can be prepared this way.

To order my cookbook, access past columns or check out great tips, go to my Web site www.romancingthestove.net or e-mail me at arlene@romancingthestove.net.

Advice on monthly online bill

The monthly bill paying ritual seems to never end, but it has become easier with the Internet and online bill paying services that most utilities have added to their systems.

Here's the way life used to work every month: the bills would come in (as they still do), and then I'd go through each one with the checkbook and a book of stamps.

I'd write a check, write it in the checkbook, put it in the envelope with that month's payment stub, write my return address on the outside of the envelope, stick a stamp on it and drop it in the mail. Every month, like clockwork, it was a chore that consumed a bunch of stamps, checks, time, and usually resulted in a little writer's cramp.

But how are things now? Well, the bills still come in every month like clockwork, but the hassle of writing checks and dropping them in the mail is almost a thing of the past.

Sure, the chore of sitting down and "paying the bills" is still there, but with my trusty computer and my Internet connection, I can get the job knocked out in half the time it used to take, and I can get a book of stamps to last months now.

So what's involved? Well, it helps to have a credit card (or a "check card" with the Visa or MasterCard logo, that most banks are happy to provide), a computer and an Internet connection. It also helps to know the Web addresses of the companies that you wish to pay online, but the nice thing about that is they usually print the Web address somewhere on your monthly statement.

COMPUTE THIS

With your bill in hand, connect to the Internet and navigate to the company Web site and follow the onscreen instructions. Here's a hint: You will usually find a link that says, "pay online." Follow that link, and you are on your way.

But there is a catch. Each Web site is set up differently than the others, so you have to think about what you are trying to do on each site and follow their particular set of links. Some sites may have you sign up first — to create an account on their site — but you only have to do this once. The next month, when you log in with your username and password, your information should appear.

Not comfortable using a credit card online? In lieu of a credit card, many sites will allow for electronic fund transfers by asking for your bank account and routing numbers (but is that really safer?), or you may even have luck checking to see if your bank's online system allows for Web-based bill pay to the companies you pay each month. Most online banking systems these days provide it, and if they don't, you can also check PayPal. They've been offering a bill pay service for a while, and you may be surprised at who you can pay with this.

Let's go back to paying the bills individually at the Web sites provided by the companies.

Let's see, you can navigate to www.fpl.com to pay your electric bill (look for the "pay my bill" link, then "FPL pay online"). You have to set up your account first, but then every month, with bill-in-hand, log on and make a payment.

The city of Port St. Lucie has a similar setup for your utility bills. Just take a look at your next bill and find a Web address.

Now that's just a couple of the companies that we pay each month, and I'm glad I took the time to learn each system. Now when my monthly bills come in, I log onto the Internet, spend about 3 minutes at each Web site, log the payments in my checkbook register, and I'm done, without half the aggravation caused by doing it the old-fashioned way.

Now, if only I could find a way to use my computer to eliminate all my bills altogether; that would be something!

Sean McCarthy fixes computers. He can be reached at (772) 408-0680 or help@ComputeThisOnline.com (no hyphens).

When grief becomes complicated

The first thing you learn about the grieving process is that it is a process. It doesn't happen at once and it doesn't happen in a straight line. You don't feel better and better every day. You have good days and bad ones.

The next thing you learn is that there is no timetable. Everyone grieves differently and there isn't a right and wrong way to do it or a time when you should "get over it."

In point of fact, you will never get over the loss of a loved one, but you will begin to make a life for yourself. Sometimes, though, a grieving person may find it hard to move on.

In my case, stress over a scan that required a biopsy and the death of my cat exacerbated the grief from my husband's death. I began to get more depressed and go into what is called, in the lingo, complicated grief.

Complicated grief needs attention and if you or a loved one is feeling the symptoms, you need to talk to a professional. Having complicated grief is not a sign of weakness or failure on your part and asking for help is the best thing you can do.

The following information is from an informative newsletter from The

ALIVE & WELL
SHELLEY KOPPEL

Harbors Community Grief Support Center of Treasure Coast Hospice and is taken from "Understanding Your Grief" by Alan Wolfelt.

Wolfelt said that you might be clinically depressed if you do not accept support, are irritable and complain but do not express anger, do not relate the feelings of depression to a loss, have a pervasive sense of doom, project a sense of hopelessness and emptiness, have chronic physical complaints, generalized feelings of guilt and a deep and ongoing loss of self-esteem.

Many of these feeling are present during the grieving process, but the crucial difference is that in the clinical depression of complicated grief, the sufferer really doesn't see an end in sight and the symptoms are always present. There is no respite from the pain.

One of the most interesting things to me was how normal it is to feel anger, not only at the loss, but, at the person who has died.

How dare they leave you to cope with everything yourself! It seems almost unbelievable that you could be angry with your loved one, but that is normal.

When I started to get depressed, feeling anger or any other strong emotion took more energy than I possessed. I felt that I was observing my life but wasn't really part of it. I knew that everyone around me was worried. I had been going for counseling but it seemed as if more was needed. I have been working with my grief counselor at hospice, but sometimes, additional help is needed.

Next week I'll discuss ways of dealing with complicated grief.

Best-kept couponing secrets: Do you know your limits?

I'm sure everyone has seen a sale like this. The grocery store will offer a great, bargain price on an item, the kind of item you might like to buy quite a few of at a time. But then, the store's advertisement says, in small print, "limit 4."

If you've been reading this column for a while and saving all your weekly coupon inserts, it's likely that you have accumulated multiple coupons for the same item.

For this example, assume you've been watching your store's sale fliers and waiting for yogurt cups to go on sale. Finally, there they are, four for $1, a great price. But then, of course, you're disappointed to note that you can only buy four cups of yogurt. Time for the fourth, best-kept couponing secret: how to "unlimit" purchase limits.

COUPON QUEEN

At most stores, when a sale item is advertised "limit 4," it does not refer to the number of total items of that type but, rather, the variety of each item.

With the yogurt example, above, you would not be limited to four cups of yogurt. You'd be limited to four vanilla, four peach, four blueberry, four banana and so on.

How does this work? When purchase limits are put into place for a sale, most stores set the register to limit four scans at the sale price on the bar code of that product. But each variety of a product has its own unique bar code. So while the advertisement may lead us to believe that we can buy just four yogurt cups, we can actually buy four of each flavor.

If 12-packs of soda are on sale "limit 5," we can buy five 12-packs of each variety of soda.

As long as you don't exceed the purchase limit on each flavor, type or variety of an item, you can essentially take home as many of that item as you want or need that day and, in turn, buy as many as you have coupons for. It's a great way to beat the pricing game, too, because sales with purchase limits typically offer an item at a low price in the store's pricing cycle, too. When the price hits that low, it's the right time to buy as many as you will need or use until the price drops again.

So let's see how this sale could work in my favor. Because I've saved my coupon inserts, I have six coupons for 50 cents off four cups of yogurt. I'm not limited to just buying four cups; I'll buy 24 today. Twenty-four yogurt cups may seem like a lot to buy at one time, but in comparing the expiration dates with the amount of yogurt our household will likely consume over the next month, I know that our family of five will eat it long before it expires.

I buy four cups of each flavor that I want, never exceeding the purchase limit of four for any of the flavors. And wait until you see what I pay.

With a 50-cent coupon for each four I buy, my yogurt now costs me just $3 for 24 cups, or just 12.5 cents each! That's a fantastic price for yogurt cups. By waiting to use my yogurt coupons until yogurt was deeply discounted, I saved even more.

I've mentioned this before, but the grocery stores in my neighborhood do not double coupons. But around the country, many stores do. Imagine if I were shopping in a store that doubled coupons. Each 50-cent coupon would double to $1 in value and the yogurt would be free. Now that's super-couponing.

Frustrated flounder fanatics fear not: fabulous flatties are back

If you are a flounder fanatic these days you are probably experiencing a severe case of flounder frustration.

The summer flounder season that actually begins in spring when the water starts to warm never happened.

Early in May, they had just begun to show up and then came the rain of the century. By the time it was over, the flounder and most everything else had cleared out.

I am now happy to report that the fish in the Halifax are now beginning to return and with them those fabulous flatties.

On a recent morning, I doggedly trudged out to my favorite flounder spot expecting to be shut out as I had been for so long.

Still, as we all know fishermen are ever the eternal optimists.

Once in the water, I had waded only about 30 feet when I spooked up what I knew was a flounder for as it sped away it left the telltale circle "footprints" on the surface that only they will create. All right! Could it be? Have the flounder returned?

Another 100 yards along the shore, and I had a big four- or five-pounder hooked.

Even though I was not able to land it, I was encouraged. Next, I lost a smaller one that still would have been a perfect dinner guest.

Things had taken an ugly turn. On I waded through the coffee-colored water, more determined than ever. With the sun full up, I connected with a big one and this time, it came to the beach. As I clipped it onto my metal stringer, I felt some vindication for it was as large as the first one I had missed at dawn.

INSHORE FISHING

As I fished my way back to the truck, I caught one more. On that morning, I was two out of four. That is not too bad for flounder on lures for their sideways oriented mouth is very hard and that combination makes for lots of misses.

All of my hits had come from throwing my chartreuse jig right along the shore.

If you go, be sure to cast ahead of yourself for they all were within five feet of the edge.

Remember to fish slowly, but keep your bait moving. Flounder will seldom go looking for food, so you will have to get it to them. I like a jig, but catch many on surface or diving plugs.

In shallow water flounder will nail a crank bait with a viciousness that may surprise you. If I am going to use natural bait, I like to cut thin slices of baitfish.

A six-inch ribbon of meat dancing in the current is irresistible to flat fish.

If you use live minnows or finger mullet, add a bit of weight. You want the baitfish to swim along the bottom, but you don't want so much weight that it is anchored.

Whichever bait you choose, be sure and fish it covering all of the area. If you have the right bait and are in the right spot your day just may be flounder fantastic.

Dan Smith has fished the waters of Volusia County for 40 years. When he's not fishing, the retired contractor is heavily involved with the Ormond Beach Historical Trust. For questions or comments send an e-mail to apes123@mybluelight.com

Watson was so close

We've been robbed! It was a stick-up we all saw coming, but could do nothing to prevent.

For 71 holes the golf gods shined their light on 59-year-old Tom Watson, only to rip the rug from under him on the final green. I want a mulligan.

When the blustery wind and dust settled on this year's British Open championship, we found ourselves treated to a wonderful tournament.

Unless, that is, you are simply a Tiger Woods fan and not a golf fan.

Tom Watson, 26 years removed from his eighth and final major championship, turned back the clock and made all of us feel young again. But in the end, we had our hearts ripped out.

This was not the first time we've been teased by the golf gods in 2009.

Back in April there was the Masters, led by 48-year-old Kenny Perry. Looking to become the oldest to don a green jacket, all Perry needed was a par on one of the final two holes.

He got neither and eventually lost on the second hole of a playoff to Angel Cabrera.

We were teased even more on the first playoff hole, when Perry missed the green, and watched as his chip for birdie stopped just an inch from going in.

Nothing wrong with Cabrera winning, he certainly deserved it. But imagine the thrill of seeing Perry slip into that jacket.

Then there was the U.S. Open last month at Bethpage Black. Here we had the story of Phil Mickelson trying to win his first U.S. Open title while his wife, Amy, waited across the country at home for breast cancer surgery.

To make it even better, the gods seemingly resurrected former world No. 1, David Duval, and threw him into the mix.

Instead of a wonderful present for Phil to bring home to Amy, or Duval winning his second major, the first when he was the world's best player, this one would have been while ranked 882nd, we get Lucas Glover as champion.

GOLF

Not to take anything away from Lucas, who is a solid player and deserved to win, playing the most consistent golf of the bunch down the stretch, but his story has already faded.

And last week we had the open championship at Turnberry. Watson threatened to dethrone Jack Nicklaus as the most remarkable winner of a major.

We all remember Jack's 1986 Master's triumph, but this would have trumped that in spades. Even Jack was pulling for Tom to pull this off. How much more did the golf gods need to just deliver instead of tease?

How truly remarkable would a Watson win have been? Imagine the joy of seeing Tom clutch the Claret Jug one last time. The open is Tom's greatest event. He won five of them and his appreciation for the courses and history of the championship inspired many to not only cheer very loudly for him, but almost adopt him as their own.

Players who spend their time on the champion's tour are not supposed to win majors. Heck, they usually only play in them as a reward for past accomplishments or a win at one of the champions tour majors.

It's usually just a pat on the back for a job well done, and few ever see the first tee on the weekend.

At least the royal and ancient got everything right. The course was fair and didn't favor any particular style. There was no paramount put on extreme length off the tee or strength from the thick rough. The greens weren't faster than an Indy car, allowing players to putt without fear of rolling the ball off the green. The only ones who got it wrong were the golf gods.

We, as golf fans, have to appreciate what we witnessed at the open and how much fun it was to see, even if it fell one hole short. We all felt a little younger, and finally a lot older as our collective hearts were ripped out.

The golf gods owe us. They owe us in a big way. I hope they let us have what we want at the PGA Championship. It's their last chance to get it right this year. I just hope the story is something better than Tiger wins his 15th.

Will naked cowboy put on pants?

Spend any time surfing the Web and you are bound to find stories that are just too bizarre to be true. Here's a sampling, edited for length. And remember, just because it's online doesn't mean it's true!

HOW WEIRD IS THAT?!

southwest Florida town defended the town council's decision to fire its city manager after officials learned his wife is an adult film actress.

Fort Myers Beach Mayor Larry Kiker insisted Scott Janke's termination had nothing to do with his spouse's job, saying the town was merely trying to maintain order.

An Ohio man who says he's not much of a golfer pulled off a feat that not even some of the best players can match.

handed, hole-in-one last month, 15 years after he hit a right-handed hole-in-one. The United States Golf Register tracks holes-in-one. It said it couldn't find anyone who has matched the Bowling Green man's achievement in its database that covers the last 13 years.

From www.primebuzz.kcstar.com :

It's official: Naked Cowboy running for NYC mayor

A man who makes his living posing for pictures with tourists as the Naked Cowboy in New York City's Times Square plans to run for city mayor, FOX 5 New York reports.

Robert Burck, who has made a career of playing a guitar dressed only in cowboy boots, hat, and tighty-whities, wants to replace incumbent Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who appears to be sailing toward re-election for a third term this November.
