Hoss wins Ponce Inlet election

By Michael Salerno
For Hometown News

PONCE INLET — The fifth time was the charm for Mary Hoss. The 78-year-old vice chair of the town's Planning Board was elected to Town Council Seat 3, gaining a position as an elected official following four unsuccessful attempts to become councilwoman. In Tuesday's election, Ms. Hoss earned 364 votes, accounting for 51 percent of the vote. Her opponent, Joseph Villanella, earned 346 votes — a difference of 18 votes — to finish with 49 percent. Her slim victory was a turnaround from narrowly losing a close race for a council seat last year to Kris Derr by 52 votes. She also applied three times this year for appointment to finish the terms of former council members, but was not selected by the sitting councilors at the times of her applications. The Town Council appointed interim council members following the resignations of Tony Goudie in December 2010, Barbara Davis in January 2011, and Ms. Derr in May 2011. Partly due to the trio of resignations, all five of Ponce Inlet's Town Council seats were up for grabs this election season, but four seats went unopposed. In addition to Ms. Hoss, the incoming council will include Gary Smith in the mayor's seat, Scott Meacham in Seat 2, Joe Perrone in Seat 4 and Tami Lewis in Seat 5. Following the election, Ms. Hoss said she wishes to move the town forward on important issues that have divided residents, officials and local business owners, such as an ongoing multimillion-dollar lawsuit with Pacetta concerning the proposed development of dry boat storage on waterfront property. She would do this, she said, by looking at issues with a fair mind and considering the needs of all citizens. See ELECTION, A11

Tax rate may go down in Port Orange

By Michael Salerno
For Hometown News

PORT ORANGE — City councilors are considering a property tax decrease. Councilors moved forward with adopting the operating budget for the 2011-12 fiscal year and a tentative millage rate of 4.95 mills per $1,000 of assessed value, down from the rolled-back rate of 5.11 mills. Adopting the rolled-back rate would have brought in the same amount of revenue from property taxes as the previous fiscal year without new construction and annexations. Any rate below the rolled-back rate is considered a decrease. Last year's tax rate was also set at 4.95 mills. The newly adopted rate, which will be considered for final approval on Sept. 20, represents a decrease of $350,000, or 3.22 percent, in ad valorem taxes generated by the City.

While discussing the millage rate, Mayor Allen Green stressed the importance of sufficient funds to provide services at a level the citizens are happy with.

"You moved here for a given reason, for quality of life," the mayor told members of the public attending a recent meeting. "Police and fire and recreation (in Port Orange) are quality. Having said that, we must maintain that quality."

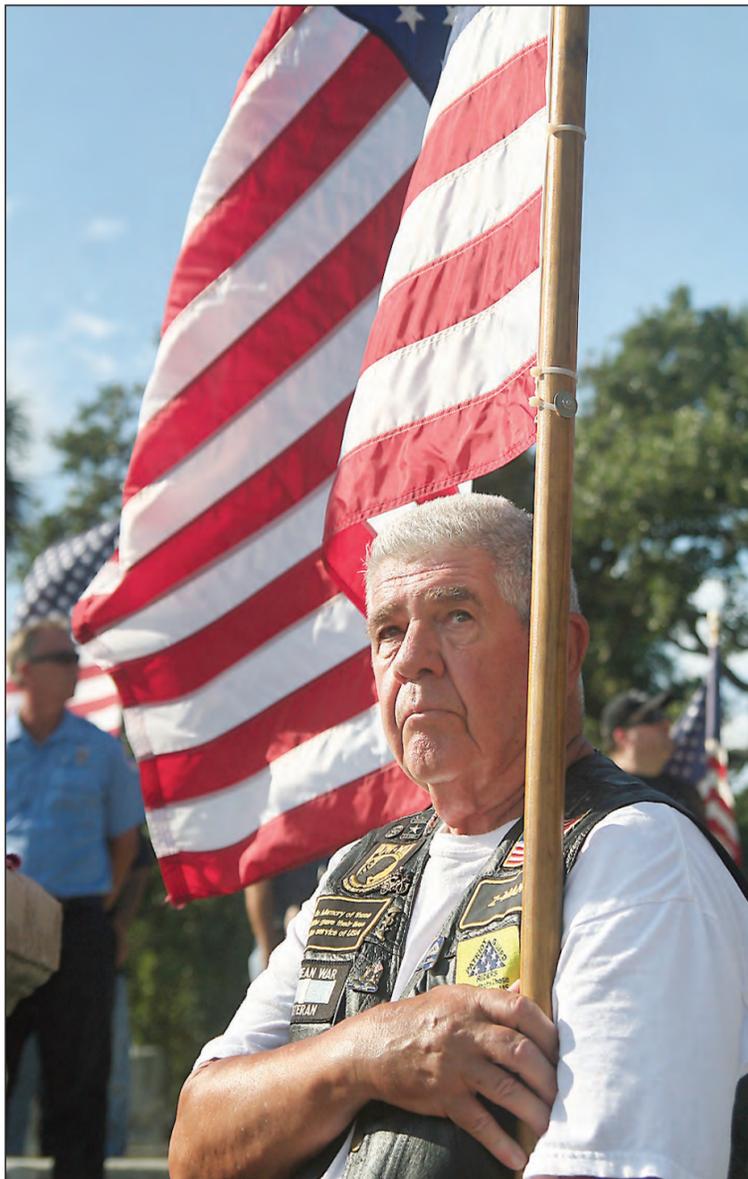

In a budget hearing in July, Mayor Green favored adopting the rolled-back rate. His colleagues, however, are content with the lower rate.

"We've addressed the needs and desires of the citizens," Vice-Mayor Dennis Kennedy said. "We've been providing the services we're required to do. I think 4.95 (mills) is a valid rate."

City Manager Ken Parker said this year's operating budget, currently set at $86,621,015, reflects the actual number of positions departments are authorized to fill and does not include any salary adjustments for city employees. He said there were

Former councilor runs again

By Michael Salerno
For Hometown News

DAYTONA BEACH SHORES — There might be an anti-incumbent sentiment in national politics, but not in Daytona Beach Shores, where a former councilman said he is being encouraged to run for office again.

Paul deMange is running for City Council Seat 2, which became vacant after Hank Smith resigned on Aug. 22. He is one of three candidates who qualified for a special election in November for the seat.

Mr. deMange, 73, has lived in Daytona Beach Shores since 1988, where he retired after 25 years as an air traffic controller in the Washington, D.C. area.

He first became involved in politics in 1999, when he was elected to the City Council. He served nine years as councilman, including a term as vice mayor from 2003 to 2007. In addition, he also served as a member of the Planning and Zoning Committee and the Civil Service Board, and is the current president of the Oceans Ten Condo Association.

Upon encouragement from many citizens, Mr. deMange ran for mayor last year, but lost to Harry Jennings. The citizen support was also what drove him to

Tourism study to help target ad dollars

By Patrick McCallister
For Hometown News

VOLUSIA COUNTY — Hotel beds without visitors' heads cost Volusia County tax revenue. So, at its last regular meeting, the Volusia County Council selected Strategic Advisory Group of Duluth, Ga., to look at countywide tourism and convention marketing to see if it can be improved.

"I'm hoping what we get is an understanding of a better way to use our tax dollars," Councilman Carl Persis of Ormond Beach, said in an interview after the meeting. "If they find that half our advertising dollars could get better results, I'd like to know that and see what happens."

One of the county's main tourist attractions, the boardwalk in Daytona Beach.

The county and company will have to draft a contract. Council members said they expect the marketing study will cost about $100,000 that will come from the county's general fund. Whether the study will find ways to attract more tourists and their dollars is uncertain.

Bob Davis, president and CEO of the Hotel & Lodging Association of Volusia County, said he's cautiously optimistic the study could benefit local tourism businesses. However, he said that largely depends on whether Strategic "talks to the locals." He

Homeless man becomes activist, advocate for others

By John Bozzo
For Hometown News

DAYTONA BEACH — When a hurricane is threatening to come through town, as Irene did recently, most homeless advocates are scrambling to make sure as many homeless people as possible have shelter from the storm. When advocate Brad Carter does that, he's not just helping others. He's helping himself.

Mr. Carter, 44, is homeless and has been for most of the past four years.

Unfortunately, he ended up awake all night during the rains that came with Irene, sitting on a bus bench. "Being outside in the rain is like most nights," he said. "Long and stressful. I don't sleep at night anyway."

But that hasn't stopped him from becoming a busy advocate for the homeless, creating a non-profit group called HOME — Homeless and Others for Meaningful Exchange. Through the group, which has gained support from local officials and social service organizations, Mr. Carter hopes to bring to light not just the struggles of the homeless while they are on the streets, but the almost insurmountable task of getting off the streets.

His story is one of not only keeping hope alive for himself, but also the thousands of other people homeless in Volusia County this year (according to a Florida Council on Homelessness report, 2,215).

"The biggest problem with being homeless in Daytona is getting some sleep," said a droopy-eyed Mr. Carter as he slumped in a chair at the Halifax Urban Ministries, a place everyone calls HUM, recently.

Homeless people can get a shower at HUM, or get their laundry done. But the facility does not offer beds. Sleeping in public is illegal and homeless people risk being ticketed or even arrested for trespassing or sleeping in public.

"I'm so tired," Mr. Carter said. "Everyone needs sleep."

Florida has the third-highest rate of homelessness in the nation, with 58,000 people homeless on any given day, according to the Council on Homelessness.

A native of Jacksonville, Mr. Carter's last job was as a baggage handler at Palm Beach International Airport. He quit five years ago, after the promise of a better job, which never materialized. Remembering youthful visits to Daytona Beach, he bought a $29 bus ticket and ended up here.

"There's not one thing that leads someone to be homeless," Mr. Carter said. "There are a lot of poor decisions along the way. One of my poor decisions was not joining the (military) service right out of high school. Instead, it took me seven years to get through a 2-year school."

An even more difficult hit came five years ago when his mother died. "It hit me hard," he said.

Mr. Carter sometimes gets work through temporary hiring halls, but has yet to land a job. "Homeless people get a bad rap," Mr. Carter said. "People think we're all addicts."

Florida Council on Homelessness figures show 44 percent of people wind up homeless because of some disability such as substance abuse, mental health or a development disorder. For others, the step toward homelessness could be prompted by such things as a layoff of bad divorce.

"A lot of homeless people have skills," said Mr. Carter, who has put together a list of area homeless people and their work skills and experience, which he shows to potential employers.

Although some social service agencies are geared to helping the homeless,

A TALE OF TWO COLUMNS

Some of you may not know that I have been writing the fishing column in this paper for the past six years.

Yep, that's me bringing up the rear of the Hometown News. What? You didn't recognize me? Must be the hat.

That is a disguise I cannot shake. Back when I got the job of fishing writer I was asked to come to the newspaper office for a head shot that would run with each column. The fellow who called me asked if I had anything distinctive to wear. When I said I didn't he asked if I owned a hat. I don't wear a hat, not even a cap when I fish but there was an old hat that had been hanging around the house for some reason. So I brought it. Little did I know it would brand me forever.

After a few years I began to do speaking engagements and I also wrote a book. My very first book signing was a big success with a constant line and lots of folks there to swap stories. I sat at my table with the hat on until I tired of it and took it off. As soon as I removed the straw topper, I noticed that people became reluctant to approach me. They would stand back and whisper to each other as if they did not know me. But when I donned my chapeau once more people quickly came over. I began to try this out at each event. Sure enough, as the fishing guy I cannot appear without the hat and I suppose if I spoke as the Land Lines guy I would have to do it bare headed. In order to help get past this dual personality problem, I will now offer you one of my favorite fishing stories here in the Land Lines space.

This piece ran in the Hometown News on March 24, 2006, and also appears in my book "I Swear The Snook Drowned."

Fishing is a thinking man's game

When I first landed on these shores around 1970 Ponce Inlet's Inlet Harbor was a plain, no frills fish camp and restaurant of the type that gave old Florida its charm. Back then you could order all of the snapper or grouper you could eat for $2.29. If you didn't mind a few bones you could get throats and ribs for $1.69. Naturally the meal came with a big order of hot, salty and greasy fries, cole slaw and scrumptious hush puppies. A fine repast indeed.

LAND LINES

Just to the north of the restaurant was a stocked pond where the children could do a little fishing while their parents sat on a bench to digest the copious amounts of seafood they had just enjoyed. The pond was about 80 feet long and 30 or 40 feet wide and was well-stocked with grunts and sailor's choice to keep the kids entertained. The adults could enjoy watching the schools of big tarpon, jacks and red fish that constantly cruised laps around the outer perimeter of the pond. The rule was that you could only fish the pond with the tackle provided by the Inlet harbor Bait Shop and that consisted of a cane pole strung with ultra light line and a small barbless hook. With that rig, it was impossible to catch the big fish. Still, every once in a while a full grown northern tourist would be overcome with the sight of the big reds and give it a try. The result was always the same. If they did succeed in hooking one of the big bruisers, the line would pop like the report of a 22-rifle.

One fine winter's day after I had eaten four or five plates of grouper ribs I wandered out on to the deck to watch the fish in the pond. Just then a battered pick-up truck backed down to the water's edge and out hopped a grizzled old man. He went straight to the bait shop and plunked down his $1.50 for the cane pole and the small pack of dead shrimp that was included. Instead of coming up onto the deck where most chose to fish he baited up and tossed the shrimp into the water right behind his truck where the pond ended in a little sandy beach. "Going to do a little fishing?" I yelled.

"Yep, Gonna catch me one of them big reds," he answered without looking up.

Now I must tell you, I was more than a little amused. This fellow was obviously not a tourist and should know better. I settled back to watch thinking this should be good for a laugh. Sure enough he began to dangle his shrimp in front of the big reds each time they passed by. When another kind of fish would attempt to bite it he would jerk it away. He was persistent and it was only a matter of time before a redfish took the bait. I prepared myself for the loud snap that would surely follow. But then a strange thing happened. The old man set the hook mightily and then threw the cane pole into the water.

I was astounded! The fish swam away with the pole but the man seemed not to worry and turned his back to sit on his tailgate and enjoy a dip of snuff. I could tell by the motion of the pole that the hooked red was back swimming with the school doing laps around the pond. After some time the fish and pole began falling behind and it was obvious the fish was getting tired. At just the right time, the man waded out into the water and put his hand into the gill of the fish. He pulled what had to be a 20-pound redfish out of the water and into the bed of his truck. With a sly wink in my direction he pulled away.

I do hope you non-fishermen liked that story. If you did you might need a copy of my book. Turn to my fishing column for ordering instructions. Don't be shy. I'm the guy in the hat.

THE LEGAL CORNER

Prevention of Bicycle Fatalities

Florida has one of the highest rates for bicycle fatalities in the nation. Unfortunately, many of the accidents involving bicyclists could be prevented.

Florida recently enacted legislation that requires drivers of a vehicle overtaking a bicycle or other non-motorized vehicle to pass at a safe distance allowing at least 3 feet between their vehicle and the bicycle.

If your children are under the age of 16, they are required to wear a helmet when riding a bicycle at all times. It is also wise for anyone riding a bicycle to wear a helmet. The use of a helmet could prevent traumatic head injuries.

Many accidents occur while drivers are distracted and fail to recognize bicyclists on the road as they are approaching them. Cell phones and computers are often the culprit of such distractions. Florida has not yet passed legislation disallowing the use of cell phones or computers while driving, but common sense would tell us to avoid doing so while operating a motor vehicle. A motor vehicle can be a dangerous instrumentality. Accordingly, we should all be proactive when operating our automobiles and refrain from using our cell phones and computers while driving.

For more information on bicycling road safety, please visit [bicycle safe.com](http://bicycle safe.com).

increases in both the unfunded liability and the required annual contribution for the City's fire pension plan.

Officials achieved a savings of $556,100 through changes to the police and general employees pension plans, but ongoing contract negotiations with the firefighters' union have made it difficult for the City to reduce its unfunded fire pension obligations.

Councilors spoke at length about what to do with city pensions during a budget workshop held in July. Some recommended if the rolled-back rate were adopted, to use additional revenues to pay down their debts.

Mr. Parker said at a recent meeting that councilors expressed an interest in addressing debt service for outstanding bond issues after this year's budget is adopted.

Still, councilors are concerned with providing citizens with quality services — and being able to afford them.

Councilman Don Burnette said he wants to find out what residents in nearby cities pay in taxes so he could determine whether property owners are getting the best bang for their buck by choosing to live in Port

"Are we giving them (citizens) the services they want?" he said. "Are we taking care of their needs? Is there a demand for parks and recreation that's being met? Do we have a quality city? Does the appearance of the city meet our standards? Those are challenges that will be ongoing. I think we have worked real hard to get to this point, but the process is only going to continue."

The second public hearing for the proposed millage rate and budget will take place during the Sept. 20 council meeting. The budget will take effect when the 2010-11 fiscal year begins on Oct. 1.

supported the company's selection over two others that made presentations at the council meeting.

Mr. Davis said about eight million people visit Volusia County annually, down by about 800,000 in recent years. He attributes that to the sluggish national economy, not to lackluster advertising practices.

Volusia County collects a 3-percent tax on short-term rentals that is allocated to three advertising authorities — Halifax Area, Southeast Volusia, and West Volusia — charged with attracting more tourists. Additionally, the county estimates that tourists pay about a third of area sales taxes, which they predict will be down more than $700,000 from the last fiscal year.

In the 2009-2010 budget, the county allocated about $6.8 million to the three agencies. That slipped to slightly more than $6.2 million in 2010-2011. If passed by the council, the proposed 2011-2012 budget will allocate about $6,850,000.

County Chair Frank Bruno said that while council members don't know whether the study will necessarily yield information for generating more visitors, it's an important investment, comparing it to businesses such as NASCAR that frequently do large marketing studies.

"I think it's an important study that's long overdue and we'll get results that are measurable," he said in an interview after the meeting. "The more people in our hotels the more tax they generate, the more we advertise and get conventions in town."

Councilwoman Joie Alexander, New Smyrna Beach, also said the study won't have to necessarily provide tips for attracting more visitors to be worth the expense.

"When you look at the millions of dollars we get from tourists, we need to know that we're doing right and targeting every area we can," she said.

Member Josh Wagner, Port Orange, compared the study to his law practice.

"I run a business," he said in a phone interview. "I want to know what marketing dollars are generating clients. (The county council is) the right organization to do it, because we oversee the budgets of the three advertising bureaus."

Mr. Persis noted that during presentations Strategic and the other two companies seeking the study contract had already identified a marketing area that the county's advertising authorities could further develop: social media. That, he said, gives him assurance that there's much more a marketing study will uncover.

"All the companies were telling us it's so much cheaper to use targeted social networking advertising," he said. "They seem to know that that is the way to go."

Quick Answers to Common Legal Questions

What Should I Do After Being In a Motorcycle Accident?

Motorcycle accidents can be severe, resulting in crippling injuries and even fatalities. If you have been involved in an accident, there are several steps you can take to increase your chances of financial and physical recovery:

- Don't leave the accident scene. Even if you weren't at fault, do not leave the scene until the police arrive and information has been collected from each party involved. If you fail to stay, you could be at risk for a hit and run felony.
- Gather critical information. This includes contact information from any parties involved in the accident as well as any witnesses present.
- Call the police. This is important in order for you to present your side of the accident and to get it documented. If the police do not show up to the scene, you can still file a report by going to a police station.
- Do not sign anything from an insurance company. Often, insurance companies will want you to make a statement of the accident right away. This, however, could be used against you later on.
- Seek medical attention. It is imperative that you seek necessary medical treatment as soon as possible after the accident occurs. Even if you think your injuries are minor, going to the doctor right away can help determine if there is anything problematic. Also, failure to seek attention can provide the defense for the insurance company that if you were really hurt, you would have sought prompt medical attention right away.
- Seek professional legal consultation from a motorcycle safety attorney to help you recover any benefits you may be entitled to as a result of another party's negligence. Hiring a motorcycle crash attorney can offer guidance and knowledge for victims hurt in a car crash or other types of personal injury claim.

Body building — and more — returns to Daytona Beach

By Jeannine Gage
jgage@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — If your idea of a body building show is a bunch of muscle-bound guys in Speedos standing on a stage flexing, the Daytona Beach Classic may surprise you.

Not to say the show, to be held at the Peabody auditorium next weekend, won't include muscular men — it most definitely will — but will also have so much more.

"This show is for anyone who is a fitness and healthy lifestyle enthusiast," said Daytona Beach Classic co-promoter Michael Matassa. "Anyone who likes to see what hard work and commitment to something can do for you."

And, of course, admirers of the human body won't be disappointed.

While the men will compete in traditional body building, the show will also feature female athletes, competing in three different categories — fitness, figure and bikini.

"The sport has evolved to the point where the main attraction isn't the men with the bulging muscles," said Daytona Beach Classic co-promoter Michael Matassa. "It's the sexy, athletic women."

But don't expect a bikini contest like you might see in your local bar, Mr. Matassa said.

"It's a sport, it has rules and regulations, and these women are athletes," he said. "They are judged on their conditioning, tone and overall appearance; you can't just walk in off the street and compete, it takes hard work."

One category, "fitness," includes more than just showing off bodies. Competitors must do a "dance/aerobics/gymnastics" routine, too.

The women's "figure" category is for those with a "muscular but still feminine physique" and the bikini category competitors are fit, of course, but "don't have an abundance of muscles," Mr. Matassa said.

A second men's category, "physique" is for guys who might look like surfers or volleyball players, he said, "very fit, six pack abs."

And for those who think this is for young people only, Mr. Matassa said there are age groups from teens to 70's and 80's.

"It's really inspiring," he said. "There are people up on that stage — women who have lost 60 pounds, or men who have never lifted a weight until their 40's — and with dedication, they have been able to do this."

Mr. Matassa, who owns Body Sculpting gym in Ormond Beach and is a former

"With the childhood obesity problem and the cutbacks in school P.E. and sports, body building and fitness is something kids can do at home or at a gym. They can look at those people up on stage and say, 'Hey, I can do that.'"

"With the childhood obesity problem and the cutbacks in school P.E. and sports," he said, "body building and fitness is something kids can do at home or at a gym. They can look at those people up on stage and say, 'Hey, I can do that.'"

Mr. Matassa said the Daytona Beach Classic is the first show of its kind here in several years and he is happy to bring it back.

"Daytona Beach is a beach town," he said, "and it should be a fitness town."

I like the way Port Orange is managed

It is great to live in Port Orange where the city fathers do such a great job managing the city that they do not have to rely on red light cameras to generate revenue like Daytona Beach. To justify the use of cameras, Daytona Beach uses the excuse that T-bone accidents happen all the time. A ticket is $158 if you pay within 30 days. The next thing they will probably try to do is make International Speedway Boulevard a toll road.

Drive safer

I moved to Florida about seven years ago. Since moving here, my insurance has quadrupled. I have not had any accidents. I keep my tags current, license current, even my address. Too bad others don't. Everyday I see someone driving with expired tags. Some even more than a year. Everyday I see people run red lights and stop signs. No one seems to stop before the white line. People speed up running stop signs in parking lots — are they aiming for all the elderly and small children? Is risking their life of that little importance to get in the store five seconds faster? Sometimes I think when people get into their cars, they leave their driveway with the intent to kill. As they speed, talk/text, put on make-up and eat while running stop signs and red lights to get to work on time? Here's a hint — get up earlier.

And don't get me started on the tailgating. I intentionally slow to five miles under the limit. If I can't even see half of your windshield, guess what? You're too close. Isn't it so that if you don't renew your tags, they suspend your license? Than your insurance gets cancelled? My uninsured motorist fees on my insurance is more than half my bill.

How quickly they forget

We recently commemorated the 10th anniversary of Sept. 11. It strikes me odd that the local authorities will not give the first responders, the firefighters and police officers, a raise; most of them have not had one in the last three years.

We need more rants and raves

I love reading the Rants and Raves every week, but I have noticed the past month that there hasn't been much going on. I am sure you have been having a lot of Rants and Raves around the area and you are not publishing them. It is such a disappointment. Please give all of us who love the Rants and Raves section what we need. We need to read what people are complaining about and the accolades too. Give us what we want.

Why are there not more rants and raves

I was disappointed this week, when I opened the viewpoint page there was only one rant and rave. Are you cutting back or are you just not getting the calls?

Editor's note: We publish every non-libelous, non-vulgar rant (or rave) on local and state issues that come into us. We welcome more.

Don't end beach driving — make it safer

As the debate about beach driving continues I would like to share some thoughts: the idea of ending beach driving, at least in New Smyrna Beach, is madness.

Before I begin, let me say that the thought of those children who died in beach driving accidents is horrifying and my heart and prayers go out to the parents. Having said that it must also be said that those children are dead not because of beach driving but because the parents were not watching them. Children as well as parents fail to understand that the "roadway" area between the cars and the water is a street. It is the same as any other street, it exists for cars to drive on, and parents who wouldn't think of letting their children cross Cooper, Yupon, Ocean or any other street will let them cross that "street" willy-nilly. Additionally, an idea that was floated was to buy or rent property across South Atlantic for parking lots to replace beach driving. This is also an insane idea. Can you just see mom, dad, and the three kids arriving for a day at the beach, parking across South Atlantic and then trying to cross that street carrying coolers, chairs and all manner of beach equipment? Can you see them crossing South Atlantic where everybody goes 40 to 50 mph? Is that going to be safer?

Here are some low or no cost ideas: One: reduce the speed limit on the beach to 5 mph (a brisk walk) and have the beach patrol actually enforce it. Two: when the cars go through the gate have the toll taker hand out a flyer to every car with children in it reminding the parents not to let their children play on, near or in the "street." Three:

Find some environmentally safe, biodegradable substance and "paint" lines every morning along the sand denoting "street lanes"; there must be some such stuff available. It will wear out during the day but not all of it and it will be a visual reminder. Tomorrow morning, "paint" it again.

Those cars that come across the bridges and park on the beach bring a lot of money and they leave a lot of it in town, in the stores and the restaurants. If they can't park they won't come. Ending beach driving is not the answer. Making it safer is.

Schools are so important

Ten years have passed since the nightmare of Sept. 11 and how frustrated I am that I'm apparently failing to energize us into action. Stop and think how in teaching young minds to think independently it is America's public school system that provides our country with the first line of defense against terrorism. Why do so many complain about paying school taxes and yet have no problem with their money going towards Homeland Security? The sooner our attitude towards public education becomes one in which we all expect respect from both our schools and our own selves, the sooner public education will be made The priority it ought to be in our country, thereby keeping us forever strong.

Dan Smith is hilarious. I love reading all of his columns and I love the Hometown News.

Dan Smith is the real deal

I have the privilege of meeting Dan Smith, the one who does the fishing column, and he is the real deal. He does not sit behind a desk and make phone calls to find where the fish are biting. He goes out and catches them. When I met him he was in his kayak. It was an honor to meet him. I real-

In response to 'Gel nails polish may be a problem'

I have been having gel nails done for about a year now. I had no problem with it. If the writer had a problem, she should have went back to her manicurist and ask them to remove the polish. I don't think she is fair to everybody else who uses gel polish. I don't think it is fair for people who make their living doing this work.

Clerk's counsel explains change in policy on electronic arrest reports

The Clerk's office completely understands your readers' concerns about the change in access to the home addresses of individuals arrested in Volusia County. Our office used to provide these addresses on our website, but they were removed due to a Florida Supreme Court Administrative Order that prohibits the electronic release of litigant or defendant addresses.

The Administrative Order is AOSC07-49: Revised Interim Policy on Electronic Release of Court Records, and it specifically limits what the Clerks' offices may provide to the public electronically. You can find the Order on the Supreme Court website or by running an Internet search.

While the Clerk must abide by the Order that prohibits the electronic release of this information, the addresses are still public record. The addresses can be viewed by coming to the Clerk's office in person, or individuals may request a paper copy of the information from our office for a fee set by statute. In short, these records are still available to the public, but unfortunately, the Clerk can no longer provide them to the public electronically.

Of course, we are aware that our inability to provide this information through our website makes it less convenient and more costly to obtain. However, we must abide by the law. The good news is that there is a committee and workgroup at the State level that is currently writing electronic records standards. Our hope is that once these standards are adopted, the Clerks' offices in Florida will be able to provide more information electronically to the public.

Thank you for your understanding and patience.

Laura Roth, Chief Deputy Clerk/General Counsel for DIANE M. MATOUSEK Clerk of the Circuit Court

Editor's note: After much research and deliberation on our options to attain the addresses of those arrested, we have come to the conclusion that at this time, Hometown News does not have the staff or resources it would take to gather the home addresses. We will continue to run the arrest reports that include the city where the arrested person lives, and continue to hope that there is a change in the law that would allow this information to once again be distributed electronically. Our publisher has written letters to the state supreme court and our legislators letting them know that we believe the extraction of the addresses from the electronic reports places an undue burden on community newspapers and we invite our readers to do the same. In the meantime, readers who want to see the addresses of those arrested should understand that they are still public records and available by contacting the Clerk's office or arresting agencies.

"Many people asked me to help again and bring my experience to our city," he said.

Mr. deMange listed several priorities he would focus on if he is elected, one of them being to review the budget process to ensure taxpayer dollars are being spent properly.

After reviewing this year's budget, he believes the City Council must have a "serious discussion" about the idea of canceling the city's Community Redevelopment Area, saying it "has no future."

Last year in his campaign for mayor, he said he supported the CRA, believing it would improve the look and feel of the community and hoped to see success with it. He has since changed his opinion, due to the lack of return on the taxpayers' investments.

"The debt service to the taxpayers is in the hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said. "We had a great expectation that went bust."

Additionally, Mr. deMange no longer supports the CRA because, he said, the parks north of the Shores Resort and Spa "are not used and a waste of money to maintain."

To make the community more business friendly, he is interested in finding ways to make the permitting process more efficient for new and existing businesses that locate in the city.

"Economic development during these times is adequate," he said. "However, we need to review the permitting process to streamline our businesses' ability to operate efficiently here in the Shores."

Maintaining current service levels offered by the city's public safety department — as well as the department's "integrity and respect in the community" — is also important to Mr. deMange.

"What I would do is to maintain staff, the necessary equipment and training to maintain our accreditation," he said. "This basically evolves from my respect for the officers."

One thing he wants to do for the department is come up with funding for a new fire truck, which he described as "very important" to him.

Mr. DeMange said he wants to serve his city.

"I'm running to help the people of the Shores," he said. "These are difficult times. I believe I can contribute to the welfare of the people here through my experience."

Wireless World is premium Verizon retailer

By Diane Carey
For Hometown News

VOLUSIA COUNTY — Dan Gardner, Wireless World Founder, has been in the retail business nearly 40 years. The last 27 years have been spent revolutionizing the cell phone industry working in conjunction with corporate giant Verizon. Although Mr. Gardner has eight well established Wireless World stores in New York, he and his family now call Volusia County home with new store locations in Port Orange, New Smyrna Beach, and Holly Hill.

"It's in my blood I guess you could say," Mr. Gardner said. "I like helping folks find just the right product for them to make their lives better and enjoy for many years."

He said wireless communication devices are in his blood.

"My dad was a radio operator with the Army-Air Corps during World War II, establishing one of the first ground to air radio stations on Normandy Beach," Mr. Gardner said. "For those who don't know it, a cellular phone for all its 'gee-whiz' effect, is still just a two way radio."

Wireless WorldWide Inc. is a New York based Corporation in the primary business of retailing Verizon Wireless cellular services and DirecTV. All stores feature a wireless world eStore that offers all of Verizon's products including iPads, phones for purchase, services, DirecTV, and staff support. Mr. Gardner said what sets his stores apart are "hometown customer service."

"Let's face it, you can buy a cellular phone out of a vending machine but that machine can't answer a single question you are bound to have," he said. "Unlike the big stores, we know your name and you know ours. Our company culture and our niche have always been small communities and our people are trained to spend all the time necessary with every single customer to make wireless simple for them."

Joan Snow, a customer of the New Smyrna Beach store, agrees.

"I was very pleased when I saw the store was coming to the beachside," she said. "Kayla (a store employee) was so pleasant, knowledgeable and helpful. She walked me through getting a new phone and making the transition to a new provider. I have been back several times with questions and she has always been accommodating."

Mr. Gardner said he has been in the wireless business since the beginning.

"I installed the first cellular mobile phone in our country in New York in 1984," he said. "... I was among the very first group of Verizon Wireless retailers. As Verizon evolved, so did Wireless World. We became one of the first premium retailers for Verizon Wireless, a proud accomplishment as only a small group of agents nationwide have earned such a designation."

The Gardners, who came here in February, originally planned to build out the initial Volusia locations and get back to upstate New York where their other stores are well established. However, with daughter Sarah in New Smyrna Beach and longtime friends and employees Ken and Sara Probst relocated here as well, they have decided to stay.

For more information, visit the website at ewireless-world.com. The Port Orange location is in Dunlawton Square, 3841 S. Nova Road. For more information, call (386) 846-1144. The New Smyrna store is at the Publix Plaza beachside, 1335 Saxon Drive. For more information, call (386) 478-8856, and Holly Hill is at 1834 Ridgewood Avenue in the Publix Plaza. For more information, call (386) 872-1060. All locations are open seven days a week.

New DB Home and Garden Show is next weekend

By Diane Carey
For Hometown News

DAYTONA BEACH — A new boat for Dad, a new kitchen for Mom, and a chance for the kids to see Twiggy, the water skiing squirrel — are all part of the newest attraction to come to Daytona Beach September 23-25 at the Ocean Center.

The new Daytona Beach Home and Garden Show is a spinoff of the Orlando Home and Garden Show which has been held in Orange County for six years. Producer Dave Kielhurn, who has been producing home shows for 17 years, wanted to bring something unique to Daytona Beach and opted for a "2 for 1" show that would include both the Home and Garden Show as well as the Daytona Boat Show.

"People are going to want to come because the show will have hundreds of new products and thousands of good ideas" Mr. Kielhurn said. "We will have everything for in and around your home. This will be the place to find it."

Celebrity guest Brandie Malay of the HGTV hit show "Hidden Potential" will be present throughout the weekend. The show will have over 200 exhibitors featuring everything for the home including landscape design, kitchen, bath, pools, and spas. In addition, five of Central Florida's boat dealers representing over 20 manufacturers will display the newest in Bowriders, pontoon boats, ski boats, cruisers, fishing boats, bass boats, marine electronics, accessories and more.

Brandie Malay

According to Mr. Kielhurn, "we have things for him and her."

Local professional contractors will be on hand to give informative seminars throughout the weekend, and charities such as "Building Homes for Heroes" and the Volusia County Firefighters Association will be on site accepting donations. The cost of general admission is $7 and complimentary passes can be found for a limited time at all area Home Depot and Walgreens.

Daytona Beach business owner Stacey Lipton of Stacey Lipton Interiors is looking forward to the show. "What impressed me about Dave (Mr. Kielhurn) is having a new promoter in the area who puts on successful professional shows for a living," she said. "Someone new to our area who is highlighting Daytona Beach and putting us on the map using a well-thought out mass marketing plan using the newspaper, billboards, etc."

Ms. Lipton is director of the French Market held in Daytona Beach and serves on the Downtown Development Authority Board.

"As a city we need to look for new people to come in and do new things," she said; "to bring in a whole new customer base and fill hotels."

Eric Bartolozzi of Serene Pavers and Stonescapes, Inc. in New Smyrna Beach said he is excited about showing off his work at the show.

"I would like to show everybody that we are the best at what we do and this is the perfect opportunity to do that," he said.

The show is being sponsored by The Home Depot, Walgreens, The Hometown News, The Daytona Hilton, and Bright House Networks. The event will take place 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Sept. 23 and 24, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 25. For more information, visit www.daytonabeachhomeshow.com. A second show will take place in Daytona Beach on March 2 and 3, 2012.

New prescription drug database now in effect

For Hometown News
Volnews@hometownnewsol.com

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Department of Health (DOH) today provided an update on its statewide campaign to combat prescription drug abuse.

On September 1, 2011, any Florida health care practitioner who has dispensed a controlled substance, (i.e., OxyContin®, Percocet®, Vicodin®, Klonopin®, Xanax®, and Valium®), is required to report dispensing information to the Prescription Drug Monitoring Program database within seven (7) days after dispensing. Also, a new law requiring the use of DOH-approved counterfeit-resistant prescription pads when prescribing controlled substance(s) will be enforced.

The statewide public health emergency declaration issued by State Surgeon General Dr. Farmer on July 1, 2011 ends today. The declaration was instituted as a proactive step to combat the illegal distribution of prescription drugs by working with law enforcement officials and other state agencies to focus on the physicians that are of the highest concern due to their purchasing and dispensing levels.

"While the statewide public health declaration may no longer be in effect, the efforts of the Florida Department of Health, law enforcement partners and other state agencies remain strong," said Governor Rick Scott. "We have made great strides and will continue to, in our fight against prescription drug abuse, and I applaud the professional work of both the Department of Health and the Florida Department of Law Enforcement."

Practitioners with additional questions can call DOH's Division of Medical Quality Assurance Customer Contact Center at (850) 488-0595 or email MQAOperations@doh.state.fl.us.

those agencies only help people who are addicts, veterans (who make up 13 percent of homeless), or those with some other disability.

"If you're just down and out, there isn't much available," he said.

The stereotypes are difficult to overcome while hunting for a job, he said. Employers want to know phone numbers, home addresses and whether a person has transportation to the job.

"If you're honest about being homeless, they ask how you're going to keep clean, keep your clothes clean — they think you're an addict," he said.

Donations to HOME have helped the group publish a newsletter. A recent issue tells how a judge provides sentencing alternatives, allowing the homeless who face charges such as trespassing or sleeping in public to avoid court costs by performing community service.

HOME and Mr. Carter have drawn some attention, including a recent spot on the CBS Evening News, which referred to Mr. Carter as "one of the state's brightest points of light."

He will also get a regular slot on WELE (1380 AM) to discuss homeless issues. "We might profile homeless people to show we're not all addicts," he said.

Big John, owner of the radio station, said Mr. Carter will be on his regular show on the second Wednesday of every month about 4:30 p.m. "He's been on twice already," Mr. John said. "Matter of fact, I made the CBS news for about seven seconds."

Mr. John believes Mr. Carter's quest to better

Brad Carter, after another recent sleepless, homeless night, sits on the porch of the Halifax Urban Ministries, where he can get a shower and do laundry. Mr. Carter has formed a non-profit group called HOME to help homeless people like himself.

inform the public about homelessness is worthwhile.

"We want to educate the community," he said. "People will call in and ask him questions. I'll ask him questions. It will be good for people to learn that street people are not their enemy. There but for the grace of God, you or I might be out on the street."

One idea Mr. Carter wants to get out there is about using vacant housing to shelter the homeless. U.S. Census figures show roughly 40,000 vacant housing units in Volusia County.

"We've recently discussed fixing them up and staying in them," Mr. Carter said. "That's the kind of thing we talk about at our (HOME) summit meetings."

Shiela McKay-Vaughn, a former Daytona Beach city commissioner, supported Mr. Carter after seeing his efforts to help not only himself, but others. Ms. McKay-Vaughn serves on the HOME board. "Here's a group of homeless people trying to help themselves," Ms. McKay-Vaughn said. "They're not asking for a handout. They're saying we want something, but we don't know how to do it."

She helped arrange a meeting between Mr. Carter and Daytona Beach Mayor Glenn Ritchey.

Ms. McKay-Vaughn also is a member of the Tiger Bay Village Project, an effort to get Volusia County to donate land on Indian Lake Road for a tent city for the homeless. The tents would eventually be replaced with barracks.

Volusia County Council members have not directed their staff to move on the Tiger Bay Village Project. However, County Council members support the idea of a forum on homeless issues, possibly to be sponsored by Stetson University. Nothing has been scheduled as yet.

Election

"The voters of Ponce Inlet have paid me a great honor by electing me to serve on Town Council," she said. "It is my desire to serve all of the people. It is time for us to move forward on the important issues."

As a newcomer to local politics, Mr. Villanella was pleased to see the final vote count showed a close challenge against his opponent.

Although he did not win the seat, he said he accomplished his main objective for running — to "wake up" citizens on how the Pacetta litigation would affect them in the event the Town loses. A loss, he believes, would cost the taxpayers millions to fund a "big box developer" whose development of their waterfront property could adversely impact the small town feel of the community.

"As close as (the election) was, I think I did a good job of educating people of the potential risk (of losing a lawsuit) for the citizens here," he said.

Mr. Villanella said he would run for office again in the future.

The incoming councilors, including Ms. Hoss, will be sworn in on Nov. 17.

According to the Volusia County Department of Elections, 711 of Ponce Inlet's 2,635 registered voters turned out for the vote.

On a recent day at Halifax Urban Ministries, Jeff Moran said hello to Mr. Carter as he sat on the porch of the building. Back in May, Mr. Moran said Mr. Carter helped him find some day labor work.

"Everybody knows him," Mr. Moran said of Mr. Carter. Sometimes, the other homeless call Mr. Carter the president. He just smiles in response.

"I tell them I'm not the president of the homeless," Mr. Carter said. "I'm president of HOME."

Despite the challenges and disappointment of life on the street, Mr. Carter said he has hope for the future, not only for himself, but other homeless. He hopes there will be a place where the homeless can sleep. For himself, he hopes for a job, an apartment, a dog and a cat, a wife and even children.

"I have hopes," he said. "You won't see me jumping off a bridge."

Spend any time surfing the Web and you are bound to find stories that are just too bizarre to be true. Here's a sampling, edited for length. And remember, just because it's online doesn't mean it's true!

From buzzfeed.com:
Dutch woman calls ex-boyfriend 65,000 times

Dutch prosecutors are charging a 42-year-old woman with stalking after she allegedly called her ex-boyfriend 65,000 times in the past year.

The 62-year-old victim from The Hague filed a police complaint due to the persistent phone calls. Police arrested the suspected stalker and seized several cell phones and computers from her home.

Hague prosecution spokeswoman Nicolette Stoel said the woman argued to judges at a preliminary hearing she had a relationship with the man and the number of calls she placed to him wasn't excessive. The man denied they had a relationship.

The court ordered her not to contact him again.

From king5.com:
Neighbor asks permis- sion to dump body in trash

A man who asked his neighbors if he could dump a body in their trash was arrested.

Tacoma Police spokesman Sgt. Mark Fulghum said it was unclear if the neighbors actually gave the man permission to dump the body in their trash, but he allegedly did it anyway.

Police said the body was that of a 16-year-old Tacoma boy who had been shot in the head.

From NBCSanDiego.com:
Man dressed as Gumby fails in attempt to rob 7-Eleven

A man dressed as Gumby attempted to rob a Rancho Penasquitos 7-Eleven, but his efforts failed, in part because the clerk couldn't take him seriously.

The suspect told the clerk he was robbing the store, San Diego Police Detective Gary Hassen said. The clerk, thinking the man was playing a prank, responded that he didn't have time and that he had to clean.

Video surveillance shows the suspect fumbling in his pocket for a non-existent — or inaccessible — gun. After a few minutes, the suspect left with an accomplice in a van.

The attempt occurred at 12:30 a.m., but the clerk didn't think to report it to police until 6 a.m.

From sfgate.com:
Drunken moose found stuck in tree

A seemingly intoxicated moose was discovered entangled in an apple tree.

Per Johansson says he heard a roar from his vacationing neighbor's garden in southwestern Sweden and went to have a look. There, he found a female moose kicking about in the tree.

The animal was likely drunk from eating fermented apples.

With the help of police and rescue services, the 45-year-old Johansson later managed to set the moose free in part by sawing off tree branches. But the animal appeared confused and wandered into Johansson's garden, where she rested.

Johansson said the moose appeared to be sick, drunk or "half-stupid."

From philly.com:
Shopper arrested with live lobsters in shorts

A man in southern Mississippi is accused of trying to walk out of a D'Iberville grocery store without paying for food items he'd stuffed into his cargo shorts, including live lobsters.

Police Chief Wayne Payne said 35-year-old Nathan Mark Hardy was arrested after allegedly stuffing two bags of jumbo shrimp, a pork loin and two live lobsters into his cargo shorts.

Payne said Hardy tried to escape by throwing the pork loin at employees at the local Winn Dixie but fell while running away. He was arrested at the scene.

From mynorthwest.com:
N.Y. man: I called in threat because power was out

A New York man said he phoned in a bomb threat to try to get power turned back on at his grandmother's house.

Nassau County police said Rajiv Pandey called a TV station and threatened to place a bomb at a Long Island Power Authority facility. Investigators searched more than 30 locations but did not find a bomb.

In an interview published in the Daily News, Pandey says he made the call and conceded the consequences could ruin his life. He is charged with falsely reporting an incident.

The Central Islip resident says he was frustrated. He says his grandmother "was dying of heat" and her food had spoiled.

Her power was restored six days after Tropical Storm Irene barreled through.

When the question is 'What's for dinner?' Meatloaf is a good answer

Hello, smart shoppers.

When "What should I make for dinner?" keeps going round and round in your head, ground beef often comes to mind.

Remember what I have told you in the past. Do not buy ground beef, buy a bottom, top or eye round roast or round steak when on sale and ask the butcher to trim the fat and grind the meat. Now you're having a "good for you" ground beef, not one that is grease-laden. Fat in meat is the bad saturated fat, extra virgin olive oil is the good monounsaturated fat. When using virtually "fat-free" ground beef, add some olive oil for moisture.

Today's column will offer up some deliciously different ways with ground beef.

We'll have Pattie's meatloaf and barbecued meatloaves. My cousin's daughter-in-law, Pattie, invited us to dinner and prepared a delicious meatloaf. When I asked her for the recipe she informed me that she got the idea from her mother-in-law, Jeannie. When Jeannie told her to use dry Italian bread and Pattie didn't have any Jeannie suggested stuffing mix such as Stove Top moistened with any cream soup. Pattie used basic ingredients requiring two pounds of ground beef. I made a giant meatloaf that was great and froze the extra for another meal.

A box of stuffing mix contains 2 1/2 cups. With Jeannie's ratio (one pound of ground beef to one cup of stuffing to one egg per pound, plus other stuff, I created this recipe. Since you can't cut an egg in half I used a whole one for the half pound.

Barbecued meatloaves are a delicious take-off on meatloaf. I found the recipe years ago, made a few changes to suit our tastes and filed it as a favorite. Enjoy, see you next week.

PATTIE'S MARVELOUS MEATLOAF REGULAR AND LOW-FAT

- 2 1/2 cups stuffing mix (try the store brand)
- 1 10oz. can concentrated cream soup (I used 98 percent fat-free cream of celery)
- 1/2 cup catsup
- 2 1/2 pounds "fat-free" ground beef
- 3 large eggs or 3/4 cup egg substitute
- 1 cup chopped onion (1 large)
- 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
- Several sprigs fresh Italian parsley, chopped or 1 tbsp. dried
- 1 tsp. each salt and pepper
- 3 tbsp. extra virgin olive oil (use only for fat-free choice)
- 1/2 tsp. garlic powder, optional

Place stuffing, soup and catsup in a medium bowl, mix to moisten; let sit for 15 minutes. Meanwhile, in a large bowl, place meat and remaining ingredients. Add stuffing, scrub your hands real well and mix all together thoroughly.

Making two loaves, place in a large baking pan.

Place on rack in center of oven and broil until top of loaves are brown (helps make a better gravy). Remove pan from oven. Preheat oven to 350. For a one pot meal, place cut up potatoes (large chunks) and halved carrots around meat and bake for 1 hour or until vegetables are almost tender. Add 1/2 cup water or beef broth to the pan and cover with foil continue baking for 15 minutes or until veggies are tender.

Using a slotted spoon, remove vegetables. Place meatloaf on platter and pour remaining juices into a small saucepan. If you used regular ground beef, de-fat by adding several ice cubes. Be sure to add enough cubes - you don't want them to all melt before the liquid is cold. Let sit until all the fat has congealed and clung to the cubes. Remove remaining cubes and fat with a slotted spoon. Add 1/2 cup water to pot and prepare gravy by adding 2 heaping tablespoons flour to 1 cup cold water in a jar. Cover and shake until blended. Add slowly to boiling liquid adding gravy master for color and a packet of powdered beef bouillon for flavor. You can also use store bought gravy to add to the liquid.

ROMANCING THE STOVE with the Grammy Guru ARLENE BORG

BARBECUED MEATLOAVES SERVES 4 REGULAR AND LOW FAT

Ground beef may be used in place of the pork if you choose.

- 3/4 lb. ground beef
  - 1/4 lb. lean ground pork
  - 1/4 cup bread
  - 1/4 cup milk - whole, low-fat or skim
  - 3/4 tsp. salt
  - 1/4 tsp. pepper
  - 1 tbsp. parsley flakes
  - 1 medium (1/2 cup) onion,

Summer of the flounder over, ready for the fall of the red

The inshore water is beginning to cool, signaling the end of a very long and unusual summer for yours truly. Instead of my normal hot weather habit of stalking the big single reds that cruise Tomoka Basin or ripping out the schools of trout that gather in the southern Mosquito Lagoon, I spent my summer catching flounder.

So single-minded was I that I abandoned all others. Since I found the flatties either from my kayak or on foot, my two outdoor boats were woefully neglected. I did make sure that both had sufficient gas treatment in the fuel tanks and made an attempt to fire them up every now and again. Still, an unused vessel can create all sorts of ways to let you down.

Now, with the crazy flounder season winding down I am thinking reds. I have three spots in mind where I expect success. By the time you read this I intend to have tried them all. First I will make the long drive from Ormond by the Sea to the Shiloh Marsh, which is down near The Haulover Canal just south of the Volusia County line. The place I fish there is very difficult to get to since there is no boat ramp anywhere nearby. I will either dump my little Carolina Skiff in off the canal bank or try it with the Green Peanut.

FISHING WITH DAN

Whichever way I go I expect to get a lot of action from my red and white Mirro-Lure. The type I swear by is named "Floating Twitch Bait" on the package. It is an innocuous looking plug that floats but will dive on the retrieve. If you are able to sight fish reds you may use it as a top water lure by winding it back slowly. If you can't see the reds you can submerge it and wait for the invisible underwater strike. It is a deadly bait for reds, trout or snook.

Another place I will visit is Sleepy Hollow Park near the Three Bridges south of Port Orange on U. S. 1. Once more there is no boat ramp there so I will either wade or take my kayak. This spot calls for my chartreuse jig. Reds and snook will be the target. Fishing the shrimp tail very slowly I expect lots of small fish but I know that the big heavy hitters are always around there, too. The many sharp oyster shells there make it very difficult to land an oversized red with my 10-pound test line, but the fun is in the trying.

Thirdly (is that a word?) I will take my 17-foot Polar up to the big mud flats west of High Bridge near the Flagler County line. That area is famous for big battling redfish. Most who fish it regularly opt for a free lined live mullet but I will go with my jig tipped with a half inch of dead shrimp. This is shallow water fishing and you must be quiet. I will use my push pole and leave my electric trolling motor on the deck. Just one "clink" of a propeller striking an oyster can spook every red for a quarter mile.

Those are a few spots you might want to try. If you find my directions just a bit vague, good. Exploring an area thoroughly and finding the prime spots is a big part of the fun and I wouldn't want to deprive you of that. Great red fishing is just beginning, so get out and give it a try. If you go on a weekend be sure and take a kid along.

Dan Smith has fished the waters of Volusia County for more than 40 years. E-mail questions and comments to fishwdan@att.net. His book, "I Swear the Snook Drowned," is available for $10.95 at (386) 441-7793.
