New police chief to start work

By Michael Salerno
For Hometown News

PONCE INLET — Frank Fabrizio is leaving the big city police force he's known for the last three decades to lead a small seaside community.

Mr. Fabrizio, 51, will be sworn in as the town's next police chief at a ceremony on March 5. He spent the last 29 years working with the Orange County Sheriff's Office.

After Town Manager Jeaneen

Clauss selected him for the job, councilors unanimously approved her recommendation at a recent Town Council meeting. Mr. Fabrizio will replace Wayne Lurcock, who died in September 2011.

Mr. Fabrizio said he would have an active presence in the community. As police chief, he would act as the town's "biggest advocate."

"I think it's important that myself, as your chief, will be visible in the community and responsive to your needs," he said.

Despite taking on a new job in a new location, he said he's not a total stranger to Ponce Inlet. He frequently visits the area with his family and owns a condo in the town.

In searching for a new police chief, Ms. Clauss said she looked for "the most qualified candidate who would love

Pastor overcomes odds, achieves many firsts

By James Harper
For Hometown News

DAYTONA BEACH — With the odds stacked against him, the Rev. Carl Brinkley has managed to achieve the American dream in Daytona Beach.

Many in the city know him as the long-time executive director of the Daytona Beach Housing Authority. Many more know him as a minister of the gospel at several churches. But he has worn many other hats: he was the first black deputy sheriff in Volusia County and he has served on dozens of volunteer advisory boards and committees, making a difference not only for black residents, but all who live in the area.

Catherine Kershaw of Bethune-Cookman University first met Rev. Brinkley while serving on a community housing resource board.

"He is a significant part of Daytona history in his affiliation with B-CU and the leadership he gave to public housing," Ms. Kershaw said. "During his era, he should be considered one of the most distinguished leaders in Daytona Beach and a force to be reckoned with on issues that impacted the African-American community."

Rev. Brinkley was born in 1925 and grew up in Newark, N.J., where he was one of few black students attending the integrated Central Avenue Elementary and Junior High schools.

In 1942, shortly after Japan bombed Pearl Harbor, Rev. Brinkley, at 16, lied about his age and enlisted in the United States Marines on the cusp of World War II.

"I believed our enemy was Japan and I was only another American that wanted to serve my country," Mr. Brinkley said as to why he enlisted. "Their (whites) problems were my problems. My friends were going. We went to the theater seeing the ships being blown up. I was the first ... to enlist."

Rev. Brinkley would eventually end up at Camp Lejeune in North Carolina where he would get his first taste of Southern segregation.

In 1948, Rev. Brinkley came to Daytona Beach at age 23 to help his ailing grandparents.

While many blacks at the time were headed North, fleeing the South because of discrimination and segregation, Rev. Brinkley did the opposite.

After arriving here he got his "call" to be a preacher.

"It was three o'clock in the morning," Rev. Brinkley said. "The spirit said 'go preach my gospel.'"

Rev. Brinkley's grandparents were well off compared to most black and many white residents.

His grandmother, Liza Brinkley-Williams, was the only black woman in town, other than her friend, Mary McLeod Bethune, founder of Bethune-Cookman University, who owned her own car.

Mrs. Brinkley-Williams inherited

HOA board 'occupies' Port Orange neighborhood

By Michael Salerno
For Hometown News

PORT ORANGE — The Occupy movement has come to town, but the protests are not about Wall Street.

Some residents of the Sleepy Hollow subdivision are using the global movement that protests economic and social inequality as a creative way to encourage neighbors to pay their homeowners association dues — because some of their neighbors aren't paying.

The Sleepy Hollow Recreation Association's board of directors have set up an "Occupy Sleepy Hollow" tent on the left hand side of the neighborhood entrance, just outside the tennis courts.

Alan Titkemeier, the board's treasurer, came up with the idea of Occupy Sleepy Hollow to bring attention to the neighborhood's issue of homeowners not paying their dues and to make it relevant to the news of the day.

"That was our attempt to make it visible to the homeowners (who don't pay their dues)," he said, "and also for those who pay (to say) we appreciate you paying, this is our protest on behalf of you."

Next to the tent is a miniature American flag, a beach chair, a cooler, and a log decorated with red lights that light up at night to resemble a campfire.

Mr. Titkemeier said the site started out with just a tent and an "Occupy Sleepy Hollow" sign, but board members kept adding to it to look like someone camped out there to "protest."

Echoing a common sentiment heard in the Occupy protests, Sleepy Hollow's board of directors wants all homeowners to pay their "fair share."

Sleepy Hollow, a two-acre neighborhood located on Nova Road, has 175 homeowners. On average, 70 of them don't pay their annual dues, said Carol Teta, vice president of Sleepy Hollow's board of directors.

Ms. Teta said the amount of non-payers fluctuates.

"Sometimes they (homeowners) don't give me a check until I ask them," she said.

Dues are $150 a year and pay for the common grounds, the pool, and the tennis courts, Ms. Teta said.

While standing outside the tennis courts on a recent afternoon, Ms. Teta, who was also one of the subdivision's first homeowners, said all residents should be held responsible for maintaining the appearance of the neighborhood.

"Who do you think mows the lawn?" she said. "You think a lawn mowing genie goes out and does it?"

Some of the non-paying residents are in rough financial situations, but others have the ability to pay and choose not to, she said. Those who do not pay reap the

Volusia County Schools names Teacher of the Year

For Hometown News
Newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

DAYTONA BEACH — Leslie Birney, a fourth grade teacher from Citrus Grove Elementary School, is Volusia County Schools' Teacher of the Year for 2012. She will serve as Volusia County's Teacher of the Year throughout this school year and next, representing all of Volusia's teachers.

Mrs. Birney received her award before an audience of 900 friends of public education at the Hilton Daytona Beach Oceanfront Resort on Friday, Feb. 10, 2012. The announcement was made at a celebration co-hosted by FUTURES Foundation and the Daytona Regional Chamber of Commerce.

"One of the most important goals of the FUTURES Foundation is to serve and to support our innovative, amazing teachers who continue to work passionately every day on behalf of the students of Volusia County," said Bobby Thigpen, FUTURES Foundation President. "Our Board and our Chamber feel strongly that our teachers deserve praise, validation and celebration as a special group of professionals."

Mrs. Birney began her career with Volusia County Schools in 2008, after teaching for 30 years in New York. She taught second and fourth grades at Freedom Elementary and then in 2011 moved to Citrus Grove where she took on a major role to help open the new school and now teaches fourth grade.

Each student in Mrs. Birney's classroom is keeping a realistic "passport" for the year to document the places traveled as they make their way through the fourth grade reading textbook. Her class has even gone to the moon. In math, students use dry erase markers on their desktops to show their work, which they can quickly erase to correct a mistake.

To celebrate a moment of pride, the class gives a silent cheer for a group, a roller coaster cheer for a classmate's achievement or a dance for the whole class. Her students know that each child gains knowledge at different rates and they are always willing to help a "hungry neighbor."

Mrs. Birney believes one of the most satisfying ways to unite a classroom or school is to be involved in the community. She championed a new playground for her elementary school in New York. And last year, she worked with a group of volunteers for 10 months to design, build and paint sets and create costumes for 86 children to perform in "Beauty and the Beast" at the Athens Theatre in DeLand.

A colleague described Mrs. Birney as having magical creativity, enthusiasm, motivation and love for children that is not only the glitter in their lives, but the sparkle for her school team. Mrs. Birney lives up to that expectation daily and says that people in her world know they can count on her to add sparkle to their lives.

In addition to Mrs. Birney, four other teachers received special recognition as finalists:

- Kip Dickens-Best, 4th/5th grade, Pine Trail Elementary
- Heather H. Henderson, reading coach, University High
- Melissa A. Marple, kindergarten, Edgewater Public
- Sandra Jeter Tweedy, mathematics, Spruce Creek High

The White Triplex: Triumph to tragedy

This Sunday, Daytona International Speedway will host 43 cars that represent the ultimate evolution of the sport of stock car racing. Mostly forgotten in the NASCAR family tree is the most formidable machine to ever run in Volusia County.

By 1928, the World's Land Speed Records that were set on our beach had become mostly a closed competition between two wealthy gentlemen from Great Britain. In 1927, Major Henry Segrave had become the first person to travel over 200 mph in his big Sunbeam Mystery S. Then in February of 1928, Captain Malcolm Campbell had driven his Napier powered Bluebird to a new record of 206.9 mph.

That same year the racing community was abuzz over the arrival of a huge untested machine that was being stored in the Ormond Garage. The Triplex was the brainchild of Philadelphia contractor Jim White. Although he had little experience in racing, Mr. White was determined to wrest the record away from the Brits and return it to the United States.

His plan to attain the top speed was to build a car with more horsepower than had ever been attempted. On a heavy angle iron frame he had mounted three 1,000-horsepower Liberty Aircraft engines. One of the big power plants was out front of the driver and the other two directly behind him. At over 81,000 cubic inches, it was far and away the largest and most powerful car ever built.

To drive the car Jim White hired famed Indianapolis racer Ray Keech. The daunting task of trying to synchronize the three engines went to local mechanic Lee Bible. Day after day, Bible tuned the car and Keech would tear off down the beach. Soon the many practice runs began to take its toll on the battered driver. Heat, noise and vibration were his constant companion. By the time the car was ready for the record try

LAND LINES

Keech's hands and feet were heavily bandaged from the burns and he could hardly hear.

Somehow he would hold it together for a two-way average of 207.9 mph on April 22nd of 1928. That only eclipsed Campbell's mark by about a half mile but it was good enough to bring the record back to the states. Keech was elated and took his sizable check and left town. Jim White was not quite so happy. He felt that his creation was capable of much greater speeds than Keech was able to achieve. Before his departure he told the press that he would return with the Triplex the following year. Sure enough, in the Spring of 1929 he was back with the improved Triplex. This time he had no driver because the word had gotten out about the severe beating Keech had taken. It was a ride no one was willing to take.

With the sanctioned racing window rapidly closing, the job of driving the Triplex went to mechanic Lee Bible by default. Lee had moved his wife and daughter down to the Daytona Beach area from Eastern Tennessee in order to be a part of the great beach racing scene. Upon his arrival he had sadly discovered that the World's Land Speed record competition was a rich man's game. This would be his chance — his only chance. The officials were skeptical of his ability to handle the big car and required him to make two qualifying runs. Once he had satisfied the judges he went to work trying to get the car running at its peak.

As the days passed, Mr. White was growing more and more impatient. It did not help that on March 11 Maj. Segrave had raised the bar to an incredible 231.3 mph. Now Bible knew he would have to get all that he could from the car.

Finally, on the morning of March 13, he was ready. Down the beach he roared before a very large crowd of spectators. As he approached the finish line he must have smiled for the behemoth of a car was running perfectly. On the beach that day was Charles Straub, a newsreel photographer for the Pathe News Agency. Witnesses say that as Bible approached, the newsman inched closer and closer to the track. What happened next has long been debated. Some say that the photographer tripped in the loose sand, while others claim that he was startled by the unexpected booming noise of the big car. Whatever the reason Charles Straub stumbled into the path of the Triplex. Bible swerved to try and avoid him but could not. Straub was killed instantly. Bible struggled to keep the car out of the crowd as it went over and screamed down the beach on its side. When it finally came to a stop Maj. Segrave rushed to the aid of the driver who had been ejected. There was nothing he could do. Lee Bible was dead. Segrave was so dejected that he never raced on the beach again. Jim White returned to Philadelphia and got out of racing.

Of course the history of racing is littered with tragedy. The death of Lee Bible slowed the sport for a spell but could not stop it. In 1935, Sir Malcolm Campbell would achieve the ultimate beach speed of 276 mph. in his Bluebird and the following year the young Bill France would race in the first stock car race on the new beach/road course.

This Sunday, as we enjoy the race at the speedway let us all stop to give thanks to Lee Bible and the many that have made the ultimate sacrifice for this great sport.

Do you think voters should allow slot machines in Volusia County?

For Hometown News
Volnews@hometownnewsol.com

VOLUSIA COUNTY — The Volusia County Council recently decided to let the residents decide in November if honest-to-God slot machines, that take and give real money, should be allowed here.

Sort of. The one-armed bandits have a long road to get down before they actually get to the voters.

The Florida Senate has a bill that would allow counties' voters to approve slot machines at places where pari-mutuel betting is allowed (such as the Daytona Beach Kennel Club). In order to take advantage of the provision, should it become law, counties had to figuratively stake the ground before the end of January. But, at this writing, there's not a companion bill in the Florida House. Without that, the senate bill becomes just another lost legislative curiosity.

If the house does take up the senate's bill, and it passes both chambers (despite thick opposition from all quarters), it needs the governor's signature. Again — it's a long road.

Oh, and then there'll be the inevitable court challenges, according to the legal-types who know about these sorts of things.

So, if the Florida House and Senate and Governor and courts let voters decide whether they want slot machines at pari-mutuels, the Volusia County Council has tentatively agreed to move the ballot measure forward.

If a recent Hometown News unscientific survey is a safe indicator, there's a good chance Volusia voters would approve slot machines, and visitors would use them. We asked residents: Would you vote to allow slot machines in Volusia County? Visitors were asked, "Do you think voters should allow slot machines in Volusia County?"

"I would. Personally, I enjoy them, and it would bring people here, instead of Tampa and South Florida."

Quick Answers to Common Legal Questions

Dangerous Working Conditions Can Lead to Worker's Compensation Claim

Construction workers are subjected to one of the most dangerous working conditions of any industry on a daily basis. Unfortunately, this factor makes injuries on construction sites a common occurrence. Some worker injuries are very mild; however they can also range from moderate to severe, while some are even fatal.

Causes of Work-Related Accidents

Regulations exist for ensuring the safety and protection of workers and others who enter construction sites; however these are not fool proof for the prevention of serious injuries. Construction accident injuries may result from falls, falling objects, equipment malfunctions and other issues. Workers may also become injured by inhaling or coming into contact with dangerous chemicals or toxins, as well as incurring muscle strain from lifting objects or making repetitive movements.

Finding Liability

When someone becomes injured at a construction site, several people or entities may be responsible for damages sustained by the victim. Liable parties may include the owner of the site, equipment manufacturers, suppliers of building materials, contractors and others with a stake in or connections to the construction site or project.

The parties found to be negligent in a construction accident case may be liable for medical bills, pain and suffering expenses and loss of income. In some cases, those liable may be forced to pay punitive damages, if malice or gross negligence is shown to have occurred.

The Benefits of Hiring an Attorney

If someone has been injured at a construction site or at a work setting in general, it may be beneficial to contact a personal injury attorney knowledgeable in areas of accident claims and worker's compensation laws. This type of attorney can help an injured victim sort out the complexities of filing a claim and establishing liability for all who may be at fault.

The Daytona Beach accident attorneys at Rue & Ziffra, P.A. have over 25 years of experience in representing the victims of serious work accidents, worker's compensation claims and other personal injury areas of practice. To learn more about their firm, please visit their website.

Christopher Kelly announces candidacy for county judge

For Hometown News
Newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

VOLUSIA COUNTY— Christopher Kelly has announced his candidacy for Group 4 Volusia County Judge. Mr. Kelly filed papers for the race recently and made his formal announcement at an event held in his honor by the partners of Rice & Rose and Crotty & Bartlett.

Mr. Kelly is currently managing assistant state attorney, overseeing 20 felony attorneys and 30 support staff. Mr. Kelly assists the attorneys in case evaluation, trial strategy and problem solving.

Mr. Kelly was born and raised in Volusia County and is a graduate of Father Lopez High School. He graduated from Florida State University and earned his law degree from the University of Florida School of Law.

He has served as public information officer for the State Attorney's Office and assistant general counsel for the Florida League of Cities. Before being admitted to the bar, Mr. Kelly worked at the Treasure Island Inn and Jon Hall Chevrolet, both in Daytona Beach, and the Florida Department of Commerce in Tallahassee.

Mr. Kelly says he "wants to serve the people of his hometown and all of Volusia County." He said he believes that his various leadership roles within and outside the legal profession have prepared him for the challenge.

Mr. Kelly is also a contributing writer and lecturer on legal issues. He serves on the finance committee and as an endowment trustee at the Basilica of St. Paul and has served as a commissioner for the Housing Authority of Daytona Beach and a member of the school board of Father Lopez High School and the Daytona Beach Planning Board.

He is a member of the Daytona Beach Quarterback Club and the Gator Club and the Daytona Beach Track Club.

Mr. Kelly's family is deeply rooted in the community. He says the work of his parents during his father's service as mayor of Daytona Beach had a profound impact on his commitment to community service.

The election for Volusia County Judge is Aug. 14.

Local self-defense teachers to appear on national TV

For Hometown News
Newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

Local self-defense teachers Tracy Vega and her husband Charley will be featured on Lifetime television's "The Balancing Act" on Wednesday, Feb. 29 at 7 a.m., demonstrating how to escape from the most common type of grab. The Vegas will demonstrate how to escape from someone much larger and stronger.

"The Balancing Act" airs nationally weekdays from 7-8 a.m. Locally, the Lifetime Network is at channel 40 for Bright House standard cable subscribers.

Simple Self Defense for Women,

the Vega's company, promotes the personal safety of women through instructional DVD's, workshops, seminars, guest speaking and personal security products. The approach is much different than most self-defense programs. The Vegas teach victims how to escape, not fight.

Westminster-By-The-Sea Presbyterian church is hosting a Simple Self defense workshop free to the public Saturday March 10 from 9:30-11:30 a.m. Donations will be accepted.

For more information, please visit www.simpleselfdefenseforwomen.com or call (386) 295-2043.

In response to: 'Watch your cats'

If the residents of Tanglewood Estates in Port Orange abided by the rules of keeping their pets indoors or on a leash, they would have no problem with people trapping their animals and turning them over to the Humane Society. So, yes indeed, watch your cats and kittens. I am tired of having my plants and watering system ruining by your pets. They are also mating with the cats in the sewer system. Enough is enough.

In response to: 'Watch your cats'

Cats are also being trapped in Sleepy Hollow. I have a cat. It is an indoor cat. Indoor cats can live to be 18 years old. Outdoor cats are lucky to make it to 6 years old. I am an avid bird watcher and bird feeder. I am tired of watching your cats take birds out of my yard. I am tired of watching them kill. So yes, I am trapping them and turning them over as well. If you are going to be a cat owner, be a responsible one.

Quit smoking and buy new cars

This is a carrot in front of a stubborn donkey who won't quit smoking.

Did you know an average couple who smokes spends $10 a day, $70 a week, $280 a month and $3,360 a year on their habit?

In six years, that is $20,160.

So every six years, if you quit smoking, you can buy yourself a brand new car.

That should be an incentive to get rid of that filthy habit that's killing you and killing thousands.

Thank you.

The less you make, the more you pay

I had to pay $100 to have my taxes done this year because I don't have a bunch of deductions.

I can't deduct the cost of doing the taxes, which seems to be another attack on the people who make less money.

The less you make, the more you have to pay.

Pledge of Allegiance

I pledged allegiance to the flag before the second World War.

It was: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

The "God" part was thrown in there later on. I don't know who did it.

But anybody who went to school from the '40s, we remember it as "one nation, indivisible." That means that we stood together, and I think that makes a lot of sense.

BUSINESS

Busy weekend ahead with Speedweeks, NBA all-star game

Area businesses get their annual burst of speed this week with the four biggest days of Speedweeks, and the boost will be even bigger this year with the every-two-decade combination of the races in Daytona Beach and the NBA All-Star game in Orlando.

struction in New Smyrna Beach, which is relatively small with 112 rooms, is a $16-million project.

Lake Helen, New Smyrna Beach, Oak Hill, Orange City, Osteen, Ormond Beach, Ormond-by-the-Sea and South Daytona.

No financial details of the deal were released, but maybe First Coast will use some of the money from the sales to renovate and reopen some of its vacant properties in the county.

CodeRed developer Emergency Communications Networks — have both been sold. The city is working on keeping the Stylemark plant there, but new owner FGX International of Rhode Island hasn't said what it plans to do. The Riverside Co. bought ECN, but there's no talk about moving it.

But while the 1992 combo was a week apart, this time the race and the game are on the same day (Sunday, Feb. 26). This should create a business boom even in hotels and restaurants in west Volusia County, which usually gets just a modest boost from Speedweeks.

The usual spike in hotel rates also could help push for more development of hotels in the area, especially along the beach. The area hotels need to show a sharp rise, though, for the number crunchers to sign off on what has become an extremely expensive endeavor. The Hampton Inn under con-

In another sort of racing-related story, Sunoco, which provides the racing fuel at Daytona International Speedway, has bought 11 convenience store/gas stations from First Coast Energy. Sunoco now has a station with signage for race fans to see adjacent to DIS. The Sunoco station locator now shows it with 28 sites in Volusia County — 10 in Daytona Beach, three each in DeLand and Holly Hill, and one each in DeBary, DeLeon Springs, Deltona, Edgewater,

It could be good times, or not, for the Ormond Beach Airport Business Park with two new businesses moving there. Commercial Coating Pros Co. has already leased 6 Aviator Way to move 15 workers there. Germ Free Laboratories is expanding its plant to accommodate building a new line of mobile environmental labs. Another unnamed existing business also wants to expand.

However, two of the park's biggest tenants — sunglasses maker Stylemark and Another business center has generated some news. A tenant of the new business incubator at Daytona Beach International Airport, Best iProducts recently returned from the Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas where it exhibited its iEraser product. The iEraser cleans computer screens with one swipe, and with the increased use of tablets and smart phones, it could take off. The company will be marketing the product online.

Popular Home & Garden Show returns to Ocean Center

By Laurie Sterbens
For Hometown News

After a record-breaking debut in August, the Daytona Beach Home & Garden Show and Daytona Boat Show will return to the Ocean Center March 2-4.

The spring Home & Garden show will feature more than 200 exhibits that will display "everything for in and around your home," as well as garden and landscape displays by area landscape designers, according to the show's manager, Dave Kielhurn of East Coast Consumer Shows. The Daytona Boat Show will include "all makes and models" from 12 local boat dealerships, Mr. Kielhurn said.

Interior designer Krista Watterworth, star of HGTV shows "Save My Bath" and "Splurge and Save," will make special guest appearances throughout the weekend to conduct seminars and meet with visitors.

The first Home & Garden Show produced by East Coast Consumer Shows in Daytona Beach last September attracted more than 16,000 visitors to the Ocean Center, a record compared to an average attendance of 5,000 for similar events, Mr. Kielhurn said. He expects the spring show to be even larger.

"We do a lot more advertising than other shows," he explained, crediting a combination of television, radio and print advertising for attracting the large number of visitors. "This year we're spending more money advertising the show than last year and have more sponsors, and we're bringing in a very popular Home & Garden celebrity."

Mr. Kielhurn, who also manages similar shows twice a year in Orlando, is already planning the next fall show, set for Aug. 24-26.

"We are very excited about joining with the Daytona Boat Show again, as all of our exhibitors and consumers have raved about it. Our local representatives are committed to producing a high-quality show two times a year at the Ocean Center for years to come."

The Ocean Center is located at 101 N. Atlantic Ave. in Daytona Beach.

Ponce Inlet as much as we do" and who would also bring valuable experience and leadership skills to the position.

"He clearly stood out on top," she said.

When councilors considered whether or not to confirm Mr. Fabrizio, they were not swayed by media reports of two incidents during his career with the Orange County Sheriff's Office.

Both the Daytona Beach News-Journal and the Orlando Sentinel reported Mr. Fabrizio was suspended in 2005 after his investigation of deputies involved in a high speed pursuit of a stolen car concluded that none of his deputies were responsible. The chase resulted in the deaths of two innocent bystanders. Sources said Sheriff's Office officials considered the investigation "flawed."

Both newspapers also reported that Mr. Fabrizio was suspended again — and demoted from major to captain — in 2010 after leaking confidential information to his daughter about the then-active case of Edwin McFarlane, a teenager accused of trying to kidnap a child outside a department store in Orlando. His daughter posted the information on a blog.

"I don't put a lot of credence in that because I (believe) if you don't have an 'oops' or two in your resume, it just means you're not doing much," Councilman Scott Meacham said.

The only concern councilors had was whether Mr. Fabrizio would successfully adapt to a small town police force after spending nearly three decades in the big city.

"I don't think the town of Ponce Inlet resembles law enforcement in the Orlando area and I think it takes a special person to understand that and manage his approaches to the position so that it's amicable but professional to a community such as this," Mr. Meacham said.

Mr. Fabrizio's resume stated that the Orange County Sheriff's Office has 2,400 full time employees and a $180-million budget. Ponce Inlet's police department has 14 full-time employees and a $1.2-million budget, according to the town's budget for the 2011-12 fiscal year.

The incoming chief told councilors he is looking forward to the change of pace.

Frank Fabrizio

"I understand this is much, much different from where I come from, and I can't tell you how happy I am to get away from where I come from," he said. "I know we have Disney (World) there, but we (also) have a lot of crime."

Mr. Fabrizio's swearing in ceremony will be held March 5 at 4 p.m. at the Town Council Chambers, 4300 South Atlantic Avenue.

The building is designed to be "green," and county officials will apply for LEED silver certification upon completion.

The current Emergency Operations Center, 49 Keyton Drive, was built in 1976 and covers 9,000 square feet. It serves as the central command center for emergency response in Volusia County.

All public safety dispatching in Volusia County for law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services was consolidated last year into a unified system under the Sheriff's Office. The county's emergency dispatchers currently work out of two different centers. Sheriff Johnson said the new dispatch center will improve communications and make the system even more efficient.

"The people who pay have to pick up the slack for the people who don't," she said. Sleepy Hollow was built in the 1970s and deeded to all homeowners residing in the neighborhood, Ms. Teta said.

Subdivisions in the area deeded in the 1970s such as Deep Forest, Cambridge Villas, and Foxboro are facing problems similar to Sleepy Hollow. At the time these developments were first deeded, Ms. Teta said, the deeds did not stipulate mandatory association dues. "It was never set in stone they (homeowners) had to pay dues," she said.

A homeowners association is defined in current Florida Statutes as "a Florida corporation responsible for the operation of a community or a mobile home subdivision ... in which membership is a mandatory condition of parcel ownership, and which is authorized to impose assessments (dues) that, if unpaid, may become a lien on the parcel."

What homeowners in Sleepy Hollow have to pay is "not a large amount" compared to other HOAs in town that offer similar amenities, she added.

Still, the dues could be lower — possibly half of what it costs now for Ms. Teta and her neighbors — if people contributed their "fair share." "It could probably be $75 a year," Ms. Teta said. "But people don't want to pay." The tent will be removed this week after it was cited for a city code violation. City spokesman Kent Donahue said it is against code to some of her wealth from her first marriage and acquired the rest with second husband W.A. Williams, who was also well known in the Greater Daytona Beach community.

Mr. Williams was a carpenter and teacher at Campbell Street High School. He helped build New Bethel AME Church in Ormond Beach where Rev. Brinkley would end up pastor later in his life.

Rev. Brinkley's first wife was Willie Lee Gant, the owner of the Gypsy Tea Room, a popular restaurant patronized by many well-to-do black residents as well as celebrities like boxing great Joe Louis.

Rev. Brinkley would eventually become good friends with Albert Bethune, the grandson and adopted son of Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune.

It was through Rev. Brinkley's friendship with Mr. Bethune that he was noticed by Dr. Bethune.

"She asked me, 'How would you like to be a deputy? I am tired of the harassment my girls are getting going downtown,'" Mr. Brinkley said.

Bethune Cookman College was located on what was at the time called Second Avenue.

Mr. Brinkley said another reason Dr. Bethune asked him to be a deputy was because he was an ex-marine and prize fighter.

Rev. Brinkley said he was on the card for the last boxing exhibition featuring Joe Louis that took place in Daytona Beach at Memorial Stadium.

In 1952, Rev. Brinkley would become the first full-time black deputy sheriff in Volusia County under Sheriff James Tucker.

Mr. Tucker was elected to only one term in 1951. He was not re-elected four years later because he hired Rev. Brinkley and other black deputies, Mr. Brinkley said.

Rev. Brinkley remembered an editorial in the Daytona Beach News-Journal at the time saying if he arrested white people he would be fired.

This upset Dr. Bethune and she called a meeting with Sheriff Tucker. He assured her it was not true.

"My rules are anybody who violates the law, (Brinkley) can arrest," Sheriff Tucker told Dr. Bethune.

Rev. Brinkley was asked to be a pallbearer at Dr. Bethune's funeral in 1955. He says he is the only one still living.

After quitting the sheriff's department, having reached the rank of Sergeant, Rev. Brinkley would start his career in the maintenance department in 1958 at the Daytona Beach Housing Authority. He would retire 40 years later as the agency's CEO and executive director.

Since being ordained a minister in 1948, Rev. Brinkley, while working other jobs, would also pastor at several African Methodist Episcopal churches in Port Orange, Bunnell, Sanford, Merritt Island and Altamonte Springs.

His longest stint as a pastor would be at New Bethel AME Church in Ormond Beach from 1982 until he retired from preaching in 1995.

Rev. Brinkley was called out of retirement in February 1999 to preach at Mt. Zion AME in DeLand for a few years.

He says the reason he was called to so many churches is because he was known as a rebuild and boasted that he left all his churches in good standing.

"I don't feel one would not have me back," Rev. Brinkley said.

Ms. Grant died during the marriage and Rev. Brinkley married his second wife Emma Jones in October 1987.

His home is filled with more than 200 certificates, plaques and other honorarium. Though he has been recognized by many groups and organizations — both locally and nationally — Rev. Brinkley said he is most proud of the work he does as a minister.

"This is my most gratifying position," he said. "I am still able to help my people by spreading the Word."

also communicated with impacted staff. The tornado experience serves as a classic example of what could happen suddenly and without notice.

"We found ourselves right in the middle of a disaster," said health department spokeswoman Stefany Strong. "In an instant, our 33,000 square foot building was gone. Our goal was to get things operating in a new location as quickly as possible."

DAYTONA BEACH — The Junior League of Daytona Beach's "Kids in the Kitchen" presented by Halifax Health is a free family event taking place Saturday, March 3 from 9 a.m. to noon at Jackie Robinson Ballpark (105 E. Orange Avenue) in Daytona Beach.

"Kids in the Kitchen" will offer families an educational half-day of events, including a fun fitness challenge, snack-making booths, a variety of presentations and an exciting Iron Kids Chef Challenge with veteran Food Network chef and best-selling author George Stella.

"Kids in the Kitchen events are an exciting way to engage kids and talk about the importance of a healthy eating habits and making fresh food choices," Mr. Stella said.

Featured frequently on nationally televised shows such as ABC's "The View," "Entertainment Tonight" and "The Insider," Mr. Stella has also hosted the weekly Food Network series "Low Carb and Loving It" and has authored four best-selling cookbooks. He is a spokesperson for the 250 Chapters of the Association of Junior Leagues International for their ongoing Childhood Obesity Awareness campaign.

Other activities at the event include dancing with Radio Disney, balloon art, face painting, giveaways, and a visit from the Daytona Cubs mascot, Cubby; with participation from American Martial Arts Leadership Performance Team and Yoga Power Dance.

Junior League of Daytona Beach has partnered with Halifax Health to offer this free educational program for the community. Additional sponsors include: WNDB Radio, Daytona Beach Cubs, The Little Gym and McK's Tavern.

Missing cats end up on neighbor's barbecue

Spend any time surfing the Web and you are bound to find stories that are just too bizarre to be true. Here's a sampling, edited for length. And remember, just because it's online doesn't mean it's true!

Deputy: Alleged cat eater had carcass in kitchen

It was the sound of a wailing cat that first caught the neighbor's attention. When she looked toward the sound she told authorities that she saw her next-door neighbor cutting off the crying feline's head with a knife. The call she subsequently made to deputies started a bizarre animal cruelty investigation that has focused attention from around the country on a working-class neighborhood

HOW WEIRD IS THAT?!

in a Bakersfield suburb where a man allegedly was filleting cats and cooking them on his backyard barbecue. "I've been getting calls on this from around the country," Kern County Sheriff's spokesman Ray Pruitt said. "For some reason when somebody hurts animals people are more outraged than they are for a lot of other cases." Investigators decided to release new details on Thursday because of the nationwide interest in the case. Jason Wilmert, 35, will be arraigned Friday on charges alleging animal cruelty and using a pet or domesticated animal for food. Both are misdemeanors. A neighbor told KBAK-TV that she had seen Wilmert with a wailing tabby cat cutting it down the back with a knife, then decapitating it. She turned away in disgust and called sheriff's deputies. Pruitt said that when deputies arrived that morning at Wilmert's home they talked to other neighbors, who said they had heard the sounds of screaming cats coming from the house in Oildale. When he didn't answer his door, Pruitt said a deputy walked down the driveway and saw a cat's head in the backyard. Later Wilmert came outside and deputies arrested him. When they searched his house they found a cat carcass in the kitchen sink, as if were being prepped for cooking. Deputies also found an animal trap in the driveway. "We don't know if he was using the trap to catch cats, but he had one," Pruitt said. Nobody has called in reporting missing pets, and investigators suspect the victims were strays. From news.yahoo.com: School zone sign with six separate times irks driver

An unusual school zone speed limit sign in suburban Detroit has drawn the attention of an irked driver. Greg Smith tells The Oakland Press of Pontiac that he noticed the sign recently in Oakland County's White Lake Township that lists six separate times when drivers should slow down to 25 mph on school days. Smith says drivers "practically have to come to a stop to read it." An elementary, middle and high school all are nearby. Police Chief Ed Harris says a meeting is being called with the White Lake Township supervisor, the school district and the county road commission about the sign. Harris says the township didn't put it up but is trying to resolve the matter.

From boston.com: Fugitive runs out of gas, calls sheriff for help

A 59-year-old fugitive is back behind bars after he ran out of gas in Wyoming and called the local sheriff's office for roadside assistance. The Wyoming Highway Patrol said Tuesday that Richard Vincent of Prineville, Ore., was wanted in Georgia for violating parole on a murder and escape conviction. Vincent called the Uinta County Sheriff's Office and it sent state troopers to help him out. When they learned that Vincent had an outstanding felony warrant from Atlanta, he was taken into custody. Vincent is now being held for Georgia authorities pending extradition.

From timesonline.com: Police: Mumbling Pa. suspect had mouthful of crack

A western Pennsylvania man is jailed on drug charges because police say something other than a confession came out of his mouth when he was hit with a stun gun. The Beaver County Times reports Tuesday that 56-year-old Frank Lee Turner was mumbling when Ambridge police stopped a car in which he was a passenger on Feb. 5. Police say Turner was mumbling before he struggled with police and was hit with the stun gun — only to have 23 individually wrapped pieces of crack cocaine fall out of his mouth. Turner faces a preliminary hearing on drug possession, resisting arrest and other charges.

From denverpost.com: Alaska man accused of trying to extort gov't

Authorities in Alaska say a man threatened to teach "crackheads" how to make "electromagnetic distortion devices" unless the state paid him $85,000. Stanislaus Grzeskowiak, of North Pole, is charged with felony extortion and threatening harm. He was in jail Tuesday on $2,500 bail. Sgt. Jess Carson says the 36-year-old called state troopers Friday and said he knew how to use discarded televisions to make devices that could block police radios, computer communication and cellphones. He also threatened to cut the communications of oil companies and credit card companies if he didn't get the money.

Authorities say Grzeskowiak blames the state and companies for his financial situation, lack of education and marital problems. Grzeskowiak is represented by the public defender's office. Officials there didn't respond to requests for comment.

Stetson walks lightly when it comes to carbon emissions

By Dan Harkins
dharkins@hometownnewsol.com

DELAND — In five years, Stetson University has traveled one-third of the way toward completely eliminating its carbon footprint.

Since the college started gauging its emissions in 2007, the school has reduced its carbon consumption by 29 percent.

Al Allen, Stetson's associate vice president for facilities management, said it's a natural goal for any university to lead by example.

"Having a natural resources challenge in front of us is something we should take a leadership role in," he said. "The position of the university is to enhance the quality of daily life everywhere, so part of our mission is to teach people, to broaden their horizons; their understanding."

The school has succeeded thus far by changing the way it operates and encouraging students to do the same, Mr. Allen said.

One of the most recent improvements involves the installation in December of solar paneling on the roof of the Hollis Fitness Center to heat water for the swimming pool there.

Not only can the outdoor pool be open year-round, said Jessica Stark, coordinator of campus recreation, but it can do so in an environmentally sensitive way.

"We teach students to be the best person they can be," she said, "so it's nice that we can be the best business we can be too."

Manning the front desk of the fitness center recently was freshman Erica Lazzano, who took pride in her school's mission.

"It makes an overall positive impression," she said about the green mindset. "You feel like you're going to a school that doesn't just care about the money."

The fitness center improvements are one example of many. The school has replaced inefficient lighting and electric ballasts all over campus, added heat-reducing film to most windows, installed surge protectors and even turned off the hot water used for washing clothes in residence halls.

"None of our students have objected so far," Mr. Allen said. "Most laundry detergents today work very well in cooler water anyway."

The college also has replaced a gas-run public safety vehicle with an electric model, swapped out fuel-burning utility vehicles with diesel models, and switched to more organic fertilizers and cleaner-burning mowers.

"A carbon-reduction plan includes taking advantage of technologies, investing in conservation efforts and it's about changing behavior," Mr. Allen said.

Tony Abbott, director of Stetson's environmental sciences program, has been having students compile surveys and data every two years since the school started performing the carbon inventory in 2007, a requirement for membership in the American College and University Presidents Climate Commitment.

"For us, it seems the best thing to do is eliminate waste anywhere we can see it," Professor Abbott said. "We can actually look at how much energy we're using and determine how much less we're using every year. That's a concrete step."

The goal is worthy, he said, since carbon emissions are the major greenhouse gas blamed for global warming. But that doesn't mean he doesn't have other targets.

"As an environmental scientist, I'm excited to see people looking for ways to conserve energy and reduce their global climate change impact," he said. "But it's somewhat disconcerting that carbon has become the one pollutant, as opposed to looking at other things like nuclear energy. ... I think people in Japan would take issue with the idea that nuclear energy is truly clean."

As the school moves forward, putting more environmentally friendly technology in place will to become economically feasible.

"The low-hanging fruit is always easy and sweet and requires little effort," he said. "But money is not available for a massive rethinking of our institution like it has been for colleges like Harvard or Yale. They can invest 30 years into the future and not worry about returns. We have to worry about returns over two or three years on the horizon."

Mr. Allen said he's constantly on the lookout for new technology with the appropriate return in savings.

"Solar proposals may not be financially attractive today, as far as returns on investment," he said, "but when they become financially attractive, we'll make that happen too. We want to continue to reduce our carbon footprint."

Playhouse offers 'moving' comedy

For Hometown News
Volnews@hometownnews.com

Daytona Playhouse serves up a saucy mid-season performance with Lawrence Roman's comedy "Moving Mountains" Friday, Feb. 24 through Sunday, March 4, at 100 Jessamine Blvd., Daytona Beach.

In "Moving Mountains," retired community lothario Charlie Fuller knows how to move mountains for all the ladies carefully cataloged on his little black disc. Flamboyant Gwen and hymn singing Harriet can attest to his red-hot charm.

His behavior shocks his hovering daughter Elaine Cooper who is coping with her doctor husband's recent philandering. Annoying Robert Adamson, the Cooper's financial planner, has ulterior motives for moving his widowed mother Polly into a condo nearby.

Polly's nephew Marc drops in for advice on what women want.

But Charlie's revolving romances may be losing steam.

Schooling the new widow in the finer culinary and seductive arts, he smacks into a mountain he never expected.

STAR SCOPES
James Tucker
Week of 2-24-2012

Aries-March 21-April 19
Life is looking positive for you, Aries. Now is the time to launch new projects. Your energy and natural rhythms will be strong for the next three months. When you get that right feeling within, listen to it, trust it and act on it. It is your instincts giving you the green light to go.

Taurus-April 20-May 20
Making a list every day of the things and events you need to address will help keep you focused on the most important. Keep working off the top of the list. Pace yourself. You don't have to get everything done at once. Less important ones can wait. Stay centered. There is calm at the eye of the storm. You will prevail.

Gemini-May 21-June 21
When you give, you give freely. You have a great reservoir of love and talent to draw from. Your sensitivity to others keeps you moving in the right direction. Just be careful about overextending yourself. Sometimes less is more. Your very first impression is always the best when your heart is open and you are listening.

Cancer-June 22-July 22
Life continues to roll along. Your attention to detail is what keeps you from becoming overwhelmed. Your strong sense of responsibility is one of your greatest virtues. Your wonderful attitude toward family and others keeps you going. You are on the verge of much positive growth in the New Year. Keep on keeping on.

Leo-July 23-Aug. 22
Life continues to move along at a timely clip for you. Leo the lion is strong, fast and hardy. He or she is a formidable foe when challenged and emerges a winner and victorious over life most of the time. Also, you have a very large heart. Continue to speak openly about how you feel and what you want. Others will respect you for it.

Virgo-Aug. 23-Sept. 22
You are awakening to new ideas, concepts and feelings. Expand into areas that enhance your present skills. Numerous situations will arise that will help you grow.

Society Garlic looks good, smells great, but don't eat it

I hope everybody has been enjoying the wonderful weather we have been experiencing the past few days. It is just a reminder that spring is not far off. Why not start the season out right with a unique plant called Society Garlic?

Many of us use garlic as a supplement along with our daily vitamin but not many of us think of planting garlic in our gardens - society garlic, that is. Society garlic is not really garlic at all. Its only similarity to real garlic is that it is a member of the lily (Alliaceae) family. Society garlic can create a splash of purple color that can accent any garden or landscape. It looks best when it is planted in groups but it can also used as a border around larger trees and shrubs. One of the most distinctive aspects of the plant is the smell. They smell just like garlic cloves. Although they are fragrant almost any time of day, the fragrance is strongest at night.

GARDEN NOOK

Society garlic plants are easy to grow and will grow well in well-drained, light sandy soil. They will tolerate full sun to partial shade, but they will require regular watering during the hot summer months. Dividing them as they multiply can easily propagate the plants.

I have read from some sources that the plants are edible, but I probably would not recommend eating them. It is best to use them as an ornamental plant. I have also been told that they deter moles, but I have no actual proof of that. If anybody experiments with that, please let me know if you had positive results with the experiment.

I almost forgot to mention one other added bonus, the plant is a perennial and it blooms from spring to mid summer.

If you grow hibiscus, one of the most annoying, and destructive pests are little critters called aphids. Aphids are small soft-bodied insects that congregate mainly on tender new growth and also right around the bloom of the plant. These creatures feed in large colonies and can multiply quite rapidly. Aphids can often cause the leaves of ornamentals to curl up and the insects can hide in these curls, thus escaping the effects of insecticides. Aphids do their damage by sucking life-sustaining juices from the plant making it weak and vulnerable to disease. Since hibiscus are somewhat tender, you cannot use Malathion as an insecticide of choice as it will cause your plant to drop leaves. The best remedy and protection is to use a systemic insecticide such as Orthene or OrtheneX. OrtheneX does double duty as it takes care of the pests and also helps with some diseases. You can also use a rose and flower insect spray, but be sure aphids are listed as one of the insects it kills.

That's all for this week's column and I hope you found the content useful and entertaining. Remember, you can direct your garden questions to me either through the email address below or now through my garden forum, which is located at www.hometowntogarden.com.

You can only make a mess in skinny water while fishing in the South

It is a commonly known fact that very few of Florida's fishermen are actually original Floridians. Whenever anglers from the North transition to Central Florida they invariably must deal with a good bit of culture shock.

Fishing in our inshore brackish waters requires some changes in methods and equipment but not in the way that many Northerners believe. Heavy steel leaders on 50-pound test line that is anchored by a half-pound of weight is not necessary. In most cases, the equipment and tackle needed in the local inshore is lighter than that used in cooler climates.

Aside from learning the change in tackle, there is a language problem that new arrivals must deal with. Many of the Florida fishing terms are left over from when the state was actually a part of the Deep South and not a vacation/retirement haven for people from New York,

FISHING WITH DAN
DAN SMITH

New Jersey and the Mid-West. The language barrier between Northern and Southern fishermen is substantial.

Not long ago, I wrote about fishing with two men from Illinois. When we had enough fish in the box for them to have a nice dinner I mentioned that they had a mess. Both men burst out laughing. They had to tell me that they didn't know that a nice catch was a mess.

Another term used locally that goes right over the heads of newcomers is "skinny water," which is how a lot of southern fishermen refer to shallow water. My old buddy, the late Jack Thomas, would always chuckle at that mention. He just thought it was funny to refer to shallow water as "skinny."

Sometimes skinny water is called "thin water" but never "fat water." Recently, I told a friend that the water was so skinny that I couldn't even get through with my kayak. That brought a bewildered look from him.

Here in Florida we never catch fluke. Our flatfish are always flounder. Sometimes it is a fluke when we catch flounder but that is another story. In many states the Florida strain of large mouth bass has been introduced to their waters. Many times when folks from those states arrive here they ask us about Florida bass. Here they are just called bass. That is probably like Chinese people just calling their eats "food."

Our speckled perch are not called croppie or crappie. They may look the same but those last two do not exist in Central Florida. Shell crackers are a large blue gill type of fish but does not replace the blue gill and they are often found together. Night crawlers are not peeping toms but large earthworms. There really are no bobbers in a Cracker fishing box. They are called corks no matter that they are made of plastic or Styrofoam. Reds are always redfish and are never red snapper but sometimes they are channel bass.

All boats can be skiffs no matter what the hull design. Gator is the name for large toothy reptiles except when we are talking about spotted sea trout or even gar fish. Bugs are Florida lobsters. They are identified by the fact that they have no pinchers and taste better than the northern variety.

On the water, mangoes are not fruit but mangrove snappers. All fishing rods are poles and some are made from cane. Florida fishing boots are always white. If you wonder why, put on a pair of black rubber boots in July and listen as your feet fry from the heat.

Grunts are not army enlisted men but a tasty type of schooling fish. Snook may be called snook (rhymes with fluke) — if you hear that pronunciation know that you are in the presence of a true Floridian.

Coke is any soft drink and vy-eny is the little, tightly packed canned sausages. I hope that lesson in Southern-ese helps you in adjusting. You never know when you may wind up with a mess in a Cracker skiff.

Celebrate Black History Month with special foods

Hello smart shoppers. I received an email from a reader attacking my suggestions regarding sell by and use by dates found on food products. I suggested you can use products past these dates.

According to the FDA they have nothing to do with dates, they are added by the manufacturer. Outside of baby formula and some forms of poultry the FDA has nothing to do with it. Using a product just past the dates and handling it properly they said it is hardly likely to do you harm — except for boxed products such as baking mixes which must not be used past these dates.

Good refrigeration, clean surfaces and hand washing must be observed. Dates are an indicator of quality rather than safety. Once a perishable product is frozen it doesn't matter if the date expires because foods kept frozen continuously are safe for long periods of time. If a product smells and looks good it is hardly likely to cause harm. I have been doing this for years and never had a problem. My suggestion is when in doubt, throw it out, it is your choice.

February is Black History Month, and before the month is gone, I must share some delicious recipes.

When I previously wrote a recipe for black-eyed peas, I received an email from a reader with her family story and recipe. Sylvia's Florida heritage goes back for generations, before Florida became a state. Although not black, her recipe is truly ethnic. I will include the recipe in Bessie's Hoppin' John.

BESSIE'S HOPPIN' JOHN (black-eyed peas) 4 or more servings regular and low fat

Bessie Stuart, a black friend of mine, who has since gone to be with the Lord, gave me her family recipe. Served over rice with a side of corn bread, it is rib-sticking and wonderful. Using ham instead of pork or bacon makes it low fat.

- 1 large package black-eyed peas
- 1/4-pound salt pork or bacon, cut up, or 1 ham hock or chunks of ham
- 1/2-teaspoon each of salt and pepper
- 1 large clove garlic and 1 large onion, chopped
- Hot sauce (optional)

Cover peas with cold water; discard any that float. Drain. Place in pot, cover with water. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and cook for two minutes. Cover and let stand for one hour.

NOTE: You can let peas soak in the pot overnight. This method removes most of the gas-producing properties.

Drain peas and return to pot. Add the ham or salt pork, salt and pepper and about 1-1/2 cups water. Cover and cook for one hour. Add garlic, onion and a few dashes of hot sauce and cook until peas are tender. The gravy will be thick. Add more water if necessary.

Serve over rice with corn bread.

ROMANCING THE STOVE

with the Grammy Guru ARLENE BORG

SYLVIA ANNE HENDRY'S BLACK-EYED PEAS

Follow basic recipe using 3 cups of water for each pound of peas. Add 1 cup of rice 1/2- to 3/4-hour before serving. Top the finished product with cut up summer squash, corn and whole okra and cook, covered, for about 3 minutes until okra is slightly under cooked.

FROGMORE STEW (NIB) Serves 8

We enjoyed Frogmore stew at my son Bill's home in South Carolina. Along with the recipe I got some history. Frogmore is a town located in the low country, just outside of Beaufort, S.C., where the stew was created by slaves. Crabs were added when available.

- 6 quarts of water
- 1/4-cup seafood boil (found in supermarket in spice section)
- 1 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 3 tablespoons salt*
- 2 cloves garlic, peeled
- 4 extra-large onions, peeled and halved
- 8 to 10 medium-size red

- potatoes, whole and unpeeled
- 2 pounds smoked sausage, cut into 2-inch pieces
- 12 ears shucked corn on the cob, broken into 4-inch pieces

4 pounds large shrimp, unpeeled

* Add half the salt and taste-test at the end.

In a large stockpot, combine the water with next five ingredients, bring to a boil.

Your strong spirit will tell you when to act. Reach out, be open to change and gather the rewards that want to come. The universe is on your side.

Libra-Sept. 23-Oct. 22
It's time to move your main projects forward. Go the extra mile when needed, and you will see many positive results. You are more valuable than you know. Keep a tranquil state of mind. Nurture your soul daily through meditation, music or affirmations. This powerful help is a force that insures wonderful results in all areas of life.

Scorpio-Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Your spirit is strong, your heart is open and your ideas are positive. You will soon be asked to take this fine combination to a higher level of performance. Your reputation precedes you. Lay out new plans and set time limits on their achievement. Your clear mind will give you a strong urge to take your project over the finish line and win.

Sagittarius-Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Sometimes, at the last minute, when it seems like all is lost, the doors open, the sun begins to shine and all is well. This is because of your perseverance, faith and joy. You have done your work. Now let the universe do its work. This is a wonderful divine partnership. Allowing it brings results beyond your wildest dreams.

Capricorn-Dec. 22-Jan 19
Short- and long-term success has a lot to do with feelings. Before starting a new project, check with your inner guidance. When you feel joy, move forward. If you feel undecided, don't act. Using this divine inner wisdom first will insure positive results and increasing missions in life. When this happens you are at your best.

Aquarius-Jan. 20-Feb. 18
Your determination is contagious. You never give up. This is an awesome quality. You always have a dream. You are the eternal optimist, always giving others the benefit of the doubt. Your wonderful emotional and spiritual growth the past year will continue to bring well-deserved rewards this year. Recognize them as they come and enjoy.

Pisces-Feb. 19-March 20
You are what heart and spirit are all about. No one has more than you. Your empathy for others is legendary. This wonderful sense of true humanity always guides you in the right direction. It's hard to keep up with you. You are such a wonderful friend. You know what to do in advance. You are truly loved and appreciated.

Uncontrolled DIABETES & HEART DISEASE are a tricky combination.

Special medical attention is important when it comes to uncontrolled type 2 diabetes and heart disease. Learn more about this medical research study for adults struggling with both of these medical issues.

Controlling type 2 diabetes, which typically involves watching what you eat, monitoring your blood sugar, exercising, and taking your medication, is important for long-term health. But if you also have a history of heart disease, it's even more important. For those adults who struggle to control their diabetes, they are at an even greater risk for a heart disease-related episode, like a heart attack or stroke.

Local doctors are currently conducting the CAROLINA research study for individuals diagnosed with uncontrolled type 2 diabetes, who have also had, or are at risk for, a heart disease-related episode. They want to compare an investigational type 2 diabetes medication to another anti-diabetic medication.

If you have uncontrolled type 2 diabetes, plus a history of heart disease, we hope that you will consider learning more about this study.

To pre-qualify for the CAROLINA trial, you must:

- Be between 40 and 85 years of age
- Have a medical diagnosis of type 2 diabetes
- Be unable to control blood sugar levels, even if you are taking an anti-diabetic medication
- Have experienced, or are at risk for, a heart disease-related episode, such as a heart attack or stroke

All study-related medical evaluations and medication will be provided to participants at no cost. In addition, reimbursement for study-related travel and time may also be provided.

Honda Classic in Palm Beach Gardens great for the whole family

In today's sports world, the event has become more and more about business and entertainment than actual competition. What many people do not realize is that the PGA Tour has been about entertainment for many, many years now. The Honda Classic, to be played Feb. 27 to March 4 at PGA National Resort & Spa in Palm Beach Gardens is one of the best examples of golf entertainment.

Getting to see the best players in the world is the main form of entertainment for every spectator. With Tiger Woods' commitment to play in the event, The Honda will feature eight of the top 10 players in the world, as well as three of last year's four major champions and defending champ Rory Sabbatini. The field will be as deep and competitive as any we've seen this year.

Contrary to many opinions,

GOLF

the Tour's best players enjoy a tough test of golf. On the Champion Course at PGA National, they will get just that. With thick rough, firm, and narrow fairways, well protected greens and the famous "Bear Trap," the "Champ" consistently ranks in the top-five toughest courses the Tour plays each year.

This year, tournament officials have decided to allow golfers the opportunity to distance themselves from the field or make up a few lost shots after tackling the "Bear Trap" by moving the tees up on the par-5 18th. The hole has been shortened by 50 yards, making reaching the green in two shots more likely and tempting the players with the possibility of making an eagle. Of course, with reward comes risk. The green is well-guarded by water and sand, meaning for every eagle, we could just as easily see a double-bogey or two.

To make the spectators comfortable, there are numerous grandstands as well as concessions set up around the course. One of the most popular areas is near the par-3 17th hole. From there, you can watch every shot on the difficult 17th and see play on the 11th hole. This year the amount of hospitality space on this hole alone is 32,000 square-feet, with half of that being taken up by the FPL Pavilion where general admission ticket holders may enjoy theatre seating, flat screen televisions, food and drinks, and even cool off in the FPL Mist Zone.

The golf course isn't the only place to enjoy this event.

When the sun goes down, the golf may be over, but the fun has just begun. While the grounds crews work on the course, preparing it for the next day, you may find yourself sitting next to World No. 2 Lee Westwood or Open Champion Darren Clark enjoying a cold beverage at iBar.

The fun officially kicks off on Tuesday with the practice round. A Junior Golf Clinic will take place at 4 p.m., and Kenny G's pro-am party fills the evening with the pro-am taking place on Wednesday.

Thursday marks the beginning of the competition. After a great day on the course, head over to the Eissey Campus Theatre for "An Evening with Kenny G." Tickets are $75, $95 and $125 with the proceeds benefiting tournament charities.

After golf on Friday and Saturday, everyone can enjoy the "After Play Concert" on the Michelob ULTRA Terrace, and the "Tire Kingdom/Yokohama Fireworks Spectacular."

All during The Honda Classic there will be a Play Golf America Expo, the Family Golf Challenge and the Kids' Fun Zone. At the Fun Zone, players will stop after their round to sign autographs and meet their fans. The first 1,000 kids through the gates on Saturday will receive an oversize golf ball, great for collecting autographs.

While the kids get to enjoy a great event, they aren't the only ones being honored. Once again, The Honda Classic will pay tribute to active duty military, reservists, dependents and veterans with free admission throughout the event. These fine men and women and their families will have a covered 2,500-square-foot hospitality deck on the 17th hole dedicated to their private use.

On Saturday, the pin at the 17th will have an American Flag and military personnel will tend the flag throughout the day.

"It's all about creating a diverse fan experience," says Honda Classic Executive Director Ken Kennerly. "We want to make sure we have a full day of activities for every member of the family."

To borrow a phrase from our military, "Mission accomplished."

Daily tickets start at $25 for Tuesday, $35 for Wednesday, and $45 for Thursday through Sunday. Call 866-8HONDA8 (866-846-6328) or check the website at www.thehondaclassic.com for information and advance tickets.

Add potatoes and onions, cook for 15 minutes. Add the sausage and cook for 5 minutes. Add the corn and cook for 5 minutes longer. Add the shrimp and cook until pink, about 3 minutes. Drain and serve.

I served this dish the authentic way; try it. Cover the table with newspaper, place the bowl of stew in the center, pass around the plates and silverware and go at it!

NOTE: Cut the recipe in half using 2 tablespoons seafood boil, 1/2-teaspoon each Tabasco and Worcestershire sauce and 4-1/2 teaspoons salt. The rest is easy to divide.

AFRICAN-AMERICAN BENNE (SESAME) SEED COOKIES (NIB)

1 cup sesame seeds, about two (2-ounce) containers*
1-3/4 cups all-purpose

flour
1/2-teaspoon baking soda
1/4-teaspoon salt
1/2-cup butter or butter substitute, softened
1/2-cup brown sugar packed
1/4-cup sugar
1 large egg
1 teaspoon vanilla

Place sesame seeds in shallow pan and toast at 375-degrees for 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool completely.

Combine flour, soda and salt. Set aside. Cream butter with sugars. Beat in egg and vanilla until light and fluffy. Blend in flour mixture.

Stir in 1/2-cup of the sesame seeds. Roll dough into tablespoon size balls. Then roll in remaining sesame seeds.

Place on a cookie sheet. Flatten with the bottom of a glass or press with hands. Place cookies about 1-1/2 inches apart.

Bake for 8-10 minutes or until edges are lightly browned. Cool on wire racks.

Makes about 2 dozen cookies. *Purchase seeds in bulk at discount stores or health food stores for a better price.

•B.B. King with opening band Victor Wainwright & the Wildroots: This concert will be held at 7:30 p.m. March 31, at the Peabody Auditorium. There is one King of the Blues—Riley B. King, affectionately known as B.B. King. Born on a cotton plantation in Mississippi in 1925, he played on street corners for dimes until he saved enough money to travel to Memphis where regular gigs and radio performances paved the road to his first number one hit, "Three O'clock Blues." Thus started B. B. King's national touring which has continued for more than 50 years. Renowned for his complex guitar styling, single string runs punctuated by loud chords, subtle vibratos, and bent notes, B. B. King does it best. "I'm me," he told Time Magazine in 1969, "blues is what I do best." For more information, visit www.peabodyauditorium.org.

Hometown News

Hometown News is looking for free-lance and full-time reporters, photographers and editors.

Hometown News team members are passionate journalists who believe in honest, fair and accurate community news coverage. Staff writers are expected to develop sources and story ideas and write five to seven stories a week. These stories will include everything from city meeting fols and in-depth community issue pieces to light features and entertainment stories. Freelance writers are expected to both develop their own story ideas and accept assignments and work with staff on photo and art opportunities for those stories.

Photographers have a unique opportunity at Hometown News - we are all color, all the time. Great way for freelance photographers to build their portfolios. Photographers must have a good eye for art and know how to get interesting photos, sometimes in challenging situations.

Editors must know their communities and the news that is important to readers. We are looking only for experienced journalists who know what it means to serve their communities through the press.

Please send a resume, cover letter and clips to opportunity@hometownnewsol.com

Finances a subject that must be raised

Talking about finances. It's one of the undeniable indicators that we are adults, that we have responsibilities, that one day we will no longer have a personal income.

Bleh.

But it's a discussion that must be had. According to experts, the poor economy, rising health care costs and longer life expectancies will add up to big financial challenges for Baby Boomers. Planning properly is a must. Our feature story this month (page 4) shows how some local folks are making sure they have a happy and secure retirement.

It's not all bad news. Saving for retirement doesn't mean you have to live like you're dead now. Susan Young in her column, "Life in the Middle" (page 5), tells us about financially clever ways to continue to travel and have a little fun while keeping your nest egg intact.

And Dan Smith, in "Land Lines" (page 9), says even the best hippie has to someday admit that money is something you have to care about.

Talking about finances.

Let's do it.

YOUR FINANCIAL FUTURE

Many Baby Boomers are facing an uncertain financial future. How to make sure you are not one of them.

By Laurie Sterbens
For Forever Young

For past generations of American workers, retirement may have begun with a cake, a gold watch and a joyful send-off from longtime co-workers before easing into a lifestyle funded by a company pension and Social Security.

Things are different for today's Baby Boomers, who are facing retirement in a challenging economy and a less secure job market. Companies have discontinued pension benefits, and the future of Social Security is uncertain. This generation must make its own plans to fund retirement.

"I just think we all need to change our mindset," said retiring teacher Lisa Miller of South Daytona. "I didn't think there would ever be a drastic change in the economy. We enjoyed an affluent lifestyle compared to our parents. ... We thought with a pension and Social Security, our needs would be met."

Ms. Miller always considered herself a saver, but enlisted the help of a financial planner about five years ago.

"The closer I got to retirement, I realized there's so many things out there, so many ways you can make your money work for you," she said.

Not everyone is ready to take a proactive approach to his

'The Brass Years' just doesn't sound the same

Pinching pennies was a practice at which our parents excelled. A product of the Great Depression, they learned how to stretch a dime and raise a family economically and efficiently. They were thrifty out of necessity and somehow made sure we had everything we needed to thrive.

Baby Boomers, however, as products of the post-war prosperity, tend to represent a generation of instant-gratification. Now that many of us are depending on retirement incomes and/or Social Security benefits to pay the bills, we might be faced with some penny-pinching of our own. We may have the extra time to enjoy life but perhaps not the funds to do what we always envisioned during our so-called Golden Years.

"The Brass Years" just doesn't sound the same, does it?

They can still be fun, though. With a little work and a lot of spontaneity, we have been able to keep alive our dream of a retirement filled with travel.

LIFE IN THE MIDDLE

I have found that "last minute deals" can be easy on the budget as long as one is willing to being open to a new, and maybe unplanned, adventure. Being flexible and spontaneous not only keeps us young, but can shave dollars off the cost of a cruise, hotel stay or car rental. Being computer savvy helps as there are many alternative ways to find lodging other than your typical hotel stay. If you are not averse to cleaning up after yourself without daily housekeeping making your beds, a viable option is Airbnb.com or VRBO.com; the latter acronym stands for Vacation Rentals by Owner. On a recent trip to New York City, we opted for a third floor walkup in trendy Harlem at a rate of only $110 per night, versus the usual $300-$400 for a full-service hotel in Manhattan. Not only was the neighborhood safe and quiet but we had a full kitchen with the option to cook for ourselves if we chose, saving even more money. This choice also enabled us to feel more like a native of the city without the hustle and bustle of the tourist centers.

Thinking out of the box when choosing a destination can provide a welcome surprise as happened when we traded houses a few years back in upstate Vermont during the middle of winter. At the time we were not under the time constraints we are now so opted for a two-month house swap, putting us in the middle of snow drifts, blizzards and a winter wonderland while our hosts wiled away the hours down here on the beach, enjoying balmy temps. Having grown up in Florida, those months proved to be a treat as my husband taught me the joys of spending afternoons sledding and laughing hysterically after consistently losing my footing on ice covered surfaces. No bones were broken but I have a newfound respect for those who deal with these potential hazards every year. Having the luxury of putting another log on the fire and watching nature at its most glorious was something I will never forget. And all it cost was the drive up and back and some spending money. Of course, we will be forever known to the residents of the little town of Jeffersonville as those or her financial future. Donna Higbee, a financial adviser with Morgan Stanley Smith Barney in Ormond Beach, said the biggest mistake she sees Baby Boomers making is putting off retirement planning, thinking, "It's been a crazy couple of years. I'm going to put that off for now."

"The second thing I notice, and it's completely understandable, but people have gone very conservative," Ms. Higbee said. People are in a "wait and see" mode, "but they still want to retire in five years."

Many Boomers have preconceived notions about retirement planning, and may think that because they suffered losses in recent years that they won't be able to retire, Ms. Higbee said.

"2008 changed what your retirement will look like. It doesn't mean you can't retire. It just means you have to plan for it," she said.

Ms. Higbee said she now spends more time educating clients and running through various scenarios with them.

"We say, 'What is it that you're looking for? When do you want to retire? What does retirement look like to you?'"

Retirement planning begins with deciding when the client wants to retire, she said.

"You really work backward," she said. Clients must make decisions about the lifestyle they want to maintain after retirement. "Then we put a pen to paper" and determine how much the client will need to save in the years leading up to retirement.

People who are nearer to retirement age need to take a much closer look at their spending habits, Ms. Higbee said. However, saving for retirement doesn't have to mean you have to give up golf altogether.

"If you're planning on retirement, you need to think about the fact that you have expensive hobbies and that you want to travel, and you plan for inflation," she said. "If you put it in the plan, it's not so much an issue."

money-saving strategies to help them enjoy their favorite activities while still meeting their goals.

"In a challenging economy, everybody has to look at their priorities when it comes to spending and saving. I clip coupons. I'm willing to golf at two o'clock in the afternoon in order to get cheaper cart fees."

Ms. Miller said she didn't worry too much about shopping around for deals before she began planning for retirement. Now, she is a bargain hunter.

"I didn't think I would have to worry about having to pay for my insurance," she said. "I'm going to have to do without some things because I'm going to have to pay $700 a month for my insurance."

When her auto insurance premiums recently increased, Ms. Miller spent a lot of time comparison-shopping before deciding on a new policy that saved her about $100 a year.

"A hundred dollars a year makes a big difference," she said.

In the process of insurance shopping, she learned of various discounts that would be available to her as a retiree.

"I didn't know that there were deals for retirees. I didn't think about all that stuff. Now that's the kind of thing that I think about."

Ms. Miller said she used to travel three or four times a year but now plans just one trip. She does her own nails instead of going to a salon, clips coupons, and when it comes to clothes, she said, "I don't buy anything that's not on sale."

She watches movies on Netflix instead of going to the theater, has the most basic cell phone plan, and has cut back on eating out.

Yet she doesn't feel deprived, she said.

"I think everyone has to look over their personal priorities and decide where you can cut, and these were the things that I could do without," she said. "I can buy clothes on sale and get compliments just like I paid full price."

Though she used to eat out three times a week, Ms. Miller said that now, "Eating out is more of a treat, and I enjoy it more because it is a

Even hippies gotta worry about money

It was a little confusing for me to watch our peace and love generation morph into our parents. We had pledged to each other that we could make the planet a better place by avoiding the 9-to-5 rat race that had ensnared our hapless parents. We vowed that the pursuit of the almighty dollar would never be a part of our future.

Not us.

We would spend our time hanging out with friends, smoking Mother Nature and listening to cool music. It was all to be so idyllic and pastoral. Our very own take on living the good life. Then it happened. ZAP!

Reality hit like a lightning bolt. College money dried up and our parents cut us loose. We had no choice but to take our two years of Poly-Sci or our philosophy degree out into the workplace and try to turn them into cash. It proved to be very difficult.

Yet, when we did go to work, we excelled like none before us. The post war generation authored an explosion of new and exciting ideas that carry us till this day. Technology would be our gift to the world.

While we were doing that, however, we ignored one basic fact: Our country was built on hard work. The kids who went to San Francisco with flowers in their hair had no interest in doing the mundane labor that carries this great nation. Ours was a larger, more ethereal (and less physically demanding) calling. At least that was how we perceived it.

As for me, I found out that once I married my little hippie girlfriend a whole lot of responsibility was part of the deal. When the kids came along — forget about it — I had no choice but to immerse myself in the work that would provide the cash to sustain us. It was amazing how fast my ideals began to conform. My peace sign quickly turned into a Mercedes emblem.

In my younger days I had searched for the perfect high, but now my goal was the perfect mutual fund. The horror! The changes were insidious. As the years passed I didn't even realize that my interest in the Rolling Stones had been replaced by my worry over kidney stones. I had started out protesting against the man and now I was the man.

Running a business, raising children, paying a mortgage and fretting about my federal income taxes. When I looked into the mirror I could no longer see the long-haired kid who lounged away his days playing harmonica in the park at Haight Ashbury. Back then I had been concerned about man's injustice to man, but now my problems were personal. I had gone from scoring treat.”

Even with a retirement plan in place, Sydney and Stephen Nash of DeLand found themselves having to make adjustments in their spending due to the economy. Ms. Nash left her bookkeeping job in 2000 to take care of Mr. Nash's parents, while he continued working as a foreman for an energy company until retiring in 2003. He continued working as a consultant until 2009, when the company he was working for cut back on consultants. The Nashes then began drawing from their retirement plan.

The couple lost money in the stock market, decreasing their dividend income significantly, while their health insurance increased by $700 a month.

“It's been over a period of nine years, but still, seven hundred dollars – just to see your retirement going down,” Ms. Nash said.

The Nashes have adapted to their situation by adjusting their retirement lifestyle, cutting back in areas such as travel and eating out.

“Luckily, we had taken a big vacation,” Ms. Nash said of a post-retirement drive across the United States. “That was our dream vacation we had prepared for, but our vacations now are shorter times, fewer days and not as expensive as before. We used to go for 10 days. Now it's five or six days, and not as many times a year.”

Restaurant meals were a major cut-back.

“We used to go out to eat three times a week. Now we go out three times a month,” she said.

The couple, who live in a rural area, have cut back on trips to town and now “When we go into town, we get everything done,” Ms. Nash said. Mr. Nash owns a plane but flies it less often due to fuel costs. They have also cut back on grocery bills, gifts and other shopping.

“I haven't been to the mall in probably over a year,” Ms. Nash said.

However, the Nashes have been able to enjoy their retirement in a house on a river with a pool and a boat.

“Really, all in all, we don't miss anything we cut back on. We don't feel deprived, that's for sure,” she said, attributing their comfortable lifestyle to working within their retirement plan.

If you're a Baby Boomer approaching retirement, the sooner you can cut expenses and repay debt, the easier the transition will be, according to Jane Bryant Quinn, personal finance expert and author of “Making the Most of Your Money NOW.” In a recent AARP bulletin entitled “Financial Plan Beats Panic Every Time,” Ms. Bryant recommended that pre-retirees think about where they might find part-time work after retirement. Downsizing your housing expenses is another possible money-saving measure, even if you don't get the price you want for your house.

“Your living arrangements should follow your budget and needs, not your dream of a better price next year,” Ms. Bryant said.

If you're still having trouble motivating yourself toward retirement planning, try a few mind tricks. Mark Patterson, Baby Boomer and author of “The Failsafe Retirement System,” offered these strategies in an “On Retirement” column at money.usnews.com:

Before making a discretionary purchase, convert the dollar cost into personal time.

“The closer we get to retirement, the more we become aware that our time is limited,” Mr. Patterson said. Knowing how many hours you will have to work to pay for that $100 gadget will make you wonder if you really need it. Add the money to your nest egg instead.

Another strategy Mr. Patterson recommends is thinking of a fun thing you want to do when you retire, such as travel, and determine the amount of the fund you'll need to fund it. “That's a specific and motivating goal that you should think about when you forgo an expense today,” Mr. Patterson said.

Whether you're a disciplined saver or have to resort to mind tricks, having a retirement plan doesn't mean you have to give up everything you enjoy from now until retirement.

“It's never an absolute,” Ms. Higbee said. “It's a working plan that's fluid. It all depends on the client's priorities.”

killer weed to buying weed killer. Instead of growing pot I was growing a pot belly.

With my kids wanting to attend college I had to cut corners. The guy who wanted to change the world was reduced to hunting down the best early bird special. Most of the time I remained optimistic that my financial situation would change for the better and I would soon be back on my feet. In reality, if I didn't come up with a car payment I would be on my feet soon enough.

As tight as money was I remember how shot down I was when the girl at McDonald's gave me a senior discount on a cup of coffee. Me? A senior? I had to bite my tongue to keep from telling her where to put that discount. I was only 55. Still, once I calmed down, I had to admit that my dreams of a smooth-running BMW had now become dreams of a smooth-running BM. Now when I heard the name Grateful Dead, an image of Dr. Kevorkian would pop into my mind. It was just awful.

Now, as a semi-retired individual, I am happy to receive a check from the same government that I once wanted to overthrow. My savings receive almost no interest, and I pay for Medicare that will probably not even be there when I need it. Instead of acid I need an antacid. My K-E-G is now an E-K-G.

But you know, life these days is pretty good. My beautiful hippie wife Lana is still with me and we raised two great kids. We are OK financially and I have plenty of time to reflect on the journey that I traveled. Becoming my parents was not nearly as traumatic as I once believed. Somewhere deep inside I know that if I had to, I could still spend my days in the park living off Ramen Noodles and peanut butter. I just hope that all of my brothers and sisters survived the trip as well as I did.

Do You Know Who Your IRA Beneficiary Is—and Why It Matters?

386-615-3402 • fa.morganstanleyindividual.com/thecornerstonegroup

Deciding whom to designate as a beneficiary for your IRA might seem like an easy decision—you probably want your money to go to someone near and dear to you. But is the person (or people) you're thinking of actually named as the beneficiary on the particular IRA you opened all those years ago?

To be certain, it's wise to review your beneficiary designation form every few years, or whenever you've had a change in circumstances, such as a birth of a child or grandchild or change in marital status. Keep in mind that a will or trust does not override this form, or the IRA document itself (which may have "default" beneficiary designations that control even if no beneficiary designation is on file), unless you name your estate or trust as your beneficiary. Because beneficiary designations are important estate-planning documents, you may want to review them with your attorney.

You have the option of naming primary and contingent beneficiaries. The primary beneficiary is your first choice to receive your retirement benefits and can be more than one person or entity. If you choose more than one primary beneficiary, you may specify a percentage to be paid to each person and indicate whether a beneficiary's share will be void if he or she predeceases you or if that share will pass to his or her children. A contingent beneficiary is someone you designate to receive your IRA only if all primary beneficiaries predecease you, pass away at the same time as you or disclaim their rights to the IRA assets.

It's important to note that distributions from an IRA may have tax consequences for your beneficiaries. While taxes shouldn't be the primary determining factor in naming your beneficiaries, ignoring the impact of taxes could have significant consequences for your family. Remember to look at your IRA assets in context with the rest of your estate before making any decisions. To help ensure that your wishes can be executed as you intended, discuss your beneficiary designations, wills and other estate matters with your tax and legal advisors and other members of your advisory team.

A Primary Beneficiaries Primer

When naming a primary beneficiary, some designations to be familiar with are all my children, per stirpes and per capita. Terminology and definitions may vary from state to state, however, so you should consult with an attorney before making a final decision.

Per Stirpes: Also known as "rights of representation" in some states, per stirpes means that the children of a beneficiary who predeceases you will share equally in the portion of your IRA originally left to the now-deceased child.

Per Capita: This method divides your IRA assets among your beneficiaries and the descendants of any beneficiary who dies before you. For example, if you name your three daughters as your primary beneficiaries and one of them dies before you, each of her own three children will receive a share equal to that of your other two daughters—splitting the IRA into five equal parts.

In addition, remember that being precise is better than being vague or general. For example, it's not uncommon for people to name "All My Children" on a form. However, the better practice is to list, in fact, the children being designated, and then decide if their share is held "per capita" (meaning if the child dies before you, your IRA assets will be divided among your surviving children, with the remaining children sharing equally) or "per stirpes" (meaning that your deceased child's children will receive the shares).

Ormond Beach Dental Group

Welcomes

Dr. Kerri Graham

She is a Graduate of University of Florida 2003 in the top 5% of her class. She served as Gulf County Health Department Dental Director from 2003-2011.

Recently, Dr. Graham has decided to set her sights on Ormond Beach. She and her husband believe the area will be a wonderful place to raise their three young sons and to have the family blessed by the expectant birth of their daughter in December. The Grahams have strong beliefs in the preciousness of family. Dr. Graham's goal is to provide the highest standard of personalized dental care in a gentle, efficient and professional manner.
