Publix demolished to create space for new Shores store

By Kelli Jo Hull
For Hometown News

The demolition of Daytona Beach Shores' Publix nears completion and the re-build will begin soon. The majority of the tear down of the old structure and debris removal took just over a week.

"They were done quickly," City Manager Michael Booker said. The building was "basically gutted" prior to demolition, resulting in the fast tear down, he said.

Much of the rubble was hauled away by a recycling company. Clean up of the site "went fine," Mr. Booker said.

The city received one noise complaint as the site was being prepared for new construction. A resident complained that demolition "started too early" in the morning, Mr. Booker said. However, the city allows demolition to occur between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. HGR Construction, the firm in charge of the project, was in compliance with that regulation, according to Mr. Booker.

The old store on Atlantic Avenue will be replaced by a larger facility that includes a liquor store and a pharmacy with a drive-through. Also, in exchange for some minor code variations, Publix will add some public benefits, including a bus bench easement, a covered loading dock, a direct walkway from South Atlantic through the parking lot to the store entrance, a six-foot high noise reducing, decorative wall on the west side of the property, four picnic benches in adjacent McElroy Park and additional trees along the eastern and southern borders of the property.

Publix officials "plan to be open in November," Mr. Booker said.

Since the store's closing in March, residents of Daytona Beach Shores as well as adjacent beachside communities have had limited options for grocery shopping.

Atlantic Avenue is home to only two other supermarkets. Winn Dixie just north of the Publix location and a Publix much farther north in Ormond-by-the-Sea are options that don't please everyone.

Oceans III condo resident Janet Rabe-Meyer said, "We have been really stuck. I'm used to walking across the street for everything we need. Now I'm driving way out of my way. But I can't wait until it opens. It should be fabulous!"

Volusia adopts fertilizer ordinance

By Erika Webb
ewebb@hometownnewsol.com

A countywide fertilizer ordinance was adopted April 3 by the Volusia County Council. The council also voted to notify the state of its intent to create a stronger regulation.

Consistent with the state model, the ordinance bans nitrogen and phosphorus for 30 days after seeding or sodding; when a flood watch or warning has been issued; a tropical storm or hurricane watch or warning has been issued; heavy rain is likely; or soils are saturated.

It prohibits fertilizer within 10 feet of a surface water body or seawall and establishes a voluntary 10-foot low-maintenance zone, containing plants that do not need fertilizer.

The model states broadcast spreaders require a deflector shield; fertilizer must be removed from impervious surfaces and grass clippings or vegetative matter are prohibited from storm drains, ditches, water bodies, wetlands, sidewalks or roadways.

Exemptions include gardens, agricultural operations, golf courses, athletic fields and turf managed for active recreation where "best management practices" are undertaken.

Individuals fertilizing gardens and lawns are encouraged to follow the recommendations of the University of Florida/IFAS Florida Yards and Neighborhoods program when applying fertilizers, according to the ordinance.

Growth promoting plant nutrients contained in fertilizers have been determined to impair waterways with elevated nitrogen and phosphorus levels contributing to algal bloom —

Angels easing burdens

By Pat Young
For Hometown News

Olympian Ryan Lochte was the special guest of this year's Simon's Angels fundraiser. Clockwise from top left are Paul Bradley, Mr. Lochte, Lisa Bradley, Olivia and Madelyn.

It has been almost 10 years since a little baby boy named Simon Bradley passed away.

But all the emotions his family experienced during his struggle for life have coalesced into a driving force to help other families in similar circumstances.

Simon was born eight weeks premature Aug. 25, 2004, with two congenital illnesses, Hirschsprung's Disease (also called short gut, a disease affecting the colon) and Congenital Central Hypoventilation Syndrome (a serious breathing disorder).

Less than 24 hours after his birth, Simon was transferred from Halifax Medical Center in Daytona Beach to Wolfson Children's Hospital in Jacksonville. Doctors told the Bradleys he would need multi-visceral transplant surgery (up to five new organs) due to the illnesses. After researching the best possible treatments and care for Simon, the Bradleys chose a team of doctors at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami.

For Paul and Lisa Bradley and their twin daughters, Madelyn and Olivia, life suddenly took a dramatic turn. They went from happily awaiting the birth of a new baby and starting up a new business, Superwash Express Car Wash, on Dunlawton Avenue in Port Orange, to facing the challenge of keeping the family together with a critically ill son over 350 miles away. The twins, then four years old, were starting preschool, and the new business was just opening. (Their first Superwash Express Car Wash is in Ormond Beach.) The Bradleys moved to temporary housing in Miami, com-

Art therapy soothes

By Susan Wright

At Halifax Health-Center for Oncology, the atmosphere in the treatment room is calm, quiet, the décor is soothing, patients sit in deep, lushly upholstered recliners, seats designed to be as comfortable as possible for long sessions of chemotherapy.

And the sessions can be very long, up to seven hours for some patients. Hours in which the patient is required to stay still in the chair, attached to tubes providing the chemicals designed to treat the cancers.

But Elizabeth Watkins, clinical social worker for Halifax Health Center, explains it's not enough to provide physical comfort

Selling the sizzle; and not the steak

LAND LINES

DAN SMITH

The people who work in advertising must have a lot of fun.

Think about it. These folks have chosen to buy a car, pay a mortgage and perhaps send a couple kids to college while doing a job that requires them to produce something out of thin air.

The task of rearranging a few words so you may justify your salary has to be tough. When it works for them, a celebration must be in order. Some years back the advertisers for McDonald's came up with the phrase "we do it all for you!" When I thought of how that must have been developed, I had to smile.

Just west of downtown Chicago sits the McDonald's corporate offices in the elite suburb of Oak Brook. Most of the company's business and training takes place at that property. There is even a McDonald's skyscraper. When a group of fresh-faced college grads gathered around the boardroom table, I'm sure they all had great ideas to pitch. The guy or gal who came up with the "we do it all for you" line was probably hailed as a genius. If someone there was smart enough to note that McDonald's does nothing for you, he would have been shouted down.

It wouldn't matter if it was brought up that the restaurant does not serve your food at the table, bring you a drink refill or bus the tables.

The public are dolts and won't think of any of that. The fellow who came up with the slogan probably was given a promotion and the protestor was never heard from again.

Some years back the advertisers for the city of Las Vegas decided the word "gambling" was unacceptable. No matter that gambling was the thing that built all those gaudy buildings that rise up out of the desert like the Land of Oz. Nope they said, "let's change it from world's gambling center to world's gaming center." I don't know about you, but when I was there, I never saw a single game of dodge ball being played.

Famously the brainiacs who do the advertising for Kentucky Fried Chicken decided to change the company's image by switching to KFC. The word "fried" became a no-no. We, the dumb public, are not supposed to know what the F stands for. Brilliant. KFC is now advertising six chicken strips for a certain price, but the picture in the ad shows a bucket full. You couldn't find those six pieces in the bottom of that bucket.

Locally I would have loved to been there when the TV advertising person made a pitch to the Kia car dealer. Oh sure, you have a certain Spencer Tracy quality that the cameras will love and that silky voice is sure to be a hit. Personally I can't take it. Whenever that commercial comes on, I am ever so grateful for the mute button. Now the guy is offering to give you a $7,000 credit for any beater you can drag into his lot. Instead of all of the double talk, an understandable price might work better.

Car insurance ads are misleading as well. Lots of insurance companies spend a ton of money on TV ads trying to convince us they are our best friends. Most of us believe we pay for auto insurance in order to get our ride repaired in case of a collision. If your car has a few years on it, the reality is quite different. The company will offer you a payout based on the low book value because it is less expensive for them than paying for the repairs. With that deal comes loss of your automobile. Most of the time that figure will not come close to replacing your car. When that happens, the dancing lizard or the strange woman in white is not quite so funny.

Red Lobster says they have an endless shrimp festival. That hints of all-you-can-eat shrimp, but what that really means is they have 'em if you have an endless supply of cash.

Now I hear them advertising a case of beer at a good price, but closer inspection shows they mean 18 beers. When did a case of beer become three six packs? Some products now advertise a new bonus size, but they fail to mention the price has gone up.

Sure, I know the advertising people have it tough and I can't blame them for the constant barrage of mindless TV ads we must endure, but enough is enough. A little truth in advertising would be nice.

Dan Smith is on the board of directors for the Ormond Beach Historical Society and The Motor Racing Heritage Association and is the author of two books, "The World's Greatest Beach" and "I Swear the Snook Drowned." Email questions and comments to fishwdan@att.net or call (386) 441-7793.

Editor's Note: Congratulations are in order for Dan and his wife, Lana, who are celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary.

Therapy

for their patients. Those hours can be mentally damaging, with too much time to dwell on the grim possibilities and unpleasant realities of the situation. Keeping a positive outlook can be important to those coping with cancer, she said.

Which is where a year-old program entitled Colors of Life comes in.

Under Ms. Watkins' supervision, volunteers provide art therapy to a variety of patients undergoing chemo at the centers. But this isn't the kind of therapy aimed at providing the patients with an outlet for their emotions.

While it may be art therapy, there's no paint being splashed or clay molded. In fact, the point is to soothe rather than express. Ms. Watkins explained they provide patients with an opportunity to participate in creating a group project.

She said the main advantage of this program is it gives the patients a way to focus on something outside of themselves, to feel they are participating in some thing positive and, often, it provides a social aspect as well. When more than one patient is working on the project at the same time, she said they often begin to interact and share.

On a typical afternoon, volunteer Julie Guidibaldi approached Danny Perk, a 47-year-old patient undergoing extensive chemotherapy. Mr. Perk has participated before in the project and enthusiastically agreed to work on a project that day. Ms. Guidibaldi provided a box of richly patterned paper and a template showing him where the pieces are to go. The program's projects are basically collages or designs made up of torn bits of paper arranged on canvas to create a colorful work of art.

This time it's a slightly larger version of a design that's already been produced and is ready to hang on the walls of the center — a sunflower.

Ms. Guidibaldi, a volunteer with a doctorate in school psychology and a background as a counselor in schools, started when she was coming with her husband who was receiving treatment, and she's become the unofficial therapist and head volunteer.

Ms. Guidibaldi said there is no set schedule for the art therapy — volunteers simply bring the materials at different times and work with whoever is there. This keeps the sessions low key and comfortable. No one feels any stress about having to be there at any particular time.

She asks patients if they'd like to work on it each time — sometimes a patient won't feel up to even that much activity.

She also spends time with those who welcome her company.

"The people I end up getting close to and spending time with, I feel like I was meant to be with for some time, for various reasons," she said.

She spends a little time with Mr. Perk, who said he owned his own business before moving to the area. He had earned most of the credits he needed for a degree in IT technology when he was diagnosed with cancer. Now the cancer has spread throughout his stomach and abdomen, and he knows he'll never be cured.

He's accepted the inevitable, but says it helps him to work on the projects as he sits during each treatment.

Ms. Guidibaldi leaves to go help train a much-needed new volunteer.

The program allows volunteers to be involved as much or as little as they like. Ms. Watkins said at the moment, they have a few high school students volunteering who are able to just show up when they have time — and they're mainly asked just to help prepare the materials for patients.

She said the number of volunteers tends to ebb and flow and Ms. Guidibaldi is the only volunteer working directly with the patients. Since there are treatment centers at three locations, new volunteers are most welcome.

Each completed project represents the work of many patients, volunteers and staff. The largest so far is a four- by six-foot mural of the sunflower that's been displayed in the Oncology Center conference room. An even bigger project is planned featuring a design titled "The Tree of Life," which will be a traveling, five-foot depiction of a tree.

For more information or to volunteer, call Ms. Watkins at (386) 239-2328.

Dental Science professors, students volunteer their expertise

Teams of Daytona State College dental science instructors and students took service to heart this spring, putting their training to use as volunteers benefitting underserved people.

Pam Ridilla, chair of the School of Dental Sciences, this semester took part with groups of students in a number of volunteer service activities.

During one activity, Ms. Ridilla completed nearly 70 oral hygiene screenings and referrals as part of her volunteer work with the Flomich Avenue Baptist Church's Dental Bus.

In the same activity, students in Daytona State's Dental Hygiene and Dental Assisting programs participated, gaining valuable experience assisting volunteer dentists in performing various procedures, provided free to patients. They included Marliz Figueroa, Kylee McDaniel, Nicole Woehr, Rebecca Echevarria and Shannon Young.

In March, Ms. Ridilla and Dental Sciences Assistant Chair Leslie Fehl took a group of students to participate in Mission of Mercy, a two-day event held at the state fairgrounds in Tampa, which was sponsored by the Florida Dental Association. Dental hygiene students who participated in the event were Echevarria, Jennifer Balduf and Thao Tran. Dental assisting students included Ashley Johnson, Stephanie Hall and Mary Rymarczyk. Collectively, event volunteers performed free dental procedures valued at more than $1.1 million, treating more than 1,600 low-income patients.

The college's School of Dental Sciences offers a certificate program in dental assisting and an associate of science degree in dental hygiene.

Boats crowding neighborhood

For sometime now I had been hoping Edgewater leaders would notice just what Florida Shores has become.

It is obvious that anything goes.

Edgewater has never placed much emphasis on code enforcement. It is obvious that department has never been strong enough on its own, having been tossed in with other departments over the years.

Our council many years ago was faced with a large, disruptive group of boat and trailer owners at a council meeting, which resulted in the appointment of an ad hoc committee of 19 residents to decide what could be done with boats and trailers in Florida Shores. Instead of the council being fair and firm, doing their duty as elected representatives of this community, they dumped the decision-making on a committee (made up of boat and trailer owners, and one non-owner). From that committee came the ordinance to permit what we have today in our residential community — barriers in front yards to prevent other residents from enjoying their surroundings.

Much emphasis has been placed and pride has been taken on U.S. 1, but when one drives through Florida Shores residential streets one finds monstrous garages built next to homes, large boats, campers, trailers or trucks on small 80-foot front yards so they act as barriers to adjoining lots. Those obstacles prevent other residents from being able to see anything but their own yards.

With today's crime, it is important that all residents are able to see what is going on in their neighborhood. Also, I am sure our property values are at stake.

It is about time Edgewater city fathers revisit the city code to bring this matter to a fair and firm decision for all residents. Our elected officials, not a hand-picked committee, should decide how best to enhance the beauty of this community.

Column is right on

Kudos to Dan Smith and his article about the income tax season. I was beginning to feel like I was the only one who felt this way. Again, thank you Dan, you took the words right out of my mouth.

Dan says it like it is

I want to compliment Dan Smith on his Landlines column trying to reason with income season. He says it just like it is and he is 100 percent correct. I also enjoy all of his columns and I enjoy the Hometown News very much. Thank you for publishing it.

In response to: 'Puzzled by trash pickers'

I am a trash picker. I live in Daytona Beach. You never know what people are going to throw out. Like the saying says, one man's trash is another man's treasure. I think us trash pickers have our right to get our treasure because we can't always get them in the good stores.

Islands of the lost

What genius decided to put islands alongside of the road on West Granada Boulevard? They keep painting them with traffic yellow paint as they continue to be blackened with the tires of unsuspecting motorists. Anyone who has traveled that road looking into the setting sun knows it is difficult enough with out putting out obstacles.

Reminds me of the arcade pinball machines I played years ago.

My guess is it will take a relative of a council person or perhaps the mayor to bust a tire there before the idiots wake up.

Also the fancy brickwork just keeps settling and making potholes in the road. Does anyone do their homework or do they just make hideous suggestions and OK them by a raise of hands? What a waste of revenue.

There are a lot of other ways to spend taxpayer money. How about a raise for the police and firefighters? I read where they have not had a raise in seven years.

I am not a resident of Ormond Beach, but travel there every day.

Florida Power and Light Co. employee Charlie Bamford counsels South Daytona resident Robert Berk on insulation during FPL's "Safer Homes, Fewer Burns" public service outreach on April 2. The team of experts shared tips and advice that will help homeowners make their homes safer and more energy efficient.

Appalled? No, Let's Applaud

Our Ormond Beach Mayor, to his credit, has stood tall in defense of our current compensation package for our firefighters.

Rather than castigate him for his position, we should be applauding him and our administration for getting us through one of the most difficult financial periods (2008-2011) in this country's history. The conservative position that was taken here with our pension investments and our labor obligations enabled us (homeowners) to get through this with the least amount of pain possible. They have done a fantastic job.

Many people lost their homes and many people lost their jobs, but the city was able to continue to operate successfully. Today we see the benefits of that decision making. Things are improving. Beautification projects are underway throughout the city and yes, there will be a new offer to our firefighters. And thanks to each and every one of them for their patience and excellent service while waiting for things to get better. It's all going to work out.

Dangerous crossing

It is dangerous for pedestrians to cross at the railroad on Wayne Avenue just west of U.S. 1 in New Smyrna Beach. We recently witnessed an elderly woman as she walked to the sidewalk's end, entered the street, and trudged across the railroad with traffic coming behind her. To stay off of the road would mean walking through weeds and on uneven ground.

It seems this problem could easily be solved by extending the sidewalk on the north side of the street so it connects by asphalt or some other material across the tracks and to the sidewalk on the other side. As it is, those on foot or using bikes, strollers or wheelchairs are at great risk when attempting to maneuver across the railroad tracks.

Pay the tax to educate youth

Its time the older folk realize they are the lucky generation and we need to do more to provide support and educate the young who are being left a legacy of unsustainable largesse to fund. Any 70-year-old ex-military or government services employee who retired on a defined benefit pension in their mid 50s needs to recognize they will be taking from the state coffers, not only more than they ever contributed, but more than they actually earned in salary over their entire working life. Give the kids a break and pay the extra one cent tax on your $1.99 Big Gulp soda.

Help for cancer victims?

I would like to know who helps cancer patients who have no income coming in and just plain insurance and on chemo? They lose their home. Who helps them? Where can they get help?

In response to the response for 'Puzzled by trash pickers'

I am the original author, and in response to the woman who made more than $1,000 on a garage sale and she refurbishes furniture and disregarded items for charities, I commend you.

However, you misunderstood my original rant. My concerns were not about people picking up items, such as coffee tables, gas grills, lawn furniture. I thank you for using that outlet to provide help to those in need. My concern was, and I am sure that your garage sale that earned you more than $1,000 required a permit, as in many towns. I do think that trash pickers should be bonded because they are going through sensitive information and I believe they should have a permit so they can be tracked and identified. Their habits and movements can be monitored by the appropriate people.

You missed my entire point. I don't mind if someone takes my gas grill or coffee table in need of repair. I do object to any trash picker tearing open my sealed trash bag and pawing through personal items, sanitary items and mail, looking for one soda can in the middle of the bag. That, I do believe should be illegal, governed, permitted and the citizens who have to put up with this behavior should be satisfied to know their taxes may be reduced by the fact these under the table workers are making hundreds of thousands of dollars annually while they paw through personal, sensitive privately owned property.

No more games

President Barack Obama has been elected into office twice. Obviously he is doing something the majority of voters believe in .I am one person that is so fed up with the blame game. Illegal immigration has been going on a whole lot longer than President Obama has been on this earth. No president prior to Mr. Obama has figured out the problem. Especially with the border crossings from Mexico. Maybe the people who are trying to fix this should spend more time watching TV. I have seen several documentaries on how there are tunnels that go miles into the United States.

The complaints about abortion. Well once again, the abortion laws were changed many years ago. President Obama was probably alive, but I doubt he was of voting age yet. As far as same sex marriage I truly do not understand the prejudice.

If you want facts about what President Obama has truly done, stop reading the National Enquirer and the Star and get a real newspaper and study and do research. I won't do it for you. I have already done it. While I didn't vote for Obama the first time, I did the second. I was impressed with the stuff he really did.

District offers water-saving tips for Water Conservation Month

April is Water Conservation Month in Florida, and the St. Johns River Water Management District is joining dozens of agencies and local governments to promote the importance of water conservation.

April has been formally recognized as Water Conservation Month in Florida for the past 16 years, as April is typically a dry month when water demands are higher due to springtime planting.

Lawn and landscape irrigation accounts for more than half of all residential water use. Districtwide lawn watering rules are designed to ensure the efficient use of water for landscape irrigation and specify the days when residents and businesses may water. These days depend on whether the property has an odd or even numbered address.

Irrigate lawns and landscapes up to two days a week, before 10 a.m. or after 4 p.m., from March to November, and up to one day a week during the cooler months of Eastern Standard Time.

Watering wisely year-round promotes healthier lawns and landscapes and can save thousands of gallons of water per month, as well as save homeowners money. Overwatering a lawn can promote weeds and insect pests, as well as weakened grass roots. Watch the weather — if it looks like it is going to rain, don't water your lawn.

Outdoor conservation tips include:

•Water lawns during the early morning or early evening hours when temperature and wind speed are lowest. This reduces losses from evaporation and wind that can occur during the middle of the day.

•Use a broom to clean leaves and other debris from sidewalks and driveways rather than a hose. Using a hose to clean a driveway can use hundreds of gallons of water.

•Outfit your hose with a spray nozzle that can be adjusted so water flows only as needed. When finished, turn it off at the faucet instead of at the nozzle to avoid water loss from leaks. Without a spray nozzle, an unattended garden hose can pour out 8 to 12 gallons each minute, or hundreds of gallons of water in an hour.

•Collect rainwater to use to water plants. It is free and is better for plants because it doesn't contain hard minerals.

Inside the home, a leaky toilet or faucet can waste thousands of gallons of water each month. Installing low-flow toilets and showerheads can dramatically reduce indoor water consumption without reduced performance.

Other indoor tips include:

•Insulate water pipes to get hot water faster and avoid wasting water while it heats up.

•Never put water down the drain when there may be another use for it, such as watering a plant or cleaning.

•Store drinking water in the refrigerator instead of letting the tap run while waiting for cool water to flow.

Water conservation is among the District's highest priorities, and nearly every aspect of the District's work, from consumptive use permitting to cooperative funding to water supply planning, has a water conservation component. Since 2010, the District and local governments, utilities and other partners have invested nearly $7 million in cost-share projects to improve water conservation.

Speed Weeks revved up Volusia economy

VOLUSIA BUSINESS
CECIL G. BRUMLEY

If there was any concern about the Volusia County economy slowing down this year, a couple of recent reports showing Speed Weeks was extremely successful may have dispelled that notion.

Bed tax collections were up 18 percent in Volusia in February from February 2013. All three tourism advertising authority areas were up sharply. It was the highest February level since 2007. Yes, that was right before the fan got messed up and we sank into the deepest recession since the Great Depression.

The Speed Weeks period also was good for International Speedway Corp., which reported $131.8 million in revenue in its fiscal first quarter (ended Feb. 28), up from $128.6 million in February 2013. ISC's net income was $19.9 million, up from $13.5 million last year.

Those two reports come on the heels of a housing construction report showing permits were issued for 134 houses in February compared to 84 in February 2013.

While we still have to wait a few days on the February report on retail sales, it looks like the Volusia economy is showing a little muscle.

One Daytona, ISC's big retail/entertainment/residential complex, is starting to look like a done deal. After getting the backing of the County Council and Daytona Beach City Commission, the company now has signed leases with two of its anchor tenants, Cobb Theatres and Bass Pro Shops. It also is moving forward with the permitting process, refiling plans it originally submitted in 2005 for what was then called Daytona Live to the St. Johns River Water Management District.

An interesting conundrum was facing the County Council this week as developer Sheldon Anderson continues pushing for his Pioneer Square center at Airport Road and Pioneer Trail. Anderson wants to put a grocery-anchored center there, but two of the county's biggest developers also want to put grocery stores with their developments – Jerry Johnson at Venetian Bay and Mori Hosseini at Woodhaven – in the same area between New Smyrna Beach and Port Orange. The council was scheduled to vote on the zoning change needed for Anderson's development.

I mentioned a Red Bowl Asian Bistro was locating at Ormond Towne Square last week, but now it looks like there'll also be one in Port Orange. It'll be in the new strip center between BJ's Wholesale Gas Station and Golden Corral at Altamira Village. For anyone keeping score, that means Port Orange will be getting another spate of eateries with the Pita Pit, Pollo Tropical and Popeye's also on the way.

Wawa fans can continue to be excited. A group of Maitland investors bought the property for the convenience store at 1031 Dunlawton Ave. in Port Orange for $1.565 million. A building permit has been issued so demolition of the existing restaurant building may have started even as you're reading this.

Only one other big real estate deal of note: Elm Capital of Tamarac bought the small strip center with Domino's Pizza and Florida Formal Wear at 821 N. Nova Road in Daytona Beach for $1.3 million.

Managing Editor Cecil G. Brumley has been tracking business and the economy in Volusia County for more than 17 years. Contact him at cbrumley@hometownnewsol.com or follow him on Twitter @cecilbrumley.

Fertilizer

particularly during times of warm, calm weather, according to floridaswater.com.

David Hargrove of Daytona Beach is the conservation chair for the Halifax River Audubon Society. He was one of several public participants calling for the stronger ordinance, education and effective enforcement.

"We know from the county's own water quality testing that a number of our local water bodies are impaired and primarily from these two chemicals," Mr. Hargrove said.

Many who spoke at the April 3 meeting cited positive results in other Florida counties where summer bans have been enacted, most notably in Charlotte County on the west coast of Florida where a 2008 ordinance was amended in 2011 to include a "Restricted Season" from June 1 to Sept. 30 when no nitrogen or phosphorus-containing fertilizer may be applied to turf or landscape plants.

Charlotte also imposed a limit on annual nitrogen application to no more than four pounds of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet per year total.

"Volusia County can do better," said Annie Morgan of the Marine Discovery Center in New Smyrna Beach. She said the center received so many calls from citizens concerned about the Indian River Lagoon that a section containing information on how to help had to be added to MDC's website.

"Volusia County citizens are asking … they're standing from bridges and shouting, even," Ms. Morgan said. "A strong fertilizer ordinance would show that you're listening."

The stronger ordinance includes four additional protective provisions, including a seasonal ban on nitrogen and phosphorus from June 1 to Sept. 30; prohibited use of fertilizer within 15 feet of waterways; using at least 50 percent slow-release nitrogen when fertilizing and banning phosphorus.

Two of the four measures were sent to the state for requisite review following a March 6 council meeting. The summer ban and increased waterway buffer will be sent for state comment next.

The three agencies reviewing the proposed amendments include FDEP, DACS and UF/IFAS.

"It would be shameful of us not to adopt the strongest protections that we can do," said Councilwoman Pat Northey. "A county surrounded by water ... has an obligation to do the right thing."

Councilman Doug Daniels said Mosquito Lagoon, where he has fished for 20 years, once resembled the Florida Keys, with grass beds akin to "an underwater rainforest."

Those grass beds, he said, are gone.

"Now it is like being in a sewer," Councilman Daniels said, adding the model ordinance alone "has not been proven to work."

"(Mosquito Lagoon is) a place of dead dolphins, dead manatees, dead pelicans. We have to do something and we have to do something now," he said, calling for enhanced protections.

The vote was 4-2 with council members Josh Wagner and Deb Denys casting the two dissenting votes.

"I wanted to have an exemption during the blackout to allow people the opportunity to apply to the county to apply fertilizer with nitrogen. They would have to supply very specific reasons on why they should be allowed to apply it," Councilman Wagner wrote in an email after the meeting. "I will be supporting the ordinance with the four additional protections."

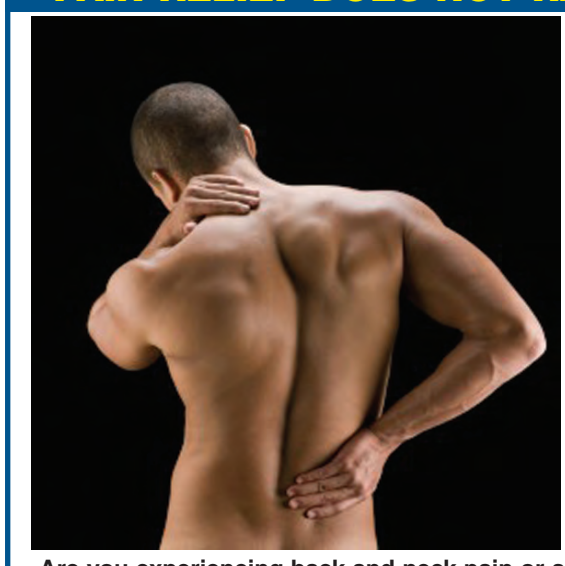
SPINAL DECOMPRESSION MADE AFFORDABLE
PAIN RELIEF DOES NOT HAVE TO BE EXPENSIVE



Are you experiencing back and neck pain or sciatica caused by bulging, herniated or squashed discs? Our breakthrough technology may be the answer to your prayers.

You've heard and read about the dramatic results patients report after spinal decompression. Perhaps you've been in for an initial consultation and if so, you may have walked out with a sense of "sticker shock". We know times are tough and we'd like to "ease the pain" of spinal decompression. Call now for a free qualification assessment.

How Does our Disc Machine Work?
The technology is simple. Our machine gently pulls the area we are treating, causing a pressure drop within the disc. By decreasing the pressure, affected discs have the opportunity to regain some of their natural inner fluids. Repeating this process through a series of treatments allows damaged discs to regenerate, commonly restoring normal function and elasticity. Treatments are typically painless and patients may actually fall asleep during a treatment. The results can be amazing.

Are you suffering with a Disc Problem?
A disc problem in the back or neck can manifest itself in a number of ways.
A bulging, degenerated or herniated disc may create symptoms such as:
- Back or neck pain.
- Numbness in fingers or toes.
- Pain or numbness in the arms or legs.
- A prickling sensation in the arms or legs.

If you are experiencing any of these symptoms, you may be a candidate for our non-surgical, computerized decompression treatment.

"I just wanted to say 'THANK YOU' to you and your excellent staff. I am in my 4th week of the spinal decompression treatments and I am now pain free in my lower back; something that medications were unable to do. Like most people, I didn't know what to expect from the treatments. They are very relaxing; Lie down; relax; And it gets fixed."

From patient Richard Marsh 3-17-2014

Call today for a free assessment. If we feel decompression is right for you, we'll recommend a treatment plan and get you started right away. Our doctors are dedicated to providing quality care to everyone. Now we can offer Spinal Decompression at truly affordable rates!

Simons

muting back and forth. They stayed with Simon during the week and his maternal grandparents stayed with him on weekends.

Mrs. Bradley emphasizes that Simon was never alone. "He knew he was loved," she said, and she feels that is why he surpassed all odds and lived beyond the medical community's predictions. Simon was too ill to receive the transplant surgery, and passed away on Aug. 26, 2005, just hours after his first birthday.

"When I would walk into his room, his legs would start kicking," she said, and though he was too young to communicate any other way, she said he knew her and knew he was not alone in his struggle for life.

Despite everything they went through, Mrs. Bradley said she was lucky. She has twin daughters and she had a son. After his death, she created "Simon's Angels," a foundation dedicated to helping pediatric transplant patients and their families.

"There are so many less fortunate," she said. "Our wish is to give pediatric transplant recipients and families a glitter of hope in desperate times."

Financial burdens arise, she said, with medical copays and deductions, housing while staying out of town to be near the small patient, and parents having to take off work to be near their child.

"It is during these times that families need to be together, and we hope to make that possible," she said. "Sometimes we forget that there is a family attached to that patient in the bed. I saw a lot of kids alone in the hospital because parents had to work."

It is a small foundation, she added, that does a world of good. They raised just under $40,000 last year, and each year they raise a little more. Their first fundraiser was at the Port Orange YMCA. It was a weekend event called "Simon's Angels Family Fun Day."

This year they had a successful fundraiser in the Henderson Center at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in March, "An Evening for the Angels." Special guest and foundation supporter Ryan Lochte, 11-time Olympic medalist, was on hand to speak and accept an award for his commitment and support of Simon's Angels. He learned of the foundation through his sister, who is a swimming coach for the Daytona Beach swim team on which the Bradley twins participate.

Also speaking at the event was Father Lopez Catholic High School senior Rebecca Blais, who told her own story of battling Hemophagocytic lymphohistiocytosis (HLH), a blood disorder that took her sister's life. While receiving bone marrow transplants, Simon's Angels helped Rebecca's family with out-of-town living expenses.

This is the kind of story that drives Mrs. Bradley. She dedicates many hours to the Simon's Angels foundation. "Such a tragic loss, but such good came out of it," she said. "His memory still lives through this foundation."

More information about the foundation can be found at simonsangels.org or by emailing the Bradleys at superwash1@aol.com.

The brochure they have put together sums up the Simon's Angels foundation mission in a heartfelt paragraph:

"It is difficult seeing other children suffering in the same way Simon did, but gives us great joy to be able to help. This is our mission and it is through what Simon taught us that each life has a purpose and value, and that we are able to endure this life without him. His memory will live on forever with his handprint on our heart. In memory of Simon, we hope to continue God's purpose for his life."

Springs park programs designed to engage visitors

By Erika Webb
ewebb@hometownnewsol.com

Delighted squeals echoed from the pool at DeLeon Springs Saturday, April 12, signaling spring's true arrival.

The smell of bacon cooking at the Old Spanish Sugar Mill wafted across the park. Kayaks and other vessels drifted lazily in the clear water leading to the St. Johns River where hordes of volunteers were cleaning up.

Park Services Specialist Keith White stood at the overlook above the waterway leading from the park with his spotting scope waiting for wading birds.

They were tardy for his class, but that was OK because no students were there yet, either. It was just too pretty out to sit still.

Mr. White is one of several park services employees who conduct Interpretive Ranger Programs on select days at the state parks.

Fishing was on the program menu for April 12, but when there weren't enough advance signups the program was changed to accommodate those who just wanted to meander up and ask questions about birds.

Problem was: the birds weren't showing up.

Mr. White was good natured about the lack of synchronicity. People who dwell in nature don't get wrought up about schedules.

"I saw a cormorant, limpkin, great blue heron and pied-billed grebe the other morning," Mr. White said. "This morning you see what I've got."

Several kids ran by screeching happily.

"We're getting so busy now, but, during the winter especially, you never know what's gonna show up," he added.

Park Services Specialist Donna Collins stood at her post nearby. She'd had better luck early on Saturday with 50 people signing up to participate in the St. Johns River Cleanup.

"The restaurant allows them to go in canoes (free of charge) if they're with the cleanup," Ms. Collins said. "They also go out on County Road 3, into Chuck Lennon Park and throughout the (DeLeon Springs) park."

While she waited for the end of her shift, Ms. Collins and Mr. White shared observations about a few of the (absent) resident birds.

Mr. White said wading birds have interesting fishing techniques.

"One I like is the snowy egret," he said. "They have a yellow foot and they'll actually take that foot and move it in the water to attract fish."

"Cormorants are excellent fishers," Mr. White added. "When the (river) water goes so high and fish end up in the pool, the cormorants will actually get in the pool."

He explained how the Japanese use the birds to fish, a technique called Ukai, which has been practiced for around 1,300 years.

Fishermen working from long wooden boats lead cormorants on leashes. The birds swim alongside each boat and dive under the water to catch fish by swallowing them whole. The fish are kept in a special pouch in the cormorant's throat to be retrieved later.

A snare around each bird's neck prevents the fish from being swallowed, Mr. White explained.

"I like the limpkins because they eat mainly apple snails," Ms. Collins said. "If there are no snails, there won't be any limpkins around."

That strict diet, she said, is unique to the limpkin and snail kite.

Eventually Mr. White attracted some snow birds. It helps if the classroom is just outside the Sugar Mill, where, on busy weekends, hungry patrons patiently wait their turns.

Gemma Bartley and Penny Nevers escaped the Maine cold two months ago, but will soon head back to milder temperatures.

"We're learning about birds and the indentations made by the tilapia," Ms. Nevers said pointing into the water.

Sure enough three large round excavations were visible through the crystalline water.

"A fellow found a piece of pottery by the boat ramp because of a hole made by tilapia … tilapia archaeologists," said Assistant Park Manager Dave Garcia, who is seriously interested in archeology.

He'll conduct a program on Primitive Tools and Technology 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, April 19.

"We'll talk about the way the tools developed and the way folks, here on site, used them, from about 12,000 years ago till probably European arrival," Mr. Garcia said.

There are bone and stone tools, spears, including an atlatl — which is a spear-thrower, needles and more. Mr. Garcia also will talk about items used as musical instruments.

Two dugout canoes found in the spring are among the oldest canoes in America — 5,000 to 6,000 years old, Mr. Garcia said.

"About 6,000 years ago the Mayaca were here," he explained. "We don't know much about them except that they were hunter gatherers and not agricultural. They were very different from the Timucua that way."

During his program he'll discuss Mayacan "life ways" to bring more awareness to the tribe and how they lived.

Pointing toward the house on the hill where DeLeon Springs Park Manager Brian Polk lives, Mr. Garcia said the rise is "one of the biggest shell mounds in Volusia." While excavating to build the garage in the 1990's "human interments" — likely those of tribal leaders — were discovered.

"They had to call Native American tribes and decided not to disturb it further," Mr. Garcia said.

The park's human occupation history dates back to about 7000 BC, he explained.

In addition to the pottery, stone and bone tools and other implements, needles and fiber have been found at the park.

"We're trying to get more reasons for folks to come here," Mr. Garcia said. "The programs provide an opportunity for us to tell people about all the resources here and the history."

On April 26, Park Ranger Mark Williams will talk turtles.

Each year, Ms. Collins said, he digs up turtle eggs, incubates and then releases them. Usually there are 80 to 100 turtles set free in the ceremonial release.

Whether or not that will take place during the program she couldn't say, but parents might want to reserve a spot just in case.

"The kids love it," Ms. Collins said.

DeLand documentarian preserves Florida's past

By Erika Webb
ewebb@hometownnewsol.com

Eric Dusenbery possesses a vanishing trait. He's a good listener.

As a commercial/editorial photographer, he discovered there was more to life, and livelihood, than "taking pictures of buildings."

Throughout his travels, he met real people with real stories to tell. Mr. Dusenbery felt the stories, like food for the soul, wouldn't keep.

In 2006, he established Cinderic Documentaries, a non-profit organization, to bring awareness to aspects of Florida's history and culture he feared were vanishing or being overlooked.

The organization's mission is to enrich and preserve the community and human spirit through documentary photography and storytelling.

Rural communities and residents as well as those struggling to earn a living in declining or increasingly-restricted industries have captured the degreed photographer's interest and commandeered his lens.

"The one thing that sticks in my mind after talking and discussing is that everyone has a story," Mr. Dusenbery said. "People think it wouldn't be interesting but everyone has an interesting story, whether they think they do or not."

His book, "Florida Soup: Putting History on the Table" was completed last fall.

The foreword was written by Florida's Commissioner of Agriculture Adam Putnam and the project was supported by the Florida Dairy Farmers.

"It's about cooking and food preparation from the old days of Florida … how they sustained themselves … to present day," Mr. Dusenbery said.

From a tobacco-spitting blue crab fisherman who recounts commercial fishing practices of days gone by to a rancher who reminisces about Depression-era farming and other compelling state lore, the project was designed to convey Florida's love affair with food and storytelling, according to CDI's website.

Mr. Dusenbery ate, listened and photographed his way from the Panhandle to the Everglades.

Documentarian Eric Dusenbery goes deep into Florida to show people what the state's history really was and how Florida developed.

"I had always heard about cooking on a wood stove," he said, "but I never thought I would sit down and eat a complete meal cooked on a wood stove. I saw what it took, back in the day, and it was quite a process."

The Illinois native moved to Central Florida in the mid-1980s and quickly found he sympathized with individuals whose cultures and livelihoods were "disappearing due to development."

In the Everglades, Mr. Dusenbery was surprised at the literal lengths stone crab fishermen have to go to these days to catch a living.

"It's so protected, the fishermen had to go way out," he said. "They had to go to particular areas to do their fishing. Obviously it's a protected area, but I was a little bit surprised at how that extends to people making a living down there."

In addition to support from Volusia County, grants from The Florida Humanities Council helped produce "From Classroom to Community: Seville Public School" and "Croaker Sacks and Catfish Stew: Cooking and Food Preparation in Depression-Era Rural Volusia County."

Public programs and exhibitions spawned from the projects achieved national exposure with articles in several publications, Mr. Dusenbery said.

Another project, "Volusia52," searches the county from east side beaches to west side ranches; from farmland in the south to "the rich cultural sites of the north," turning up treasures.

"Volusia52 explores the county once a week for 52 weeks to seek Volusians who are extraordinary — though they may not know it — and show the rich diversity and character of this unique area," CDI's website notes.

The project got an official nod.

"I was very impressed with the project and like the focus on those who are serving their community without tooting their horn," said County Councilwoman Pat Northey. "Whenever we can chronicle and celebrate the community it helps to build community."

The goal is to collect the stories that portray everyday Volusia County residents through both photography and first-person narratives.

"This is not the tale of movers and shakers; rather that of those on whose shoulders we stand. Gone is the era of handwritten letters and journals saved for future generations," Mr. Dusenbery explained. "The dynamic attributes of this county are seen in the faces and lives of her residents and come to life through their stories. In the electronic age, extraordinary efforts must be made to preserve what is being lost almost daily."

Another endeavor, "Back Roads to Back Home: Finding the Voices of the Sunshine State" is a documentary portrait of small town/rural Florida to be presented as a book, exhibit and a series of public programs to interpret what it means to be "rural" in Florida.

Family knows their beans about food

By Susan Wright
swright@hometownnewsol.com

There aren't many restaurants I'd describe as sweet, but that's the phrase that comes to mind when I think of the Black Bean Café.

The family-owned eatery, open for breakfast and lunch (quite a late lunch for those who like it), offers a fairly simple but eclectic menu featuring a mix of Cuban, Tex-Mex and basic American fare — with a couple of other ethnic dishes thrown in.

The décor is bright, fun and with is own simple charm. The owners, Lisa and Glenn Qesada, are avid surfers. In fact, Mr. Qesada was once a pro who traveled the world and the décor reflects that passion — a large mural depicting a surfer riding inside the tunnel of a breaking wave. Smaller beach-themed paintings are scattered around, some for sale.

Mr. Qesada is the chef and Ms. Qesada handles the service — with help from their children during the week. She runs to pick her youngest up from school every day and brings her straight back to help with the late afternoon chores.

It creates a relaxed, unpretentious atmosphere that makes it perfect for those looking for a home away from home.

The breakfast menu offers a selection of eggs and combinations, plus a yogurt-granola parfait and a list of

Turtle Day will celebrate sea animal rehabilitation

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

Get acquainted with endangered sea turtles and other marine life during the 12th annual Turtle Day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, April 19, at the Marine Science Center, 100 Lighthouse Drive, Ponce Inlet.

Attendees can meet glove-trained birds of prey and get their hands wet in the 14,000-gallon stingray touch pool, which features cownose stingrays and hermit crabs.

Animal rehabilitation staff members will explain how they care for injured birds and sea turtles, while vendors will serve food, beverages and frozen custard. Other activities will include face painting, crafts and live music.

Admission to the Marine Science Center will be free on Turtle Day.

The event is sponsored by PNC Bank with assistance from Ritter's Frozen Custard, My Pi Custom Pizzas, Paragon Ocean Walk 10 and the Friends of Marine Science Center.

The Marine Science Center is an environmental learning center providing rehabilitation for sick and injured sea turtles and seabirds. Visitors can learn about marine life in the center's exhibit hall, which includes a 5,000-gallon artificial reef aquarium, a stingray touch pool,

Week of 4-18-2014

ARIES - Mar 21/Apr 20

You are in a position of power this week, Aries. But this doesn't mean you can impose your will onto someone else. Don't try to take over any situation.

TAURUS - Apr 21/May 21

Taurus, someone might dredge up uncomfortable feelings, but you need to muddle through with a smile on your face. This is the case at home and at work.

GEMINI - May 22/Jun 21

Gemini, separate your personal and professional lives, particulary with regard to potentially contentious issues. You may want to keep mum for a while.

CANCER - Jun 22/Jul 22

Cancer, make your feelings known when something upsets you this week. Sharing these feelings will benefit you and your friends and colleagues now and in the future.

LEO - Jul 23/Aug 23

Leo, your feelings of restlessness this week can benefit from a creative outlet. Engage in an activity that keeps your hands and your mind busy, such as a craft or a home project.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Virgo, minimize any negative energy this week. Strive to be a source of optimism when others are looking at the glass as half empty. It can work wonders.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Libra, after several days of working entirely off of adrenaline, you finally have some time to kick back and relax. This will help you recharge your internal battery.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Your motivation is very strong this week, Scorpio. You can accomplish much more than you ever expected in a short period of time. Pick your projects wisely.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

Sagittarius, you are unable to convey some feelings to others, but your body language will go a long way toward getting your message across. Remain conscious of your actions.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

One of your goals this week is to propel yourself further without pushing others too hard, Capricorn. You want to be successful but not at the expense of others.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Aquarius, focus on practical matters, such as your career goals, for the time being. Crucial decisions must be made and new relationships must be fostered.

PISCES - Feb 19/Mar 20

Pisces, trust your gut instincts on an issue that has been puzzling you this week. Your intuition might be your best asset.

Special activities created for Earth Day

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

The 44th anniversary of Earth Day will be celebrated in several ways throughout Volusia County.

April 18

•Vann Data will host an electronics recycling event from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday, April 18, at 1801 Dunn Ave, Daytona Beach.

Electronics contain a variety of harmful and, in some cases, even toxic substances that when discarded can pose risks to our health and the environment. Recycling the materials also reduces the need to mine or extract more of the natural resources used to make electronics.

Partnering with Vann Data is A-1 Assets, which will receive and process the electronics, they will ensure all sensitive data is cleared from any hard drives using DOD, HIPAA compliant and FBI certified software.

There is a $2 fee per CRT monitor due to the hazardous material involved in the disposal, all other equipment is free.

For more about A-1 Assets, visit a1assets.com.

All donations will benefit Stewart-Marchman-Act Behavioral Healthcare's WARM at Vince Carter Sanctuary in Bunnell.

For information, email janice@vanndata.com or call (386) 236-2701.

April 22

•The Baumgartner Co., Mainstreet Community Bank and A1 Assets will partner to Celebrate Earth Day with their First Computer and Electronics Recycling Event from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the northwest section of Woodland Plaza (New Hampshire and Woodland boulevards, just south of downtown DeLand).

Bring in old monitors, printers, scanners, laptops and other electronic devices to be properly recycled, in turn, improving the environment.

A1 Assets will ensure all sensitive data is cleared from any hard drives using a DOD, HIPAA compliant and FBI-certified software program. No more than a pick-up truck load will be accepted at the site. For larger quantities, contact A1 Assets directly to schedule a pick-up at your location. There is a $2 charge for each CRT monitor due to the hazardous disposal.

The partners will provide a free hot dog, chips and beverage for participants.

For more information, call (386) 734-7730.

For more information on recycling electronics, call (407) 339-7030 or visit A1Assets.com.

•LuLu's Oceanside Grill, 30 S. Atlantic Ave., Ormond Beach, will donate 10 percent of its sales to the Arbor Day Foundation.

April 24

The City of Ormond Beach will host its 22nd annual Picnic on the Plaza in celebration of Earth Day from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 22 S. Beach St.

More than one billion people in 190 countries celebrate Earth Day. Below are some of the booths/exhibits which will provide a wealth of information and some great giveaways.

•Shred Pros is offering free shredding services in front of City Hall near the flag pole. In order to serve everyone who wants to take advantage of this service, limit your shredding materials to 20 Letter Bankers' Boxes (1.0-1.2 cu.ft.) or 10 Legal Bankers' Boxes (2.0-2.4 cu.ft.) per visitor.

•Volusia Soil & Water Conservation District and the U.S. Department of Agriculture will have informational booths.

•Labrador Retriever Rescue of Florida will have dog biscuit giveaways, brochures and adoptable Labs.

•Five O' Clock Charley will perform live country music.

•Leisure Services will provide information about summer camp and other leisure programs.

•Planning Department will have useful information about energy conservation and emergency preparedness, and giveaways for children and adults. They will also have a cell phone collection box for old/unused working cell phones.

•Publix will have reusable bags, reusable bag key chains, and children's coloring pages.

•Finance Department will have a water meter demonstration, toilet dye packs and water conservation tips.

•Support Services will be demonstrating city apps, have applications available to citizens interested in volunteering, as well as giveaways.

•Halifax Humane Society will have literature about animal welfare, their programs and services. They will also have some of their furry friends with them.

•Ormond Beach Lions Club will have diabetes screening and information regarding diabetes awareness.

•Solar Fit (pool heating) will have handouts and giveaways.

•H.E.L.P. Animals will demonstrate oxygen fire rescue masks for pets and will have a variety of items to purchase along with giveaways.

•Volusia County Solid Waste will have a display of recycled materials.

•Wayne's Solar will have solar information as well as coupons.

•Volusia/Flagler Turtle Patrol will have turtle information, educational guides and activity papers for children.

•Garden Club of Ormond Beach will offer gardening advice and give away small flowering plants.

•Greg Lewis Enterprises will provide concessions.

breakfast burritos. The wine list includes mimosas, so customers can make it a really festive morning meal.

Lunch includes an appetizer list that throws in a caprese salad along with quesadillas, plain or with a choice of chicken or shrimp.

On a recent visit, I ordered one of the chef's specials, blackened fish with black beans and rice, which came with a dollop of fried plantains and a bed of salad.

Mr. Qesada also kindly provided a caprese salad appetizer, which was truly one of the best I've had in any restaurant in the area. It came with a combination of beautifully fresh red and yellow tomatoes, chunks of mozzarella and basil that had just been picked fresh off their own plants right in back of the kitchen. The dressing was light and refreshing, a perfect complement to the classic Italian dish.

Mahi-mahi hasn't been my favorite fish, but a taste of the Black Bean's blackened version made me revise that opinion. It was delicate, very fresh and well seasoned.

The fish is fresh, flown in from Costa Rica on a bed of ice and served as soon as possible. You can order it with the all-American fries and some Cuban bread, but it's a shame not to opt for the Cuban-style black beans and rice. There's nothing bland about their black beans, which are deliciously spicy and a perfect complement to the blackened fish. I was given a serving of the Cuban bread, which they get from Ybor City, also very, very fresh.

Tucked away in a small shopping strip on A1A in Daytona Beach Shores, just a few blocks north of Dunlawton Boulevard, the Black Bean Café is well worth a try for anyone looking for simple, delicious food in a simple setting. (There's a bit of a glimpse of an ocean view, from the front windows, too.)

Black Bean Café, 3218 S. Atlantic Ave., Daytona Beach Shores. Call (386) 256-3901.

ABOUT THE DEFENDING FREEDOM WARRIOR WEEKEND
The fine men and women defending our country's right to freedom need our support now. We need your help to make the 8th Annual Defending Freedom Warrior Weekend the best possible experience we can to provide for those soldiers who sacrifice so much to ensure our countries freedom. All proceeds collected go directly to local and regional wounded veterans organizations. Our goal is to continue to raise enough money each year to help provide our injured troops with the necessities they need to successfully transition back into civilian life. Over the past seven years, our event has raised approximately $250,000 in direct monetary support for our wounded soldiers. We ask that you reach inside yourself and help America's defenders by choosing a sponsorship level or donating your resources to our event.
We invite you to review the sponsorship packages and choose one that works for you or your organization. In exchange for your support, we strive to help our partners maximize their exposure over the course of three days of events and activities in DeLand and Daytona Beach. Lipton Cup enthralls sailors and beachgoers

Festivities abounded offshore in New Smyrna Beach this past weekend affording a great view of the competitive sailors participating in the Commemorative 86th Anniversary Smyrna Yacht Club Lipton Cup regatta.

By popular demand, the race course was set just south of Ponce Inlet for viewing by the public along the Flagler Avenue beach approach in front of regatta sponsor Tony & Joe's Patio.

Twenty-eight boats in three classes competed in the regatta. Boats were sailed out of host Smyrna Yacht Club, Halifax River Yacht Club and Halifax Sailing Association, North Florida Cruising Club, Port Canaveral Yacht Club, St. Augustine Yacht Club as well as non club-affiliated boat owners from Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Brevard and Volusia counties. Trophies went to:

Spinnaker Division

•First Place, Ghost, skippered by Tom Davis, NFCC

•Second Place, Obsession, skippered by Norm Church, HRYC

•Third Place, Siduri, skippered by Bubba Ball, SAYC

Non-spinnaker Division

•First Place, Perpetual Motion, skippered by Patrick Fischer-Carne, New Smyrna Beach

•Second Place, Scallywag, skippered by Robert Smith, NFCC

•Third Place, Blue Sky, skippered by Dana Hunter, SAYC

Cruising Division

•First Place, Copperhead, skippered by Todd Stebleton, HRYC

•Second Place, Xanadu, skippered by David Brangaccio, SYC

•Third Place, Kotchka, skippered by John Meehan, SAYC

The First Place winners in each Division will have their name inscribed on the base of the historic Lipton Cup Trophy.

Fishing is like dancing a jig; you have to get them moving

FISHING WITH DAN

DAN SMITH

By now you have listened to me talk about fishing with my favorite jig a lot, and maybe a bit too much. If that is true, then please forgive me, but as you may also know, I won't lie to you.

Truth is most of my fish come by way of the four-inch chartreuse shrimp tail I am always going on about. I usually attach that to a white one-quarter ounce lead head jig hook, especially if I am fishing near my home across from Tomoka State Park.

Now let's get into some of the finer points of making that jig work. Whenever I encounter you, the reader, the question most asked is what action do I give to my jig? That depends on the situation. Whenever I am fishing in a swift tidal flow, I don't give the bait much action at all. I let the tide do that. As I always try to mention, position yourself so you are casting into the current. Then allow the jig to wash along the bottom back toward you.

If a few casts like that produce nothing, then begin to flick the jig once in a while but ever so slightly. In calmer waters I will give the reel a turn or two and then lift the rod tip a foot or so.

Of course, the idea is always to try and make your bait look alive. It is our job to entice a mature, crafty fish to hit a hunk of plastic. Not an easy task. Another thing to remember is that after the initial splashdown of your cast, let the lure settle to the bottom and remain there for at least a count of four before you move it. The splash of your jig will cause a nearby fish to take notice and at times that inquisitive predator may be just sitting there studying your bait. After a suitable pause the first small flip may initiate a strike.

Now let's go back a step. Before you begin to cast, you must thread the soft plastic tail onto the hook correctly. I hope you know your jig moves through the water with the hook up. Your shrimp tail should be lying flat to emulate the swimming motion of a real shrimp as much as possible. If you place your plastic shrimp on the hook so the flat tail is vertical, you may catch a few fish but a proper presentation will increase your number of strikes.

As I said my preferred jig head is a quarter ounce in the Northern Halifax but in Mosquito Lagoon I will go to an eighth ounce or lighter in order to keep it out of the sea grass there. Another good method is to thread your jig tail onto a jay hook and add a small split shot about a foot up the line. This will allow the bait to sink slowly into the grass and give the fish more time to see it.

At times I get into schools of small fish that continuously hit short. When that happens, I will bite about a half-inch off the shrimp tail. Every jig fisherman should carry an array of colors and styles. Although I am hopelessly stuck in my ways, I know lots of anglers have good luck with minnow baits. The paddle tails are especially popular. As for colors I like pink, white, motor oil, chartreuse or silver. I am not much of a fan of two-tone jigs, but the new Irish Beer shrimp tails from Grandslam Baits have been pretty hot. That one is brown in front fading to chartreuse at the tail.

Grandslam provides a wide range of colors and make no mistake about it, color is important in any type of fishing. At times I find fish holding tight in a small area and after the initial success the bite falls off. When that happens I go to the complete opposite color to the one I first threw. Usually that will bring the bite back as strong as it was in the beginning.

Please don't ignore your hook and line when jig fishing. Carry a tool to keep your hook sharp and check it often. Check your line for nicks every few minutes. No matter how well you work your jig, a weakened line will guarantee failure. Most of all, a good jig fisherman must have confidence in the bait. That only happens from success so keep at it and soon your catch will have you dancing a — well you know.

Dan Smith has fished the waters of Volusia County for more than 40 years. Email questions and comments to fishwdan@att.net. His book, "I Swear the Snook Drowned," is available for $10.95 at (386) 441-7793.
