Repaving Dunlawton Avenue gets underway in September

By Kelli Jo Hull
For Hometown News

Port Orange travelers are in for traffic hassles on the city's primary thoroughfare when the state's Department of Transportation begins repaving Dunlawton Avenue.

The project, slated to begin in mid-September, will encompass the west end of Dunlawton from Nova Road to the Interstate 95 interchange. That section of Dunlawton has not been repaved, although it was widened to six lanes in 1994.

According to FDOT Public Information Specialist Jessica Keane, "The roadway is being resurfaced to remove deteriorated pavement, to restripe the roadway to add bicycle lanes and to improve pedestrian features along the corridor."

The road construction will be done at night, although sidewalk and work on issues outside of the lanes will be done during the day.

Lane closures will have the greatest impact on evening and early morning travel. The contractor may close a single lane between 7 p.m. and 7:30 a.m., and may close two lanes between 10 p.m. and 6:30 a.m., according to Ms. Keane.

Completion of the repaving is anticipated for spring of 2015. The DOT has no plans to repave any other parts of Dunlawton at this time, Ms. Keane said.

FDOT works with the city in the planning stages of these project types with regard to irrigation and possible median issues, Port Orange Assistant Director of Public Works Mike Silva said.

Aside from that, since Dunlawton is a state road, the project will be handled entirely by the state's contractor, P&S Paving.

Mr. Silva echoed concerns from area residents and business owners.

OWLs serious about writing

By Susan L. Wright
swright@hometownnewsol.com

The only note of frivolity during the biweekly meetings of the Ormond Writers group is the small stuffed owl placed near the head of the long conference table where they gather.

Otherwise the group might represent a corporate board meeting, or a college class with students who are quite a bit more senior than usual. The owl is the group's mascot or symbol — it's referred to as OWL, the acronym for the Ormond Writers League.

The owl wears a tiny mortarboard and round, scholarly glasses. The writers who show up in the meeting room in a back space off a hall in the Ormond Beach Regional Library on Thursday afternoons are much less formal, but also quite serious in a comfortably casual way.

Randy Barber/staff photographer
Author Veronica Hart of Ormond Beach leads Ormond Writers League at the Ormond Beach Public Library, Thursday, May 29th. Ms. Hart is an award-winning author. Anyone who enjoys writing can join the league every other Thursday from 1-3 p.m.

The meetings are presided over by Veronica "Ronnie" Helen Hart, the president of OWL, and she runs it like a benign, interested writing professor, calling on the next writer to read his or her work in turn, they go around the table in order and after each reading the others are called on in turn to offer their critique.

At a recent meeting, an artist read a poem about a drawing she'd done and afterwards the first comment was: "Again, very profound. One major change I would suggest is in the second line from the bottom, I'd remove the word only. I think it's more effective without."

Another adds, "The flow is great. I'm not really a poetry person, (which elicited gentle laughter around the table) but I thought it was very amusing." And so on around the room.

Dave Archard, who had a long career in radio, working as everything from announcer and DJ to executive, ad salesman, copywriter and production manager, already has written one book about his early career. Working on another book of memoirs, he said, "This is my kind of poetry because it rhymes," then goes on to suggest two phrases be deleted. Deletions that should strengthen the flow he thinks.

The poet is the exception — the others all read prose works, each is allowed to read just seven pages at each meeting and the critiques are brief and constructive — no one is out to demolish anyone else's work or dish out harsh words.

The readings that day include a section of a book that seems to be about a young man who gets involved with the mob and is full of Soprano-style dialogue, ("This is the mob, they don't tolerate mistakes"); the start of a book about a cowboy who picks up a middle-aged woman writer for a stay at a lodge or ranch in a remote Western state — a chapter that ends with a sudden kiss; and a description of a very young man's first day at work at a radio station in the 1950s, part of a memoir.

One writer is told his tenses aren't consistent — "it's confusing," but the storyline itself is praised.

As each writer reads his or her allotted seven pages,

Health department promotes National Breastfeeding Month

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

August is National Breastfeeding Awareness Month and Healthiest Weight Florida, in collaboration with the Florida Department of Health, WIC, Healthy Start, the Florida Child Care Food Program and the Bureau of Chronic Disease Prevention, is announcing its own August Breastfeeding Awareness Campaign.

The purpose of the campaign is to promote breastfeeding as a vital health activity as well as encourage breastfeeding friendly communities throughout Florida.

Infant feeding is one of the most important decisions a family can make. Research shows babies that receive only breast milk for the first six months of life are less likely to develop a wide range of chronic and acute diseases, including ear infections, diarrheal diseases, asthma, obesity and respiratory illnesses. They are also less likely to die from Sudden Infant Death Syndrome. Also, breastfeeding for nine months reduces a baby's odds of being overweight by 30 percent.

Mothers benefit from breastfeeding with a decreased risk for breast and ovarian cancers. The Florida Department of Health, as well as medical organizations, such as the World Health Organization and the American Academy of Pediatrics, strongly recommends babies exclusively breastfeed for about the first six months of life and continue to breastfeed for at least one to two years to achieve optimal health.

Based on 2013 data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, only 71.8 percent of women in Florida have ever tried breastfeeding compared to the national average of 76.5 percent. The Department of Health offers a variety of programs, materials and resources to encourage breastfeeding friendly environments throughout the sunshine state.

New fertilizer ordinance in effect

In response to environmental concerns, the Volusia County Council has adopted a summertime fertilizer ban and initiated other restrictions that will protect the county's waterways.

Ordinance 2014-06, which took effect July 27, applies to all homes and businesses in Volusia, except those in Deltona and DeBary, which have their own fertilizer ordinances. Gardens and compost are exempt.

The new ordinance includes these provisions:

•The application of fertilizers containing nitrogen or phosphorous is prohibited from June 1 through Sept. 30 of each year.

•Fertilizer may not be applied within 15 feet of water bodies.

•The application of fertilizers containing phosphorous is prohibited unless a deficiency is verified.

•Fertilizer containing nitrogen may be applied only between Oct. 1 and May 31 and must contain no less than 50 percent slow-release nitrogen.

The ordinance was passed in response to a growing environmental crisis in the state's waterways, particularly the Indian River Lagoon system, where algal blooms and animal deaths have raised concerns.

For more information, call (386) 822-5778 or visit volusia.org/fertilizer-ordinance.

One giant leap for Volusia County

LAND LINES

DAN SMITH

Forty-five years after the first moon landing, some of us may have forgotten (and some never knew) the huge part our area played in that momentous event.

Over time, some of the details have become blurred as memories fade. Back in 1961 General Electric Corp. sent six men to the Daytona Beach area to look for housing and office space for a very large contingent of workers that would come down from the home office in Syracuse, N.Y.

GE would be the company that would build the rocket, booster, command module and lunar lander for the Apollo project that promised to put men on the moon. The offices would be built on the north side of Volusia Avenue (now International Speedway Boulevard) across from the brand new super speedway and near the big Jai Alai Fronton. The housing would be scattered around the area but concentrated mostly in Ormond Beach.

For those of us who live on the North Peninsula, talk of GE houses is still fairly common, but very few are left that actually know the facts.

To do a column about it, I would need to find someone with a finite knowledge on the subject. I found that in Mr. Al Ferrari, who lives near the Oceanside Country Club on Ormond's beachside. I learned Al moved to the area in 1954 and, when the GE houses were built, was an officer with Daytona Beach Federal. That bank would handle financing for most of those homes.

As I talked with Mr. Ferrari I learned that my own concept of the GE homes was all wrong.

For years I had believed the rows of tiny, look-alike houses in Ormond-by-the-Sea were the company homes.

Al told me those were retirement homes built by developer Bob Strickland and others. The houses were two- bedroom, one-bath units that went up quickly and sold even faster. He remembered as many as 10 were under construction at one time side by side on small lots. Those places sold for around $9,500 back then. Mr. Ferrari assured me those were not the GE houses.

The families coming down from New York needed more room and usually built three- to four-bedroom, two-bath homes. Those stretched from around Neptune Avenue up to just south of the Publix shopping center. Al had arranged the financing for many of them. The homes sold in the $30,000 range and General Electric paid all closing costs for their employees.

The houses left behind in Syracuse were put up for sale and if they did not move in a reasonable time, the company would buy them. More than 100 houses were built on the North Peninsula, but there was also houses built in Tomoka Estates with others in Daytona Beach and Holly Hill.

Al told me the Apollo project had a huge impact on the local economy as new businesses were added to take care of their needs. He said when the New York people arrived, they thought local schools were inferior to the ones their kids attended in the north. GE carried a lot of weight and the County Council went to work to update many of the schools to please them.

Most of the intricacies of the Apollo program were worked out in our area and when the nation celebrated the success in 1969, Volusia County was a big part of it. When I first arrived here, I remember the GE employees all sported bumper stickers hailing their successful moon mission.

The Apollo program ended in 1972, but GE continued to operate its Daytona Beach plant until 1993 when Martin Marietta (now Lockheed Martin) bought it and moved the operations to Orlando. The sprawling Aerospace Park was eventually fully acquired by International Speedway Corp., which razed all of the buildings. ISC built an office tower there and is expected to start construction soon on a big retail, entertainment, office and residential complex.

The GE houses are still here and I would wager many of the people occupying them now are not aware of the history they hold.

Remember whenever America's biggest space accomplishment is mentioned, we here in Volusia County can take pride in the part our area played.

Sheriff promotes department veteran to major

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

With promotion comes added responsibility. Chico Mandizha got a full dose of both on Tuesday, Aug. 5, when Sheriff Ben Johnson promoted the 23-year veteran of the Sheriff's Office to the rank of major.

Major Mandizha, 46, becomes one of the Sheriff's Office's three majors, each commanding one of the agency's three operating divisions.

"You've earned this," Sheriff Johnson told Major Mandizha as he handed him his major's badge in front of a large crowd of family and co-workers at the Deputy Stephen Saboda Training Center in Daytona Beach. "You've worked hard for this and I'm very proud for you. Just know that it comes with a lot of responsibility."

Major Mandizha has risen up through the ranks since joining the Sheriff's Office in October 1991, earning promotion to sergeant in 2000, lieutenant in 2004 and captain in 2008.

His assignments have run the gamut, from patrol, motors and judicial services to communications and assistant district commander of the Sheriff's Office's Deltona operations. He has spent the last five years as the executive officer and second-in-command of the agency's Law Enforcement Services Division. Major Mandizha will command the Judicial Services Division, which includes court security, prisoner transport, central records and the civil section.

Among those on hand at Tuesday's promotion ceremony were Major Mandizha's wife and their four children.

Major Mandizha was born in Providence, R.I., but grew up in Kenya before returning to the United States after graduating from high school.

He earned a bachelor's degree in organizational management from Warner Southern College. Major Mandizha worked for the Daytona Beach Police Department for three years.

Tuesday's promotion was prompted by the impending retirement of Major Rocky Norris, the current Judicial Services Division commander, who will be stepping down Aug. 31 after a 28-year career with the Sheriff's Office.

Patriots among us

·Conclusion·

The past three weeks we have learned of Palm Coast retiree Giles McCoy's experience aboard, and after the sinking of, the USS Indianapolis. Here is the last from his interview with Judith Kent for "Experiencing War—Stories from the Veterans History Project."

"One morning Capt. McVay came into the hospital and said, 'McCoy, I see you are up and around. Are you feeling alright?' I said, 'Well, as good as I can, sir. What do you need?' He said, 'I need a jeep and a driver. Would you be my orderly?' I said, 'Sir, I would be happy to do that for you, anything to get me out of here.'

"One day, Capt. McVay said to me, 'You know what, McCoy? I think they are going to try and hook me for the loss of the ship.' I couldn't believe it. I said, 'I don't know how they can do that sir. Gosh, you are a survivor just like us.' Anyway, they court marshaled him. We all felt that it was such a terrible thing to do.

"In 1960 I got the [survivor] reunion going and Capt. McVay came to it. I asked him for permission try and get him exonerated. He refused me. He said, 'No, I was the commanding officer and I will take my punishment.' I said, 'Well sir, it is unjust.' He said, 'That's alright, that's the way the Navy works.' So he wouldn't give me permission. Then in 1964…I called him and said, 'Skipper, will you give me permission to try to get you exonerated?' He said, 'I can't go to the reunion because my wife is dying, but I am going to give you permission but it isn't going to do any good. Don't work too hard on it because the Navy won't back off.' I said, 'But you will allow me to do it?' He said, 'Yes, go ahead.' So I started and didn't get anywhere until that young boy up in Pensacola, FL, little Hunter Scott* got started. God love him! He called me and I told him how far I had gone and gave him a bunch of names of guys that I thought would talk to him because some of the guys wouldn't talk about it. Some of them even busted me for getting the reunions going. They thought that was wrong, bringing it back.

JK: They didn't want to revisit that.

"No, they didn't want to go back. A couple of them got pretty harsh in their letters. Boy, they really called me something! But anyhow, they got me upset enough that I contacted a psychiatrist over at Missouri University (because I went to school there) and told him what I was doing about getting the reunion started and was I wrong (because I didn't want to do anything that would hurt the guys). He said, 'No, that would be the best thing that ever happened to them. They need to talk about it. You go right on and do what you are doing.'

In 2000, a bunch of us went to Washington DC to appear before the Senate. We testified on behalf of Captain McVay. (He killed himself in 1968.) …That is sort of it. We got him exonerated and I was just overjoyed with that fact. I just wish he was alive to understand that we didn't give up on him, that we stayed with him. That is what I tried to get the Navy and all to understand, that combat people just don't forsake other combat people. We stay there and we fight for honor. That is what was violated with Captain McVay; his honor. It was up to us to fight to get it. That is what we did and I am proud that we did.

Thank you, Dr. McCoy, and ALL veterans, for your service to our great nation.

*Hunter Alan Scott (born June 9, 1985) lived in Pensacola, Florida. At age twelve, he became interested in the sinking of the USS Indianapolis after seeing it discussed in the film "Jaws." He created a National History Day project about the sinking, interviewing nearly 150 survivors (including Giles McCoy) and reviewing 800 documents. The young man concluded that the ship's Captain Charles Butler McVay III who had been blamed for the tragedy, was innocent.

As of 2012, Lieutenant Hunter Scott, USN, was a Naval Aviator based in San Diego, CA.

Close greyhound track

Mahatma Gandhi once said the greatest of a nation and its moral progress can be judged by now its animals are treated. It's time to close the greyhound track.

Don't trust pit bulls

What is wrong with parents of "well behaved" pit bulls when you read every day, or so, about these gentle, well behaved pit bulls killing their child, or someone else's child?

Parents should know by now, no matter how well behaved a Pit Bull is, they are not to be trusted. I love animals, especially dogs, but parents please beware.

Piles of debris atrocious

Edgewater services are just atrocious, especially tree limb services.

I know we had a storm over a week ago and there was lots of damage. I personally drove by those houses that got hit. They had lots of stuff laying around all over the place.

That got picked up, but all over Edgewater there are trash and limbs everywhere. Just go down Riverside Drive. The grass is getting killed underneath the piles. City of Edgewater you need to do your job and pick it up in a timely manner.

What is your child's knowledge?

If your child is between 8 and 20, ask them these questions to see if their level of knowledge is what is should be.

Which countries were the U.S. at war during the Second World War?

Who attacked us on Dec. 7, 1941?

Where was the attack and by which country was this attack carried out?

Was John Kennedy an American?

Who was John Kennedy?

Where did John Kennedy work last?

Who took over John Kennedy's job?

Where does money come from to fix a public road?

What does waving a white flag mean?

Go ahead and ask your child and incidentally do you as a parent know the answers to these questions.

Respect the state

I wish the people who live in my state would respect it. Every gas station is a garbage can. When you gas up, throw out the trash from your car instead of using the highway. When it is raining, turn your lights on.

Get with the program

For the lady who has lived here for the past three years and does not have Florida tags. That is illegal and if she gets caught she will get a fine, probably more than the tag fees.

If she has insurance in another state, she could be in trouble for that, too.

If she gets in an accident, she could lose her license entirely.

I think she needs to obey the law and get with it. I know it is expensive and I don't like it, but it's kind of the way it goes.

Barbecue benefit

Port Orange Elks Lodge No. 2723 hosted a barbecue picnic for the patients and staff of Emory Bennett Veterans Nursing Home. The Elks also donated $1,500 to help buy a whirlpool bath for the veterans and $600 for personal items. Bill Rocca, president of the Ice Cream Bar, donated ice cream for the picnic. ### In response to 'Don't Deny a pet'

I read the rant and at first I thought how horrible, but I don't think you are sharing the entire story. I don't know which shelter you went to and that really isn't important to me. I am wondering if you have left out some parts. Shelters want to find good loving homes for the animals they have.

I fully understand your desire to have a loving pet for a family member that is aging. Did you discuss with them what you would do if the pet adopter passed away before the animal? Did you assure the shelter the animal will continue to have a loving home? Yes, pets are a great part of people lives and especially when people get older and family members just don't want to deal with the elderly as much.

Did you ever consider that while you are looking out for your relative, maybe the shelter is looking out for the pet? I have read where some shelters don't want to do such an adoption because the affect it has on the animal.

You really should share more of this issue for anyone to be able to truly understand your dilemma. Some people who work in shelters see some pretty horrible things humans do to animals; they get their guard up, I can understand that. The public never gets to see what some animals look like when they first are brought into a shelter.

Some people want a discount on purchasing a pet from a shelter. Some want a buy one get one free deal. Some shelters are very careful who adopts their animals because they care that much. Maybe you could give us more of why you were turned down?

Push that cart back

I can't believe shopping carts in the parking lot. Shopping carts are about $140 a piece, I think. I can't believe people will park right next to a cart in the parking lot and not push it back to the store, but get a new one in the store. Please push them back in, it may save a little on groceries.

Don't drive illegally

A person in the rants said he has been driving around Florida for three years with an out-of-state tag. He has been driving around totally illegally. He should be ticketed and have to pay major fines.

Come back for cats

Dude in DeLand, you moved and left behind your nine cats. Please come get them. It would break my heart if I have to all animal control.

Dysfunctional council

I would like to commend Port Orange Vice Mayor Don Burnette, who is the only one who took a stand against a small group of haters who are constantly emailing and blogging negativity and false claims and making personal attacks against city employees.

Mr. Burnette has won future votes from my family, my friends and me, which is quite an extensive group. I cannot say the same for the other members of the City Council, who somewhat protect these individuals and allow this ridiculousness to continue for months.

I urge the citizens of Port Orange to go back and read the hateful blogs and emails from this group and vote for change. The city needs leaders who have a vision and care about its employees.

Watch out for former employees

In my opinion the citizens of Port Orange need to be careful when voting for former employees for the city council.

We have two now and don't need another one.

Wake up Port Orange and look where we are at and what's going on.

Thanks for caring

I live alone and I am 79. I live in New Smyrna Beach and I cannot thank the public works and the supervisor enough.

Thank you public works and thank you for caring.

Dirty schools don't help

In regard to dirty public schools in Volusia County, there is a whole lot more to the story.

Traditionally in the summer, the school did all the deep cleaning. They once had 480 custodians. Now there is a smaller staff. Aramark did not follow the agreement. They did not keep all the previous employees. They hired part-time employees.

The school board did this to save money. Where is all the money?

Five percent raises went to the superintendent and administrators on the backs of the jobs lost to privatization.

Citizens should inspect their schools. I hope enough pressure by citizens can return all the custodians who lost their jobs due to the greed of the Volusia County School Board and superintendent.

Dirty schools do not help students.

Letter

Appreciation for the care

This is a letter of gratitude to the pulmonary rehabilitation staff on the third floor of the 201 building of Halifax Health Medical Center.

In fall 2005 while running an errand on a very hot day, I found myself struggling to breathe as I returned to my car. This was, of course, my first manifestation of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. No, I wasn't smoking, had stopped more than 30 years ago.

My dear daughter immediately secured an appointment with beloved Dr. Stephen White, a pulmonary specialist. Following that, we attended what I will call breathing classes with Mr. Jerry Boggs, a respiratory therapist. We attended every one. We've all been to many meetings where we put on dark glasses and endured. Not so with Jerry. He was smiling, welcoming, with an encyclopedic knowledge of lung problems and, yes, he was very funny. No dark glasses made necessary.

His great presentation led me to join pulmonary rehab in the 201 building, a good decision. For many years now, I have continue to receive wonderful help there with Jerry, Sue Crane, registered nurses Sandy Tomasello and Laurent Dack and others.

I must mention Mr. Gary Meredith, manager of the wellness programs, a man who never stops making sure the program runs efficiently and all the patrons are being served in the very best manner. Last, but not least, our beloved Jerry has just been voted the Team Member of the Month in a field of 4,000 team members. Well deserved.

This letter may reach those in my situation who feel hopeless or may be approaching lung problems, but are totally unaware. This letter is to let them know that while C.O.P.D. may not be entirely reversed, it can be managed and even improved with professional help and regular exercise, especially in a wonderful place where there is friendship, caring and lots of laughter.

Improving economy creates lots of stuff

VOLUSIA BUSINESS
CECIL G. BRUMLEY

As the Volusia County economy keeps zooming along, there's lots of interesting stuff happening to keep an eye on.

The latest statistics show the convention and tourism industry is doing well with bed tax collections up 10.71 percent in June from June 2013. All three market areas were up as an improved world economy has tourists pouring into the area and diverse mixes of groups find the combination of the Ocean Center and the beach to their liking.

Retail sales also have been up sharply with an 8.3 percent increase in taxable sales in May from May 2013. The improving sales have helped spur an increase in the number of small businesses opening. The only downside we're seeing is the dollar stores apparently reached their peak and are pulling back some. Both Dollar General and Family Dollar are closing stores, mostly in shopping centers as they focus on their stand-alone stores. However, Family Dollar did close a fairly new stand-alone store at 274 W. Granada Blvd. in Ormond Beach, according to a city government report.

So here are a few things to keep an eye on.

While there's been no official word from Trader Joe's, Consolidated-Tomoka Land Co. is moving forward on building the distribution center at Dunn and Mason avenues along Interstate 95. The Daytona Beach-based real estate company has obtained permits for a construction trailer, a generator and a sign. If Trader Joe's does come and create 400 jobs, it would be a major boost to the area.

Dr. Wahba W. Wahba, the local sleep expert, has bought the former Dunn's building at 166 S. Beach St. in Daytona Beach. I didn't have a chance to check with the good doctor before I had to write this, but if he plans to do something with the building, which he bought under the name Meena House LLLP, it would finally fill a big void on South Beach Street and give the downtown area another shot in the arm.

Mellow Mushroom is coming to Journey's End in Port Orange. No, it's not some strange trip someone has been on; the popular pizza chain has filed plans to building in the development off Taylor Branch Road next to the Country Inn & Suites. Port Orange continues to get the first outlet in Volusia County of some popular chains. Pollo Tropical will open this fall, Gale Lemerand chose the city for his first Pie Five and the first Wawa will open near Dunlawton Avenue and Nova Road either late this year or early 2015. Daytona Beach continues to dominate as the city of choice with Southwest Volusia getting some as an extension of the Orlando market, but the booming population of Port Orange is hard to ignore.

One other commercial real estate deal to note: A California investor has bought the new O'Reilly Auto Parts property in Port Orange for $2.04 million dollars.

Lastly, a notice was filed that construction will begin for an additional building for Larsen Motorsports in the Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University Research Park.

Samsula Lodge entices National Society to Daytona Beach

Pioneered by 58 Slovenian family farmers in the early 1900s, today the town of Samsula is home to the only Florida chapter of the Slovene National Benefit Society.

The society, made up of 35,000 members nationwide, will conduct its 30th convention Aug. 17-19 at The Plaza Resort & Spa in Daytona Beach.

Convened every four years, this will be the first time the conference, which is celebrating its 110th anniversary, will be in Florida.

In addition to events at The Plaza, about 215 delegates and national board members will visit the Samsula Lodge for festivities.

About 200 room nights are anticipated with an estimated economic impact of $210,000. As host, the Lodge, in its 88th year with 546 members, will prepare a traditional Slovenian meal.

Don't wait, Professional Hearing Solutions can help you now

By J. M. Copeland
For Hometown News

At some degree nearly everyone will experience a loss of hearing as they grow older.

Richard Polhill Professional Hearing Solutions treats patients 18 and older, though most of the patients are 55 and older.

"We do hearing evaluations, consultations, fittings, follow up and battery replacement," Richard Polhill, board certified hearing installation specialist said.

According to Mr. Polhill statistics show most people wait about seven years after they know they have an issue to address it.

"Usually family members, a spouse, children say something about the person's hearing loss or something embarrassing happens to make a person face the possibility of a hearing loss," he said. "Addressing it earlier is better than later."

Sometimes the issue can be as easy as excess earwax, something that can be corrected in the office.

"Hearing loss causes vary," Mr. Polhill said. "Age is a big factor. Hearing loss can also be due to noise exposure including power tools and guns."

Even illnesses like diabetes and different medications can effect hearing quality.

"Arthritis pain medicines are intended to dull the nerves. That's how they relieve the pain, but they can also dull the ear nerves," Mr. Polhill said.

Many people may resist the idea of wearing a hearing aide because they remember the large plastic models worn by their parents and grandparents, the kind that would squeal with feedback.

"Cosmetics isn't a concern anymore," Mr. Polhill said. "A lot of people are wearing hearing aides that you don't know have them."

Feedback noises are not as common thanks to the sophisticated digital processors now being used in hearing aide models.

"Now we can connect the device directly to the telephone with blue tooth or the TV with a 24 gigabyte wireless auditory," Mr. Polhill said.

The typical appointment begins with an evaluation and an audiogram. The patient gets the opportunity to test a demo product to get a sense of what it is like right away.

"Explain how we hear and the audiogram does and then we explain their test results so it makes more sense to them," he said.

The object is to fit the right hearing aide to match the patient's lifestyle and budget.

"Some of the standard products can be fitted the same day if they are in stock, others other a couple of days," Mr. Polhill said. "Custom products, the type that fit inside the ear, require a mold of the ear which is sent to the factory. These can take 7-10 days."

Making sure the patient is properly fitted and adjusts to using the devices is all part of the custom services provided by the company.

"When they arrive for their appointment for fitting we make sure it is comfortable and tolerable. We show them how to insert them remove them and clean them," Mr. Polhill said. "One week later they return for a follow up to see if they need any adjustments or have issues that need to be addressed. Every time an adjustment is made a another follow up appointment is made."

"Hearing loss should be addressed. It's like everything else — use it or lose it. Wait too long and it won't be as effective." he said.

Hearing aides range from $2,000 to $7,000 a pair depending on the features.

"Mid to higher priced will connect to the phone and TV. There are different levels of technology for different lifestyles. If you are social you need something that is better in a noisy environment.

Richard Polhill

Mr. Polhill has been working in the hearing aide field since 1978 and in the area since 1995. On Oct. 5, he will celebrate five years at 4550 S. Clyde Morris Blvd., Port Orange.

For Hometown News

A respected School Resource Deputy and an investigator known for untangling complex fraud cases are among the Volusia County Sheriff's Office's Employees of the Second Quarter of 2014.

The Aug. 5 ceremony at the Deputy Stephen Saboda Training Center in Daytona Beach also featured an outstanding civilian, telecommunicator and volunteer.

Deputy of the quarter Mike Worlledge works at New Smyrna Beach High School and New Smyrna Beach Middle School and earned School Resource Deputy of the year for 2013-14. Deputy Worlledge was responsible for resolving several complicated investigations. One in particular resulted in the arrest of a coach for burglary and grand theft.

Investigator of the quarter Lance Lamee is well known for his jovial and positive attitude at the Sheriff's Office's District 3, which covers the Daytona Beach and Ormond Beach areas. Mr. Lamee has worked several embezzlement cases involving the theft of thousands of dollars. One such case involved months of detailed inspections of business records and financial documents and resulted in an arrest.

Employee of the quarter Kathy Burnsed is an administrative assistant at the Sheriff's Office's District 2, which covers areas around DeLand and the northwest part of the county. She was praised for going above and beyond the normal duties expected of her position. Ms. Burnsed creates photo lineups, does criminal history checks, cross references information and performs other analyst-type work that assists investigators and deputies.

Telecommunicator of the quarter Christine Watts earned the recognition for her calm and professional handling of a difficult disturbance incident. A domestic fight was happening in a vehicle traveling from Daytona Beach to DeLand. Her role in the team effort helped ensure that the incident ended safely for everyone involved.

Volunteer of the quarter Marge Clauser's main responsibility is that of a victim's compensation advocate. Her efforts have helped dozens of crime victims receive compensation checks from the state to cover losses due to property crimes.

the others follow along on their copies, scribbling corrections or suggestions on the pages.

The group has a website that lists the regular members with a brief biography and lists books or other works published and where. Many of the writers have self-published books, including Mr. Archard, whose first book, "Through Slanted Windows: A Journey Into Radio" was self-published. He's using the OWL meetings for help editing and revising the first draft of his new book as he goes along.

Ms. Hart reports she and just one other member have published books "the traditional way," by having their works produced by commercial publishers who provide advances and pay royalties (once the book makes enough money.) In fact, she has a book that just came out this month, "The Reluctant Daughters," published by Double-Edged Press. Ms. Hart, who also once ran a murder mystery theater in New York State and wrote an award winning musical, has also had other books published and has another due out next year.

She said she enjoys being part of OWL for "the camaraderie" — and because it helps her to improve her writing to read her books out loud.

The meetings are working sessions. No one supplies refreshments, there's no real social hour, it's all congenial, but also focused.

Anyone who is interested in writing and getting constructive feedback on their work is welcomed.

Victoria Page, who read the selection about the middle-aged writer visiting a ranch/hotel in the west, calls herself a "newbie," who has only been attending the meetings for a couple of months. She said she likes the group because "I'm always looking for a good editor" and at the meetings she's got several and gets useful feedback.

"There's some talented folks here. I'm enjoying some of the other writers' works," she said, adding she particularly values Ms. Hart's suggestions.

Ms. Hart said to join all anyone has to do is show up at 12:30 p.m. on the first or third Thursday of the month at the library (and fifth Thursdays in months that have one.) The sessions last until 3 p.m. or until everyone has a chance to read.

Some, like Ms. Hart and Mr. Archard, have become OWL veterans. They've both been regulars for years and have served as presidents of the group. Some others show up a few times and then simply stop. Ms. Hart said she believes that often happens with those who turn out to be really bad writers. Not that anyone says that to them, she insisted, but they somehow realize after a few meetings — and maybe a lot of suggestions for improvement,

"After a while, they get it," she said.

County Council signals intent to reduce fire tax rate

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

Although facing fiscal challenges in the budget that finances Volusia County Government's fire/emergency medical services, the County Council on Aug. 7 signaled its intent to reduce the tax rate shown on the notices of proposed taxes sent to rural property owners.

In a unanimous vote, the council decided to back down from a county fire tax rate of 3.9815 mills that's listed on the "TRIM" notices and will go with the 3.6315 rate County Manager Jim Dinneen recommended as part of the manager's proposed 2014-15 fiscal year budget. A tax rate of 3.6315 means a property owner would pay $3.63 per $1,000 of taxable property value, 35 cents per $1,000 less than the advertised TRIM rate. County government finances its fire services budget with a separate tax rate paid by unincorporated Volusia property owners.

Last month, the council voted to advertise the fire tax rate higher than the county manager had recommended to deal with a growing imbalance between revenue and expense in the county's fire fund.

However, council members said Aug. 7 the fire budget challenges will require in-depth analysis, considerable property owner input and more time for public awareness. Mr. Dinneen said he felt confident the county could meet service obligations for the next fiscal year with the tax rate he recommended, but stressed the fire budget issues must be addressed prior to the 2015-16 budget.

Final action on the tax rate will be during the council's budget hearings set for 6 p.m. Sept. 4 and 18 in the council's chambers on the second floor of the Thomas C. Kelly County Administration Center in DeLand.

Some residential buildings in Volusia going smoke-free

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

Smoke-free multi-unit housing, a growing trend throughout the country, has made its way to Volusia County.

"A home should be a safe place for everyone, especially for children, people with existing health conditions, and the elderly who are more vulnerable to the effects of secondhand smoke," said Dr. Bonnie J. Sorensen, director of the Florida Department of Health in Volusia County. "By making sure residential buildings are 100 percent smoke-free, property managers are protecting tenants from the dangers of toxic smoke and from the risk of deadly smoking-related fires."

For property managers and landlords, smoke-free policies can have economic benefits. More than 80 percent of Floridians are non-smokers. Many people who do smoke do not permit smoking in their homes. Given these numbers, many properties have very successfully marketed their smoke-free policy as an amenity, not a restriction. Smoke-free policies can save money by eliminating the need to repair or replace carpeting, floors, fixtures, countertops or appliances damaged by burns or nicotine stains.

Several residential properties in Volusia have implemented a 100 percent smoke-free policy. The growing list of properties in the area includes:

•Ashton Place Apartments,300 Miller Rd. in DeLand

•Whispering Oaks Apartments, 240 Whispering Oaks Court in Orange City

•Windsor Apartments, 524 S. Beach St. in Daytona Beach

•Lyn Gardens Apartments, 506 E. Wisconsin Ave. in DeLand

•Lyn Village Apartments, 201 S. Amelia Ave. in DeLand

•Amelia Place Apartments, 301 Arrow Wood Trail In DeLand

•Maley Apartments, 600 S. Beach St. in Daytona Beach

•Victoria Garden Apartments, 5609 Victoria Gardens Blvd in Port Orange

•Osprey Landing Apartments, 1756 S. Clyde Morris Blvd. in Port Orange

•AHEPA 410 Apartments, 575 N. Williamson Blvd. in Daytona Beach

•Casa San Pablo Apartments, 401 N. Ridgewood Ave in Daytona Beach

•Central Manor Apartments, 136 Fairview Ave. in Daytona Beach

Across the state, there are more than 500 smoke-free multi-unit housing properties and 73,000 smoke-free units.

"There's a fear of alienating resident smokers, but most communities that have taken the leap consider smoke-free housing an edge over the competition and have determined that there is a market for this product," according to Chip Tatum, the former government affairs director for the Florida Apartment Association.

China Grove is a Doobie Brothers tribute band from the Tampa Bay area, with a repertoire spanning the decades and styles of the California group. From the jammin' rock of "Long Train Runnin" to the jazzy "Takin' it to the Streets" to the Grammy-award winning pop of "What a Fool Believes," the group blazes through a set of memory-jarring classic hits and album cuts.

Week of 8-15-2014

ARIES - Mar 21/Apr 20

Aries, take the high road when you find yourself in the midst of a disagreement with a friend. It may be tempting to stick to your guns, but the disagreement is nothing too significant.

TAURUS - Apr 21/May 21

Much is going on, Taurus, and you have trouble zeroing in on a focal point. Unless you make a list of all you want to accomplish, you may get lost in the shuffle.

GEMINI - May 22/Jun 21

You sometimes change your moods on a whim, Gemini. But lately you have been more steadfast in your convictions. This behavior will continue for some time.

CANCER - Jun 22/Jul 22

Don't make any rash moves in the next few days, Cancer. For whatever reason your common sense meter is a little off. You may want to run ideas past a trusted friend for a while.

LEO - Jul 23/Aug 23

Leo, unless you try you will never be able to tell if something is within your capabilities. Do not be afraid to fail. It's better than putting in no effort at all.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Virgo, you're wearing your heart on your sleeve this week. Don't worry, as your willingness to share your emotions will endear you to others.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

There are only so many hours in the day, Libra. You need to pick and choose your activities accordingly. You likely will not be able to squeeze everything in.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Scorpio, if you want to get involved in something, then by all means give it your best shot. If it's something foreign to you, let others take the reigns until you're more comfortable.

About 50 private schools offer education in Volusia County

By Susan L. Wright
swright@hometownnewsol.com

There are a variety of reasons parents choose private schools for their children, including religion; a preference for small classes or small schools; a belief in a certain educational system not used in public schools, such as Montessori; or academic quality.

With a total of about 50 private schools, Volusia County has something for almost every parental wish — except boarding schools.

All of the private schools in the county are day schools.

According to the Private School Review website, the private schools in Volusia County serve 6,698 students. However, the site lists St. James Episcopal Day School, which closed in August 2013, so some of the information may not be up to date.

Surprisingly there is no central association of private schools in the county or the region, no Central Florida agency that supervises or links the schools.

Parents searching for the right school for their child will have to do their own research into the school and try to find comparisons with similar schools in the region or country to see how the school stacks up.

The first thing anyone will tell you when looking into private schools is to check their accreditation. Which sounds like an excellent idea, except there's a wide assortment of accrediting agencies. That leaves prospective parents having to evaluate the accrediting agencies as well as the schools.

The cost for private school can be as much as $10,000 per year ($10,200 for Father Lopez High School, for instance), so parents will want to know that money is being well spent.

Henry Fortier, the secretary for education and superintendent of Catholic schools for the Diocese of Orlando, who supervises Volusia County's six Catholic schools, suggested parents look for accrediting agencies with a good, long history and a solid reputation. The kind of reputation recognized by college admissions boards, for instance. All the schools in the diocese are accredited both with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, now named AdvanED, a non-denominational organization and the Florida Catholic Conference Accreditation Committee.

Accreditation is just "one piece of the puzzle," however, he said. He suggested parents start by checking the school's website and to check online for parent sites that offer reviews of different schools. Finally, parents should visit the school and insist on meeting with the principal or head administrator, including a tour of the school.

Their schools use national standardized tests, rather than the state testing used in Florida's public schools since the advent of the FCAT. He suggested parents check the school's record in how the children score on the standardized test — adding the diocesan schools have all tested 15-20 percent higher than the national average on the tests.

And, maybe the most important piece of this puzzle, he said is the visit to the school. Academics may be one key reason to opt for private schools, but another quality that makes them stand out from public schools is the close, family atmosphere. The largest private schools in Volusia County are still much smaller than any equivalent public school and parents often choose to pay the tuition to make sure their child doesn't get lost in the crowd.

Mark Tress, the superintendent of Warner Christian Academy in South Daytona, also recommended parents check out the accreditation of any school they're considering, and double checking the accrediting agency.

At Warner Christian, he said they use the accreditation process not just as a means of measuring the quality as a guide for parents, but also as a tool to help them in the process of continuing improvement.

Like the Catholic schools, they are connected to both a religious and a secular accrediting agency, in their case the Association of Christian Schools International and the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Going through the accreditation evaluation process, he said "is helpful in becoming a better school. We always seek to improve our programs. Through the accreditation process we learn what we can do to improve ourselves."

While Warner Christian is founded on Christian values, with an emphasis on morals and character, he said they welcome non-Christian students as well. He also said checking out the school personally to get a feel for the atmosphere and the way it seems to fit your family is just as important as assessing the academic achievement of the school.

While the internet is a valuable tool for researching the quality of a school, old-fashioned word of mouth can be just as important to getting a feel for the qualities that can't be summed up in statistics and grades.

Volusia County is home to a number of very small private schools, including a couple that feature the Montessori method that emphasizes a child's individual learning style and pace.

Mary Koenig, principal of the Casa Montessori School in DeLand, also recommended parents check the accreditation of the schools. Casa Montessori is accredited by the Association of Montessori Schools International, founded by the originator of the Montessori method, Maria Montessori.

There are other accrediting agencies that claim to accredit Montessori schools, but Ms. Koenig said the only one that adheres to the principals of the original is the international agency. An accredited Montessori school will have staff specifically trained in the Montessori method, over and above a bachelor's degree.

While the Montessori Method isn't for everybody, parents who believe in that kind of educational approach can be very committed. Ms. Koenig said they have students who travel from all over the county to DeLand because their parents are so determined to give their children a Montessori education.

Private schools cater to all kinds of specific interests. There are two Jewish schools in Ormond Beach, one more conservative than the other. There are schools that focus on helping children with special needs and with special interests.

CHILDHOOD VISION ISSUES AND COMPUTER VISION SYNDROME

by Weiling Chen, Licensed Optician, FL Board, ABO, NCLE certified

103184

Elite EyeCare, with 86 years of combined experience, has provided expert vision care to local residents since 2005.

As we get ready for school, Elite EyeCare recommends an eye screening for the following visual skills for school age children:

Eye Tracking, Eye Focusing, Eye Teaming (the ability to coordinate and use both eyes together), Eye-Hand Coordination and Visual Perception: the ability to organize images, letters, words, or idea and to allow brain to understand and interpret the meaning.

Visual skills are essential for children to learn in school. Often children do not complain to parents or teachers and will adapt to any problems by moving closer to the board, by avoiding reading or squinting. A child may pass the eye chart test given in a pediatrician's office, but possess different visual issues that will only be detected by a complete dilated eye exam.

Signs that may indicate that a child has vision issues: Frequent eye rubbing or blinking; Avoiding reading or other close-up activities, or holding material close to their face; Frequent headaches, especially after reading or close-up work, Covering One Eye; Tilting the head to one side or tilting the paper to read; An eye turning outwards or inwards; Losing place in line when reading; Difficulty remembering what he or she read; Seeing Double. If your child experiences any of these signs, please consider a comprehensive eye exam.

Computer Vision Syndrome (CVS) is another rapidly growing eye problem in our technologically advanced school and work environment. CVS is the result from prolonged computer use without blinking or resting the eyes. The common symptoms associated with CVS are eyestrain, headaches, blurred vision, dry eye, eye-fatigue, and neck and shoulder pain. With today's lifestyle, it is hard to avoid the use of electronics.

Here are some preventative care tips for CVS: 1. Proper lighting & seating 2.Computer screen should be 4-5 inches lower than your eye level 3. Blinking, Fish Oil, and Artificial Tears to keep the tear film healthy to prevent dry eyes 4.Remember 20-20-20: For every 20 minutes on tablets, phones, or computers, look up or out into the distance (20 feet) for 20 seconds, or close your eyes for 20 seconds. 5. Get an eye exam & get computer glasses with Blue UV filter

Teaching a kid to fish is worth a million bucks

FISHING WITH DAN

DAN SMITH

Each summer one of my most entertaining assignments is volunteering to supervise a fishing trip for the kids of the Casements Enviro Day Camp.

The antics of the young anglers always provide me with lots of good stories to pass on. This year when I arrived at the little pavilion over the water in Ormond's Fortunato Park, I found a serious angler already there. As it turned out the fellow was a loyal reader and recognized me right away from my mug shot on this page.

His name was Joe Kelly and he told me he is a brother of a friend of mine. As gently as I could, I told him the place would soon be invaded by a swarm of screaming kids between the ages of 6 and 10. He had come there hoping to spend a few quiet hours, but that was not going to happen. Joe decided to stick it out and even offered to help with the children. Good deal.

Soon enough, 30 eager anglers arrived under the careful supervision of the Casements Siobhan Daly and her staff. After squirming through a short speech from yours truly on safety and the release of any fish caught, the little ones were assigned a push button reel and rod. As it happens each year when the fishing begins, most of the children won't touch the dead shrimp we use for bait. That always changes later in the morning. When we had all of the lines baited and in the water instant frustration set in.

The kids always show up with a short attention span and a good measure of impatience to boot. On these days the fishing always begins slowly, but once the odor of 30 shrimp baits permeates the water things pick up.

First up was a small croaker that amazed the fishermen with its ability to "talk."

The kids loved to hear the grunts from the little fish. Next the mangrove snapper began to bite and their very visible teeth caused a lot of squeals from the crowd. Once the sailor's choice began to hit, almost all of the kids were able to get in on the catch. Good fun for all!

When the action was over and the children were eating their hot dog lunch in the park, I gave out the awards.

The largest fish caught was a nice catfish hauled up by Garret Lorfand of Orlando. Usually I give out a prize for "ugliest fish," but on this day all the fish were beautiful so I switched and gave Boston Milligan an award for his fat mango snapper. One kid I could not ignore was young Alex Mikheyenko who was top fisherman with nine caught.

Way to go Alex!

You know I am often asked why I give so much of my time to kids fishing. On this day the answer was never so obvious. Once the awards were given and the speeches made, the kids thanked me in chorus and I took my leave, happy but tired.

On my way to the truck I heard the sound of shuffling feet behind me. When I turned there stood a tiny little girl of maybe 3 feet in height. "May I help you?" I asked. Looking down at her shoes the child said "Mr. Dan I just wanted to thank you for teaching me to fish." I smiled and told her I was happy she had enjoyed it. "Tell your parents to take you again," I said. "I will and on Christmas I am going to ask for my present to be a rod and reel." Oh my! What is that worth to an old salt?

This child had been lost in the crowd that day. I never singled her out and don't really know if she actually caught a fish. I don't even know her name, but what she gave me I will never forget. Please take a kid fishing. The payoff can be huge.

From headgear to putter grips, there are products for everyone

GOLF
JAMES STAMMER

One of the best parts of my job is getting to test and review golf products.

Between the PGA Merchandise Show in January and now, I have been sent some interesting things to try out and report on. Some are great at doing what they say they can do. Others, not so much. Here are a few of the ones I really liked and want to tell you about.

The PutterWheel (putterwheel.com) is a training aid that immediately tells you of missed hits with your putter. Instead of "hitting" your putts, the wheel will teach you to "roll" putts. This makes for more consistent distance control and direction on putts.

EyeLoc Head Gear (eyeloc.com) is a trainer that shows you how much head movement you have on any shot or putting stroke. You wear the EyeLoc just as you would a pair of sunglasses, then adjust the dials to slide the lenses until you see one sharp vertical line at the ball. If your head moves at all, you will know it as the line moves. The same line also shows you how square your clubface is to your head and sight line.

While the EyeLoc works very well with putts, it also helps on full shots and chips. Your head will almost always move on full shots, but with this trainer you will know if you are moving too much in any direction.

If you are looking for a glove that can withstand the sweating we do from the humidified heat, maybe you should try the Hirzl Glove (hirzl.com).

Hirzl makes gloves, and only gloves. This dedication has led to the development of a glove that features the ultimate breathability and moisture management, tear strength, water repellency, form consistency and perspiration resistance.

I usually go through two or three gloves during a summer round. The Hirzl glove not only lasted all 18 holes, but looked ready to tackle more. The initial investment is more, but these gloves last much longer and stand up to hand washing, keeping them fresh throughout their life.

We all know when we hit a good shot. Our problem is knowing what is was that we did correctly. This is where Zepp Labs (zepp.com) latest sensor comes in handy.

The sensor is just over an inch square and less than one-half inch thick. It fits onto the back of your glove and connects wirelessly to a mobile device such as a smart phone, tablet or iPod. Each swing transmits data on speed, swing plane, tempo, backswing position and hip rotation, and then gives you a swing score. Your results are immediately displayed.

You can replay your swing right on your mobile device, check it against other swings in your history and compare it to a pro's swing. You also see your trends and stats. It's a great tool for showing you where your swing needs help and where you are right on.

Golfers love knowing the distance to the green. The Golf Buddy VS4 (gpsgolfbuddy.com) gives you the information you need stuffed into a small package.

The VS4 can be clipped onto your hat, your belt or your bag. There is even a silicone watchband that allows you to wear it on your wrist. With the click of a button you will hear the distance to the front, center and back of the green.

The unit is water resistant, comes preloaded with over 37,000 courses, automatically knows what hole you are on and can even measure your shot distances. Best of all, there are no fees involved. Your initial cost is your only cost.

The latest rage in grips is those oversize putter grips. One of the more unique and better grips that I have tried comes from Garsen Golf (garsengolf.com).

The G-Pro Max grip features a two-sided design that places your hands in a position where the palms face each other and the wrists are in a neutral position. This turns your elbows into your body and sets your shoulders back, relieving arm and shoulder tension. For me it has worked wonderfully and my stroke is more consistent and solid.

You'll be surprised what you can do from 'pull down' menus

COMPUTE THIS
SEAN MCCARTHY

Most of the time when I get calls for computer help, I can usually figure out how to fix things instinctively. Why? Well because I examine the contents of the different menus looking for the option that will most likely get me closer to my goal (while keeping in mind whatever it is I'm trying to do).

As an added bonus, just about every program out there that has pull down menus have "Help" listed as the last one to the right. So by the time I get to the last pull down menu, I can always open that program's help file and do a search on what I'm trying to do. The help file will then list all the topics that contain whatever words I searched and from there I can usually figure out how to take the next step.

Let's take a look at this in an example. Let's say I'm writing my column with a typical word processing program and I wanted to make the next line I type bolder and larger. Let's also say I only have a very basic understanding of computers. At this point I have two choices. I can stare at the screen with a blank expression and then call Bob (who's pretty good with computers) and ask him or, I can start looking around the screen for something that may help me reach my goal.

As I move my mouse (and my eyes) around the screen I notice a couple of things; first at the top of the screen, above where the words are being typed, there are (often) rows of pull down menus and buttons available. And, as I move my mouse slowly over the buttons, little boxes pop up telling me what each button does. When I click on the "File" option it opens (or "pulls down") and I can see all of the commands available that have to do with Filing. As I move my mouse to the right, the File pull down menu closes and the Edit menu opens displaying all of the commands available for editing. Next, the View pull down menu opens and then the Insert menu opens. As each menu opens I look at all the options available and for each one I ask myself "does this option look like it will help me change my text to bold and larger?" As each menu does not present an option, I go to the next one, eventually getting to the "Format" pull down menu.

When Format opens, I see it lists Bullets and numbering … Borders and shading … and what's this? Font?? Hmm …. Let me think … I'm trying to change the formatting of my text and text is made up of "fonts." Thinking I may be on the right track, I click the Fonts option and a screen opens that allows me to change the characteristics of the type. Bingo! Exactly what I am looking for! It says I am typing in Times New Roman, Regular, Size 12. I change the specs to Times New Roman, Bold, Size 14, click OK and voila! My typing is now larger and darker.

Ok, so, that rather tame demonstration is just an example of how intuitive computing works; at no time did I ever get the urge to go get a book or call tech support for help. I kept in mind what I was trying to do and, after seeing what options were available, discovered the answer on my own. Instinctively.

Now, I know what a lot of you are thinking; the things you have trouble doing are far more complex than just changing the characteristics of text, how can this possibly help me? The lesson was not in how to change the font size, the lesson was where to go for your answers.

Notice the pull down menus I looked at were all within the program I was using. You should look at the menus and options available within the program where you are stuck. Also notice each pull down menu is a category; all filing options are under "File" and we found our Font options under the "Format" pull down menu. That was no coincidence. I would have been surprised to find the Fonts option under the File pull down menu but starting at File and moving to the right covers all the bases and rapidly gets you familiar with all the menus available.
