Port Orange council votes to remove private dock

By Jacob Cameron
For Hometown News

The Port Orange City Council voted to remove a private dock at 3449 Shamrock Drive at the regular meeting Oct. 16.

The decision came after much uproar from neighbors in the area even though there were no objections when the permit for the dock was approved by the council in September 2017.

Concerns were raised by residents of Shamrock Drive, Coconut Row and Venetian Square in May about the dock across the street from the owner's home on a canal to the Halifax River. It left the council with three options: terminate the agreement and change the dock from private to public, terminate the agreement and build a wall or take no action.

While property records show the permit issued for the dock, they do not indicate that the owner has any riparian rights to the property across the street where the canal is located.

One resident, Mary Bello, said option one, making the dock public, was undesirable. "A public dock directly in our backyard will be a disaster for our property" she said.

Richard Patterson, who lives at 3452 Shamrock Drive and is directly impacted by the dock location, echoed many of the concerns of Ms. Bello. "The only option is to remove t h e dock."

Mr. Patterson added, "It sounds like the city recognizes that they made a mistake through this pro-

COA's Meals on Wheels program needs volunteers

By Diane M. Carey
dcarey@hometownnewsol.com

The Council on Aging officially opened their doors at a new Daytona Beach location Sept. 24 after the agency's former administrative offices were severely damaged from the wrath of Hurricane Irma.

However, rebuilding continues in other ways as volunteers for the agency's Meals on Wheels program are sorely needed.

The new office is at 420 Fentress Blvd.

The COA's meals program needs a lot of help, said Sarah Gurtis, president and CEO. "On any given day there are 70 routes."

The program also has to maintain the quality of the meals, Ms. Gurtis said. "We have to make sure the food maintains its heat from the first stop to the last stop. "

The COA also is challenged because it is adding Meals on Wheels clients.

"We are anticipating quite a boost in the Deland area after the first of the year," Ms. Gurtis said. "Some new private funding has come to us, targeting food in the Deland area. For that area specifically, we are definitely going to need more volunteers because we are going to have more money available to add more clients and decrease that waiting list. (But) we need it throughout the county."

Ms. Gurtis added no special skills are required other than the ability to "reach out and be a happy face and be that touch point for the day. You volunteer and you think you are giving, but in effect you are receiving as well."

Larry Lewis, 77, is a Port Orange resident who has been volunteering both in the COA respite center and for Meals on Wheels since 2007.

The truth about fake news

By Diane M. Carey
dcarey@hometownnewsol.com

These days you can't go anywhere without hearing the term "fake news."

Dr. Jelena Petrovic, a Stetson University professor, aimed to teach ways to determine the validity of news stories on a presentation Oct. 18 at the Port Orange Regional Library.

Dr. Petrovic teaches in Stetson's Department of Communication and Media Studies.

She stressed to know your news, equals knowing your sources, and presented some disturbing statistics that claim many high school students couldn't tell a real news source from a fake one.

See FAKE, page A2

Three months before the last presidential election, she gave examples of how Facebook, in particular, was rampant with fake posts.

"Social media is now one of the primary sources for people to get their news," Dr. Petrovic said. "It is really easy and quick to spread false information. There are people who are purposely writing fake information for various reasons."

She said fake news is written for money, attention, fun and provocation. Fake news can include hoaxes, propaganda and disinformation.

Newspapers also are guilty. Many may remember the banner headline in the presidential election of 1948 when the front page of the Chicago Daily Tribune proclaimed "Dewey Defeats Truman" when in reality Truman won.

Despite the number of documented examples of publishing false information, Dr. Petrovic stressed news media generally should be trusted.

"The press makes mistakes from time to time. Journalists, like all humans, make mistakes," the professor quoted from the Seman/Society of Professional Journalists. "The profession's standards aim to reduce mistakes and irresponsible behaviors, but they're bound to occur from time to time. The goals are for mistakes to be quickly corrected and people behaving irresponsibly to be held accountable for their actions. If the press is going to fulfill the mission of holding powerful people to the fire, it must also hold itself accountable."

Dr. Petrovic stressed how putting together a news story is a process generally with inherent checks and balances built in. She stated ethical conduct is key and using anonymous quotes in stories and off the record comments tend to make readers question their validity.

"You never use an anonymous quote unless it is absolutely necessary" she said. "There has to be a reason."

In terms of retractions, factors to consider are the timeliness of the correction or retraction, the timeliness of the news and size of the outlet and the transparency about ethical conduct and mistakes.

In the U.S., journalistic objectivity is the mantra, Dr. Petrovic said. "(However) many give news organizations a low rating for impartiality."

One audience member asked why corrections, unlike the original information, are not on front pages. Also, a lively discussion ensued on the topic of whether or not classified information should ever be released.

Several websites exist that the public can access to review information in print or on social media.

PolitiFact is a fact-checking website that rates the accuracy of claims by elected officials and others on its Truth-O-Meter. Snopes is a nonpartisan website run by professional researcher and writer David Mikkelson, who researches urban legends and other rumors. It is often the first to set the facts straight on wild fake news claims. FactCheck.org agreed to help identify and label viral fake news stories flagged by Facebook users.

"I know the kinds of needs that people have," said Mr. Lewis, a retired educator. "It's just a matter of deciding you want to be of service to people who you know want and need it. They often don't have the capabilities on their own. We all have to step up to the plate and help our neighbors.

"The council keeps the routes reasonable. They don't overextend you. I don't think anyone spends more than two hours (in a day)," he said. "I typically have 10 or 12 (clients). Some of them have pets and sometimes I take dog food to them. Some of it is just what you believe as far as your faith is concerned. You are supposed to be of service to other people. You do nice little things for people. It doesn't take a whole lot to keep people happy. It doesn't take a lot, but it means a lot to whoever you touch."

Meals on Wheels is responsible for delivering between 450 to 500 meals per day Monday to Friday. In some instances, frozen meals are provided for the weekend. There are strict eligibility guidelines, however, anyone can do private pay for $8.50 per day. All meals are nutritionally balanced.

Established in 1967, the non-profit Council on Aging of Volusia Inc. serves more than 2,000 of Volusia County's most vulnerable elderly residents each year with the mission of providing critical services that enable them to live safely, comfortably and with dignity in their own homes

Besides the nutritious meals, homebound seniors depend on Meals on Wheels volunteers for well-being checks and conversation. Meals on Wheels drivers are sometimes the only human contact local seniors get during the day.

Kitchen helpers and drivers are needed at locations across Volusia County. Volunteering for any COA program takes a couple of hours and a willingness of spirit. To volunteer, call (386) 253-4700, ext. 239, or ext. 225 to check your eligibility. For more information, visit coavolusia.org.

cess. And I just wanted to come up and voice my opinion."

Terry Rowe, the owner of the dock, said he had been saddled with the punishment for the city's mistake. "If the City of Port Orange feels that I should pay the penalty, if you feel like you made a mistake, am I the one to pay for that? Or should you bite the bullet."

Council members acknowledged they made a mistake approving the dock.

Vice Mayor Scott Stiltner said, "We need to fix it. And we need to fix it without any further impact on the residents."

City Manager Jake Johansson said he tried to negotiate a scenario with the residents and Mr. Rowe that would satisfy both parties, but it wasn't feasible.

He also said, "I've already apologized to the neighborhood for the city's lack of announcing that we were going to do it."

Councilman Chase Tramont originally stood with Mr. Rowe, but at the meeting he said, "I would rather be right than consistent."

The council voted 4-1 to remove the dock and reimburse Mr. Rowe. It is unknown, at this time, when the dock will be removed.

Local legends at Halloween

LAND LINES
DAN SMITH

Yes, the time for spooks, goblins and tales of the undead are upon us once more. Like a lot of you, I enjoy a good scary story and a few of my past late-October offerings have made an impression.

Some years back I wrote about a late-night fishing trip up to Matanzas Inlet where the Spanish massacred the French Huguenots in 1565. I was fishing from the beach just west of the bridge when a heavy fog rolled in. Although I was sure no one else was there I began to see shadowy figures moving about in the haze. When I called out, no one answered. I beat a hasty retreat vowing never to try late fishing in that area again. Several wrote to say that would be something they would also choose to skip.

One of my columns on All Hallow's Eve dealt with our area's connection to the big hotel in the Jack Nicholson movie "The Shining." That may seem a stretch, but allow me to explain.

Back in 1906 the famous twins F. E. and F. O. Stanley brought their sleek racer to Ormond's beach to attempt the world land speed record. The Stanleys were brilliant in many fields, but the results of that attempt would be their finest hour. The Rocket record of 127 miles per would not only be the first world's mark set by an American car on our beach, but it would also be the longest held lasting four years.

Soon after that, Freeland Stanley was told by his doctor to seek a higher elevation for health reasons. He and his wife left Massachusetts and settled in Estes Park, Colo., where he built a huge hotel high up in the Rockies. Many years later Stephen King would visit The Stanley Hotel and was inspired to write "The Shining," and the hotel would be used in the movie. These days the hotel is still running and visitors say Mr. Stanley and his wife can often be seen wandering the halls late at night.

Up around the Ormond Loop there is a long-running tale about the Ormond lights. Apparently this floating light appears mostly to teenagers who chose to park on the trails that run into the swamp north of town. All of the sightings seem to be pretty much the same with a ball of bright light approaching the amorous couple. At first they believe it to be a motorcycle but it moves toward them in total silence. When it does arrive it always goes over their own vehicle while illuminating them. This same phenomenon has been happening for years and many of the area's most prominent citizens have seen it.

Down at Oak Hill at the place where you turn off U. S. 1 to head for the back door of the space center there is a large wide spot where a Horne's restaurant (a Stuckey's kind of place) once stood. Those who drive that road in the dark have seen a young lady standing in that space wearing a Horne's waitress uniform. Some have stopped to ask if she needs help but can never find her once they have pulled over. There are even a few old-timers who say they recognize her. By the way that restaurant has been gone for close to 40 years.

Up at Bunnell there is a tale of a headless man that carries a lantern down the railroad tracks. He can only be seen on a certain moon and only at midnight but the word is he is fairly punctual. When the time is right, youngsters gather in a party-like atmosphere to watch him hunt for his head.

Well, those are but a few of the local legends. This year, get out and look for them--if you dare.

Dan Smith is on the board of directors for the Ormond Beach Historical Society and The Motor Racing Heritage Association and is the author of two books, "The World's Greatest Beach" and "I Swear the Snook Drowned." Email questions and comments to fishwdan@att.net or call (386) 441-7793.

Stroke rate for Hispanics nearly doubles

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

The death rate from stroke has nearly doubled in five years for Hispanics in Volusia County according to a special report released recently by the Florida Department of Health in Volusia County. While stroke deaths are on a steep rise, Hispanic death rates from heart disease and cancer are on the decline, even though both diseases remain the leading causes of death.

The four-page special report is at volusiahealth.com/stats.

The report contains mixed findings on the health of the county's Hispanics. For example, Volusia County Hispanics are reducing some key risk factors that can lead to death from heart disease and cancer. The analysis looked at chronic disease risk factors in 2013 and 2016 and found Volusia's Hispanics are reporting less heart disease, diabetes, obesity and cancer. Other risk factors are on the rise among this population including chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, a previous heart attack, pre-diabetes and depression.

The report compares the health of Volusia's Hispanics with Volusia County in general, the state, the U.S. and 13 of the Healthy People 2020 objectives and targets.

Additional findings in the report include:

The chronic kidney disease death rate for Hispanic residents was higher than the rates for the county and state.

In eight of the 13 objectives, Hispanic residents in Volusia had lower rates than the county, state, U.S., and the Healthy People 2020 target.

In 2017, Hispanic residents in Volusia County died from diabetes at a rate higher than the county, state, U.S., and the HP2020 target.

The stroke death rate for Hispanic residents was lower than Volusia's rate but higher than the stroke death rate for Florida, U.S. and HP2020 target.

In 2017, Hispanics comprised 13 percent of Volusia County's population according to the Florida Health Community Health Assessment Resource Tool Set.

The special report cites age-adjusted rates. It does not examine cause and effect relationships. The department prepares these types of health reports for use by community partners who serve various populations or address health risks. Reports also help to raise awareness among the general public.

Seats taken

To the folks who sat in seats one and two at Ormond Beach Performing Arts Center Sunday Oct. 14, next time please check your tickets for your seat numbers before you sit down.

My handicapped daughter and I were greatly inconvenienced by your actions. Although the ushers tried to create space in other sections, I did not have a chair until after the intermission. The joy of a relaxed, pleasant and rare outing for us was diminished.

Thanks to Producer Aggie Murphy who was distressed by our situation and immediately refunded our money. Arts center, we will be back, but will insist on our reserved seats.

Rolling in too much dough

The city manager and the city attorney get a12.9 percent and a 14 percent salary increase after a unanimous vote by the Ormond Beach City Commission? Are you kidding ?

How about putting this vote to the people? Most people won't get that much of a raise over a lifetime of working ... the average raise expected for 2019 is 3.1 percent for the average working people … well the people can vote on this ... vote out 100 percent of the city commission.

Something to rave and rant about

My wife and I drove onto the beach the other day and the attendant gave us the standard speech -- one window down, 10 mph, no texting while driving and what I think is a fairly new directive, take your trash with you.

The rave ? That the attendants have added this addendum to the directives. Bravo and keep it up beach attendants.

The rant? Well, when I thanked an attendant for reminding people to take their trash. The attendant told me he was insulted he had to remind people the beach is a beach and not a trash pail, and I wholeheartedly agree. What is wrong with society that in this day and age of toxins and pollution and garbage everywhere people need to be reminded to clean up after themselves?

In response to: 'Why not Edgewater?'

I do not understand why anyone would want any branch of government to be less responsive.

Why, in the time of an emergency, accident or crisis would you want to add another level or agency of detached people to your problems? Why would anyone want to trade the Edgewater Police Department, which is mostly Edgewater residents that you see patrolling (and have a visible presence in our community every day) for someone who may live in Astor, Deltona or Holly Hill?

These fine officers would probably also be responsible for the citizens of Oak Hill while your emergency is in progress. Someone will have to be second. Would you be OK with that if you were being assaulted? If a clean bill were presented to the citizens of Edgewater for a new police facility, even if it included a reasonable tax increase, I would support it, even if there were some extra bells and whistles.

The Edgewater Police Department does an excellent job for its citizens, even if you think it would be cheaper, my belief is to support our "local police."

In response to: 'Coyote Relocation'

It's shocking to think anyone complains about cats not being seen outdoors when responsible pet owners keep their cats indoors.

Roaming cats are not only at risk of being killed by coyotes, but they fall prey to foxes, birds of prey, other cats, dogs, cars and, yes, people. Also, roaming cats are a nuisance due to their bathroom habits, midnight fights, and their contribution to the feral cat population if they are not fixed.

The writer asks how long it has been since we have seen rabbits? Well, a long time. Because roaming cats prey on rabbits as well as 3.7 billion birds each year in our country. If anyone is concerned about coyotes or any other wildlife that seems to be "intruding" on our space (when it has been the other way around), I would suggest that you deal with local government, which is approving the clear-cutting of the habitat of countless wildlife species in this area, forcing animals into our streets and yards.

Relocation of wildlife does not work. So, if you're concerned about a coyote or any other animal hurting or killing your cat, and if you are concerned about rabbits and birds, please keep your cats indoors. Thank you.

In response to: 'Coyote Relocation'

The reason there is a coyote "problem" in the first place is because of all the unfettered growth/building in the county.

The coyotes are being driven from their natural habitat to places where they normally would not go. It's not their fault, they have already been relocated, just not in the way you want.

"Outdoor" cats are a blight on the environment. They kill birds, squirrels, lizards, etc. Cats belong inside. Allowing them to roam freely outside subjects them to disease, mauled by other cats or other wild animals, being hit by cars, etc. I for one am sick of other peoples "outdoor" cats using my yard for their litter box, laying in wait to hunt the birds and squirrels that I feed and water. It might also interest you to know that municipal leash laws apply to cats as well as dogs. I am sure if there were colonies of "outside" dogs you would be singing a differ tune.

If you don't want your cat eaten by a coyote, keep it inside where it belongs. With any kind of luck, the coyotes will eradicate the feral cat problem.

The beat goes on . . .

Like Dan Smith, I'm among "the first rock 'n' roll generation."

But unlike him, I'm diverse in my musical tastes. Whether classical, swing, jazz, ragtime, boogie-woogie, big band, rhythm and blues, gospel, pop, country, doo-wop, folk, Motown, show tunes, disco, metal, punk, grunge,hip-hop, rap, and yes, also rock, there's at least something I've found to enjoy about each and all musical genres.

Rather than restricting it to any one particular time or type, the quality is what really counts. Despite individual preferences, all good music is always good.

Quicker inspections needed

Like many of my neighbors, I've just had my roof replaced after hurricane damage.

The long-time local roofer arranged well ahead of time for the stripped roof to be inspected at 8 a.m. on Monday. The entire crew sat around until 11:58 a.m. waiting for the inspector. The city employee pulled up, stated he was too lazy to put up his own ladder, then climbed the roofers' ladder just far enough for his eyes to crest the eaves. He climbed right back down, scribbled his initials on the posted permit and left in his truck at 12:03 p.m.

No wonder it costs so much more to replace a roof in Ormond Beach than it does in other parts of Volusia County. According to my roofer, it is quite common to have an entire crew waiting on the inspector for half a day.

If the five person staff in Ormond Beach were not so busy perpetrating entrapment schemes on law abiding citizens, maybe they'd have time to get inspections done in a reasonable time frame.

In response to: 'Men need help? Text W-I-M-P'

Dan Smith, get your terminology correct.

You advance the false narrative used by the anti-gun left by describing a gun being used as an "automatic." The term is "semiautomatic."

Automatic is a machine gun that fires all rounds by holding the trigger down and is used in the military. A semiautomatic requires one trigger pull per round. Semiautomatic describes the much maligned AR15, other rifles used in hunting, as well as revolvers and pistols.

Good place, bad access

I will start with the Rave.

I am so happy that there is a fantastic new game room in town. I took my grandchildren recently and they enjoyed it very much.

However, here comes the rant. All of the handicapped parking spaces are near a door in the back, which means walking all the way around the building. I hope there might be some way of allowing access through the door that is right there.

In response to: 'Why not Edgewater?'

I agree with why not in Edgewater.

My water bill just went up $50. If having the sheriff's office patrol would save money, then the city commission should look into it.

In response to: 'Why not Edgewater?'

I think it would be good for the Sheriff's Office to patrol. Maybe Edgewater could move past being the traffic ticket capital of Volusia County.

I have asked friends to meet me in Edgewater only to be rebuffed. Maybe we could have a clean slate.

Mister, can you spare a worker?

VOLUSIA BUSINESS
CECIL G. BRUMLEY

We've reached the crisis point in employment.

No, not the one where you can't find a job, it's the one where employers can't find workers.

The latest state estimates show Volusia County's unemployment rate was 3.1 percent in September, down from 3.8 percent in August and 4.1 percent in September. 2017. Less than 8,000 workers were listed as unemployed out of a workforce of 254,660.

Obviously there are still people looking for a job, but as economists see it, we're at full employment. So, when you interview for a job, you can ask for more money and perks, and you may just get them. The old 25 percent employee discount may become a relic of the past as employers seek seasonal workers for the holidays.

Of course, that means we're going to run into some inflation and customer service will drop off some. But there is one silver lining. Snowbirds may decide their winter home needs some sprucing up and they'll take one of those seasonal jobs to pay for home improvements.

In the past, you could count on this area attracting people looking for work from areas that aren't enjoying as a good an economy, but don't count on it. Having just returned from a vacation road trip to Savannah, Ga., and Asheville, N.C., a couple of places where the hustle and bustle was on hyper-speed, I can tell you there are a lot of other places that are desperately looking for workers.

So, what can employers do? It looks like we're going to be using a lot more self-checkout lines and other efforts of efficiency. In other words, if you need service, you may have to do it yourself.

While I know why JetBlue is pulling out of Daytona Beach as it tries to make a profit system-wide, it's still kind of a head scratcher when you look at how passenger traffic is growing at Daytona Beach International Airport. Traffic increased 21.3 percent in September from September 2017 with 57,355 passengers flying in or out of the county-operated airport, compared to 47,272 passengers last September. Still, I guess it isn't enough. We need to get to 100,000 passengers a month to really some interest from air carriers.

Despite the low unemployment, it's still full speed ahead for new restaurants. Ford's Garage, a restaurant chain licensed by the automaker, is planning a location at Outlet and Cornerstone boulevards in Daytona Beach. It could be the Tampa-based chain's 13th location. Also, build out is underway for the Miami Grill at OneDaytona. Maybe the increased enrollment at area colleges will mean there are more students that need part-time jobs.

Managing Editor Cecil G. Brumley has been tracking business and the economy in Volusia County for more than 21 years. Contact him at cbrumley@hometownnewsol.com (no hyphen) or follow him on Twitter @cecilbrumley.

Academy Sports and Outdoors now open

By Diane M. Carey
dcarey@hometownnewsol.com

Ulta Beauty, Home Centrix, Bealls Outlet, Blaze Pizza, Culver's and Arby's are opening soon.

The retail center is directly across from Tangers Outlet mall at 1401 Cornerstone Blvd. in Daytona Beach. Tomoka Town Center is bordered on the east side by Williamson Boulevard and stretches from LPGA Boulevard on the north to Mason Avenue on the south.

The Academy Sports and Outdoors chain is based in Texas and has stores across the country. Daytona Beach, which has 63,000 square feet of space, is store No. 256. The chain already has eight other Florida locations, including Jacksonville, Kissimmee, Lake Mary and Orlando.

Elizabeth Carson, who has been with the company eight years, is the director of the new store at 1511 Cornerstone Blvd. in Daytona Beach, which will celebrate a grand opening Oct. 27-28. The soft opening was October 22.

"I opened up the Lake Mary store as store director and now I am here in Daytona," Ms. Carson said. "We are committed to offering the best brands and products at a low price. We are known for our best price, our customer service."

The company slogan is "We're all about more sports and outdoors for all, for less."

Ms. Carson added, "We go from athletic wear, active wear, fishing equipment to kayaks, canoes, jon boats, hiking shoes, summer fun, stuff for home, patio furniture, pool, fitness equipment, golf, tennis, outdoor game and toys, youth apparel. We have a nice sporting side of the store for the outdoor enthusiast. You name it, we have it." The store also carries archery equipment and has a firearms department."

Ms. Carson said, "I am excited we are opening our first store in Daytona Beach. I think it will be a great fit. I think we are going to be successful and I just can't wait to share our business with our future customers. We are here for the community. We are hoping it is a success and we will be their shopping destination."

Randy Barber/staff photographer

Academy Sport & Outdoors is all set to open it's doors in Daytona Beach.

The grand opening will include spin and win prizes, such as a Pelican Argo kayak, a Masterbuilt MES 140S digital electric smoker, a YETI Hopper Flip 8 and Academy gift cards. There will be free T-shirts for the first 250 customers. Between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., children can fish in a large fish tank. Academy team members will be on hand to interact with the public.

Florida Insider Fishing Report hosts Brie Gabrielle and Dave Ferrell also will be on hand along with fishing captain Tommy Derringer. On Sunday, Oct. 28, Brisket U at the store will feature barbecue tips and free samples.

Car Buying Countdown, Part I

PLAN STRONGER
DAVID D. HOLLAND

During the filming of the sixth season of PlanStrongerTV, an audience member asked me, "Do you have any car buying tips?"

I answered, "Yes, I do!" I love cars and I've definitely purchased my fair share of new, and used, vehicles (one of my long-time employees teased me that I've bought a car for every year she's worked for my firm . . . and that's 12 years!). My family also thinks I'm car-crazy, but they've given me "a pass," because I've promised not to buy a motorcycle.

These 25 tips are based on my visits to a wide variety of automobile dealerships and my personal experiences with automotive salespeople and managers. So, ladies and gentlemen, start your engines!

No. 25 -- I've dealt with some good dealerships and salespeople over the last three decades. Some of them are my clients! When it comes to the car-buying transaction, though, keep in mind the dealerships have an enormous advantage. They know (and you don't) the lowest price they'll take for the car you want and the highest price they'll pay for your trade-in vehicle.

No. 24 -- The car dealership is not going to lose money when selling you a car (even if they say otherwise or plead poverty). You may be told the dealership is only making $1,200, for example, on a trim-line that has very few options, or the lower, internet price represents no profit to the dealer. Baloney! Concern yourself with what you are willing to pay, not what the dealer will make on the sales transaction; their profit (or lack thereof) is not your responsibility!

No. 23 -- None of the following are relevant to your decision-making: MSRP, "factory" invoice, holiday and sales events, and "pretend" end-of-the-month deadlines.

No. 22 -- You might despise "dealer fees," but just accept the fact they are part of the price of the vehicle; treat them as such. They aren't the only way the dealership makes money on the sale. Another way is through "holdbacks" from the manufacturer. A percentage of the vehicle's invoice or MSRP (the exact calculation can vary amongst manufacturers) is usually paid to the dealership when a new car is sold. They also make money on volume and by reaching certain sales goals.

No. 21 -- Some salespeople will try to wear you down by drawing out the car-buying process. The salespeople may have to be at the dealership all day, but you don't! Place a value on your time and set a limit (I give them one hour). Tell them if the deal's not done within the allotted time, you'll be out the door. And stick to it.

This is just the start! Come back next time for more tips and a personal car-buying story. With a little knowledge, and persistence, you could be driving away with a far better deal on your next new or used vehicle!

Look for some snook at Tomoka State Park

FISHING WITH DAN
DAN SMITH

As I launched The Green Peanut into the Halifax, my fishing prospects seemed dim. The wind that had been kicked up by Hurricane Michael was still swirling and I knew I was pushing it.

Actually my main goal was to see if the storm had moved any of the polluted water that had been trapped there for the past nine months out to sea. As daylight came I could tell that, indeed, the water quality had improved some. The tide was high and just beginning to run out, and at the old engine block I began to cast.

On about my fourth throw, a fat, 18-inch spotted sea trout took my chartreuse jig. Not a bad start, but the wind and current were making things tough. After another half hour I did manage another 16-inch trout, but water was coming into the boat.

I paddled across the wide bay to enter Gary's Inlet. The canal on the eastern edge of Tomoka State Park had never been a great fishing spot but on occasion would yield a red or black drum. Right then a wind break was more important.

After paddling against the current for about a quarter mile I had a hit from something very strong. Wen I pulled back hard a 25-inch snook broke water and the fight was on. It was a good battle until the line sider took me into the brush and broke my 10-pound mono on the barnacles. Good fun and a welcome surprise.

Another 100 feet north and I was on with a larger snook. This time I was determined to land it and immediately moved the boat into the center of the creek. Okay now I had room to work. The big fish and I went at it for at least 10 minutes and then it was gone. When I reeled my line up so was my jig, but my palomar knot was still intact.

Evidently the eye of the jig had not been properly crimped down at the factory and I had lost a great fish through no fault of my own. I had that happen only once before. Quite a few years back Capt. Leo Hiles and I were fishing for gator trout on the flats of Mosquito Lagoon when I lost a good one in that same manor.

After that I began to inspect my jigs very carefully but after years of not finding any problems I had become complacent. Now it had happened once more, dang it!

Luckily as soon as I got my bait back into the water I had another big snook. I tell you they were eating my jigs the way that Asian guy goes at the Coney Island hotdogs. This time I successfully landed a nice 29-inch fish.

Drifting south, I soon had a 20-inch sea trout and then another 18 incher. My oh my--what fun! On a day that I figured was to be a fat zero I had hooked three big snook and landed five trout.

You may have guessed I had to return the very next morning. NowI know that fishing is all about the timing but I just couldn't resist. I headed back to the snook hole filled with anticipation. Nothing there. Well, at least nothing feeding. The wind had calmed so I was able to put in some time and did get three trout and one mangrove snapper. Nothing spectacular but all good pan fish.

Ladies and gents right now is prime snook time. Fish them in the creeks where you find swift water and in the Tomoka River. With a bit of luck you will enjoy the same fun I had.

Is the U.S. food supply safe?

CHEF COSTA'S COOKING CORNER
COSTA MAGOULAS

Bird flu, botulism, e-Col i, salmonella, food terrorists … what's happening to my America?

Are we heading for a major food poisoning outbreak by eating food? Is Doom's Day near? Well take a deep breath, and listen very carefully to what I 'm about to say. NO, NO, NO and NO.

I would like to share a trip I made recently to prove my point. My wife and I were on a trout fishing trip in Clarksville, Ga., staying with some friends. While I was there, I cooked for the family and some friends one night. During the evening, one of the guests came to me and asked if I would consider taking a tour of his food plant, which was nearby and possibly give him some culinary ideas. I told him I would be happy to. I later found out they had done a security and background check on me before I was asked to tour the plant.

The facility is closed to the public due to strict security. My friend had set this all up to surprise me beforehand, knowing I would like to tour the plant. The company was the Fieldale Farms Corp., the largest producer of cut chicken in the world. The packs of cut up chicken that you see in Publix and Winn-Dixie are just a few of their products.

The tour began with a brief introduction by the CEO. I was then given a personal security detail to take me through the plant. We entered the clean room and given a smock, rubber bootees up to the knee and a hospital hair covering. She used a remote control device to open a door to the wash room as we walked in a disinfectant form sprayed across the floor. We walked through this suds to the sinks, which were foot activated. She watched as I washed my hands for one minute with antiseptic soap and then I rinsed my hands with an antiseptic solution. I was given sleeve covers, which went from my wrist to elbow and then gloves to overlap the wrist.

She activated the exit door, and we entered a long corridor first walking through another antiseptic foam spray. This process would be repeated several times as we entered each department. Nowhere could you smell poultry. It is the cleanest facility I have ever seen.

They process chicken from eggs to fried chicken tenders. All chicks are sprayed with an antibacterial growth agent. The feeding sheds are large to prevent overcrowding and stress on the chickens, resulting in a bigger and tender product. The Human Society of America has awarded them a Best Practice Award the last three years. All employees are required to go through the same procedures I had followed. All poultry is X-rayed and run through a metal detector before packaging.

The cutting tool is a high speed water jet, which slices like a knife and can be programmed for any size or shape. Human hands never touch the product and it moved from one area to another by pneumatic plastic tubes and conveyor belts to box. At every stage the product is tested for temperature and bacteria count.

This company is an example of what is happening in America's beef, poultry, and pork companies. Across the country, food manufactures are initiating these procedures. Is our food safe?

For those naysayers who state food was safer when I was young or back in the good old days, well the good old days weren't so good. In the early 1900s, people lived to the average ripe old age of 50. Hot dogs we full of mystery meat. Today we have truth in labeling and sanitation policies that are the envy of the world. Is it perfect? No, but it is better than in any time of our history. Speaking of chicken … try this recipe.

Roasted Chicken

Ingredients

8 pieces of cut chicken with bone; mix it up dark and white

¾ cups melted butter

1 tablespoon olive oil

2 teaspoons oregano leaves

2 cloves of fresh garlic cleaned and minced small

2 cups chicken stock

The juice from two fresh lemons

2 baking potatoes cut lengthwise cut in four pieces each

1 cup red onion sliced

1 cup celery, cut in 1 inch pieces

1 cup carrots, cut in 1 inch pieces

Directions

Place celery, onion and carrot on bottom of a shallow roasting pan. Pour chicken stock over vegetables. In a bowl, coat all chicken parts and potatoes with the olive oil and butter mixture, place chicken parts and potatoes in shallow roasting pan with vegetables. Season with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Sprinkle garlic and oregano over all chicken. Cook at 350 degrees for 30-45 minutes until chicken is golden brown and potatoes are soft.

"Funny, You Don't Look Like a Grandmother, will open Oct 26 at Daytona Playhouse, 100 Jessamine Blvd. Shown are grandpa (Peter Gould) with grannies (Aimee Ariel, Robin Bassett, Michelle Malinda).

'Funny, you don't look like a grandmother'

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

These ladies are up off their rockers and ready to sing the truth about the perils and pleasures of being a grandmother.

"Funny, You Don't Look Like a Grandmother,"(book and lyrics by Lois Wyse and Sheilah Rae, music by Robert Waldman) is warming up the stage at the Daytona Playhouse opening Oct 26 at 100 Jessamine Blvd. Directed by Tom Hansen, with musical director Melissa Cargile and choreographer Ashley King, this series of no-holds-barred skits and songs is sure to tickle the memories of each generation in the family.

Today's grannies (Aimee Ariel, Robin Bassett, Michelle Malinda) are on the go, with so much to do. Some still bring home the bacon and manage the household. Plastic in hand, they take command of the best sales in town: a leather jacket for their favorite little man and a tutu for that special little angel. Dear old hubby still needs attention, one who's passed away needs mourned. And the grandma who got traded in for a newer model? She's moving on! Karate classes, computer classes, dancing lessons.! They're never available to babysit on short notice. Spandex and black exercise ensembles are a must. Downsizing to a condo can bring on the blues. In-laws become outlaws. Families are scattered across the globe...an au pair, really.

Grandpa (Peter Gould) and children (Chris and Monica Sleister) get in a word or two, too! Nonny or Bubbie? No matter what they're called, being a grandmother in this day and age is not easy, but these intrepid ladies are up for the challenge. Shows are select days Oct 26 to Nov 11. Evening shows at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. Tickets are $18 for seniors, $20 for adults and $8 for youth.

For more information, visit www.DaytonaPlayhouse.org or call (386) 255-2431.

Former First Ladies share secrets in touching play

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

The Little Theatre of New Smyrna Beach, 726 E. Third Ave., will perform "Tea for Three" by Eric Weinberger and Elaine Bromka at 8 p.m. Oct. 31, Nov.1, 2, and 3 and 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 4.

What is it like for a woman when her husband becomes the President of the United States and she is suddenly thrust into the spotlight? This witty, sly and deeply moving script explores the hopes, fears and loves of Lady Bird Johnson (Ellen Shaw), Pat Nixon (Karen Poulsen) and Betty Ford (Suzanne Brandimarte). In three scenes taking place in the family quarters of the White House just prior to the end of living there as the wife of a president, each of the women confides alone to the audience. Secrets are spilled about their early years, their husbands' rise to power, their romances with the men, their unique paths as wives in the White House, and their feelings about imminent retirement.

Using separate vignettes, the audience observes the kindly and dutiful Lady Bird Johnson, the welcoming but wounded Pat Nixon, the chatty and bold Betty Ford. In recollections that are light without being trivial, we learn of their feelings for their husbands, their opinions of the country and their plans for the future.

Lady Bird Johnson, while preparing a tea for Pat Nixon, defends her husband's quirks but finally admits to herself, "Politics is his oxygen." Mrs. Nixon, drinking tea alone in her room on the eve of her husband's resignation, works on her mail, picks at her food and guardedly recalls happier times before exploding in anger about Watergate and the political world. Betty Ford is discovered reading a TIME magazine in her bathrobe. Forestalling preparations for tea with incoming first lady Rosalyn Carter, Betty lightheartedly recalls past escapades, but eventually admits to being quite lost about life after the White House.

Each of the three portraits becomes intimate, by degrees, as the women wrestle with what Pat Nixon called "the hardest unpaid job in the world."

Tickets are $10 and are available online at www.nsbplayers.org, or by calling the box office (386) 423-1246. The box office is open from 1 to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday and and two hours prior to every performance.
