AN ENGLISHMAN IN CUBA

A Reporter's Account of Life in Matanzas and Havana.

EXPERIENCES OF PHIL ROBINSON.

He Used a Napkin as a Truce Flag and Matanzas Welcomed Him—Says Spaniards Are Eager to Fight and Expect to Put Inhabitants of Florida to the Sword. Found the City of Havana Gay—Blanco's Socialistic Orders.

The Pall Mall Gazette's special correspondent, Phil Robinson, writing from Kingston, Jamaica, under the date of June 17 on his recent experiences in Matanzas and Havana, says:

"Finding the local authorities determined to prevent my going to Cuba, I was compelled to escape from Key West after dark on board of a friendly British yacht, which, while passing Admiral Sampson's fleet headed for Cardenas, was fired upon by a patrolling gunboat. We changed our course for Matanzas, and at 4 o'clock in the morning stopped five miles from the coast. Whigham and I left the yacht in a skiff, and owing to the easterly current and strong ebb tide it took three hours to reach the entrance of the harbor and four more to get to the Matanzas jetty, in front of the center of the town.

"As we were approaching the coast the Spanish cavalry patrol detected us and dismounted, apparently contemplating giving us a volley, but while baling the boat with one hand I waved a white napkin with the other, and they accepted the signal. Only one battery threatened us. A man was standing to his gun, but the napkin again saved us, and the situation was without further incident.

"When we reached the jetty, some children who were paddling in the water carried our cars, flags and luggage to the hotel, where our appearance created the utmost astonishment. We were told afterward that the soldiers and the crowds we passed were quite stupefied by the suddenness of our appearance, otherwise they might have done us some mischief. After we had breakfasted we sent for the British consul, who informed the authorities of our presence. We were summoned before the commandant and closely questioned. General Molina was at first incredulous, but ultimately complimented us upon our exploit, laughing heartily at the idea of two men in an open boat running the blockade and rowing right up the middle of the harbor in broad daylight past all of the batteries. He telegraphed to Havana asking permission for us to proceed to the capital, but General Gongosto, Captain General Blanco's evil genius, ordered our arrest. At midnight, while we were in a cafe chatting with some Spanish officers, we were arrested and driven to Castle San Saverio. Our persons were searched and everything was taken from us. We were locked in a disgustingly filthy cell without one single article of furniture except a hammock.

"The next day we were removed to the commandant's quarters, where we were permitted to furnish a room and obtain food from the hotel. We were treated with the utmost kindness and consideration, but were not allowed to leave our room. During our imprisonment some miscreants spread reports that we had been seen in Matanzas before, that we had been hiding in the town and that our story of rowing up the harbor in a boat was an invention. We were therefore repeatedly examined in minute detail, separately, but after six days of this kind of treatment our veracity was established and we were forwarded under guard to Havana.

"Matanzas from the harbor resembles an Italian seaport and from the land it is doubly beautiful. Two rivers loiter through the town into the landlocked harbor, which is three miles wide. The land on either side of the harbor rises picturesquely to a considerable height and that behind the town slopes gently upward to a palm crested ridge. Under American enterprise the town will develop into a noble pleasure resort, possessing unique natural beauties, enhanced by grace and antiquity and be a fatal rival to the Florida resorts. The defenses of Matanzas have been greatly strengthened of late. One new battery, at present unknown to the Americans, mounting six large guns, is being completed on the east side of the harbor and a corresponding battery on the opposite side is in course of construction.

"The Spaniards are utterly at a loss to understand why Admiral Sampson did not attack Matanzas in earnest a month ago. The condition of the town admitted it then, as it was not able to withstand an attack. Now, however, the Spaniards are most confident and are spoiling for a fight, expecting, after defeating the fleet, to invade Florida, where General Molina has promised his troops that they shall put the entire population to the sword. The eagerness of the poor, ignorant Spanish officers for battle is quite pathetic, but it is a fact that at present they mean to fight to the death. The explanation given by the Spaniards of the facility of Admiral Sampson's demonstration before Matanzas is that the American shells, notably carry better, and larger berries and larger crops are raised when liberally treated with those fired by the Cincinnati, were defective. Numbers of them which did not explode have since been buried. It is quite certain that not a life was lost, nor was any masonry displaced in the affair.

"The country between Matanzas and Havana is splendidly rich, but has been terribly devastated by the three years' war. Cattle are still abundant and the crops are profuse. The line is guarded by forts throughout, and cavalry patrols and infantry posts were seen continuously from the train. We could also see frequent cavalry skirmishing with insurgents who were concealed in the bush.

"At Matanzas a week ago there was no sign of starvation. The prices at the hotels, cafes and shops were the same as in America, and there were no beggars. Reconcentrados with pigs tethered to their butts and chickens running about were numerous. We gave a fat child a penny, and the youngster instantly ran and bought candy from a negro camp peddler. The citizens expected that the supply of flour would be exhausted in ten days and that the supply of wheat would fail in about a month. The supply of fish and vegetables, of course, will never fail.

"Upon reaching Havana we were escorted directly to the headquarters of the police, where we were most kindly treated. The next day, upon our signing a promise to leave Cuba at the earliest opportunity, we were released. Three days later the British cruiser Talbot arrived, and we were deported to Jamaica. During the voyage here we were the guests of Captain Gamble, from whom we received every courtesy. Reasons for our expulsion were refused, but General Blanco's order forbidding correspondents to land in Cuba, which was issued a week after our arrival, was made retroactive. Upon applying to the British consul general for an explanation we were treated impudently. Meanwhile Knight of the London Times is allowed to remain. Perhaps it is because he was so nearly drowned in trying to land, but our expulsion was unjust and illogical and disgraceful to the Spanish government.

"As seen a week ago it would be impossible for a stranger to imagine that Havana was starving or that the city was blockaded. The band was playing on the Prado and a merry crowd was promenading. Every seat in the cafes was filled, and the theaters, considering the fact that not a woman was present, had good houses nightly. The hotels and shops were charging their usual prices, and we only saw a dozen professional beggars. Daily when the American blockading vessels were sighted great crowds would rush off to the seashore. Every available cab was engaged to take the people to the beach, where they spent their time in jeering the Yankees and daring them to come within reach of the Spanish guns. Then they would return home chattering and laughing as though the blockading of the city were a comic opera.

"The city was tranquil and abnormally free from crime. Havana has 20,000 volunteers, all Spaniards, and responsible men are providing for them. They wear uniforms and were provided with horses. They are armed by the government. These volunteers assure the tranquillity of the city, as they overawe the Cuban canaille. The food supplies were generally sufficient. Today there is a two months' supply of coal in port. A week ago there were 60,000 tons.

"Captain General Blanco recently issued several socialistic orders, limiting the prices of staples, reducing rents 50 per cent and abolishing payments of interest on loans and mortgages, hoping thereby to enable the poorer classes, who are chiefly Cubans, to tide over the war. No starvation exists, but the thrifty ones content themselves with one economical meal daily. The poorer classes are paid for their labor on the old basis, but are paying for their purchases on the new basis. Upon this plan they can only buy one-half what they used to get. The citizens and the army alike are eager for a fight, the officers fiercely denouncing all idea of a compromise."

DEWEY'S NEW SQUADRON.

One of His Men Tells How He Is Making a "Mosquito Fleet" of His Own.

The following letter has been received by Mrs. Kuhlwein of Sag Harbor, from her husband, L. J. G. Kuhlwein, the chief gunner of Admiral Dewey's flagship, the Olympia:

U. S. S. OLYMPIA, MANILA BAY, May 15, 1902. We have been very successful here in everything so far. At present I am very hard at work taking all the guns out of the Spanish men-of-war which we have sunk in this harbor, and there are about 11 of them, all having from 6 to 14 guns on board. We are going to send them all home on a steamer which we captured today. Early this morning we captured a fine Spanish gunboat, only firing four shots to do it, when they hauled down their flag without firing a shot. This afternoon I was sent out in charge of a tug with about 20 men, to run around the bay to see if I could not find some small steam launches. Well, I did find one launch only, but I captured two very fine tugs, better, both of them, than the one we had. We are getting to have a fleet here, and we are making it all ourselves. Every tug we capture we convert into a small gunboat at once, and the way we do it is to go on board one of the sunken Spanish men-of-war, take a few good guns out of her and mount them, and there is a new addition to our fleet. This harbor is afloat with the American flag, and long may she wave! I also secured a large Spanish man-of-war flag from one of the tugs captured, which, of course, is my own and which I shall take home. L. J. G. KUHLEWIN.

Paris Boys in a Mimic Fight.

In the midst of the heavy rain which fell the other morning groups of the street boys in a working class district of Paris organized a mimic fight between themselves, some representing Americans and others Spaniards. The fight was conducted in a mild manner for some time, only fists and sticks being used, but as the combatants became excited they attacked one another in a very serious manner. A barricade was erected by the so-called Spaniards, who began to fire volleys of stones and to rain bricks on the imaginary Americans. A few pistol shots were also heard, and at last the police saw that it was time to interfere. A dozen or so of the youths on both sides went home seriously maimed.—London Telegraph.

Priceless Pain

"If a price can be placed on pain, 'Mother's Friend' is worth its weight in gold as an alleviator. My wife suffered more in ten minutes with either of her other two children than she did altogether with her last, having previously used four bottles of 'Mother's Friend.' It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother," says a customer.

Thus writes Henderson Dale, Druggist, of Carmi, Ill., to the Bradford Regulator Company, of Atlanta, Ga., the proprietors and manufacturers of "Mother's Friend." This successful remedy is not one of the many internal medicines advertised to do unreasonable things, but a scientifically prepared liniment especially effective in adding strength and elasticity to those parts of woman's organism which bear the severest strains of childbirth.

The liniment may be used at any and all times during pregnancy up to the very hour of confinement. The earlier it is begun, and the longer used, the more perfect will be the result, but it has been used during the last month only with great benefit and success.

It not only shortens labor and lessens the pain attending it, but greatly diminishes the danger to life of both mother and child, and leaves the mother in a condition more favorable to speedy recovery. "Mother's Friend" is sold by druggists at $1.00, or sent by express on receipt of price.
