Manners and Culture

Q: When should we say “hi” and when should we say “hello”?

A: In most any situation when you’re talking in person, “hi” is more appropriate. “Hello” is usually relegated to answering the telephone.

Q: Why do most Americans buy their food from Publix when Wal-Mart is cheaper?

A: They don’t. It just looks that way because of your experience in Gainesville. Wal-Mart is by far the largest corporation by revenue in the world. Last year, they took in over $377 billion—more than the size of most countries’ economies. But Wal-Mart doesn’t have Supercenters in all of the cities in America, and the one here in Gainesville is new. So, there are a lot more Publix stores. If you look at the total picture, though, Publix is only in Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina, and Alabama, and their total take last year was around $16 billion.

Q: Why don’t Americans try to discover more about other cultures instead of developing such ridiculous stereotypes?

A: That’s a very good question. The only answer I have is that, as with so many habits that many of us consider negative, it’s easier to be complacent and ignorant.

Q: What is the action called “double dipping” and why is it rude?

A: It refers to taking a chip, putting it in the dip or the salsa, taking a bite, and then putting the chip back in the dip for more. One can hope that you now understand why that’s rude without further explanation!

Grammar

Q: What is the difference between “thing” and “stuff”?

A: “Thing” is a count noun (it can be made plural) and “stuff” is a noncount noun.

Q: What is the difference between “people” and “person”?

A: “People” is the plural of “person”. Many of you may ask, “What about ‘persons’?” Well, that word exists, but it’s only used in official instructions and legal documents. The usual plural is “people”.

Farewell
