Ice from sprinkler systems formed easily this past week as record-low temperatures froze Central Florida for 10 days.

Monday's 29 degree temperature ties record low set in 1982

ISAAC BABCOCK
OBSERVER STAFF

As a second arctic blast in as many weeks pushed into the southernmost parts of the state, Central Florida was blanketed with sub-freezing temperatures again this past weekend, adding to an already record run of cold.

In the wake of some light snow flurries, ice stayed behind in some areas, with a hard freeze keeping temperatures below 32 degrees until after 10 a.m. Sunday.

Most of Orange County experienced a high temperature Saturday that was 10 degrees colder than the average low.

Beginning Jan. 2 the mercury began to fall, as a blast of cold originating in northern Canada pushed through the South. Record lows were neared or set repeatedly over the course of the next week. Orlando saw two record lows in a four-day span, with a low of 31 on Jan. 7, tying a record set in 2001.

As even more cold air surged through behind a front that dropped snow and sleet in the area, another record would be equaled that had stood untouched for nearly 30 years. Monday, Jan. 11 saw a low of 29 degrees, last seen in 1982.

For most of last week high temperatures would sit below the average low for the area, damaging some crops as citrus growers struggled to deal with the cold.

The end of the cold is coming, for now, with forecasters expecting a return to normal temperatures by the weekend, with lows in the lower 50s and highs in the 70s.

No more drive-thrus?

JENNY ANDREASSON
OBSERVER STAFF

The Maitland City Council approved the first reading of an ordinance on Monday that would prevent the construction of drive-thru businesses in the city's downtown for one year.

Officials are worried that facilities such as fast food restaurants and banks will affect the plans for Maitland's pedestrian-friendly Town Center. They want a moratorium on such development while an drive-thru impact study is done.

The City Commission voted 4-1 Monday to approve the first reading of the ordinance, and Jan. 25 will be the second and final public hearing. Councilman Jeff Flowers dissented.

As it stands, the ordinance would put a one-year moratorium on drive-thru facilities, with the option of an indefinite extension. Mayor Doug Kinson and Councilwoman Linda Frosch said they'd like to see the moratorium be cut down to six months and the extension option nixed.

Members from the Coalition for Property Rights were at Monday's meeting to campaign against the ordinance.

Ice rink may break even

City commissioners praise each other for having good form

ISAAC BABCOCK
OBSERVER STAFF

Winter Park's first ever ice skating rink may have broken even after city staff finishes poring over the numbers. City Manager Randy Knight broke the good news to the City Commission Monday.

Based on figures from the University of Central Florida's rink, Knight had previously told the Commission that he expected the rink to break even. At Monday's meeting, he tentatively delivered on that estimate.

In that same meeting the mayor and commissioners praised each other for not falling down on the job when they showed off their skills on the man-made frozen lake under a big white tent in Central Park.

"This Commission could really... I don't know what the saying is... cut a rug out there on the ice," Mayor Ken Bradley said.

Bradley's comment set off a flurry of compliments from other commissioners.

"We got great reviews from the teenagers, which I think is a good thing," Commissioner Phil Anderson said.

"I don't think any of us fell down," Commissioner Beth Dillaha said. "Well I fell down, almost."

Adding to officials' skating prowess, the city could also cut a good deal, spending $123,000 to operate the rink from Nov. 20 to Jan. 3, and collecting $127,000 in revenue. Nearly 10,000 visitors strapped on skates for $10 per person. The city also generated revenue with advertisements on the tent, helping to balance the budget.

"I don't think there's any question that we could do this again next year," Knight said, though the final tally for the liquid-cooled rink's power bill and replanting of sod under the rink has not been factored in. Knight said the final balance sheet won't be more than $5,000 in the red.

The city's biggest problem, with repeated weather fronts chilling the air, was disassembling the rink.

"We did have some trouble getting rid of the ice," Knight said. "It wouldn't melt."

DRIVE THRU | Moratorium on drive-thrus would target new construction

Kinson said the city is informing all of the downtown property owners of the impending vote.

"They will be given the opportunity to respond," he said. "I kind of feel there aren't a lot of properties that would even be impacted by it."

On Dec. 14, a resolution was passed 4-1, with Flowers dissenting, to reject new drive thru project applications so as to prevent a flow of such applications before the ordinance goes into effect.

Flowers said the city should follow its process for approving ordinances, and that it is unfair to the public.

"I don't like this (resolution)," Flowers said. "It's taking power away from our constitution. It's an absolute insult to the backbone of Maitland... that's not the kind of government I want to live under."

Councilwoman Bev Reponen disagreed, saying the resolution is an act of forward thinking.

"This is a case of getting it right. It's giving us enough time to plan and plan carefully," Reponen said.

City Attorney Cliff Shepard said the moratorium only applies to a development where a drive thru is a component, and existing drive-thru facilities will get exemptions.

"It's not a moratorium on all building permits," he said. "It's a moratorium on those that would address constructing or rebuilding drive-up facilities."

Councilman Phil Bonus said Council is not using a moratorium to revise zoning codes.

"This is a stopgap measure to cure a situation that we see occurring, not just an anti-zoning tool," Councilman Phil Bonus said.

There were no drive-thru projects being reviewed by staff before the resolution was passed.

Knights ground Owls in blowout

UCF dominates 2010 conference debut

ISAAC BABCOCK
OBSERVER STAFF

The Knights are on their way in conference play, with a big win over Rice in the UCF Arena to start the second half of the season.

"If you want to stay at the top of this conference you have to take care of your business at home," Knights coach Kirk Speraw said after the game.

And the Knights did just that, dominating the Owls the whole game, leading by double digits for three quarters on their way to a 77-58 blowout.

UCF forward Keith Clanton had a career game, shooting 17 points to help lead his team to victory, pushed by Speraw's edict that he should play more aggressively as a power forward. Though he'd frequently led the team in scoring, he turned his shooting up a notch, even taking shots from the outside. He would drain two 3-pointers in the game. He also took command under the basket, stealing away some balls that could have easily resulted in Owls' offensive rebounds.

A.J. Rompza also maintained pressure on the court, scoring 13 points, adding 6 assists, 5 steals and 5 rebounds.

The win was UCF's (9-6) first in the conference this year, giving them a good start in their C-USA debut game. Rice, on the other hand, lost its second, and its sixth road game.

Despite the big win, some weak points were revealed that the Knights will need to mend. Rice dominated under the basket, particularly on UCF's end of the court, where they frequently picked up uncontested rebounds and swiped the ball from the hands of surprised Knights.

A tenacious Marcus Jordan managed to pick up two steals for the Knights, also scoring four points.

The Knights return to the court Wednesday against Marshall at 8 p.m. The Thundering Herd is 2-0 in conference play and 13-2 overall.

Winter Park rebounds

After losing a pair of games, the Cats trounced Edgewater and Freedom High

JESSICA DAWKINS
GUEST REPORTER

The Winter Park Wildcats reversed their momentum following their first losing streak of the season, beating Edgewater and then slamming Freedom Friday night at home in a 77-48 blowout.

Junior Austin Rivers led his team with a massive 31 points in three and a half quarters.

"It's a great way to start the second half of the season," Rivers said. "We just had a big win over Edgewater, and we just beat up on Freedom pretty bad, so we have good momentum going."

Winter Park's entire starting lineup is gaining momentum, as Robert Lovaglio had 13 points and 10 rebounds, Brett Comer recorded 10 points, five assists, and two steals, and Adam Jones netted six points, three assists, two blocks, and a steal. Isaac Turner also contributed points to the board.

On the other side of the ball, Freedom's star Floyd Higgins was held to only four points by a fantastic Winter Park defense. Higgins had scored 20 points in a recent win over University. The Patriots' high scorer was Gabriel Diaz, who was kept to nine points.

The game catapulted the team to new heights, and it showed everywhere in Wildcat Country. While head coach David Bailey sat calmly on the sidelines, his juniors and seniors systematically cut down the Patriots, playing team ball, and playing it well.

In the first quarter alone Winter Park recorded 23 points, followed by 20 in the second, 19 in the third and 15 in the fourth, with the Wildcats' bench gradually replacing starters on the court. It was apparent that the Wildcats could have won with their backup players, showcasing the team's depth.

The Wildcats have now improved to a 13-4 record, winning their last four games in a row, and it's full steam ahead against district rivals. Next up for the team is an away game versus Timber Creek, a surefire win for the streaking lineup, and sure to bring another extra dose of confidence before a tough tournament game against Washington D.C.'s Gonzaga High School.

If the Cats can squeeze out a victory in the Hoophall Classic, it's smooth sailing for the next couple of games until a matchup against Dr. Phillips on Jan. 29. There's much incentive for Dr. Phillips to win the game, as it's their last of the season.

The final games of the season for Winter Park include contests versus Punta Gorda's Charlotte High School, Orlando's Olympia High School, and Fort Lauderdale's Pine Crest High School. If the team can keep the energy going through their last three competitions, they will likely reign supreme in District 4.

Festivals and a cook-off

On behalf of all Baldwin Park businesses, we would like to wish all of you a happy New Year. Baldwin Park kicks off this New Year with several exciting events.

On Jan. 19, Jack's Steakhouse is hosting the Cystic Fibrosis Food & Wine Festival Ticket Party. Starting at 6 p.m., many eager volunteers will enjoy one free glass of wine and appetizers just for signing up as a ticket captain. The captains will then sell tickets to the Food & Wine Festival taking place at Baldwin Park on Saturday, Mar. 6. For more information on the event, please visit www.cff.org/Chapters/orlando/ChapterEvents and click on "2010 Food and Wine Festival."

On Jan. 27, New Broad

Street Realty is hosting the Rotary International. All neighbors are encouraged to attend this one-hour informational meeting led by Baldwin Park Resident Marilen Marnett. Marilen has been a member of a unique Internet-based Rotary club concept which was launched three years ago specifically for the X and Y generations.

"Being an involved resident of this community and knowing how Rotary exists to improve communities with its wide range of humanitarian, intercultural and educational activities has made me step up to the challenge of opening up a club in Baldwin Park." If you are interest in attending, please RSVP at Rotary-BaldwinPark@gmail.com.

If you think you can compete with the best chili cooks around, or if you simply want to come out and enjoy some great chili, Baldwin Park is your destination. The first Orlando Chili Cook-off at Baldwin Park is a fun way to showcase Central Florida's best amateur and seasoned chefs. It is also an event that will bring the community together for a great time and for a great cause. The cook-off will take place on Saturday, Jan. 30 on the lawn across from Baldwin Park's Grace Hopper Hall. Gates open at noon. Proceeds will support Special Olympics of Florida (specialolympics-florida.org). The cook-off will have something for all ages, including live music, chili samples, adult beverages and a kids' fun zone — everything needed for the entire family to enjoy. Visit orlandochilicookoff.com for more details.

For more activity and community support, come out to walk Lake Baldwin on Saturday, Feb. 6 in support of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. The Central Florida Chapter (afsp.org/cfl) is hosting its 3rd Annual 5k Walk Around Baldwin Park. For more information, to register and to donate visit outofthedarkness.org.

As we approach spring, the Baldwin Park Merchants Association will keep you posted on more exciting developments. You can always keep up to date by visiting baldwinparknetwork.com

Economy's impact on the consumer

As a consumer, I ventured out to purchase gifts for friends and loved ones this holiday season and noticed a distinctly different business climate than I have been accustomed to over the years.

Credit card blues

Credit card companies seem to be especially hard hit. Most have lost sight of dedicated customers by reducing themselves to announcing increases in interest rates and annual fees by sending out notices with such small print I can barely read them, even with my glasses.

For each credit card notice I receive that changes their terms resulting in an increase in fees, I immediately send them the notice back canceling my account. I now have one credit card. The good news is that I charge so much each month, I was able to get hundreds of dollars in rewards, which helped out during the holidays!

Customer service

After years as a T-Mobile customer, I decided to switch my business cell. During the process, I was transferred no less than 13 times, often to a person who knew nothing about why I was calling, so I had to give each person my personal information. I finally got through the process, but only after going through much more stress than any City Council meeting.

And so, this holiday season, the only present my daughter wants for Christmas is a new

T-Mobile MyTouch. So, when she and I visited their store, I found out that the phone was going to be nearly three times the price advertised because we didn't have our current phones long enough. The sales associate couldn't have cared less about our business. I had to live with my daughter's disappointment.

I recently contacted the local Fox television station after seeing their full page ad on New Year's Eve, wanting to let them know how much I appreciate their programming and ask them to do everything possible to strike their deal with Bright House so I could watch the Gators game. To my surprise, Fox did not put a customer service person on the phone, but rather, someone who was rude and disrespectful. I requested to speak to the manager. George, the manager, only became courteous after I suggested that I go live with my concerns about the situation.

Defective product

In these economic times, there seems to be more product defects than normal. My gas grill at home, after years of abuse, finally died and I was delighted to receive a new one for Christmas. But when I opened the box, I was shocked to find the hood of the grill crushed, with no apparent damage to the exterior of the box.

Apparently, workers were so concerned about losing their jobs, they decided to ship the defective product anyway. The good news is when the grill was returned, Home Depot was just as shocked, and immediately replaced it with an upgraded model at a lower price.

After a nice Christmas Eve dinner at my in-laws, we decided to have an after-dinner drink, when we noticed a sticky mess under the bottle in the cabinet. My father-in-law pulled it out and opened it, only to find a defect in the bottle, which resulted in the rest of the contents pouring out onto the floor and counter top.

The bottle, which retails for around $60, was returned to the ABC store for a refund. To my father-in-law's shock, the manager, Troy, said, "You expect me to pay for that? I would never get reimbursed!" My father-in-law responded, "So you want me, your customer, to pay for the defect?"

"There is nothing I can do," the manager replied and went about his business. He couldn't have cared less about his customer.

The only explanation I have for this boorish behavior on the part of more than a few workers and supervisors spells itself out in a recent study where it was found that 55 percent of workers in the United States are unhappy with their jobs. This could explain why so many businesses I frequent put the consumer second in trying economic times.

The bright side

Although the economy has taken its toll on businesses throughout our country, there is a bright spot as my experience with Home Depot shows. Businesses that are genuinely concerned about their customers will show you, in good times and bad, that they believe in the centuries-old adage, "The Customer is Always Right."

This consumer will take note of companies who turn their backs on them, and those companies that survive while coveting customer satisfaction will be stronger as a result.

Winter Park City Talk
BY RANDY KNIGHT
CITY MANAGER

JAN 11 CITY COMMISSION MEETING HIGHLIGHTS

The City Commission met on Jan. 11, at 3:30 p.m., in City Hall Commission Chambers. Below are a few highlights of the major decisions that were made:

MAYOR'S REPORT:

-Kayla McCulley, a recipient of the U.S. Fulbright Fellow Award was recognized for her success and accomplishment.

-Josephine Leeks was presented the Employee of the Quarter award

CITY MANAGER'S REPORT

-A report was given regarding the success of the "Winter in the Park" Ice Rink. The Community Redevelopment Agency Board will discuss this item at their next meeting as well to make a formal recommendation to the City Commission.

CONSENT AGENDA

-The minutes for the Dec. 14 meeting were approved.

ACTION ITEMS REQUIRING DISCUSSION

-The purchase of the remaining portion of the parking piazza on New England and Pennsylvania avenues was approved.

-The rules and standards for Parks & Recreation rate adjustments/fee waivers/fee schedules were discussed. It was approved to add the "Peacock Ball" and the annual "Christmas in the Park" to the list of city annual events.

The following was decided regarding the post office property:

1. A spokesperson for the fundraising efforts pursued by the citizen led "Green-space Foundation" reported that due to the economy they have determined a fundraising campaign would raise less than the targeted $2.3 million necessary to fulfill the option the city purchased in 2006 and that the option should be allowed to expire. The city will contact all the previous donors to ask if they will allow the amount they pledged/contributed to remain in place in case funds are required for the acquisition of the Post Office property.

2. Ordinance will be prepared rezoning the post office property as public quasi public (PQP) or parks & recreation.

3. City staff will work with the Congressional Delegation to explore other ways to acquire the post office property.

PUBLIC HEARINGS

-The second reading of the ordinance to annex 1807, 1810, 1850, 1911 and 1922 Stonehurst Road and the East Kings Way and Stonehurst Road rights-of-way was approved.

-The first reading of the ordinance requiring a supermajority vote was approved.

-The first reading of the ordinance establishing a policy for the automatic advancement of citizen board alternates to regular positions in the event a regular member of the board vacates his or her position prior to the expiration of his or her term was approved with an amendment.

-The first reading of the ordinance regarding Land Development Code revisions passed with a modification.

A full copy of the Jan. 11 City Commission minutes will be available on the city's official Web site at cityofwinterpark.org the week of Jan. 25 pending approval by the City Commission.

R.S.V.P. NOW FOR DINNER ON THE AVENUE

The City of Winter Park is proud to announce the 9th annual Dinner on the Avenue will be held on Saturday, April 17, from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. This unique, fun-filled dining experience hosted by the City of Winter Park has become the social event of the year.

Gather a table of friends, family, co-workers or neighbors to dine under the stars on beautiful Park Avenue. Tables of eight are available for just $100 each. Only the table, white linen tablecloth and chairs are provided — everything else is up to you.

Creativity is encouraged and each group is challenged to develop its own unique look and individual décor. Awards will be presented to winners in various categories including most colorful, most elegant, most original, best TV/movie-themed and honorable mentions.

Only a few tables are left. Act now and purchase early for best seating. Checks for $100 per table should be made payable to The City of Winter Park, Dinner on the Avenue, and mailed to City of Winter Park Purchasing Division at 401 S. Park Ave., Winter Park, FL, 32789-4386.

Patrons are also encouraged to donate canned food items for the "Dinner Drive" in support of Second Harvest Food Bank.

For more information regarding this unique dining experience, please click on the Dinner on the Avenue logo on the city's official Web site at cityofwinterpark.org/dinner-ontheavenue or call 407-643-1627.

Barbie necklace critiques plastic ideals

Allie Pohl's Ideal Woman Necklace was designed to draw attention to society's expectations of the ideal woman, creating a unique fashion conversation piece in the process.

A local's necklace, a statement about society's ideal woman, will be featured in Marie Claire Greece.

BRITTNI JOHNSON
GUEST REPORTER

The cashier at Michael's craft store looked at the dangling plastic pendant and thought it was a cat.

"I told her it was a Barbie doll crotch," Winter Park resident Allie Pohl said, recounting her most memorable experience wearing her necklace.

Flustered and red in the face, the older woman took an extra 10 minutes to check her out.

"She won't ever look at Barbie the same," Allie said.

Pohl's Ideal Woman Necklace takes the form of Barbie, an image of the perfect woman created more than 50 years ago, to make a statement.

"The necklace was created out of my belief that society is obsessed with the idea of the perfect woman ... I try to critique trends that I find impractical or destructive to the female form."

Pohl is a graduate student in the Electronic Media Arts Design program at the University of Denver.

"The necklace was created out of my belief that society is obsessed with the idea of the perfect woman."

— Allie Pohl,
Winter Park designer

The necklace takes the silhouette of Barbie from the waist to just above the knee, and comes in a variety of neon colors. Her mother, a Winter Park resident, prefers the one with Swarovski crystals.

"The bling necklace is my favorite," Joan Pohl said.

Joan wears the necklaces frequently, and said that there hasn't been a day that she's worn them that someone hasn't made a comment. She said all of her feedback has been positive, and many of her Winter Park friends have bought the necklaces.

"It's like an icebreaker and a conversation piece," Joan said. "It unites females."

Allie has created a blog for ideal necklace owners to share their ice-breaking experiences. Comments range from praise for the design to happy accounts of shocking fellow lawyers during business meetings.

Shock isn't uncommon, and Allie doesn't shy away from unconventional ideas. She really got an interest in art as social and feminist commentary when she began her master's degree. Her early pieces explored trends in female hair and hair removal. Using a My Size Barbie as inspiration and template, she created porcelain sculptures with Chia plants growing out of the legs, armpits and, how Allie might put it, crotch. That's when Allie said she fell in love with the Barbie figure and continued to work with it.

Allie said her art has a purpose and wants it to make people question the world around them and think about how images — skinny models and actresses that never age — and social constructs affect them. She hopes her necklaces raise awareness to combat these impossible "Barbie" ideals.

"I've been forced and encouraged to think about what I put out there, what it means and how it resonates with people," she said.

"She's establishing a brand with a message, and making art accessible to the masses in a personal way, said Molly O'Brien, a necklace owner and Allie's friend.

Allie's necklaces, which have only been out for two months, are certainly resonating with the fashion community. They've been featured on several fashion Web sites and blogs, and in February will be in Marie Claire Greece.

"It strikes a real emotional connection with the person who's wearing it," O'Brien said. "There's something she's tapping into that's connecting with women."

Ideal Woman

The necklace comes in black, turquoise, mirror, pink, purple, yellow, white and crystal and range in price from $20 to $55. Buy the necklaces online at www.alliepohl.com and read experiences at idealwoman.wordpress.com.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day is Monday, Jan. 18, but some events are a week long

JENNY ANDREASSON
OBSERVER STAFF

Monday, Jan. 18 marks the 24th Martin Luther King Jr. Day, and cities and organizations are commemorating the African American civil rights leader with festivals, parades and talks on Monday, and the prior weekend.

Here are some local events to get the children out of the house on their day off and increase their awareness of the sacrifices made by King to put an end to racial segregation and discrimination:

Rollins College series of MLK Day events

Rollins College in Winter Park is hosting a series of events from Thursday, Jan. 14 to Monday, Jan. 18. For more information on the events, contact Rachel Luce at rluce@rollins.edu or 407-691-1240.

At 7 p.m. Thursday, The Center for Contemporary Dance performs "Colours of Courage": A celebration of Black History in America at the Annie Russell Theatre.

At 4 p.m. Friday is a film screening of "Two Towns of Jasper" with dialogue at the SunTrust Auditorium. The film chronicles the 1998 racially motivated murder of James Byrd Jr. in Jasper, Texas.

At 7 p.m. Saturday is Spoken Word/Open Mic, with topics social justice/peace and harmony at Daves Down Under at the Cornell Campus Center. There will be a guest poet and the floor will be open for anyone wishing to contribute through spoken word, song, poetry, story, rap, or other.

At 6:01 p.m. Monday is a Candlelight Vigil at the Warren Building parking lot (rain site is Bush Auditorium). The group will pause to honor the life and dreams of Martin Luther King Jr. and will take advantage of an opportunity to teach about King's message on reflection, empowerment and challenge through a series of speakers, musical performances, and dance.

Eatonville's 33rd Annual Martin Luther King Jr. Parade and Celebration

The Town of Eatonville will host its 33rd Annual Martin Luther King Jr. Parade and Celebration on Saturday Jan. 16 through Monday Jan. 18 with several events in King's honor. This year's theme is "Embracing the Dream for Change".

The parade is at 2 p.m. Saturday on Kennedy Boulevard. There will also be a candlelight vigil at 6 p.m. Monday, beginning at the Catalina Park Entrance on Kennedy Boulevard and ending at the Denton Johnson Center, 400 Ruffel St. in Eatonville.

To participate in the parade or to be a vendor, contact Paul Stevens, MLK Director, at 407-489-5981 or e-mail pstevens@national-cof.com. Visit townofeatonville.org for more information.

Winter Park's 8th annual Unity Heritage Festival

Residents and local businesses will come together to celebrate the City of Winter Park's 8th annual Unity Heritage Festival on Sunday, Jan. 17, and Monday, Jan. 18. The annual festival will promote family history and raise funds for the Educational Fulfillment Fund for local economically disadvantaged youth.

The festival begins on Sunday in Shady Park at Hannibal Square adjacent to the Winter Park Community Center, located at 721 W. New England Ave., from 1 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Special activities will include children's games, career booths, food and retail vendors, special entertainment by various gospel artists, and the presentation of the annual Heritage Award. Free family history research will be provided by specialists from the Heritage Center Family History Library, which provides services to the general public throughout the year and specializes in family history of West Winter Park residents.

The heritage festival continues in Shady Park on Monday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Join Mayor Ken Bradley and Winter Park city officials at 10 a.m. for a special Martin Luther King Jr. Symbolic Program.

For more information regarding the 8th annual Unity Heritage Festival, please call 407-599-3397.

Arthur "Pappy" Kennedy Prayer Breakfast

The 19th annual Arthur "Pappy" Kennedy Prayer Breakfast will be held at 7:45 a.m. Monday, Jan. 18, and celebrates the life and accomplishments of Orlando's first African-American elected official, Pappy Kennedy, as well as Martin Luther King Jr. It is at the First Baptist Church of Orlando, 3000 S. John Young Pkwy.

Kennedy positively touched the lives of many Orlando youth through the promotion of education and hard work, according to the Central Florida YMCA, a sponsor of the event. He was elected to the Orlando City Commission in 1972.

At the prayer breakfast, the 2010 Arthur "Pappy" Kennedy Lifetime Achievement Award will be presented along with the Arthur "Pappy" Kennedy Scholarship. The $1,200 scholarship is presented to an African-American high school senior who has exemplified dedication to their community and education. Proceeds from the event will be used to support the Arthur "Pappy" Kennedy Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Who is Arthur "Pappy" Kennedy?

Arthur "Pappy" Kennedy was Orlando's first black elected official. Pappy, feeling that blacks were underrepresented in local politics, first ran for election in the 1967 Orlando City Commission race. His run for office was not successful that year, but in 1972, he made history as Orlando's first black elected official. At that time, council seats were decided by citywide elections — He received support from voters from all over the city. In 1976 he was re-elected to his office with 78 percent of the vote, the largest percentage in Orlando's history.

As an elected official, he had a strong impact on the building of Hankins Park and the landscaping of Parramore Street. He also organized the Orlando Negro Chamber of Commerce. Pappy also worked with Meals on Wheels, the United Negro College Fund, and the NAACP, and he was an advocate for the poor.

Trivia

Did you know that in 1964, Martin Luther King Jr. became the youngest person to receive the Nobel Peace Prize for his work to end racial segregation and racial discrimination through civil disobedience and other non-violent means.

A stroke here, A stroke there ...

A stroke here, a stroke there and pretty soon you're thinking like Dick Cheney or Rush Limbaugh. That's my theory on what has happened to the vice president. I'll bet he's had a series of small strokes over the years (decades, actually), imperceptible to the casual observer, but cumulatively, devastating to his cerebral cortex. Little burned-out brain places that prevent him from ever connecting the dots, not only that, but from connecting with humanity.

For all we know Dick Cheney might be working with the equivalent of an advanced "Alzheimeric" brain. Swiss cheese, in other words. Hopefully, his heirs will insist upon an autopsy come that fateful day when what remaining life that remains in him finally evaporates. Envision an image of one last, final wisp of snarling bleakness inexorably coiling into oblivion. An autopsy will undoubtedly reveal that the vice president was for all intents and purposes brain dead for nearly 35 years prior to his actual demise, only his brain kept spouting right wing rhetoric. Poor Dear just couldn't help himself. Thank goodness for Depends, particularly during those stressful times when you blast a fellow hunter in the head.

Rush Limbaugh fried his brain on illegal prescription drugs secured by his black hired help. Too funny. He pled guilty to a crime he once-upon-a-time thought warranted castration and a lifetime of incarceration. But not for white boys, don't-cha-see. He destroyed his hearing with drugs and now wears hearing aids the size of Texas and occasionally pops into an emergency room with chest palpitations. But not to worry, Limbaugh has a Grinch's pinched little heart matched with a simpleton's mind. Again, a perfect match. Reduced mental capacity – right wing dribble.

Speaking of which, Sarah Palin is the Republican Party's best presidential candidate. You know what? It's true. By 2012, Sarah will have actually read a book or two. Which immediately qualifies her for higher office. Republican standards being what they are. Oh, I'm sorry. It's not that Republicans don't read, it's that they all read from the same book, ur, excuse me once again, not the same book, unfortunately, it's goofiness gleaned from all reading the same page. Not even an entire book.

Oh, that's not right either. Remember how, once-upon-a-time, we were all so utterly fascinated with Ayn Rand's work. She's the Republican's rediscovered (yet again, sigh) intellectual darling of the moment. You remember don't-cha. I was 15 at the time (1964) when I fell in love with Howard Roark of "The Fountainhead." Ooooh, the rugged individual incapable of bending to the masses, unwilling to compromise with mendacious totalitarian mediocrity. Love it. I do.

Then Rand wrote "Atlas Shrugged." Which causes modern day Republicans to be nearly orgasmic, so excited they are by the idea of all the "smart, unyielding" right thinking, virtuous entrepreneurs withholding their talents as America crumbles and the dissipated left is crushed, left to mindlessly mutter, "Who is John Galt?" As the nation rebuilds itself, Phoenix like, on the righteous virtue of Republican selfishness. With Tom Selleck and John Voight seamlessly tap-dancing out "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir belting out "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." All gloriously choreographed in the finest Busby Berkeley tradition! And Sarah Palin is crowned Queen of North America, ur, President of the United States and wait, what's this? Dick Cheney is persuaded Lazarus-like, to again serve the nation as vice president. Oh, happy daze. Huzzanah! Huzzanah!

Wouldn't that (2012) be just the bestest Republican Convention of all time!! A Palin/Cheney ticket. No brain and Swiss cheese brain. Hmmm? We've already done that you say? (Think: 2000/2004 elections.) Gosh. We have. Uncanny. Yet! Republican redux!

Actually, that is patently unfair. Sarah Palin does have a brain, contrary to all those nasty left-leaning reports by the "drive-by" media. She does read books (Any number of the Gospel of Wealth screeds. She, like totally man, internalized the following: Jesus wants me, personally, me to be wealthy! He does!). Palin listened to that message on books on tape (the unabridged in-tongue version.) Palin is reported to have started "Atlas Shrugged" several times but found a much better use for that voluminous book as a doorstop. I have to agree on that one. Sarah ghostwrote a bestseller that sums up her life and philosophy as follows:

"I'm so pretty. I'm pretty simplistic. But that's OK cuz I'm soooo pretty. I'm your grrrrl. Vote simplistic. Vote Republican."

Whatta ya think!?! I don't know. That sounds a lot like the last few Republican presidential campaigns.

America confronts monumental challenges in the 21st century but what do "our" Republicans do but trot out simplistic 18th century rhetoric and run it up the founding fathers' flagpole and require we all genuflect or we are somewhat suspect. Unpatriotic for sure.

Hey, you right wing num-bchucks, dipsticks if you will, if the good ol' days of our founding fathers are the golden benchmark of our democracy, why don't we reinstitute the voting standards from those halcyon times? If only white, propertied men were who the founding fathers saw fit to vote, why change the standards? I mean you are a strict constructionist (original intent, etc., ad nauseum)? Uh, uh, uh.

Oh, and please, let's not forget an even more sacred text than the American Constitution, Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," a book that presents the foundations of capitalism 101. Capitalism is but one expression of one form of human activity. My only criticism is that in "some" circles that "one particular expression" has become the end all/be all manifestation of what it means to be a human being (and how we organize ourselves). Simple thinking, yet again.

It's like the Republican Party (since Nixon) has had a series of collective little strokes, much as Vice President Cheney in a probability has experienced. Either that or they've all drunk the same Kool Aid of simplistic thinking. No taxes. No regulations. Terrorists everywhere! America forever! At war.

Oh, before you get your Republican undies all in a knot, I am going to sink even lower next week. What can be lower than "dissin" the Republican brain-dead? So sorry for the redundancy. What can be lower than "dissin" Republicans?

Democrats! At least Republicans have an excuse. They don't pretentiously claim to have the intellect. See: Sarah "I'm so pretty" Palin.

Next week: "On Electing President Brainiac: Just Another Suit."

Been thinking about Medicare Part B?

If you are covered under Medicare Part A, but originally opted not to apply for Medicare Part B, now's your opportunity to enroll in Part B. The general enrollment period runs from Jan. 1 through Mar. 31.

But first, you may be wondering: what are Parts A and B? And why would someone get one and not the other? Here are the nuts and bolts.

Medicare Part A (hospitatal insurance) helps pay for inpatient care in a hospital or skilled nursing facility following a hospital stay, some home health care, and hospice care.

Medicare Part B (medical insurance) helps pay for doctors' services and many other medical services and supplies not covered by hospital insurance.

When you first become eligible to apply for Medicare Part A, you also have the option of enrolling in Part B for a monthly premium. Some people decide not to because they do not want to pay the premium or for other reasons. But you may discover that as your medical needs change, it is to your advantage to enroll. That's where enrollment periods come into play.

When you first become eligible for Part A, you have a seven-month period (your initial enrollment period) in which to sign up for Part B. After the initial enrollment period, you can only sign up during a later year's general enrollment period.

Each year, the Medicare general enrollment period runs Jan. 1 through Mar. 31. Your coverage begins the following July. But keep in mind that, for most people, the monthly premium increases 10 percent for each 12-month period you were eligible for, but did not enroll in, Medicare Part B.

So if you are covered under Medicare Part A and you've been thinking about applying for Part B, now is the time to act. Learn more about Medicare by reading Social Security's publication on the subject at socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10043.html. You also can learn a lot about Medicare by visiting socialsecurity.gov and selecting "Medicare" at the top of the page on the right side.

Mountains high, valleys low

"Something there is that doesn't love a mountain," Robert Frost might have written. (But he didn't.)

At sea level the human imagination, like the human body, is earthbound by invisible gravity.

On a mountaintop the pull on the imagination is upward, ever higher, liberating.

A mountaintop is reached only by exertion, physical or mechanical.

There's the achievement!

After all, anyone can walk downhill, or coast home.

As I write these words, I'm thinking of a spot high on the side of a "Rocky Mountain" in Glacier National Park, in Montana.

There, where I climbed at 19, my b.w. and I picnicked a few summers ago and listened to the voices of mountains.

Someone reputedly asked legendary Sir George Mallory to identify the well-spring of his urge to climb Mt. Everest, the world's highest mountain.

Mallory, speaking in the simplest and the most mystical words, said, "Because it is there."

Sir George disappeared high into eternity in the clouds only a few short yards from his goal.

Mallory is gone. Everest is still there beckoning the dreamers, the adventurers, and, perhaps, the mad.

Martin Luther King proclaimed, "I have been to the mountain," shortly before he was brought to Earth by the lowest of scoundrels.

King's mountain was not Everest, but was just as risky.

King joined Mallory in choosing the lonely, perilous path of the high-altitude dreamer.

The Greek gods lived on Olympus, a formidable mount in Macedonia — but far more accessible than an Everest.

Olympus was a spot just lofty enough to distinguish its divine residents from the hoi polloi living down below.

Mountain resorts in North Carolina, Colorado, New Hampshire, and the European Alps provide us today with much the same kind of "caste stratification by altitude."

The higher up the mountain you live, the swankier you look to those down below.

Mountain-high, you look down literally on most of the rest of the human race — as you do figuratively if your social views depend on an autocratic Weltan-schauung.

Adolf Hitler had a hide-away, The Eagle's Nest, on the tiptop of an Alp near Berchtesgaden, in southern Bavaria.

Some summers ago, my b.w. and I stood on Hitler's front porch and looked out across the green rolling landscape of Central Europe.

Mussolini stood on that same spot with Der Führer more than seven decades ago, as the two insatiable dictators gazed down from their aerie and dreamed of conquest.

Moses brought the Law down from Sinai's mountaintop.

Where else would you expect to meet God on state business?

How prosaic it would seem had Moses brought the Tablets up from the Dead Sea — the lowest spot on Earth!

Where are the Tablets today? Did they ever, in fact, exist?

Are the Ten Commandments really God's Laws?

Could they be pragmatic rules of behavior concocted by the wisest minds among murdering and pillaging primitive tribes? Did God's law come from sages who had observed that the human family must obey moral laws to survive?

Who today would deny that we are better off with the Ten Commandments than without them?

In the "Sermon on the Mount," at the beginning of his ministry, Jesus said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law ... I am come not to destroy, but to fulfill."

Christ's humanized universalization of narrower, harder law brought him an unending stream of adorers — as well as armies of enemies.

Did Christ himself say the words attributed to him?

Was his identifiable historical figure deemed "divine" because no human being could realistically be that wise, that good?

Or were Christ's words merely the distillation of then state-of-the-art human wisdom?

The Sermon on the Mount directs us to live together without destroying not only each other, but the good within ourselves.

Many may argue Christ's divinity, even his existence. But few will argue the uplifting code of ethics delivered on that real or figurative Mount, whence the wisdom of the ages was sung by one human voice.

A mountain is usually a quiet, remote giant.

But a mountaintop is, as well, a convenient and impressive metaphorical high ground for people who broadcast words of wisdom, or folly that passes for wisdom.

No mountain dispenses either wisdom — or folly.

When a mountain decides to speak out loud in its own voice, it thunders, "Get out of the way!"

A volcano's eruption is catastrophic, earsplitting and meaningless annihilation.

A mountain's pompous racket and fury signify nothing save "that's how a mountain sounds."

Channing's, Emerson's, Melville's and Thoreau's transcendentalism unites common thought in a voice to move mountains.

Although mountains may be the most awesome features on the face of our planet, a mountain houses no gods other than those installed in it by the mind of man.

When I was a boy in Central Florida, the late, great Kate Smith, a mountain of a woman in every sense of the word, used to sing to us out of our wooden Philco table-model radio, "When the moon comes over the mountain ..."

In my young mind's eye I painted a picturesque mountain with a full moon coming up behind it.

Gorgeous, blood-red Florida moons rose regularly over our shimmering freshwater lakes, but where was the "mountain" Kate kept singing about?

Kate Smith made me feel cheated in flat, sea-level Florida, and helped set me on a lifelong quest toward mountains and moons across distant horizons.

Perhaps, millions of years ago, the Montana mountain, on whose side b.w. and I picnicked, was under an ocean.

In eons to come, erosion may bring Glacier Park's tall peaks down to sea level once again.

The timeless erosion of mountains instills a sense of the eternal that contrasts with the careening tumbles in our own lives.

Mountains' own majesty and beauty are invisible to themselves, but inspire those who have eyes to behold them and hearts to reverence them.

Do we search too far to find ultimate truth?

Perhaps too often, we fail to look within.

“Change Is Inevitable, But You Can Manage It To Your Advantage.”

As an experienced financial planner, Elizabeth Brothers understands the importance of anticipating change and taking control wherever you can. That’s why she moved to The Mayflower. “In financial planning, it’s important to know you have some control over medical costs,” she says. “A continuing care retirement community like The Mayflower enables you to do that. But don’t wait too long — or you won’t be able to enjoy all the benefits a CCRC has to offer.”

If you’re looking at retirement living options, take a look at The Mayflower. It’s a good plan for the future.
