Deal close in workforce housing suit

MICHELLEY ERTEL
The Voice

Following the Nov. 14 meeting of the Winter Springs City Commission, Atlantic Housing Partners and the city of Winter Springs may be close to settling a lawsuit that would allow a workforce housing development to be built within the city limits.

During the meeting, the Commission voted to move forward with a settlement agreement that would allow Atlantic Housing Partners to build a development in a different part of the city than they first wanted.

Last year, the city denied Atlantic Housing's request to build similar housing on State Road 434 east of the existing Mobile Station because it was in not in compliance with the city's comprehensive plan. Specifically, the developer wanted to build a project that would have underutilized the property from an economic point of view and would have impacted the city's economy, according to city officials. Atlantic Housing didn't agree and sued the city in both federal and state court to be able to build.

Now, officials are mum about the finer details of the agreement

Healing the blind

Doctor gives gift of sight, free of charge

Throughout his life, Todd Markham had his share of bad luck.

At 14 months old, he was stricken with polio in his legs, arms and back. Around age 6, he regained use of everything except his left leg, which was always in a brace. He broke his leg twice and spent two years unable to walk, and in August 2009, he was diagnosed with cataracts in both eyes and went blind.

"The hardest thing for me was losing my eyesight," he said. "Because then you just can't do anything for yourself — you really become a burden."

Around this time last year, the 62-year-old got back his "gift of sight," paying nothing more than time to Dr. David Auerbach of Eye Physicians of Central Florida, for surgery that is usually more than $5,000.

"Of all the things I've been through, being able to see again was just, profound," Markham said. "It's just like experiencing a miracle — that's what it feels like."

Markham is just one of the patients impacted by the free cataract surgery offered by Auerbach at the Maitland clinic through the Gift of Sight program that he started three years ago.

"It was just so beautiful to be able to see the limbs on the trees, and the leaves and you know, everything. I could see the individual blades of the grass," he said. "It's something that you really take advantage of every day when you're out and about."

The program was started for patients like Markham who have cataracts, the No. 1 cause of reversible blindness in the world, and cannot afford the surgery.

"It's heartbreaking to see people come in on a daily basis with no insurance who need care," Auerbach said. "So this is how I choose to give back."

Road improvements headed for downtown

ISAAC BABCOCK

Oviedo residents will get a chance to voice their opinions on a series of road and sidewalk improvements near the city's downtown at a meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 6.

That meeting will feature presentations from Florida Department of Transportation officials who will give details on current plans to make roads safer for drivers and pedestrians along state roads 434, 419 and 426 as they pass through the city's old downtown.

"It improves pedestrian safety," Florida Department of Transportation spokesman Steve Olson said. "Sometimes you have sidewalks on one side of the road and not the other, or they don't go all the way through. The aim of this is to button that up as far as side-because it is still being litigated. They did, however, confirm that a settlement is within reach.

"The applicant (Atlantic Housing) filed a lawsuit in both state and federal court. We recently attended a court-required mediation and, yes, a possible settlement has been reached," said Kevin Smith, city manager for Winter Springs.

The settlement would end both federal and state court cases.

Though the City Commission approved the settlement, Smith said it isn't over yet. "There are a lot of moving parts of the whole deal that have to materialize," he said.

If the settlement is finalized, it would allow workforce housing to be built near the intersection of State Road 434 and Moss Road behind the Bank of America building. The number of units or the demographics of those who would live there aren't being disclosed.

"We believe this settlement provides support to the original Commission decision to deny the project based on its non-compliance with the city's Comprehensive Plan. Additionally, this settlement provides an economic development opportunity to complete an unfinished project located at a different site," Smith said after Monday's meeting.

Winter Springs Mayor Charles Lacey said the settlement and the proposed housing development will "be a good contribution to this community."

The location for the proposed Atlantic Housing development means an old, partially developed piece of land may finally breathe life.

"We made concessions for them to build a quality piece of property on a corner that has been blighted for many years now," Lacey said. "The developer who tried to build there before already has the trees cleared and the plumbing started, and it had just been lying fallow all these years.

"In this settlement, we were able to entice Atlantic Housing to build there. The aesthetics are an upgrade of what would have been required or what is currently in that area. We get a net gain on a property that nobody seemed to want to develop."

If everything goes through as the two sides would like, it would be a relief for Scott Culp of Atlantic Housing. He thinks this plan would help him recoup the costs incurred when his company couldn't proceed with the project.

"Now we have an opportunity to offset some of the costs we had because the property is partially developed. The proposal is good for the city and it is good for us," Culp said.

This isn't the first time Atlantic Housing Partners has butted heads with a nearby city. In 2009, it sued Oviedo under the federal and state Fair Housing Acts. The city and Atlantic Housing had a signed agreement to only build owner-occupied townhouses on the corner of the State Road 434 and Chapman Road, but Atlantic Housing changed its mind and sued because it wanted workforce housing. In the end, the developer withdrew its suit when the city compromised to allow them to build fewer units that look like town homes and gate the community.

"In the end, through all the heartache and all the disagreements, I believe the quality of product they ended up building will not have a long-term detrimental effect on our city," Oviedo Mayor Dominic Persampiere said. "It's a shame, though, the tactics that are employed by Atlantic Housing in order to reach compromises that conversations can bring forth."

EYES | Sanford woman got cataract as result of freak accident

with the economy and how many patients without insurance need the 15-minute surgery, Auerbach created the program to offer 10 free surgeries to patients every November as his Thanksgiving gift.

"I heard of a doctor in Dallas doing this, and I said, 'You know, this is great. This is a really good idea,'" Auerbach said. "And each year to see the expression of how grateful people are really makes this worthwhile."

Cataract surgery is one of the most commonly performed surgical procedures in the United States, as the affliction affects nearly 22 million Americans. In fact, according to the American Academy of Ophthalmology, by age 80 more than half of all Americans have a cataract — and the surgery costs about $5,000 per eye.

Back on track

For 56-year-old Sanford resident Norma Smith, whose husband recently lost his job as an insurance adjuster, that price is unaffordable.

In March, Smith had a freak accident that sent her to the hospital and, seven months later, left her as one of the millions of Americans in need of a cataract surgery.

She was out fishing on the lake when her 9-year-old grandson's hook, which he had been struggling to release from a lily pad, finally unhitched, swung back and struck her left eye. Smith was diagnosed with a detached retina and had to undergo a re-attachment surgery.

"They told me I would get a cataract," she said. "But I thought it would be several years. I didn't realize I'd get it seven months later."

Since the incident, Smith has been uncomfortable driving long distances and driving at night, and she does not read as much as she used to. Even watching TV is hard, she said, "because half of the screen I can't see, and the other half I can."

Five helped

Smith, who is the head of family ministries at First United Methodist Church in Sanford, had no idea how her life was going to get back to normal until one day a friend at her church told her about Auerbach's program.

"It's a wonderful program," she said. "The people in the office, they think about it all year long, about who they are going to choose. They are the nicest people there. They really help you in any way they can."

Auerbach performed five surgeries on Tuesday, Nov. 15, to the patients of this year's program.

"I am very fortunate and lucky to be in the position I am in," he said, "and this is what I'm doing to give back to my community."

The surgery has an almost 100 percent success rate and usually patients are able to see within a day of its completion.

"Somebody is guiding his hand ... that's all I can tell ya," Markham said. "The guy's got a gentle touch, you know? And I think that's kind of magic in a doctor."

ROADS | Public meeting held Tuesday

walks are concerned."

Oviedo's assistant public works director, Bobby Wyatt, said that the project is separate from the road widening that will double the lanes of State Road 434 going through downtown, requiring the demolition of one of the city's fire stations and the Memorial Building. That project's construction will begin after the one to be discussed Dec. 6, which will commence at the end of 2013 at the earliest.

Mayor Dominic Persampiere said that more expensive road-widening project is still moving forward, though construction has yet to be announced.

"They're going to start the acquisition of the property and right of way in the next few years," Persampiere said. "We don't have a specific timeline for when the project will start."

The more immediate improvements in the area will include a stoplight at the corner of State Road 434 and Franklin Street, to help prevent accidents from cars pulling out from the westbound terminus of Franklin Street. Trees will also be removed at that street to improve visibility at that intersection.

That intersection's safety had already seen improvements once before in the wake of complaints that a house at the south side of Franklin Street was blocking drivers' view through the intersection.

"When you come down Franklin and you're headed west, there was a house there with a lot of trees and bushes which we did remove, so it was difficult to see before," Councilman Steve Henken said. "You can see much better now. And now they'll have a light so that will remove the human error out of it."

A series of sidewalks will also be added in along some roads near downtown, notably an extension of sidewalk heading eastward from Pine Avenue in front of Oviedo High School, where no sidewalks currently exist.

Road meeting

The meeting to discuss repaving, safety and sidewalk improvements on state roads 434, 419 and 426 is at the Seminole County Public Library's East Branch at 310 N. Division St., from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 6, with presentations from FDOT officials at 6 p.m. and 6:45 p.m. View information at www.cflroads.com

Tis the season to go nuts!

There are lots of ways to tell (and dance) the Nutcracker story — all around Central Florida. Here's my guide to "going Nuts" this season ...

Orlando Repertory Theatre

The Orlando Repertory Theatre turns the "Nutcracker" into a musical in this kids-fun production for the family. Rockin' songs by family music artist Ralph Covert (of Ralph's World) set the tone as Fritz, a video game-obsessed boy, and a heroic Nutcracker chase down the dastardly Mouse King to save Christmas! Show times are Saturdays at noon and 4 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. through Sunday, Dec. 18. Call 407-896-7365 or visit orlandorep.com

Universal Child Care

Celebrating diversity while encouraging the talent of young people, Universal Child Care Performing Arts will present the "Chocolate Nutcracker" with more than 300 young people on stage and in the orchestra. This adaptation of Tchaikovsky's classic will be performed on Friday,

Dec. 2, at 10 a.m. (children's version) and Saturday, Dec. 3, at 7 p.m. at the Bob Carr Performing Arts Centre in Orlando. This modern-day version is set in Harlem and incorporates dance styles including jazz, tap, hip-hop and ballet. Call 407-403-5519 or visit ChocolateNutcrackerOrlando.org

Central Florida Ballet

Central Florida Ballet's always-entertaining "Nutcracker" has been named "one of five outstanding productions in the entire nation" by CNN and "the pyrotechnic Nutcracker" by USA Today. CFB's production will feature guest artists of Ballet Sibiu (of Romania) on Saturday, Dec. 10, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 11, at 2 p.m. at the Linda Chapin Theatre in the Orange County Convention Center in Orlando. Call 407-849-9948 or visit centralfloridaballet.com

Orlando Ballet

The professional Orlando Ballet presents the area's classic production and invites the award-winning students from the Orlando Ballet School to join them in the children's roles. Artistic director Robert Hill stays true to the classic while breathing new life into the production with his own choreography. It's Dec. 15-17 at 7:30 p.m. and Dec. 18 at 2 p.m. with a children's shortened version on Dec. 17 at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. and Dec. 18 at 11 a.m. at the Bob Carr Performing Arts Centre. Call 407-426-1739 or visit orlandoballet.org

Galmont Ballet

The Galmont Ballet presents Frank Galvez's "American Nutcracker" set in the United States in the 19th century. With a Victorian Christmas tree decorated in red, white and blue, party boys dressed as cowboys, and impressive special effects, this American Nutcracker continues the celebration of family, tradition and love of the original. It's Dec. 17-18 at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. at the Historic Cocoa Village Playhouse in Cocoa. 321-636-5050 or Galmont-ballet.com

Russian Ballet

A free Nutcracker is offered in Orlando at the Disney Amphitheater by Lake Eola in Downtown Orlando. The Russian Ballet of Orlando presents a gift to the community with a free "Nutcracker Under the Stars" (outdoors) on Dec. 17 at 7:30 p.m. The performance is choreographed by Vadim Fedotov and features both professional dancers and Academy students. 407-797-1281 or RussianBalletofOrlando.org

Happily Toxic

The award-winning — and wildly entertaining — Toxic Audio sings their entire performance without instrumental accompaniment, but you won't believe that as these super-talented singers show us the range of what the human voice can do. Toxic Audio is at the Wayne Densch Performing Arts Center in Sanford on Dec. 30. www.wdpac.com or 407-321-8111.

Virtuosity takes the stage

Virtuoso pianist William Wolfram joins the Orlando Philharmonic Orchestra to perform Brahms' powerful 1st Piano Concerto on Jan. 14 at the Bob Carr PAC in Orlando. Contact 407-770-0071 or orlandophil.org

Christmas spirit arrives at Lawton House on Saturday

I hope everyone had a wonderful Thanksgiving with family and friends. Our family had lots of yummy food, and we all indulged and forgot about those nasty calories. I am now getting into the Christmas spirit. Several members of the historical society spent last Saturday decorating the Lawton house for our Holiday Christmas Tree Lighting on Saturday, Dec. 3. We hung garland, lights, the tree and decorations, all to Christmas music. What a fun time, and we were done in about two hours. If you pass by the Lawton House, you will see the finished product on Saturday night, when Santa comes by fire engine at 6 p.m. and lights the tree. Do come, bring the whole family and have food and drinks, listen to music, and visit with the jolly old man in the red suit. That is Saturday evening at 5:30 p.m. You might also want to make a day of it by visiting our farmers market that day from 8 a.m.-1 p.m.

Holiday Gift Fair

Also on Saturday, Dec. 3, St. Luke's will hold their 14th annual Holiday Gift Fair from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. in Founders' Hall/gym. The event will feature products from local vendors and crafts people, food and drinks booths, a Christmas tree sale by the senior youth group and free holiday concert by the Brass Band of Central Florida. Need more information? Please call Linda 407-277-3698.

Holiday pottery

The holiday pottery tour will be 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3, and Sunday, Dec. 4, at Ann Robinson's studio, 811 Eyrie Drive, Oviedo. The eighth annual Oviedo Potters holiday tour and sale will feature self-guided tours of the studios of three potters: Barbara Baily, Mary Loving and Ann Robinson. The studios are within minutes of downtown Oviedo. Tour maps will be distributed at all studios. Free admission. For more information, call 407-365-7404.

Skating party

Tuesday, Dec. 6, Dr. David Lach of Lach Orthodontics is hosting a free skating party to benefit both the Smiles for Hope Foundation and Families in Transition. The event will be held at the Universal Skating Center on Goldenrod Road from 4 p.m.-7 p.m. There will be games, prizes and a raffle for a free pair of braces. Admission is free and a donation of canned food or new unwrapped toy will get you in the door. If you would like more information, visit www.eventbrite.com

Snow in Oviedo

Want to play in the snow? Well, on Saturday, Dec. 10, the Oviedo Recreation and Parks Department will transform the Oviedo Mall into that winter wonderland called Snow Mountain. Participants can enjoy sled rides down the mountain, a snow play area, entertainment, carnival games, art and craft vendors, pictures with Santa and more. Need more information? Call 407-971-5575.

Christmas play

On Saturday, Dec. 10, and Sunday, Dec. 11, "The Christmas Miracle" will be performed at the Rural Heritage Center, 101 E. Main St. Saturday's show will be at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday's will be at 2 p.m. "It's Christmastime, and we see a grandfather who has lost a wife, a daughter and now faces the threat of losing a beloved granddaughter ... all make this show a 'want to know how the ending goes!'" Tickets are $12 for children and seniors, and $15 for adults ($18 for preferred seating). To purchase tickets in advance, go to the Rural Heritage Center on Monday, Tuesday or Thursday from 9 a.m.-noon or call 407-792-0758.

Sanford parade

Sanford Christmas Parade is 6 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 10, in downtown Sanford, on First Street. The city will celebrate the holiday season with the theme "Rockin' around the Christmas Tree." There will be live holiday entertainment, illuminated floats, music and dancing. Admission to the parade is free.

Christmas Eve service

Mark your calendar for Christmas Eve candlelight services to be presented at the First United Methodist Church on Saturday, Dec. 24. The services are: 4 p.m., praise and worship, family service; 6 p.m., traditional service with handbell choir — there will be a pre-service handbell concert at 5:15 p.m.-8 p.m., traditional service with chancel choir; and 10 p.m., traditional, communion service. Nursery will be provided at the 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. services. You may call the church office 407-365-3255 if more information is needed.

Dad raises inspiring teens

STETSON'S CORNER

By Karen McEnany-Phillips

It is said that Christmas is for children, and in this season of magic I'm afraid that as a society we have not served the youngest among us well. Societies can be measured by how they raise, nurture and support their youngest citizens. In my mind it is not merely how much we give them, how many free programs they receive or even how much technology they enjoy.

Spoiling our kids

We overindulge with material things by elbowing into toy departments at ungodly hours of Black Friday weekend to buy their love with an ultimate gift. We overprotect with an "every-one wins" mentality, give in too easily to their demands and pursue their friendship instead of preparing them for life. We feed them too much sugar and have lost our nerve to steer them by our true north. We have allowed the media in all its hi-tech glory to assume the parenting role and confused wants and needs—we have undeniably spoiled them.

Sound bytes of children neglected

We are outraged for a few moments when we hear about a toddler purposely abandoned in the woods while its infantile parents bicker over their personal relationship. The story grabs our attention briefly and then we move on. We have become almost numb to stories of bad behavior and family violence.

But just when I've become unalterably cynical, I watch a riveting interview like the one "60 Minutes" anchor Scott Pelley did with the Metzger siblings who have been living with their dad in a panel truck in Seminole County for the last five months.

Homeless man raises teens with character

These children are articulate and appear to be wise beyond their years, grounded, confident and resilient. Unlike the average teen, they know exactly who they are and the word victim is not part of the description. They define themselves by their dreams not their circumstances. Each day is full of basic tasks to reach those dreams: homework, library internet time and even entrepreneurship.

These young teens who lost their mom at an early age show more courage and grace than most adults I know. Following the broadcast, many reached out to the family, which was wonderful. I listened to a radio interview with the teens earlier this week, and mixed with Arielle's gratitude was a respectful appeal for everyone to focus on other kids who still need help. Arielle wants to be a lawyer; I'd like her on my side.

The Metzgers' dad may struggle to provide them material basics, but he obviously provides them with character, courage and confidence. Truly enduring gifts.

Encourage Geneva kids

Geneva has several opportunities to support and encourage our kids. Our most vulnerable families need food and you can help by attending the live music concert fundraiser and donating to the Church of God food bank. A minimum $5 donation will provide more than 25 pounds of food to local families as they can purchase food for 18 cents a pound. The concert is Saturday, Dec. 3, at 6 p.m. at the Rural Heritage Center.

The Musical Mustangs of Geneva Elementary are performing Tuesday, Dec. 6, at 7 p.m. This standing-room only holiday performance is a must-do. Our kids will put you in the holiday spirit!

Finally the village is buzzing about a landmark theater performance on Saturday, Dec. 10, and Sunday, Dec. 11, at the Rural Heritage Center by Spotlight Theatre Group. "The Christmas Miracle" live performance will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday evening with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday. From my GARDEN to yours

Garden abundance

As summer lingers in my garden, the first three days below 90 degrees Fahrenheit triggers the beginning of autumn planting. This timing usually synchronizes around the date we flip the calendar page over to October. Not needing to contend with pounding rain, scorching sun, buzzing mosquitoes, and back-to-school headaches revisits the joys of gardening. Fast forward 60 days and everything we planted is now producing all at once. Eat, share, waste or preserve?

Oxymoronically referring to a root cellar in Florida leaves us pondering where to store any excess harvest. Relative heat, humidity, bugs and geologic limitations (no basements in Florida) limit many passive crop storage options. A primary rule of thumb is to have a use planned for any crop before the first seed is planted. This usually plays out to the shortest route from the garden to dinner plate. Sometimes our eyes are bigger than our stomach, so what's a poor boy to do?

Every kitchen is equipped to blanch and freeze most vegetable crops. After quickly plunging diced veggies from the boiling cauldron straight into the freezer, nutritional qualities surpass casually stored and refrigerated produce. You can see by the number of zip-lock bags of green beans and carrots in my freezer that blanching is high on the practicality list.

Salsa of tomatoes, peppers, onions, citrus and herbs are one of my favorite ways to simply use garden produce. The acid content of a salsa concoction is critical to avoid food poisoning.

Drying fruits and vegetables is a skill of complexity and equipment in parallel to other home preservation projects. Eternal humidity in Florida must be hushed to the extreme or a 'hairy' mess will await eager foragers into the pantry. Dedicated dehydration devices used in tandem with a warm oven easily deliver this skill to any homesteader.

Hot bath pickling with vinegar and salt is a long-term solution to preservation needs. The initial hardware investment must be supplemented with regular purchases of jars, lids and rings. My pickled okra is to die for. Dilly beans have survived for months before being slurped down with a cold beverage at happy hour. A web search of detailed instructions will do this home-economics project the justice it deserves. (Before tackling any of these preservation projects, please research the various cautions regarding food safety and spoilage.)

Have a happy and locally grown holiday season!

SHARI KING
The Voice

Six Central Florida homeowners will deck their halls and open their homes for holiday cheer, and charity, this weekend.

The first Holiday Tours of Homes, presented by Frontier Civitan, will feature homes in Baldwin Park, Winter Park and Winter Springs and allow attendees to get a peak into homes, from traditional to modern, and walk away with some ideas for their own holiday décor.

The tour is the collaborative effort of Civitan members Olga Calvet, a Baldwin Park resident, and Frances Conner, a Winter Springs resident. Both will open their home for the tour.

Calvet, a founding member of the Frontier Civitan Club, said past fundraisers for the group have focused on silent auctions. Calvet and Conner decided this year they wanted to do something different.

"I think this is something that people can do and enjoy for a nice outing for Christmas," Calvet said. "This will give them another option [to traditional events such as the Nutcracker Ballet]."

"Plus, you are helping a charity," Conner said.

More than a service org

Although Frontier Civitan is part of a large international organization, the Orlando group has autonomy in its decisions about which charitable causes they chose to be involved with.

Besides working with myriad organizations, such as the American Heart Association, Coalition For The Homeless, Special Olympics, Down Syndrome Association and Clean The World, Calvet said, "We try to locate people that would not qualify for any governmental and other agency help. There are a lot of people that just fall through the cracks because they don't qualify for one reason or another."

"At Christmas time, we will find families that fall through the cracks and buy presents for the children."

Frontier Civitan is one of six Civitan clubs in Central Florida and is exclusively female, as it has been since starting up in 1974.

Of the 30-plus members, said Conner, more than half have been members of the club at least 15 years.

"We love what we do," Calvet said, "and it has gone a little further that just having a group of women come together to serve the community. We are also helping one another."

Giving back

Calvet said the club also sponsors Junior Civitan clubs at Bishop Moore and Lake Howell high schools "to teach leadership and to teach young students that they have to be involved in their community ... and give back. We take this very seriously. Our club is very involved in working with our juniors."

It was through the Junior Civitan Club at Bishop Moore that Calvet met Marta Khoury, whose daughters were both involved in the high school group. When Calvet asked Khoury if she would volunteer her house for the tour, Khoury said yes.

"They help so many organizations, it is something worth doing," Khoury said. "Why not share the goodness?"

Khoury and her husband, Robert, live in a Mediterranean-style home they built eight years ago on Genius Drive in Winter Park.

"We wanted it to be homey and cozy, and we wanted it to blend with the scenery around us," Khoury said. The home is located on Lake Virginia, with a view of Lake Mizell from the front door.

An 18-foot tree graces the main room of the house, and complements the reds and green of the traditional antique furniture, handed down from Robert's mother. But other rooms will be more whimsical, Khoury said.

"Every part of my house has a story to tell. We want to have something different in every room," she said, including unusual, handmade decorations, such as a beaded tree she purchased at a

The Frontier Civitan Club First annual Tour of Homes will be 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 3, and noon-5 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 4. Tickets are $25 in advance/$30 day of. To purchase tickets or learn more, visit frontiercivitanclub.org/Tour_of_Homes.html or call 407-359-8941.

The tour can start at 669 Oneida Lane in Winter Springs or 2203 Snow Road in Baldwin Park. Armbands and maps are available at both locations. Net proceeds benefit local charities and community projects as supported by the Frontier Civitan organization.

recent Festival of Trees event.

"You don't have to spend a lot of money on decorations. Simple things make it very pretty and elegant," Khoury said. She suggests vines and leaves from your garden, as one example.

Khoury recalls the traditions of her childhood in El Salvador, where pine Christmas trees were not commonly used, and Santa left presents under the beds of children.

"When I grew up, I remember my mother would go and find branches and spray them and we would make our own ornaments. That's how we grew up," Khoury said. "It is just so much fun to create something. It is very therapeutic. That's why I love doing crafts and doing anything with my hands."

From traditional to modern

The Calvets' Baldwin Park home will serve as a registration point for the southern end of the tour. Attendees can either register online and pick up their arm bands at the Calvet home, or the Conner home in Winter Springs, or purchase them at either location the day of the tour.

The second Baldwin Park location is the townhome of the Calvets' daughter, Alexandra, and will feature a "modern and sleek" approach to holiday decorating in juxtaposition to the Spanish Colonial "with a Cuban twist" custom home the Calvets built in 2005.

"Not necessarily Spanish ... but very traditional," is how Calvet describes her decorating style. She said one of two trees in the home will include all crystal ornaments in red and jewel tones.

Conner's decorating scheme takes inspiration from and pays homage to her homes roots. Built more than 20 years ago in Winter Springs' burgeoning Tuskawilla neighborhood, she describes her home as "Southern style," customized with bricks, wide plank flooring, and doors brought from New Orleans by the previous owner.

"[Christmas] was my mother's favorite holiday," Conner said. "And I love to decorate ... period!"

Rounding out the tour are the homes of Betty Wiseman, in Winter Springs, and Gloria Lochrane, in Winter Park.

Local organizations make sure seniors get what they need throughout the holiday season

MEISHA PERRIN
The Voice

Judy Fraden spent much of last Wednesday afternoon driving around Altamonte Springs.

She had four gift bags decorated with brightly colored tissue paper and six neatly packaged containers of food on her back seat, and she was following the directions written on a piece of paper to take her to her first of four destinations.

Her long burnt orange and deep red floral skirt blew in the wind as she walked up, bags in hand, to Unit 183. She had been to the same first-floor apartment for Rosh Hashanah in September, but still waited anxiously for 89-year-old Joe Zollman to answer the door.

She was greeted with a smile and a warm embrace.

Fraden was just one of the volunteers for Jewish Family Services who delivered Thanksgiving meals to homebound seniors of all faiths on Wednesday, Nov. 23 — and because of their outreach, dozens of seniors such as Zollman, who cannot leave their house, have something to look forward to during the holiday season.

For Zollman and his wife of 63 years, Greta, who is confined to a wheelchair, the meals are lifesaving.

Joe and Greta Zollman received their Thanksgiving meal from Jewish Family Services volunteer Judy Fraden, back center. Back right is caretaker Roxanne Efung.

"Joe does the majority of the cooking," their caretaker, Roxanne Efung, said. "So for him it is a little break."

The Zollmans have been getting their holiday meals through JFS for four years now, and for the two Holocaust survivors who often think back to the day they first arrived in the U.S. knowing no English, recognizing and celebrating the holidays each year is a great reminder of how far they have come.

"The Jewish community does an outstanding job, and it is really remarkable what they do," Joe Zollman said. "I am forever grateful."

Every year there are so many organizations such as JFS that offer outreach to homebound seniors, some of whom live alone and really look forward to the company, even if it is just for a moment.

Seniors First, an organization with a mission to keep seniors independent, also offers meals to seniors during the holiday season. The 45-year-old organization, best known for its Meals on Wheels program, delivers 900-1,000 meals every day.

The organization also offers a congregate meal program that brings seniors who are able to leave their house together for a meal.

It gives them a chance to socialize, said Marsha Lorenz, president and CEO of Seniors First.

There are 16 centers throughout Seminole and Orange counties that host the neighborhood lunches, and some transportation is provided for those seniors who are unable to drive.

More than 6,600 seniors benefited from Seniors First's outreach programs last year.

Medicare health checks catch problems early

SENIOR NEWS LINE

by Matilda Charles

Medicare has added another preventive service to our benefits: a yearly consultation with our health care provider to look at ways to prevent cardiovascular disease, such as coronary heart disease and stroke. This additional consultation can include exploring changes to diet, screening for hypertension and more. Until now, the covered service was a blood test every five years.

The list of Medicare preventive services is long, and it's to our benefit to use as many of these as our doctors think we need. Here is a sample of what is available:

—Colon cancer screenings: Can include a colonoscopy every 24 to 120 months, depending on your level of risk for colon cancer. A blood test can be ordered every 12 months.

—Bone-mass measurement: Tests for the risk of osteoporosis, and can be done every 24 months, or more often if indicated.

—Pneumococcal shots: Vaccine covers pneumococcal pneumonia, bacteremia, meningitis and otitis media, and generally only needs to be given once, although some at risk might need a booster shot.

—Glaucoma test: For those with a risk due to diabetes, a family history or other indications, this test can be a sight saver.

—Mammograms: Free yearly breast cancer screening if the doctor accepts the assignment.

—Prostate cancer screenings: Both the exam and a Prostate Specific Antigen (PSA) test is suggested once a year for men age 50 and older.

To see the rest of the preventive services, go to the Medicare website (www.medicare.gov), click Manage Your Health, then Preventive Services. There's even a printable chart you can take to your doctor to ask whether the assessments and screenings are right for you.

Medicare Annual Enrollment ends on December 7th

The Annual Enrollment Period for 2012 began on October 15th and ends on December 7th of 2011.

This is the time when eligible Medicare Beneficiaries can join a Medicare Advantage Plan. Coverage from the plan you join will begin on January 1, 2012. Enrollment opportunities for all parts of Medicare are limited and late enrollment is either prohibited or penalized.

The Medicare program is administered and regulated by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS). There are four different components to Medicare:

- Part A – Hospital Insurance – Covers things like inpatient care, skilled nursing facility, hospice and home health care.
- Part B – Medical Insurance – Covers doctors visits, outpatient services and some preventive services

Original Medicare consists of only these two components. Note that Part B has a monthly premium which is deducted from the Medicare beneficiary's monthly Social Security check. Most people will pay the standard premium ($96.40 in 2011; it may increase in 2012), but those with higher incomes (over $85,000 for singles; over $170,000 for married couples) will pay higher premiums. Also, both Part A and Part B have other expenses such as deductibles, coinsurance and co-payments. As a rule, Medicare Supplement Plans (also known as Medi-Gap Plans), which are available through numerous insurance carriers at a substantial monthly premium, will cover those gaps.

- Part C – Medicare Advantage - These plans, available from numerous insurance carriers, include both Parts A and B and usually Part D coverage as well. Many plans will offer additional benefits, such as vision, dental, hearing and wellness programs. Some plans will even rebate up to $96.40 of the Part B premium that Medicare deducts from your monthly Social Security benefit check.
- Part D – Prescription Drug Coverage - Helps cover the cost of prescription drugs. You don't automatically get this coverage when you become eligible for Medicare; you need either to join a Medicare Advantage Plan (Part C) or pay a premium to add a prescription drug plan to your Original Medicare or Medicare Supplement coverage.

HOW TO JOIN - Review the CMS handbook, "Medicare and You." If you have internet access, you can go to www.medicare.gov and find additional information on Medicare Advantage Plans and/or Medicare Supplement Plans available in your area and the ratings of said plans. Decide whether you want to pay premiums (for a Medicare Supplement Plan and/or a Prescription Drug Plan) or enroll in a Medicare Advantage Plan. Important – Annual Enrollment ends on December 7th.

There are other times you might be able to join a Medicare Advantage Plan, too. For instance, if you are turning 65, are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid, move into/out of the Medicare Advantage Plan's service area, receive extra help with prescription drug plan costs, or lose retiree health care coverage through your employer or union you may qualify for a Special Enrollment Period.

One Senior Place The First Stop for Senior Care and Services

For Central Florida seniors, their families and caregivers, finding products, services and resources that cater to their specific needs is about to be much easier – thanks to One Senior Place expansion to Orlando.

Building on 6 years of award-winning success in Brevard County, One Senior Place is about to open its second location to serve the Greater Orlando area – February 2012! One Senior Place is a business community that incorporates a wide range of senior-focused providers, a Senior Resource Library, Living Options Showroom, auditorium and conference center, and access to elder care management services. The center is located at 715 Douglas Avenue in Altamonte Springs and is built on the concept that combines business and service providers in a unique mall-like environment with the most thorough information, comprehensive resources and unbiased advice – all in a friendly, helpful environment. The concept integrates access to businesses, social and service organizations, non-profit resources, activities, events and care solutions – all dedicated to seniors, and all in one place.

In short, One Senior Place is the first step in navigating the maze of elder care. Never before have seniors or their families been able to call or visit one place and talk with experienced professionals in the senior services network who have access to all the senior resources available in the community. Seniors and their family members will be able to use the “one-stop” resource for answers on everything from health care, legal, financial concerns, in-home care, to educational seminars and events designed for the active senior to remain engaged and informed. One Senior Place Orlando will also offer a Living Options Showroom and on-site Senior Resource Library that lets visitors gather information and learn about products or services particular to seniors.

But it's not all about care or support. Active seniors will find classes, seminars and an Active Senior Club to join and enjoy. Mark your calendar now for February 1, 2012 when One Senior Place will officially open in Orlando. You will be invited to see firsthand how One Senior Place is revolutionizing how America shops for elder care and services. Grand opening events are being planned now, so watch for details in coming months. We're not a senior center, a healthcare facility, a nursing home, or a place to live. We're the “personal assistant” you need who has done the research to put you in touch with whatever you need. Soon, you will be able to find what you need, all in one place. No more unanswered questions, no more wondering where to begin.

THIS WEEK in sports history

Dec. 14, 1909 —

Workers place the last of the 3.2 million 10-pound bricks that pave the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in Indiana. Since then, all but a 1-yard-wide strip at the start-finish line has been buried under asphalt. Kissing those bricks after a successful race remains a tradition among Indy drivers.

Knights get big wins

The Voice

The UCF Knights did something last weekend they haven't done in nearly a year: won a football game and lost a men's basketball game.

On Friday, Nov. 25, the football team (5-7, 3-5) did something they hadn't done the entire month of November, winning a game against UTEP (5-7, 2-6). They won convincingly with a 31-14 smashing that was dominated by UCF from the outset.

For the Knights, whose postseason hopes ended the previous week against East Carolina, it's rebuilding time, with a crop of promising freshmen with another year under their belt to hopefully sort some teething issues they faced in their first season.

Basketball

UCF's men's basketball team wasted no time establishing itself as a dominant force so far this season, with an exhibition win Nov. 5 followed by a 4-2 regular season start against tough competition from around the nation.

And the Knights may already have a high point to their early season, shocking No. 4 Connecticut 68-63 on Nov. 25 at the Battle 4 Atlantis in the Bahamas. The Huskies (6-1) were ranked No. 4 in the nation at the time. Since their first loss, the Huskies have since descended to No. 8 in the Associated Press poll.

Helping the Knights to that comeback win was a leading duo of forward Keith Clanton and guard Marcus Jordan, who each scored 20 points, with Jordan picking up seven assists and seven rebounds. Becoming more of a presence after last season, Isaiah Sykes has filled his new starting role well, with 10 points against UConn.

The Knights announced captain A.J. Rompza will be able to return as early as Dec. 30 once he's satisfied NCAA requirements. That's just in time for the second day of the UCF Holiday Classic.

For the Knights this weekend, it's the beginning of a four-game homestand starting against Hartford at 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3. As of Tuesday the Hawks were 0-6 on the season preparing to host Yale.

Lions roar on the court

The Voice

The Oviedo Lions are already making a statement on the basketball court this season, blasting off to a 3-0 start in their first week on the court. And the games will come fast and furious in the next week, as the Lions face three big opponents in just five days.

The Lions made quick work of their first three opponents of the season, blowing away Agape Christian 81-49 on Monday, Nov. 21, then beating Celebration 60-47 the next day. But a tight game that went to the final seconds against Lyman may have been the Lions' biggest win so far, proving they can perform in the clutch.

Sharpshooter Matt Milon nailed 63 percent of his shots on the night for 14 points, including the decisive shot that put the Lions ahead 53-51 before time expired.

Though Oviedo's RJ June put on a show offensively with 23 points in the game, the low-scoring affair was dominated by defense. The scrappy Lions grabbed 13 steals in the game, at one point controlling the ball so well that they held the Greyhounds to only three points in the third quarter.

On Friday, Dec. 2, they'll host cross-town rival Hagerty for a 7:30 p.m. showdown. Last season the two met twice, with Hagerty prevailing both times by a total spread of five points.

After that grudge match the Lions will travel to Lake Brantley for a 7:30 p.m. Dec.

5 tipoff. Then they'll head back home the next day for their first game against Seminole at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 6.

Hagerty

The Huskies made it into the regional play-offs last season on the backs of a strong starting lineup, almost all of which has returned for this season. That's already paved the way to a strong start, with a big 66-33 win against Spruce Creek proving the Huskies have the offensive firepower.

They'll travel to Oviedo for a 7:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 2, tipoff, then have a few days' break before hosting Lake Mary at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 7.

Winter Springs

Three straight losses after a narrow win have made for a tough introduction to the season for the Bears. Winter Springs fell to Lyman, Lake Brantley and East River in the past week, after struggling to score more than 50 points per game.

They'll travel to Freedom for a 7:30 p.m. start on Friday, Dec. 2, then return home for a 7:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 5 showdown against Lyman.

Football

Oviedo's foray into the postseason was a short-lived one, as they were edged in the first round by Clermont's East Ridge 21-18 on Friday, Nov. 18. That narrow loss ended the postseason hopes for the district champions.

THIS WEEK in political history

Dec. 16, 1773 —

In Boston Harbor, a group of Massachusetts colonists, some disguised as Mohawk Indians, board three British tea ships and dump 342 chests of tea into the harbor in protest of the British Parliament's Tea Act of 1773. The value of the tea was more than $700,000 in today's currency.

EMPLOYMENT

Ask Sandi

Volunteer to bolster skills

With all of the holidays around us it is easy to get sidetracked from your job search. It is also easy to get depressed and frustrated. I have heard of job searching these days being compared to playing the lottery. You send out your resume, hoping you have a chance to hear back.

Don't let this important time be a distraction. Many people plan to look for new jobs in the New Year, which may open a position for you. Continue to follow a job search plan, research companies, attend open houses, attend job fairs, network, apply for openings you see, and follow up as you are able.

One lady I have been working with had two interviews last week, and she came away so positive. Take those opportunities to celebrate. Even if you don't get the job, it gives you a chance to fine-tune your interviewing skills.

There are lots of opportunities to volunteer at this time of the year. This is a great way to get your mind off things, keep your skills fresh and meet new people. Who knows, maybe your volunteer job could lead into a full-time job.

If you need food assistance or other help during the holidays, there are many churches and agencies that step up their giving at this time. Look at your local papers, watch the news and call around to see who is offering what.

Most of all, be thankful for what you do have. It can be hard, but thinking positive is always better than the alternative.

Hunger, homelessness and our children

The Casselberry community is responding aggressively to the needs of hungry and homeless families filmed on "60 Minutes."

For the second time this year, "60 Minutes" has been filming in Casselberry Elementary School. As the first segment aired in March, the Casselberry community was shocked and embarrassed that there were children in our neighborhoods who were going to bed hungry and growing up homeless. The problem was, and still remains, overwhelming, but we have decided to work together and see what kind of a difference we can make!

Within days of the first segment airing, local churches and community members had begun meeting the immediate, short-term needs of the students at Casselberry Elementary, our local school. Short-term needs were initially met through providing food and clothing as well as job-finding support, fun family nights at the school and a summer program that ensured that no child in the city of Casselberry went hungry during the long summer months.

As the short-term needs were addressed, we began working on a long-term solution to the issues of hunger and homelessness. This includes mentoring programs, fun community activities and helping people move out of a lifestyle of poverty to self-sustainability. One of the centerpieces of the community's response has been the placement of a "Care Cabin" on the property of Casselberry Elementary School. This is a portable cabin stocked with all the resources necessary to care for our community kids. This cabin is run, managed and organized for our community by our community. Dede Schaffner, chairwoman of the Seminole County School Board, said that this method of school-centered care is a "model for the nation."

There are so many factors involved that put children into poverty, and there are an equal number of things that need to be done to help them out. To help people move into stable circumstances is going to take a continual investment of time, energy, effort and love.

Our work has been accomplished through the formation of a community task force, with more than 30 organizations uniting together around the cause of ensuring that no child in our city would go hungry or sleep on the streets. We haven't yet accomplished this goal and continue to fight an uphill battle in doing so as societal pressures (loss of jobs, reduction in income, etc.) often mean that our families have to take a step backward before they can take one forward. The motto of our task force is a quote from Harry Truman, who said "It's amazing what can happen when you don't care who gets the credit." This selfless attitude is one of the values that have kept us going in a messy and discouraging context.

A school-centric model of care has been developed that has made an incredible difference in the lives of our children. This is all possible through a collaborative partnership where the local community serves the needs of students within our school.

Since the show's first airing, stomachs have been filled, employment has been found, houses have been moved into and smiles have been restored to children's faces. The plight of the children in our city brought us together and our community has responded by demonstrating that Casselberry is a community that cares!

Be a lifesaver when others panic

DR. DENISE PANUCCIO
Guest Writer

I am a Seminole County resident and an internal medicine physician. I am also mother to three active kids, one who plays tackle football on AAU league in Sanford. This past Saturday we were having an end-of-year barbecue for the football team. It was a picture perfect day, until something unbelievable happened.

My husband and I were the unofficial team physicians for the past four years. During games we treated cuts, bruises, broken bones and dehydration. This particular day I attended the party without my husband and my oldest son. I was in line to get a hamburger when I heard "Denise, we need you." Thinking it was a scraped knee or such, I said, "Sure, be right there." In the background, a crowd of partygoers screamed that a dad from the team had fallen down and was having a seizure. I dropped my plate, left my daughter and started running to the basketball court. The entrance was blocked by people. I put my hands on someone's chest and pushed them hard out of my way, as I yelled, "You, call 911!"

My friend was on his side under the basket, not moving. And I was afraid it was more than a seizure. I rolled him to his back and stared at his blue face, foaming mouth and eyes that were rolled back in his head. His wife was 2-3 feet away, screaming and crying. There was a ring of adults standing nearby. I believe they were helping the victim's wife and calling 911.

The only thing I saw from then on was my cyanotic friend. I remembered to myself, "ABC: airway, breathing, circulation." I lifted his neck, supported his head, and blew into his mouth. The sound that came out was a death rattle. I was frightened, but I had to keep giving him oxygen, I did this over and over. Finally, I saw some color coming back, but not as quickly as I had hoped. Still, there was no sign of his pulse returning, and no movement of his face.

Then, just as I was about to leave his mouth to check his pulse and start chest compressions, I heard a voice behind me, "I know CPR. How can I help?" There is a God, I said to myself. I was back in doctor mode and gave out orders,

"Go on that side and get me a pulse." "No pulse!" she exclaimed, and correctly told me she was ready to do chest compressions whenever I gave the order.

Suddenly, there were my friend's eyes, still pinpoint, but looking at me! Next, there was a flicker of movement in his face! "No chest compressions!" I yelled with relief.

CPR saves lives. Learn it, you never know when you may need it. Stories like this do not always have happy endings, not without CPR training. You never know when your friend may need it.

Visit RedCross.org or Heart.org for information on first aid and CPR classes.
