HOW WEIRD IS THAT?
SEAN MCCARTHY

Spend any time surfing the Web and you are bound to find stories that are just too bizarre to be true. Here's a sampling, edited for length. And remember, just because it's online doesn't mean it's true!

From news.aol.com:
World's priciest beer to be auctioned

The world's most expensive bottle of beer went on the auction last block Saturday; just don't expect to drink it.

According to Andrew Aldridge of the British auction house Henry Aldridge and Son, the contents are downright undrinkable. That's because the beer bottle, which is still about 80 percent full, survived the famous fiery crash of the Hindenburg in New Jersey more than 70 years ago.

A milk pitcher that survived the crash will be sold as well. The Hindenburg was the largest aircraft ever take to the skies. On May 6, 1937, the hydrogen gas in the airship caught fire and 36 of 97 passengers died.

According to the auction catalog, a local fire chief recovered the pitcher and several beer bottles from the crash. He gave five of the bottles to colleagues and one to the Lowenbrau brewery. The pitcher bears the logo of the Hindenburg's company. The other bottles have been lost.

City hall furloughs mean savings

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

SEBASTIAN — With two furlough days already complete, Sebastian city manager Al Minner said everyone is adjusting to the schedule.

"There have been no public comments about the furloughs," Mr. Minner said.

In order to help with this year's budget shortfall, Sebastian City Council approved a policy that all full-time employees, with the exception of police and golf course employees, would take 12 days off without pay.

The furloughs are estimated to save the city $300,000, Mr. Minner said.

That figure just takes into consideration savings in salaries and benefits, but there are expected to be some ancillary savings in gas and electricity not factored

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — A stretch of road of State Road 60, west of Interstate-95, now bears new markers after a ceremony was held dedicating a 20-mile section to former state Rep. Stan Mayfield, who died of cancer in 2008.

The Stan Mayfield Memorial Highway is located on the very same road system that Mr. Mayfield successfully championed to widen from two lanes to four lanes, making travel to the Florida

Turnpike safer and more effective.

About 50 people came out for the dedication on Nov. 12, among them, friends, family and other local legislators.

Former state Sen. Ken Pruitt said there was nothing weak-kneed about Mr. Mayfield or the projects he tackled.

"Nothing good ever comes easy, and he never allowed himself to lose sight," Mr. Pruitt said of the late representative.

The road widening made for a

Boot camp: tips on growing businesses

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

TREASURE COAST— Owners of small- and medium-size businesses looking to grow their companies can take advantage of free classes in finance, marketing, training, communication and more in the upcoming quarter.

Florida's Research Coast Economic Development

Coalition is offering free, four-hour "boot camps" in the Treasure Coast area, at various Indian River State College campus locations, to assist in helping businesses develop resiliency and build a more self-sufficient local economy, a press release said.

It's called economic gardening, and it has nothing to do with dirt, said Michael Corbit, economic gardening project coordinator for the coalition.

While economic development targets drawing new businesses to an area and stimulates the economy, economic gardening works toward stimulating the economy from within.

"Economic gardening focuses on existing companies already here, and we're trying to get them to the next level and to improve or increase their jobs," Mr. Corbit said.

A grant from the state helps facilitate the projects, he said.

The camps are designed for businesses with 10 to 99 employees, Mr. Corbit said.

The boot camp sessions are limited to 15 participants, so reservations are required.

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Piper Aircraft announced earlier this month that CEO Kevin Gould would add the title company president to his resume after current Piper company President John Becker resigns next month.

"Kevin has an exciting and aggressive vision for the company that will enhance the owner and pilot experience at every level of the Piper product line," said Stephen Berger, chairman and managing partner of Imprimis, in a press release.

"Kevin's team has the experience and commitment to deliver on this vision and help solidify a durable global leadership position for Piper," he continued.

Jeff Barger, Dennis Olcott and Derek Zimmerman, and one to a senior director position, the release said.

Mary Messuti will be the company's first senior director for Asia where she will oversee Asian operations and initiatives.

When Imprimis purchased Piper earlier this May, some of the main goals were to expand Piper's influence globally, but also to continue moving forward with the Piper-Jet.

Even with this goal, Piper will not be able to release the single-engine jet in 2011 as previously desired, Mark Miller, company spokesman, said.

"We were obviously affected by the economic downturn," Mr. Miller said.

The new date for the market release of the PiperJet is 2013, Mr. Miller said.

So far, Piper has 200 orders for the single-engine jet and remains hopeful the economy will pick back up again very soon.

"We are cautiously optimistic and our dealers are seeing more traffic and interest always proceeds sales and they are seeing a renewed interest in the market," Mr. Miller said.

Due to a decrease in demand, Piper, one of the county's largest employers, laid off nearly 500 people in the past year.

"We ardently hope for a quick return, so we can start bringing back our friends and co-workers," Mr. Miller said.

Lugging concrete, touching lives

Volunteers lay blocks to build home in Dominican Republic

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Cyndy Hazlewood is a volunteer of Indian River County's Habitat for Humanity Women Build program, and is no stranger to a little elbow grease.

Her recent trip to the Dominican Republic, however, added a whole new meaning to what it takes to build a house.

"We had no power tools, except a cement mixer, and we carried around buckets of concrete, so it was really hard work," Ms. Hazlewood said.

Ms. Hazlewood and nine others from around the county participated in a Global Village project with Habitat, traveling to San Juan de la Maguana to begin building a concrete block home for a local bi-vocational pastor, his wife and nephew.

When building homes in the U.S., Habitat volunteers generally are able to subcontract the concrete portions out, but overseas, the volunteers had to mix, pour and haul their own concrete, Ms. Hazlewood said.

"They have very solid homes there. Not only do they have hurricanes, but they have earthquakes, too," said Andy Bowler, organization president and CEO.

All participants had to pay their own way on the international trips, Mr. Bowler said.

"People from developed countries will go to other countries, like the Dominican Republic, or Romania, which we did a few years ago, and help provide decent homes for families around the globe," Mr. Bowler said.

Sue Croom, leader of the Teodoro Garzia Manzueta, a bi-vocational pastor in the Dominican Republic, and his wife, Ferminia, are all smiles as local Habitat for Humanity volunteers, such as Bob Dvorak begin building them a new home made of concrete.

Women Build program, and Samantha Baita, public relations coordinator, agreed the intense labor required for this trip was exhausting, but rewarding.

"The house we were building was right next to their old house," said Ms. Baita.

"There was a stream by the house where they would get their water and wash their clothes, so we had to

Grant to make homes more energy efficient

By Samantha Joseph
Joseph@hometownnewsol.com

MARTIN COUNTY — News of increased funding for a program to help Treasure Coast residents make their homes more energy efficient resulted in 500 applications in one week and about 70 more per day, administrators say.

Residents of Martin, St. Lucie, Indian River and Palm Beach counties flooded the offices of Indiantown Non-Profit Housing with applications for the weatherization assistance program, which upgrades houses to reduce utilities bills.

Since 2004, the agency has been running the program on an annual allocation of $90,000. But this year, thanks to funding from the federal stimulus package, Indiantown Non-Profit Housing secured a grant of $5.2 million, set to be disbursed over the next three years.

"It's roughly 20 times what we typically receive," said Donna Carman, the non-profit's executive director.

The group typically assists 32 households each month, providing services such as sealing cracks in homes to prevent air infiltration or updating water heaters or refrigerators to cut electricity costs.

But the increased funding means that number is likely to more than double to about 64 households per month.

The grant has also meant new jobs for the area, as the agency hired eight employees and plans to add a similar number, including clerical staff and installation technicians, at the start of next year.

"That's our ultimate goal. It's been a long road getting all the pieces in place, but we plan to weatherize 30 homes every 30 days," Ms. Carman said.

The program benefits homeowners who are 60 or older, physically disabled, have children younger than 12 or repeatedly have high energy bills. Income limits also apply. To qualify, a single applicant must earn about $21,660, while a family of four should have income of about $59,060.

The program provides several upgrades, including insulation, solar window screens, compact fluorescent lights and energy-efficient cooling systems.

Beneficiaries typically see a 20 to 40 percent cut in their electricity bills after the renovations, administrators say.

State Rep. Debbie Mayfield, R-Vero Beach, who now holds her husband's seat, was accompanied to the ceremony by her three sons, parents and extended family, and was visibly moved by the words and actions of all who participated.

She said the day of the ceremony would have been her husband's 54th birthday and she could not think of a more fitting tribute to him than the dedication.

Mr. Pruitt said he hoped the signs would help people remember Mr. Mayfield's impact on the community for a long time.

"It's a life well lived for a road well traveled," Mr. Pruitt said.

Sand

ment of Environmental Protection, officials at the Archie Carr Wildlife Refuge expressed concern about the effects of the upland sand on turtle nesting patterns and success rates, staff told county commissioners.

In order to mitigate their concerns, commissioners directed staff to continue the permitting process for the full re-nourishment, but with the understanding that it would be done in two phases. The vote was 4-0 with Chairman Wesley Davis abstaining.

The section of beach from Golden Sands south to John's Island, which contains the most critical areas of need, will be replenished before turtle nesting begins again in May, said Jonathan Gorham, coastal resources manager.

That section of the project is about 59 percent of the project length and 46 percent of the total sand volume, Ms. Gorham said.

County staff will have to prepare surveys and other tests to determine if sea turtles on the beaches respond positively to the upland sand being trucked onto the beach, he said.

The second phase could only be put into action after refuge officials are satisfied with the findings, or commissioners could go back and revisit the issue of offshore providers for the refuge area beaches.

The decision to complete only half the project in early 2010 did not seem to concern the commissioners.

"I had some doubts about the ability to get the project done in one season anyway," Commissioner Bob Solari said.

The change could potentially alleviate some of the concerns of Orchid and Indian River Shores residents about damage to the roadways and bridges from the transport trucks, commissioners added.

attempts since April 2005 has finally succeeded on her 950th time.

The aspiring driver spent more than $4,200 in application fees, but until now had failed to score the minimum 60 out of a possible 100 points needed to take a driving test. It took Cha Sa-soon nearly 1,000 tries to pass the written test for a driver's license.

Cha Sa-soon, 68, finally passed with a score of 60. Police said Cha took the test hundreds of times, but had no specific total. Local media said she took it 950 times.

Now she must pass a driving test before getting her license, Choi said.

From msnbc.msn.com: Texas man drives sports car into pond; blames bird

A man blamed a low-flying pelican and a dropped cell phone for his veering his million-dollar sports car off a road and into a salt marsh near Galveston.

The Lufkin, Texas, man told of driving his luxury, French-built Bugatti Veyron when the bird distracted him, said La Marque police Lt. Greg Gilchrist. The Bugatti Veyron is the fastest and most expensive car in the world.

The motorist dropped his cell phone, reached to pick it up and veered off the road and into the salt marsh. The car was half-submerged in the brine about 20 feet from the road when police arrived. Gilchrist said he doesn't know if the car was salvageable. He says the man, whose identity hasn't been released, was not injured.

Enough is enough

When we read of repeat offenders committing additional crimes, we wonder if judges and parole officers ever are required to account for their actions in allowing the bad guys to continue to prey on innocent citizens.

Police kill a man after he drew a 9mm Glock 19 on them. Court records show he had been arrested 19 times and he had been convicted of simple assault, drug offenses, gun offenses, disorderly conduct and contempt. When is enough enough?

Learn about health care reform

It is embarrassing that the U.S. is the only industrialized country which does not provide health care for all its residents. It is even worse that many are not informed as to how the proposed system would work.

What's the difference?

I have been on Medicare for some years, and before that, I had very good insurance as an employee of the state of Kentucky.

Medicare pays less for medicine and doctor's visits than I would be charged, because it covers many individuals and has bargaining power.

Insurance companies may pay for the cheapest, not the best, treatment. Is that being in charge of your own health care?

Individuals pay a monthly fee for insurance, as I do. I choose my own doctor(s) and each year, pay for the first $150 of care.

For veterans

On Nov. 11, Veterans Day, Americans had the opportunity to show how proud we are of the boys who have served and are serving in our military.

To volunteer to be in dangerous places such as Iraq and Afghanistan, far away from friends and family, is a very special indication that this country has many young people who are committed, patriotic and selfless.

They have truly earned our gratitude and respect.

From the mouth of Franklin

When drafting the U.S. Constitution, Benjamin Franklin gave the delegates some sage advice when he said, "I have lived, sir, a long time; the more convincing proofs I see of this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid?"

Where's the justice?

In 1981, Mumia Abu-Jamal shot and killed Philadelphia police officer Daniel Faulkner execution style, and after a trial, where several witnesses positively identified the shooter, he was sentenced to death.

Now, after all this time, he is still laughing at our system of justice because the taxpayers have been providing him with room and board and a whole series of defense lawyers.

It seems that he may die of old age before he gets the justice which he truly deserves.

Stop importing criminals

We have far too many homebred criminals. We do not need to import more. However, some people apparently will do anything to make a buck. Consider the car wash operator who over a 10-year period imported dozens of illegal immigrants from Mexico. When he was finally caught, a lenient judge gave him only a fine, home confinement and probation. Such lenient treatment will do nothing to discourage others from trying to get rich at the expense of those who will work for pennies.

An opinion on terminal care

It has been my experience, and, in my opinion, a terminally-ill family member is better cared for in a hospital than by hospice providers.

Never let a loved one know you have given up hope, because that is what they feel when you put them in hospice. A miracle or remission or a cure can happen at anytime. Please, think twice.

What's all the 'Skype' about?

If you spend any amount of time surfing the Web you are bound to run across the name "Skype."

You may occasionally see a "Skype me" button on a Web site or even embedded in an e-mail.

Skype is one of the leading "voice over IP" services on the Internet. It's a program/service that turns your computer into an easy-to-use Internet phone allowing you to place calls to any other Skype user for free, or any "real" phone number for a very low fee.

I know, I know. People have been talking about cheap (or even free) phone calls over the Internet for years and I think I even wrote a column about another VOIP service, Vonage, awhile back, but what is it about Skype that warrants a closer look? What is it that makes Skype special?

Well, for starters: price.

It's cheaper than other services out there, certainly a lot cheaper than your standard plain old telephone system.

It's free to call other Skype users and outgoing calls to regular, non-

COMPUTE THIS
SEAN MCCARTHY

Skype phones ("Skype-Out") range around 2 to 4 cents a minute. For a low yearly fee, about $30 as I write this, you can sign up for unlimited outgoing calls. Or, periodically, you can load up on credits to use when making outgoing calls. There is a little meter at the top of the program that tells you how many credits you have left as you use them.

Also, they have special rates for international calls.

Inbound calls are handled a little differently. You can either be set up to receive inbound calls only from other Skype users or you can, for a low yearly fee, buy a "SkypeIn" number. Pick whatever area code you like and start receiving calls. If your computer is turned off or you don't answer, you have the option of letting the call go to voice mail or forwarding the call to another number, such as your cell phone.

The quality is surprisingly clear.

So far, since I've been using it, no one that I have called on a regular phone has suspected that I was calling from my computer, and no one that has called my SkypeIn number has even suspected that they were talking to me on my computer. Or at least the ones that I've asked haven't anyway. So far, I have not heard any distortion or experienced any of the issues that plagued early attempts of VOIP.

There are even some pretty sophisticated devices out there that work with the service, such as desk and cordless phone modules that plug into the USB port of the computer, giving the system a true telephone feel rather than that "ham radio operator" feel that computer headsets can often give you.

They have Wi-Fi handsets that connect you to your Skype service anytime you have access to wireless Internet, eliminating the need to have a computer on all the time and there are even conversion kits, again surprisingly cheap, that let you convert your home's phone wiring to Skype.

I was reading about one system that (when connected to your house wiring) lets you plug in ordinary household phones (wired, cordless, etc.) into any jack in the house and be able to make and receive Skype calls.

With my current phone bill as high as it is, I could see how a system like that could save a lot of money.

If you like the idea of making cheap, long distance calls without a lot of hassles setting it up, point your Web browser to www.skype.com and read up on it. The software is free to download and sports a guarantee that it's free of spyware and other malicious software.

The site is laid out well with information readily available, but if you do have questions, call me at (888) 752-9049 and I'll answer what I can.

Coping with holiday grief, part one

Each year, I've written a column with advice from an expert about coping with holiday grief. This year is no different; that column will appear next week.

This week, I thought I'd write about what I'm planning to do in this second year without Roy. After the New Year, I'll let you know how well it worked out.

Roy and I made Thanksgiving dinner for my mom and dad in the last years of his life. It was kind of funny, because Roy, the Englishman, loved making a special day, even if he didn't really consider Thanksgiving a holiday!

We set a lovely table and did the turkey and trimmings. Roy loved bringing the turkey out and we ate at our table overlooking the lake. I had even begun an after dinner concert with some of the songs I was working on.

When Roy died in September 2008, I knew I was not ready to celebrate anything. We had still been planning for the holidays that year.

This year, I'm in the process of moving. I know that experts say not to make such a major change during the first year. In my case, financial reality pushed me into a decision that may well be the right thing to do, giving me a fresh start. I will probably be very busy around the holidays, moving and setting up my new home.

ALIVE & WELL

I will probably spend Thanksgiving with my parents, and we'll improvise dinner or bring it in, as my mother isn't really up to cooking. We'll probably do crossword puzzles, as we often do when the three of us are together. It will be a quiet day and I know I will feel sad, but I know that it's normal. I also know now that grieving doesn't have a timetable and that holidays and anniversaries are hard.

Roy loved Christmas and he was in charge of it. Growing up Jewish, Christmas was not a part of my tradition, but my parents were married on Christmas day, so Roy and I made a combined Christmas-anniversary dinner. This year, my parents will be married 60 years.

Christmas was basically a repeat of Thanksgiving, except that we added Christmas crackers, those English novelties that you pull open to get a surprise.

We often listened to music; Roy loved Pavarotti and we would listen to him sing. Sometimes I sang, too, although not as well as Pavarotti.

This year, I'll probably be in a new home. I don't know yet if I'll be ready to start new traditions. I know that's a step forward, but I know that sometimes you need to take baby steps. Right after Christmas, on Jan. 4, comes what would have been our 20th wedding anniversary. I want to commemorate that, too.

I know this second season without Roy will be bittersweet, but I have the chance to begin to make memories in my new life. I think it will just be part of the grieving process I'm going through, trying to figure out what to do with the rest of my life, including special days.

For me, I think keeping it quiet and simple this year will be the best for me. I'll have unpacking to do, or still be in the middle of a move. I'll catch up on my work, which is always therapeutic, I'll watch some seasonal movies and I'll cry. I have learned that crying is a necessary part of the grieving process.

That's my plan. Next week, I'll share recommendations from an expert at Treasure Coast Hospice on things that may help you get through a difficult time.

Shelley Koppel is unable to endorse specific treatments for disease. Any protocols for treatment or testing she discusses are accepted standards of medical practice as recommended by agencies such as the American Academy of Pediatrics or the American Cancer Society. Cultural differences were quickly made evident when the women volunteers found out the native men were surprised at the amount of work the women accomplished.

"He (the host and interpreter) said that they never imagined that women could do all that work, because you know, over there it takes almost all day to cook a few meals, they don't have time for anything else," Ms. Hazlewood said.

"For me, it was a fascinating insight that they never thought about the women working alongside of the men like that," she said.

Despite the challenges, Ms. Hazlewood said she thoroughly enjoyed the trip.

"It was a good opportunity to travel and it was good to have a greater purpose than just to be a tourist," Ms. Hazlewood said.

"There is a need here, but the need over there is so much greater," said Ms. Croom.

"The mission over there is the same: to provide simple, decent and affordable homes for people. I love helping others, so this is perfect for me," she said.

The team was able to complete the foundation and begin building up the walls of the home. Another team will be able to finish the job and put on a roof, Ms. Baita said.

Orchestra begins its 20th season

By Barbara Yoresh
Entertainment writer

For two decades area residents have enjoyed a top-caliber orchestra of professional musicians who present diverse programs of classical music.

The Atlantic Classical Orchestra, under the direction of Maestro Stewart Robertson, opens its 20th anniversary season with a series of concerts at the Waxlax Center for the Performing Arts at Saint Edward's School in Vero Beach and at the Lyric Theatre in Stuart.

The performances begin Thursday, Jan. 7, 2010 at the Waxlax Center, with what has been described by orchestra officials as perhaps the most artistically and technically challenging program to date for the Fort Pierce-based orchestra.

Ralph Vaughan Williams overture to "The Wasps" opens the evening, followed by Maurice Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," which pays homage to the famed French baroque composer, Couperin.

Completing the evening's program is a Gustav Mahler's masterpiece "Fourth Symphony," which will be played in a rarely performed chamber style using only 13 instruments.

"Our season opens with a program that will stretch the individual musicians of the Atlantic Classical Orchestra to the utmost," said Larry Kopp, executive director of the orchestra.

Although patrons have eagerly and generously supported the orchestra for 20 years, Mr. Kopp hopes music lovers not yet familiar with the Atlantic Classical Orchestra will attend a performance and become regular attendees.

"We've grown phenomenally in the past 20 years to a world-class orchestra which had humble beginnings.

"The musicians truly like working with each other and make it a unique experience for the audience. People who come to concerts come back again," Mr. Kopp said.

The chamber orchestra comprised of professional musicians was founded by Vero Beach resident and professional conductor Andrew McMullan in an effort to offer Treasure Coast residents an opportunity to attend orchestral performances without traveling to major cities.

The orchestra made its debut with an all-Mozart program at the Vero Beach Museum of Art's Leonhardt auditorium.

The orchestra was well-received by enthusiastic lovers of classical music and in 2007, an anonymous donor made a five-year challenge gift of $1 million in matching funds. To date, $600,000 of the total amount has been pledged and $400,000 received, thereby prompting the donor to match the $400,000 amount.

"Our patrons have been very supportive and it's exciting. We have a sophisticated audience who appreciate the spirit the orchestra communicates to the audience," Mr. Kopp said.

He noted this season's programs have been specially selected to pay tribute to the orchestra's past

Cracker cow hunter kicks off series

By Barbara Yoresh
Entertainment writer

VERO BEACH — It's been a way of life in Florida for literally hundreds of years and yet Sunshine State residents living in neatly manicured "developments" hardly know it exists.

Native Floridian, storyteller and cracker cowboy Hank Mattson will enlighten and entertain at the Emerson Center Humanities Series with "Tellin' It Like It Is," about the life and times of hardy Florida cattlemen from the past and present.

Mr. Mattson is a member of the Florida Cattlemen's Association, the Professional Rodeo Hall of Fame Society and Friends of Florida Folk. He is the 2007 winner of the Laura Rider award for Florida folk poetry.

The presentation, which is free and open to the public, will be held Thursday, Dec. 3 at 7 p.m.

The Humanities Series is presented by the Emerson Center at the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Vero Beach, located at 1590 27th Ave. The programs are held in partnership with the Florida Humanities Council and feature presentations relating to Florida history and culture.

The Emerson Center comfortably seats more than 800 in a state-of-the-art auditorium and free admission is offered on a first-come basis. The center is handicapped accessible and there is ample free parking.

Mr. Mattson uses his own words, and those of historical Florida figures, to re-create the bygone era of those who raised and herded cattle in an environment fraught with heat, pests, rattlesnakes and cattle rustlers.

Speaking from his Lake Placid home, Mr. Mattson explained why he loves to tell of Florida's past.

"I'm a Florida native and I've lived the life (of a cattleman). It's my mission in life to promote the people who've been raising cattle here for almost 500 years," he said.

Most tourists to the state and many residents are not aware that in addition to being a Mecca for beaches, theme parks and outdoor activities, Florida is also a leading agricultural state.

Mr. Mattson noted that nationwide, Florida is ranked 11th in terms of cattle raising and fourth of those states east of the Mississippi.

"Florida land is being developed, but there is still a lot of land left to raise cattle," he said.

And don't call those who ride the Florida ranges caring for the herds "cowboys."

"We like to call ourselves cow hunters because here in Florida, it takes a man to do the job, not a boy.

"This state is as wild and woolly as anyplace out west," he said with a laugh.

But kidding aside, those who ride horses accompanied by herding dogs to manage cattle herds are by necessity hardy, hard-working souls.

The state's brutally hot and seasonally wet climate, coupled with razor-sharp saw palmetto and poisonous snakes, makes for a less-than-easy work environment.

Several times in the past, a fever tick infestation from Texas Brahma cattle, as well as screw worms, nearly wiped out the Florida cattle business, Mr. Mattson said.

But the "cracker" cattle hunters — so named for the cracking sound their braided leather bull whips made — were and are dedicated to that way of life.

"People are still willing to do it and we're willing to help each other.

"When something needs to get done we help out and then later, all sit down to a big breakfast or dinner," Mr. Mattson said.

He noted there are professional, full-time "cow hunters" who travel the state with their horse and dog.

Mr. Mattson said cattle are bred and raised in Florida until they weigh about 400 pounds and are then shipped to Texas feedlots "to finish them."

He told of one cattle roundup in which the participants were dressed and working much like their circa 1800s counterparts. Looking up to the skies, however, the cattle men spied the launch of a space Shuttle mission.

"That was really something, the contrast between the past and the present," Mr. Mattson said.

His ongoing mission is to inform people about Florida's fascinating past.

"I want to tell them that this peninsula called Florida has long been explored and exploited and its woodlands and waterways have been taken for granted.

"If not for people like the cattlemen, it would have all been paved over, polluted and just plain gone," he said.

Hometown News $UPER BUY$ of the week

'Super' debate: Do everyday low prices beat couponing?

Last week I touched on a topic that's of intense interest among my super-couponing students: where do shoppers get the best deal, at a supermarket or a supercenter?

The former has a reputation among most shoppers for being "more expensive," the latter is widely considered to be the better value due to its "everyday low pricing." But savvy shoppers know that the sale prices of the supermarket almost always beat the everyday prices of the supercenter.

To test the idea, I recently took a field trip of sorts and compared prices on more than 20 common items at both types of stores.

Here's a sample of the price differences I found on six popular name brand products at an "everyday low price," or ELP, from a supercenter and at a supermarket or SM.

Single-serve fruit cup: $1.97 ELP/$1.50 SM
 Half-gallon organic milk: $3.50 ELP/$3.99 SM
 Frozen pizza: $4.75 ELP/$4.99 SM
 Dishwasher detergent tablets: $4.26 ELP/$3.99 SM

4-pound bag of dog food: $6.97 ELP/$4.99 SM
 Juice pouches: $1.98 ELP/ $1.49 SM

I found the everyday low prices at the supercenter were higher, in most cases, than the prices for the same products at the supermarket.

Many shoppers believe that using coupons to buy products at the supercenter with its everyday low pricing will save them as much, if not more, than watching for sales at a supermarket and using coupons there. This is just not the case.

COUPON QUEEN

As you will see, on my shopping trip, I bought milk and pizza at the supermarket and paid significantly less for them than I would have paid at the supercenter using the same coupons. Let me walk you through the numbers.

During my comparison-shopping trip, the supermarket was running an additional promotion. If you spent $30 on featured items you received a coupon at checkout good for $10 off your next shopping trip. So, a third of my supermarket expenditure would be returned to me in the form of a Catalina coupon printed out at the register. That coupon is just like a $10 bill that I can use the next time I shop at the store.

Now, considering that a third of what I pay is coming back to me, the comparison really gets interesting.

Here's what the prices on my individual purchases at the supermarket now look like with the Catalina savings figured in:

Fruit cup: $1.97 ELP/99 cents SM
 Organic milk: $3.50 ELP/$2.63 SM
 Frozen pizza: $4.75 ELP/$3.29 SM
 Dishwasher tablets: $4.26 ELP/$2.63 SM
 Dog food: $6.97 ELP/$3.29 SM
 Juice pouches: $1.98 ELP/ 98 cents SM

Notice that the prices of the milk and pizza, originally more expensive at the supermarket, have now dipped well below the supercenter's prices. And, we haven't added savings from our coupons in yet!

Here are the coupons I used with these items, along with the post-coupon prices at both stores:

$1 coupon for fruit cup, after coupon: 97 cents ELP/-1 cent SM
 55-cent coupon for organic milk: $2.95 ELP/$2.08 SM
 $3 coupon for frozen pizza: $1.75 ELP/29 cents SM

$2.50 coupon for dishwasher tablets: $1.76 ELP/13 cents SM

$3 coupon for dog food: $3.97 ELP/29 cents SM

$1 coupon for juice pouches: 98 cents ELP/- 2 cents SM

At the supermarket, I ended up paying significantly less than if I used my coupons to purchase the same items at the supercenter.

Both the fruit cup and the juice pouches were not only free after the coupon, but the store paid me a few cents in overage to take them home. And I certainly couldn't have taken a frozen pizza or a bag of dog food home for less than 30 cents each at a supercenter.

By the end of my shopping trip, the difference between the prices in both items was incredible.

The total cost of the 21 products I purchased at the supermarket was $13.13. At the supercenter, the same products would have cost me $42.58, even with the same coupons. I've got the full list of items on my coupon blog, www.jill-cataldo.com, under the heading "Supermarket vs. Supercenter" if you'd like to see the rest of the items I purchased during this shopping trip.

A supermarket's sale prices will typically beat the everyday low prices of a supercenter and if the store is running a money-back promotion on top of the sale, you can cut your bill even further.

I saved about 69 percent over the supercenter's prices on the same items during this promotion.

TRAVEL

Try an informative vacation for a change

Take a step back in time. Think back to when you were young and in school. Along with your teacher and classmates, you may have taken a field trip to a local museum, historical site or even the zoo.

Do you remember? I bet you do because you were there, in it, feeling it and listening to someone knowledgeable telling you all about what you are experiencing.

It may have been a visit to something set in colonial times and you are learning how people lived back in those days. You saw the rather small dwellings that they lived in and how they cooked, retrieved water or grew their own food. In your young mind, you were probably amazed more about what they did not have back then. The fact that you got to see it and feel it, made the entire experience memorable.

These days, there are quite a few options for you to experience those same feelings. There are many tours and cruises you can travel with that can to enrich your life or at least explore your interests.

Many deluxe cruise lines, such as Crystal, SilverSeas and Regent Seven Seas, Seabourne and Oceania, have enrichment programs on board on all of the various itineraries offered. The topics depend upon the itinerary. For example, an Alaska cruise may have a naturalist or Alaska specialist on board to speak on their specialties.

On other sailings you may have an archeologist that may speak on the Mayan ruins or the pyramids. Your itinerary generally dictates what specialist will be aboard, however you may have additional lecturers or performers.

On a recent transatlantic cruise aboard the Queen Mary II, James Taylor performed in concert. Additionally, there were lectures by a renowned author and scientist.

Sometimes there are artists, musicians, chefs, sommeliers, photographers, Egyptologists, academics, historians and expedition leaders, in addition to local experts of the areas visited while in port.

You may participate in any of the adventures offered or just listen to what the speakers have to say on the various subjects. They even have technology specialists on board that can teach you new computer programs or even how to best use your new iPhone (according to the cruise line, these are very popular). Even mass-market cruise lines offer some lectures or classes on board.

Specialty tours are another option for learning vacations. You may be interested in taking a gourmet and wine tour in Tuscany, or the more adventurous might take advantage of a biking tour of Holland, trek through the Amazon, feel the pulse of the local environment as you visit the islands along the Dalmatian Coast, tour World War II sites in Europe or Civil War sites here in our own backyard. There are incredible tours offering various levels of activities and interests.

Winter two-day tournaments target golfers 40 and older

With age, comes benefits. No, I'm not talking about 50 cent coffee or discounts on hotels or airfare. The end of November marks the beginning of the Florida State Golf Association winter series. The events are two-day tournaments for golfers 40 and older.

The series' first event takes place right in my backyard, at the PGA Golf Club's Dye Course in Port St. Lucie. The series features eight events spread out around the state over the course of the next few months.

From Port St. Lucie it's off to Ormond Beach, then Venice, Lake Wales, Orlando, Tampa, back to Orlando and finally Ocala for tournaments. Each event is being held on a fantastic track, with all the amenities professional touring pros enjoy. Well, you may have to bring your own screaming fans, but pretty much everything else is covered.

There are three age groups, each based on your age as of March 16. The first is a mid-senior division for those 40-54. Second is the senior for those 55-64. Golfers 65 and older will compete in the super senior division.

The FSGA was formed in 1913 to preserve and protect golf in the state of Florida. The organization is volunteer-based and includes more than 800 member clubs with more than 180,000 individual members from across the state.

The FSGA provides a variety of services, not only to its member clubs and members, but to the general golfing community of Florida. The association conducts more than 250 tournament days each year, including 25 state championships and USGA-qualifying events.

If you'd love to help, the FSGA and the Florida Junior Tour are looking for new volunteers to help at events. They need rules officials, people to help with registration and scoring, and more.

If you'd line to find out more about the Florida State Golf Association and the events they run for golfers of all ages and well as the Winter Series, call (813) 632-3742, or visit the Web site at www.fsga.org.

Space Coast teams with U.S. Marine Corps

In an effort to brighten the Christmas of an underprivileged child, the Florida Space Coast Golf Association will be partnering with United States Marine Corps in their "Toys for Tots" campaign this year, with target dates from Nov 1 to Dec 15.

Six golf courses (Duran, Cocoa Beach, Savannahs, Habitat, Viera East and Wedgefield), along with five hotel properties (Holiday Inn Viera, Hilton Cocoa Beach, Crowne Plaza Melbourne Beach, Ron Jons Cape Caribe Resort and Hampton Inn, Titusville) will be participating and act as drop off points for toys.

Participants who donate toys will fill out a registration card and be eligible to win one of a dozen prizes donated by these facilities. Prizes include a round of golf for four at one of the six sponsoring Space Coast golf courses and overnight stays at one of five Space Coast hotel properties.

Here is your chance to help a child enjoy the most joyous time of the year, all while you enjoy your round of golf. For additional information, contact any of the sponsoring courses or hotel properties.

Just like old times

Panther Woods Country Club in Fort Pierce is reverting back to its former name. The property will again be known as Meadowood Golf and Tennis Club.

In addition to the name change, a new logo, featuring a Sand Hill Crane taking flight was introduced to members and friends at a luncheon earlier this month.

Meadowood Golf and Tennis Club features an 18-hole, par 72 championship golf course situated on 195 acres of rolling terrain with tees ranging from 5014 to 6744 yards, five Har-Tru tennis courts, a swimming pool and spa, and restaurant and banquet facilities.

Over the past year, the club has expanded the practice tee area to nearly three times its former size, added additional concrete cart paths and enhanced the landscaping throughout the property.

"We have also added many new membership options that offer both value and affordability for our members," says Alf D'Silva, president of the club's board of governors.

For information on membership options, call (772) 466-4000 or visit www.meadowoodgolffandtennis.com.

custom-crafted tours created for adventurous travelers who seek the thrill of discovery and learning. Local expert speakers really make the difference between simply seeing, and truly understanding, the destination.

In 2009 they offered 18 escorted learning adventures in Europe, South America, Costa Rica, Mexico, Asia, Australia, New Zealand, Egypt, the U.S. and Canada.

Tauk Tours offers "Culturious" designed for inquisitive travelers who are curious about other cultures. These small group tours immerse the participants in the local environment and way of life. Tauk Culturious offers tours to Tuscany and Cinque Terre, Provence, Croatia's Dalmatian Coast, Costa Rica, Peru and the Amazon, Vietnam and Cambodia, and Manitoba.

Other companies offering learning tours are Lindblad Expeditions in partnership with National Geographic and Abercrombie & Kent.

These are just a few of the many companies offering something more than just touring or cruising, they offer enrichment.

On your next vacation, don't just bring home photos and souvenirs, bring home the experience of what you have gathered on your learning vacation. It really is a new way to see the world.
