Welcome to the Sept. 11 special issue of Hometown News.

As we commemorate the 10th anniversary of the day that changed America, please note that we've shifted some of our regular features around in order to make room for stories, photographs and columns regarding the anniversary.

Please refer to the index at the bottom of this page to find features such as rants and raves, the police report and obituaries.

On page 6, you'll find an article penned by a woman who lost her sister, who was working at the Pentagon on Sept. 11. And there's a column from Mohammad Malik, who provides commentary on life after Sept. 11 for the Muslim community.

We sincerely hope that this issue will be a keepsake for you.

We welcome you to provide any thoughts/memories/feelings you have regarding Sept. 11 and/or its 10-year anniversary.

Please feel free to give us feedback on this special edition.

It is our honor and privilege to commemorate this solemn event.

WE REMEMBER 9/11 TENTH ANNIVERSARY

Better organization, communication result from tragedy

By Jessica Tuggle

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Ten years have passed since the single largest attack of terrorism in the homeland of Americans on Sept. 11, 2001, and law enforcement agencies have been working intensely in that time to prevent it from happening ever again. Counter-terrorism tactics, chemical identification training, partnering with other emergency responders, and other state and federal agencies and establishing lines of communication and command before trouble starts, are some of the changes local law enforcement officials have made since that fateful day when thousands of Americans perished. Indian River County Sheriff Deryl Loar said on a national level, there have been changes to how passports and driver licenses can be obtained, to how the borders are guarded. Countless additional security precautions have been established for air travel, including the increased onboard presence of air marshals. The entire internal defense of the Former New York City detective and Indian River County Commissioner Joe Flescher looks through a stack of New York City newspapers from the day following the attack on the World Trade Center.

Sorrow lingers, but memories live on

By Jessica Tuggle

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Monday, Sept. 10, 2001, was not just a regular day for Joe Flescher. It was the day he would say goodbye to his father in his hometown of New York City.

The catastrophe of Sept. 11, just the very next day, when blue skies turned to dark ash and sirens and radio chatter filled the air, would only serve to heighten his sense of loss and grief.

Only days before on Sept. 8, Mr. Flescher, then a public information officer for the Indian River County Sheriff's Office, now a member of the Indian River County Board of County Commissioners, received the news that his father, Joseph E. Flescher, had died unexpectedly in Orlando.

The family quickly booked a flight to New York for the services, never dreaming that one day later, that mode of transportation would be shut down completely after being used as weapons by terrorists.

Born and raised in New York City, Mr. Flescher spent much of his youth in Brooklyn and Queens. After completing his school and training, he started his career as one of New York's finest, serving in various positions in law enforcement through the years.

"I had the great opportunity to serve there. Being a police officer in New York is a ticket to the greatest show on Earth," Mr. Flescher said.

"You see the best in people and the worst in people and it's how you handle it that makes you who you are," he said.

Mr. Flescher said he still feels a strong connection with New York City; the emo-

Disaster responder recalls Sept. 11

Faces at ground zero still haunt him

By Jessica Tuggle

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Once an emergency responder, always an emergency responder.

A decade ago, Paul Seldes, was going about his duties as an emergency response trainer, preparing programs and strategies for what to do in crises, when in the blink of an eye, it was time to put that training into action on his home turf.

"On 9/11, I worked for a large international training corporation and I was on my way to a meeting with the New York Police Department to start, believe it or not, a counter-terrorism training program.

"I was driving the car (in Manhattan) with two other guys from New Jersey and Virginia, and we were right in front of the north tower. They were doing what everyone who is from out of town does, they were looking up out of the windows, and I hear one of them scream, 'What the blank is that' and we look and see a plane level off and slam into the building.

"We knew right away it was a deliberate act," Mr.

Seldes said. With fiery debris from the impact of the plane raming into the building raining down around them, Mr. Seldes maneuvered the vehicle out of Manhattan safely, even stopping to assist a pedestrian get emergency help along the way, and took the men with him to a safe area.

Then, he headed back to the chaos.

Mr. Seldes teamed up immediately with search and rescue teams and worked at ground zero for the next nine months.

Responder

He moved countless pounds of debris, recovered broken and burned remains of many victims and assisted many other responders during those nine months, all the while keeping emotions and duty as separate as possible.

"You had to focus on what needed to be done. In the ensuing days and weeks, volunteers came from everywhere to help and they were organized and ready. It was outstanding. Times like that bring out the real goodness people have. It still amazes me," Mr. Seldes said.

Staying busy with relief efforts made it possible to keep moving. Living despite the tragic events, but dealing with the grief and loss is something that is never easy. Mr. Seldes said he and his wife, Paula Lerner, probably lost about 100 friends in the tragic event.

"Working at ground zero, you can't get upset about it, you really have to harden yourself and do what needs to be done. But there was initially a family center set up just north of the exclusion zone. That's where the families went to fill out missing persons report and put up posters of loved ones.

"When we would come out of ground zero, we were filthy, covered in dust and debris. We would have to walk past these people, holding posters of their loved ones, and they'd ask if we had seen them.

"Walking past them was the hardest thing I've ever had to do. To this day, I still see their faces. I don't know their names, but I see their faces," Mr. Seldes said.

Mr. Seldes said he was used to going to disaster sites all over the nation, but responding to an emergency in the place where he was born, raised and still lived was different.

Working out-of-town sites with medical strike teams after Hurricane Katrina, helping with disaster recovery after tornados ravaged the Alabama landscape and many, many more disaster scenarios, was different from working in New York, he said.

Going out of town is temporary and involves a set amount of time, and then you can go home, Mr. Seldes said. "But it was home. I would go out and work, come home, go get dinner, sleep in my own bed and go back there the next day. It was a very surreal kind of experience, almost like reporting to a movie set," Mr. Seldes said.

"After nine months, I was a basket case," he said.

They decided to relocate to Vero Beach right after that and haven't returned to the site since.

He had initially thought to move onto something other than emergency management consulting and training, but that only lasted until 2003 when he and his wife started their own company, ntb group, and his adventures in that field continued.

"One thing I've learned in doing what I do, I've discovered that you don't forget them, you don't get past them and you don't get over them. They become a part of who you are," Mr. Seldes said.

tional impact of the places and people of his hometown is indelibly impressed on his heart.

The Sept. 11 attacks on American soil, his home soil, are also embedded in his psyche, and are inextricably linked to his father's memory.

He watched in shock as news coverage showed the towers fall, the dark scene interrupting the quiet breakfast he was preparing for his children while other adult members of the family were out organizing the arrangements for the funeral service. A quick glance out the window confirmed the tragic event was serious and world changing.

"The image that is burned in my head is that debris, that smoke plume, just shifting to the left. It was probably the most horrific incident that occurred in my lifetime. Everyone felt violated," Mr. Flescher said.

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, Mr. Flescher recalls trips to Lower Manhattan with his father to watch construction of the massive World Trade Center buildings, including the iconic twin towers, from the concrete slabs, to the steel frames and the equipment used to make it all happen.

"It was like the eighth wonder of the world," Mr. Flescher said.

He said once the buildings were finally completed, he and his father went right up to the two skyscrapers and took a photo between them, pointing the camera straight up into the sky, essentially capturing the colossal arms reaching straight to the heavens.

Coming from a long line of craftsmen and tradesmen, watching the architectural feat grow before their very eyes was enthralling and exciting.

"It was a fascinating place and it was part of us. To a little kid in Brooklyn, it was the biggest thing in the world. It was part of me, it was part of my dad," Mr. Flescher said.

And when the towers crumbled, so did a piece of his heart, but like other New Yorkers, and indeed, many Americans, faith and an iron determination brought them through, shaken, but resolute in bringing life back to the city.

"Everyone had somebody affected," Mr. Flescher said. Members of police and fire departments that Mr. Flescher knew while working in the city responded to the scene and never came back. Talking about those friends lost is still difficult to this day, Mr. Flescher said.

"The people I went to the academy with, the guys I ate lunch with. These friends, co-workers, they are gone now," he said.

He said it was amazing to watch and participate as the citizens of New York bonded with each other, helped each other and cared for each other.

Restaurant owners would wheel carts of food into fire and police stations, giving their food away to the emergency responders.

When flags could no longer be found in local stores, a local printer took it upon himself to print some on durable material and pass them out for free to whoever wanted them, Mr. Flescher said.

In the past 10 years, he has been back to the city several times, even to the site where the towers stood, where new towers are being built.

"I've been able to watch them go up, too," he said.

A stack of newspapers from the city, printed days after the attack, have collected dust in his home because he has never opened and read them.

"I don't need to see it. I was there," Mr. Flescher said.

A solemn tribute to the victims

Local law enforcement, fire rescue, and veterans groups gathered at Riverview Park Memorial to pay tribute to those who were lost in the World Trade Center attack on Sept. 11, 2001. John Kinlen, left, and Robert Farrell, members of the Knights of Columbus, St. Williams Assembly 2194 Sebastian, laid a wreath during the Sept. 11 Observance last September.

country has been reassembled to become stronger and better equipped to handle disasters and took on a new name, Homeland Security. The department brings together emergency responders, including local police, medical and fire personnel, with federal and state agencies, including transportation and border security and intelligence gatherers, as well as the science community involved in research to detect potentially harmful materials.

Prior to the attack on Sept. 11, federal, state and local agencies rarely worked together as a unit unless there was a natural disaster to combat, such as Hurricane Andrew in 1992, Sheriff Loar said.

Agencies would often gather at a scene and work to fix the situation, but they often just worked in their own little groups, rarely communicating their strategies with others around, he said.

"We didn't exactly have a relationship in place, except to exchange cards on the day of (the event)," Sheriff Loar said.

"Not until 9/11 did law enforcement in America get a wakeup call," he said.

Because of Sept. 11, there is now an incident command system set up, a nationally recognized way to handle crisis situations, with better and more efficient communication, relationships, policies, procedures and guidelines, so that the left hand can know what the right hand is doing, Sheriff Loar said.

"We have to work together like the strands that make up a strong rope," he said.

Local officers have had to undergo more training, including dealing with hazardous explosives, identifying potentially harmful chemicals and profiling.

Technology has advanced to the point that deputies can conduct background searches on people from their vehicles and even pull up the schematics of a building, if need be, he said.

Flight Safety, the flight training school in Vero Beach, has many international students come to the area to train and since Sept. 11, all of them must register with the Indian River County Sheriff's Office for a background check and fingerprints, the sheriff said.

"We know one of those pilots (that was involved in the terror attacks) had rented a house here," Sheriff Loar said.

Not only have law enforcement officials changed as a response to the terrorism attack, but ordinary Americans have changed, as well, Sheriff Loar said.

"Americans began to feel a sense of patriotism and began to report suspicious activity in larger volumes than before, as opposed to ho-humming it," Sheriff Loar said.

Because of the diligence of citizens reporting suspicious activity to law enforcement, dangerous crimes can be stopped before they escalate and affect even more people.

That responsibility has spilled over to commerce as well, said Jeff Luther, director of government affairs and media relations for the sheriff's office.

Certain chemicals in sinus medications can be used in the production of methamphetamine and are sold in drugstores nationwide.

Prior to Sept. 11, individuals could go in and buy it in large quantities without receiving a second look, but now, drugstores will call law enforcement officials when they see that kind of activity.

"It's a result of 9/11 and it's made us better," Mr. Luther said.

"Yes, it has," Sheriff Loar agreed.

Assistant fire chief to retire after 31 years But he'll be getting back to basics soon, as NASCAR firefighter

By Jessica Tuggle
 jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — It's been 31 years since Ed Prime got his start as a firefighter and he still can't get enough.

Indian River County assistant Fire Chief Prime is spending his last days on the job as he has spent his whole career: staying busy and doing his job.

"Everyone keeps telling me to slow down, but I can't do that," Chief Prime said.

"I'll slow down on Sept. 16 and then I'll drive my wife crazy because I can't sit still," he said.

On Sept. 16, Chief Prime will retire from the emergency services fire rescue division after nearly 31 years of service. His co-workers and associates are making the most of the time they have left with him.

"It has been great having him as a boss and as a friend and as a mentor," said Karen Rackard, his administrative assistant of five years.

"It's going to be very hard letting him go," she said.

Chief Prime got his start in the field in February 1981 as a firefighter and emergency medical technician. He has worn dozens of hats, both literally and figuratively, and risen through the ranks to his current position as chief of operations and support services.

"I think I've filled every position there is: fireman, driver engineer, battalion chief, lieutenant, captain and everything except the chief," Chief Prime said with a smile.

Chief Prime was one of the first six people hired when fire services transitioned from the city of Vero Beach to the county. He was assigned the south district. He's seen the department grow from three stations to 12 stations and has been working behind the scenes to get a 13th station in the near future.

A modest, humble leader with an unselfish attitude and a heart for service, Chief Prime shied away from talking about projects he helped oversee or achievements that were made under his tenure.

"It's always been about the people," Chief Prime said.

Being able to lead different crews under his command over the years has allowed him to spend time with the younger generation of fire rescue personnel, the very ones who will be department leaders.

"If I can teach something that can keep them from being hurt or killed, I feel like I'm doing my job. I've been able to guide and mold and shape them," Chief Prime said.

"Everyone has asked, would I do it again, and in theory, no, but in reality, yes. I'm able to do more for my folks moving forward (in my career) than if I stayed back," he said.

"My whole career I've said, if you take care of your folks, they'll take care of you," Chief Prime said.

That mantra fulfilled itself in May 1996 when Chief Prime was misdiagnosed with an inoperable brain tumor, then was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis.

"It's in times like that where you find out what you mean to folks," Chief Prime said.

"I was out of work for three months and they stepped up and took care of my family. They were my family," Chief Prime said.

His diagnosis has not kept him from continuing his career, and has, in fact, expanded it quite a bit, as he travels nationally speaking and encouraging others with the disease.

His living example of not letting bad times keep you down has been inspirational and encouraging to those he comes in contact with.

"Like he says, when life issues you lemons, you make lemonade," Ms. Rackard said.

Chief Prime was the first officer in the department to obtain his national executive fire officer certification from the National Fire Academy, a four-year long pursuit.

He, along with others, was able to obtain a grant to pay for the newest fire station, Station 12, in the Gifford community, something the neighborhood had been requesting for some time.

One of the newest tools he helped obtain for the department is a thermal imaging device. Each frontline fire engine has the special device to help find people in hard-to-spot areas, especially in smoky areas with little to no visibility.

"So many times in vehicle accidents, you see a car seat overturned and there is no child in it. The parent might be incapacitated and can't remember if the kid was in there, so we can look for a heat signature to see if the baby was there," Chief Prime said.

Under Chief Prime's leadership, the fire rescue department is now a part of the Big Heart Brigade of the Treasure Coast, a non-profit entity that serves Thanksgiving meals to on duty crews and performs other charitable acts in the community.

Last year, the Indian River County division served more than 250 meals, Chief Prime said.

After retiring, Chief Prime may slow down a little, but that doesn't mean he will get away from his love of fire rescue. In fact, he'll be jumping right in again.

He has worked in the past as a pit road firefighter for NASCAR and worked races at Daytona International Speedway and the Homestead-Miami Speedway. He plans to expand that experience by spending time in the pit roads of the Charlotte Motor Speedway and the New Hampshire Motor Speedway.

"I love it. It's back to being a fireman again, back to the basics," Chief Prime said with a smile.

Remembering my sister on Sept. 11

This submission is from Terry Adams, a St. Lucie County resident who lost her sister, Marian Teresa Halevy Serva, 47, on Sept. 11. Mrs. Serva was working in the Pentagon on that day.

On this 10th anniversary of the worst day of my life, I am still struggling with why. Why did it have to happen? Why did the plane hit exactly the area that it did? Why did it have to be the offices where Marian worked and had just moved back into recently? Why wasn't she still down in the cafeteria having her breakfast with her friend? Why?

Questions we, as well as others, are asking about all of the loved ones who were taken away from us so swiftly and without warning, to which there are no consolable answers. Questions which only God can answer and we have to trust that our loved ones are in a better place.

As with every American, who can forget where they were or what they were doing on Sept. 11, 2001? I was in Yonkers, N.Y., at work on a conference call with our New Hampshire office, when someone interrupted, saying that a plane struck one of the twin towers in New York City. Shortly thereafter, the second plane hit and everyone was scrambling to get information from many sources.

We turned on the TV only to see the horror taking place right before our eyes. Then, the third plane hit the Pentagon, I was glued to the TV looking for my sister among the many employees who were running out of the building into the parking lots and lawns. I tried to call her work number and her cell number to no avail. I then tried to reach her husband and daughter, only to find out that they had not heard from her, either. The calls continued among all of our family members desper-

Since I was working for a defense contractor, I went into the office of one of our representatives who dealt with the Pentagon regularly. When I told him what room number my sister worked in, he checked his reference information, looked up at me with a blank stare and simply said, "I'm so sorry."

He knew that her office had sustained a direct hit. I, however, still refused to believe she was gone. I was sure that Marian was perhaps trying to get home, perhaps hiding under a desk somewhere, perhaps trapped, perhaps hurt and waiting to be rescued. She was always a survivor, a very strong person. My denial continued for days and into weeks, until my brother-in-law called when he was notified that Marian's remains had been identified. I was inconsolable. There were many cars left in parking lots that day, as well as children waiting at day care centers for mom or dad to pick them up at the end of the day but their typical "end of the day" never came.

My younger sister, Marian, worked in the Pentagon as a government liaison between the Department of the Army and Congress for many years. As not only sisters, but best friends, Marian and I shared many things, our thoughts, dreams, hopes and deepest feelings. I will forever treasure her love, loyalty and understanding. We knew each other at our best and at our worst. We could always count on each other's honesty and encouragement.

Anyone who knows Marian recognizes her as strong-willed, independent, resolute, rebellious (especially in her teenage years), person with the courage to speak her own mind and offer an opinion, whether you asked for it or not. I use the present tense because Marian's spirit will never disappear, it is still in the hearts and minds of everyone she touched and should remain very close to us to give us her strength and not let the "event" take over our lives or our children's lives because we all know that she wouldn't.

Marian was intolerant of anyone who didn't attempt to help themselves, complained about their everyday trivial matters, spoke negatively about our country and what it stands for, or for those who would hurt others. Yet, she would be a relentless champion of a cause she truly believed in.

She proved it over and over again during her career, whether it involved an appeal from a soldier's family or pending regulations for military personnel as a group, as well as briefings on what she always referred to as "the Hill." As civilians, we in the family knew better than to argue or disagree about our opinion of military

Life after 9/11: A Muslim perspective

By Mohammad A. Malik
For Hometown News

Imagine watching the news and hearing that there was a shooting spree and your first reaction is, "Please don't let it be someone with a Muslim name."

Imagine hearing there was an incident on an airplane and your first reaction is, "I hope it wasn't someone with an Islamic background."

Sept. 11, 2001 was indeed a day that will go down in American history as a day of infamy, but it is also a day that will go down in Islamic history as the day our way of life changed. Not only did 17 terrorists hijack four planes that day with the intent to do harm, but also it was the day that a beautiful faith was hijacked into something it is not.

Since that day, Muslims have been in an uphill battle; ridiculed and ostracized by the media, politicians and zealots out to defame Islam at any price.

Instead of being involved with their communities and becoming recognizable contributing members of the society, Muslims have reverted to hiding their faith. Any mention of a mosque being built raises uproar in the community.

People often clamor that Islamic leaders do not condemn these horrific acts. Is it that they do not condemn the acts or is it that the media does not show you when they condemn these acts?

The truth is that Islam STRONGLY CONDEMNNS these acts. The Quran states that saving one person is as if though you have saved all of humanity, and killing one person is as if though you have killed all of humanity.

The actions of the people committing these horrendous acts should not be construed as the teachings of the Islam. The behavior of men should be deciphered separately from the teachings of a religion.

We see this in all faiths, where people interpret things for their own sake. Just as the practices of the Ku Klux Klan do not represent the teachings of Christianity, the practices of Al-Qaeda do not represent Islam.

Islam, Christianity and Judaism have much more in common than most people know.

All three faiths are the monotheistic faiths branching from Prophet Abraham (peace be upon him). Islam recognizes all of God's messengers sent to mankind from Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses and Jesus (peace be upon them all). Islam recognizes the Torah and the Bible as books sent by God to mankind through his messengers.

Although Muslims believe in Muhammad (peace be upon him) to be the last and final prophet, Moses (peace be upon him) is the most mentioned prophet in the Quran.

Everyone is urged to ask themselves, "How many Muslims do I know, and if I do know any, do they act the way that Muslims are being portrayed?"

If you do not know any, we welcome you to meet with us and learn about us. Do not get all your information from television or from hearsay. If anyone says anything about Islam, ask him or her, "How many Muslims do you know personally?"

In the past year, we have been invited to and have attended meetings with three different organizations. Each time, they have come away with a different perspective of Islam.

Please feel free to contact us via www.masjid-icfp.com. We will gladly coordinate a meeting either in person or in a group setting at the mosque, a church, a synagogue or any other meeting facility.

May God shower his mercy and guidance upon us all.

Sister

matters with Marian!

She never hesitated when anyone needed her help, whether it was moral support or her physical presence. She was so incredibly organized that she could immediately make arrangements to relocate whenever her husband who was a career military man, received orders; she just made it happen. She held down the fort when he was sent overseas. She was totally devoted to and raised her beautiful daughter, Christina, (who is so very much like her mom in many ways) and who was the center of her world. She didn't hesitate to drop everything for her, whether it was a school event, Girl Scouts, driving to games and practices or making cookies for her and her friends, who affectionately called her mom.

She was there for our own mom when she went through her chemo treatments and then shortly thereafter, for her mother-in-law.

One of my most precious treasures is a little charm that she left on my pillow many years ago after our youngest sister, Anne, was born. Marian was only 10 years old at the time. The note that was with it said, "Thank you for taking care of me so many times."

Another is a sister poem she sent me after a particularly difficult time we shared, on the back of which she wrote simply, "Thanks for being there."

Unfortunately, none of us were able to be there for her on Sept. 11, but I take comfort in knowing that her guardian angels were surely right there with her. We always shared a very strong love and belief in children and angels and especially our Lord, and I have to believe that she is now in the arms of the angels (and maybe even telling them how to do their jobs!) and that she will be an advocate for us with our own angels for whatever we may be about to face.

Even though those of us who loved her dearly felt differently, God decided that her work here on earth was complete and he needed her back home, and who are we to question God?

Thank you from all of us, Marian, for being such a loving wife, mother, sister, aunt and life-long friend. Thank you for all the memories and special times we all shared. We wouldn't trade them for anything and will treasure them always. I pray that our memories will keep you close and bring us comfort and strength.

I'm reminded of a

Scottish born philosopher, Sidney Banks, who believes that thought is a natural gift. It is our free thought and free will that dictate our observations of life. Our minds activate our thoughts and make them positive or negative.

Similarly, one of Richard Carlson's basic concepts is that (simply stated) we cannot control other people's actions or events around us, but we can control our reactions to them and how we process them.

We can choose to keep processing negative thoughts and feelings about the guilty parties and everything that has happened, or we can choose to process positive thoughts and feelings and live our lives the way Marian would have wanted.

Personally, I cannot come to terms with the phrase to "love your enemies" in this case and yes I, like you, want them all punished, but will leave that up to God. I refuse to let the enemy take away all my treasured thoughts and memories of Marian and all of what she believed. More than ever, I strongly feel her spirit within me, giving me her strength and am forever grateful to have been such a close part of her life.

Shortly after our mom passed away, Marian and I discovered a poem that touched our hearts deeply and helped us through a very difficult time. We spoke about it often and agreed that it summarizes our feelings at a time like this. I'd like to share it with you now in hopes that it may bring comfort to all of us.

To those I love and those who love me

When I am gone, release me let me go
 I have so many things to see and do.

You must not tie yourself to me with tears,
 Be thankful for our beautiful years.

I gave to you my love. You can only guess
 How much you gave to me in happiness.

I thank you for the love you each have shown
 But now it's time I traveled on alone.

So grieve a while for me, if grieve you must
 Then let your grief be comforted by trust.

It's only for a time that we must part
 So bless the memories within your heart.

I won't be far away, for life goes on
 So if you need me, call and I will come.

Though you can't see or touch me, I'll be near
 And if you listen with your heart, you'll hear all my love around you, soft and clear.

And then, when you must come this way alone,
 I'll greet you with a smile, and say welcome home.

Blaming Bush

If we weren't spending billions on a fruitless, never-ending war we inherited from "Bully Boy" Bush, we would have money for things we need, like health care and FEMA.

Consider this

If anyone believes that President Obama is serious about closing our border with Mexico, consider the case of Jose Vigil Carbajal, a citizen of Mexico.

Deported 15 times since 2007, his record includes at least three convictions. He has just been picked up again by local police and turned over to federal immigration and customs enforcement agents. Rather than being held for prosecution, they have sent him back to Mexico for a 16th time.

Tipping is getting out of hand

Many years ago, "tipping" used to be reserved mainly for sit-down restaurants. Now it's everywhere; nail salons, hair salons, dog groomers, bars and donut shops, just to name a few.

Now restaurants want you to tip for just preparing your food for takeout.

Restaurants and other businesses should pay their waiters and waitresses a salary. It's not the patron's responsibility to support your employees. "Tipping" has really gotten out of hand.

I have never been in favor of tipping someone for providing good service. A part of customer service is providing excellent service to customers who might otherwise patronize a competitor. That's the American way!

An order is placed, I prepare your food, now you not only owe me for the food, but you owe me for handing it to you and being polite. There are many people in jobs who don't and can't ask or mandate that you tip them.

If anyone should be owed a substantial tip, it's school teachers. They're underpaid and overworked. I notice parents don't even give their children's teacher a gift at holiday time anymore. Contrary to what society chooses to think, teaching is a job just like any other job. Mortgages have to be paid, if they can afford one. Car dealerships don't hand out free cars to teachers, and utility companies don't discount their utilities. Neither do grocery stores or clothing stores the last time I checked.

More people are cooking at home rather than going out to eat. Employers: pay your employees a salary. If you can't afford to, then find another way to make a living.

Here's a tip: play the lottery, the same as many of us do, or find another job where you don't have to rely on tips. It's highway robbery.

Wondering about test scores

As our children get ready to return to school, there is faint prospect that this year's test scores will show improvement. The so-called STEM tests, measures of science, technology, engineering and math, are (and should be) a major concern to educators.

Over the last 20 years or so, students at other nations have rushed past us. The U.S. ranks 28th in placing students into the pipeline to college.

Without a dramatic turnaround, we face continuing to lose our competitive edge in the worldwide economy.

Good news and bad news

There is good news and bad news. Fortunately, increasing numbers of people are realizing that for years, Congress has knowingly engaged in a colossal Ponzi scheme of taxing, spending and running up debt.

The bad news is the minimalist deal to slow and control spending worked out by the politicians does nothing to address the time bomb of entitlements, which will surely bankrupt this nation.

It fails to solve our problems. It has been described as kicking the can down the road. Without an abrupt change in direction, we are headed for disaster, depression and Armageddon.

Unfair malpractice

The average malpractice claim against pediatricians is $520,000. Why should we care? For at least two reasons.

First, when they can, doctors will pass the cost of lawsuits onto their patients. Second, claims tend to discourage good people from going into the field. All doctors face lawyers in court. But pediatricians are sued the most. Juries allow emotion to cloud their thinking. Who does not feel sorry for a little child? But the costs of frivolous lawsuits by unscrupulous lawyers is a burden to us all.

Volunteers needed for Special Olympics

State aquatic championship meets to be held in Sebastian

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Special Olympics Florida is once again bringing its state aquatic championships to Indian River County at the North County Aquatic Center, Oct. 1-2.

Scott Seeley, Indian River County recreation coordinator, said volunteers are once again needed to make the event, which draws more than 500 athletes, coaches and family members to the area, go swimmingly.

"We are in need of volunteers with time, energy and enthusiasm to be a part of this grand event," Indian River County recreation officials said in a press release.

Volunteers — who must be 15 or older, or accompanied by an adult — who apply will be given an orientation on the days of the event and their tasks will then be explained, Mr. Seeley said.

Some of the jobs that volunteers will be doing are keeping and recording times for the athletes and escorting them to their lanes and award ceremonies, he said.

Volunteers can sign up for shifts, including Oct. 1 from 7 a.m. to noon, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., 5:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. or Sunday 7 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Four-year-old Emiligh Brown of Vero Beach pays particularly close attention to Ronald McDonald's bright red hair and not-so-close attention to the magic trick he was performing at the main library in 2009 during the McDonald's Reading Challenge, part of library card sign-up month.

Libraries team up with McDonald's for reading challenge

VERO BEACH — The Indian River County Library System is once again partnering with McDonald's to provide incentives for kids to read.

National library card sign-up month coincides with the 2011 Reading Challenge organized by McDonald's, which is designed to promote reading and use of library resources by young readers.

All through September, children who come to the library and present their card or sign up for a library card can register for the reading challenge. Each time they present their card, they can receive a McDonald's food voucher, for the first three visits, said Patti Fuchs, children's librarian for the Main and Brackett libraries in Vero Beach.

The children can also enter a larger prize drawing by mailing in a special card received at the library, she said.

September is a great month to have a reading emphasis because children are back in school and can really use the resources the library has to offer, with thousands of books to read being a top reason, Ms. Fuchs said.

"I think it's a really great motivator, even for kids that already have their library cards, to just get them in here," she said.

On Oct. 6 at 6:45 p.m., Ronald McDonald will visit the Main Library in Vero Beach to celebrate the end of the 2011 Reading Challenge. Children of all ages are invited to come and see SEBASTIAN — If variety is the spice of life, then Roadside Family Restaurant is the hottest thing in Sebastian.

Larry Peters is the big boss in the kitchen and he makes sure his menu has a little something for everyone at any meal, any day of the week.

Roadside Family Restaurant, which Mr. Peters took over six year ago, is more than just a good place to eat. It's a place to relax and enjoy the company of the people you are with, he said.

Having good food and a variety of food is key to keep people coming back though, and that is what Mr. Peters has become known for in the community. Hot and cold sandwiches, soups, crab cakes, steak, meatloaf, chicken Marsala, burgers and scallops are just the tip of the iceberg on the choices Mr. Peters makes available to hungry customers.

"I try to stay ahead of the curve and most of the time, people start copying me," he said with a laugh.

The restaurant, which is open for breakfast, lunch and dinner Tuesday through Saturday and breakfast and lunch Sunday and Monday, has a faithful following of regular customers who know their food will be perfect at Roadside.

Donald and Freedia Ferguson have a daily standing lunch date at the restaurant and while they have their favorite dishes, they do try new ones every once and a while.

"It's a good lunch. We come for the good food," Mrs. Ferguson said.

Quality meat is very important to Mr. Peters, and his popular burger gives evidence to his success.

The eponymous house burger comes with the standard one-third pound Black Angus beef burger patty, juicy, cooked to order and loaded with shredded lettuce, melted American cheese, pickles and a special homemade sauce.

The melted cheese oozed from the piping hot burger, a quick and satisfying lunchtime fare for meat lovers.

More than a dozen burger variations are listed on the menu, including burgers with bacon, barbeque sauce, with onion rings inside them, with corned beef on top and even a vegetarian burger.

"Our burgers are to die for," said Tammy Liddy, who has been on the wait staff since before Mr.

Peters came. "I come here on my days off and eat," she said.

Extra hungry customers or customers up for a culinary challenge can order double burgers for a more-than giant-sized portion.

"People come in and they take pictures of their burgers, the doubles, that's two one-third pound patties, and they put it on Facebook to show their friends," Ms. Liddy said with a laugh.

The environment of the restaurant is spacious and clean and the old-timey décor is fascinating.

Vinyl records, license plates and metal signs adorn the walls, along with old newspapers and photographs.

"People come in here and they talk about the old days," said Ms. Liddy.

The cost of the food is fair and comparable or lower than other restaurants in the area, something Mr. Peters said will continue for as long as he possibly can.

"In these economic times, it's hard, but I do a lot of the prep-work myself to keep the cost down," he said.

Sunday mornings feature an all-you can eat breakfast buffet, Wednesday night is Italian night, Friday is all-you-can-eat fish and Saturday night there is a special emphasis on seafood and a special deal on scallops, Mr. Peters said.

Roadside Family Restaurant is located at 10795 U.S. 1, Sebastian. For more information, call (772) 581-2623.

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — The most creative and innovative chefs in the county are sharpening their knives in preparation for the premier food event, Vero's Top Chef Challenge, to benefit the Homeless Family Center.

At the qualifying event on Jan. 30, 2012, which will be held at Vero Beach Elks Lodge No. 1774, local chefs will prepare small tastes of their most creative cuisine for 300 guests to sample as they compete for the attendee's votes.

Guests will be asked to cast their votes for the chef they believe prepared the best culinary creation. Four chefs will advance to the challenge finale. The event starts at 6 p.m.

The challenge finale on Feb. 27 at The Club at Pointe West is the final event, with 140 guests at a seated, formal dinner consisting of entrees prepared by each of the four chefs chosen as finalists at the qualifying event, plus dessert prepared by a guest chef.

Cocktail hour starts at 6 p.m. The evening will conclude with the guests and three chefs with extensive culinary experience acting as judges, voting and choosing Vero's Top Chef of 2012.

Chef Michele Hennessey, owner of the River Grille, three-time finalist and 2009 Top Chef, is the chef coordinator.

"The theme this year is 'It's All About The Food and The Families,' focusing on the amazing food that will be available at both events and that the funds being raised to help meet the needs of the families served by The Homeless Family Center," said Neda Heeter, chairwoman.

"I continue to be amazed that, as a result of the collaborations that HFC has forged, $15 per week feeds one resident for one week and $30.80 provides a month of food, shelter and counseling for one resident."

Event tickets cost will be $40 per person with a cash bar. Vero's Top Chef Challenge finale tickets will cost $175 per person.

The Homeless Family Center is a partner agency of the United Way and Treasure Coast Homeless Services Council. The center is located on Fourth Street and provides emergency and transitional shelter for homeless families from Indian River, St. Lucie, Martin and Okeechobee counties.

Family drama to kick off community theater season

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

VERO BEACH — Secrets, mysteries and drama are the themes for the first community theater performance of the season.

For the 54th year, the Vero Beach Theatre Guild will present a full season of shows for the public's enjoyment, opening with a classic drama by Arthur Miller, "All My Sons."

The opening night performance is Sept. 15 at 7 p.m. The production will run through Sept. 25.

The play, set in 1946, opened on Broadway in January 1947 and was adapted for film in 1948 and again in 1987.

In this award-winning masterpiece, a son disappears during WWII, a father is exonerated for shipping defective airplane parts, resulting in the deaths of 21

American pilots and other shocking secrets tear two families apart.

"It's a story that will grab the audience," said Carole Strauss, assistant director and producer.

George Carabin, one of the guilds' most experienced directors, will take the lead directing role in the play, guiding the actors to top-notch interpretations of their roles, Mrs. Strauss said.

Mr. Carabin's professional experience includes theater, radio, TV and film in Romania, as well as teaching and directing in New York, New Jersey, Georgia and Florida. He has authored four plays and an acting manual, earning him a number of acting and teaching awards. He has volunteered at the theater guild for the last 11 years, according to a press release.

The cast of 10 includes four new actors from the community, said Mrs. Strauss.

The cast includes James Anthony Davis, as Jo Keller; Jo Giesecke as Kate Keller; Ben Earman as Chris Keller; Shelley Adelle as Ann Deever; Jon Osterholm as George Deever; Larry Strauss as Dr. Jim Bayliss; Holly Cameron as Sue Bayliss; Mitchell Stein as Frank Luby; Rachael Marie Ellsworth as Lydia Luby and Chris Dunleavy as young Bert.

Rehearsals have been progressing well and the cast is a tight-knit unit, Mrs. Strauss said.

The rest of the season will include more drama, musicals and a romantic comedy.

From Nov. 10 through Nov. 25, the guild will present, "The 1940s Radio Hour," a musical by Walton Jones set in a New York radio station at the beginning of WWII.

good life is lived by those who create and enjoy adventures that make them happy. The journey is more important than the destination. Keep setting goals. They pull you back on track when the world tries to take you astray.

Cancer-June 22-July 22

Your spirit is lighter. Your energy is stronger. You seem happier. Refuse to let anyone pull you down from this beautiful high and freedom. You are a water sign. Water rules the heart and feelings. You have major heart. Follow your heart and you will be guided to even higher accomplishments on the great road of life.

Leo-July 23-Aug. 22

Wrap up loose ends and bring unresolved issues to resolution. Keep a strong focus on the next three months. Begin now to make new plans for next year. Refuse to procrastinate. Do it now. Work on the three most important things on your list everyday. The lesser things can wait. Now success is in your favor.

Virgo-Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Quiet your mind, stay calm, listen to and trust your instincts. When you follow your heart you are close to pure truth. Refuse to listen to the head. Bring up the good stuff, plan your course and take action. Now hang in there and help the new exciting ideas take root, give birth, grow, bear fruit and make you happy. Yeah!

Libra-Sept. 23-Oct. 22

The gift of love is reflected so strongly in your heart and actions. Accept from the core of your being that the universe loves you and is well pleased with your graceful, beautiful spirit. Your passion is highly capable of achieving great results. Stay connected. The richness in your heart will continue to flow for all your days.

Scorpio-Oct. 23-Nov. 21

Get in touch with the most burning desires in your heart. Manifest them in your life. You have a beautiful spirit. Allow it to awaken you to these high aspirations. Focus on the most important things first. Surrender to the higher power and ask the universe to bless you. Now, be patient and let it work for you. It will.

Sagittarius-Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Important decisions are looming in your future. Who am I, where am I going, how am I going to get there and when? We all have to redefine ourselves just like the earth goes the seasons and cycles. You are coming into a new season. It is a good time for you. You are a child of thanksgiving. Let your gratitude flow.

Capricorn-Dec. 22-Jan. 19

It's important to stay grounded. You are an earth sign, you know. When you feel scattered or distracted it's time to slow down, take a step back, refocus, be patient and watch for a sign that it is time to move forward again. Work on the top priorities first. You will make it through all challenges just fine.

Aquarius-Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You stand strong in any undertaking. You never give up. You were born with the courage to take action on your convictions and inspirations. You have the capacity to go beyond normal expectations and produce extraordinary results. Mighty forces are with you. Call on them as needed and life will continue to bless you.

Pisces-Feb. 19-March 20

Your natural leadership, humanity, good heart and helpful spirit affect everyone who comes into your life. You are a star. Why? Because you inspire everyone. You are of the light. You make a large, positive impact on all our lives. Maybe this is why spirit saved you for last in the zodiac to insure victory for all at the end.

they are not just standing around taking up space, Mr. Seeley said.

"They get really involved and we couldn't do it without them," he said.

By his recollection, this will be the sixth year Special Olympics Florida will hold the event at the North County Aquatic Center. He believes their return has a lot to do with the support given to the event by the community.

"The facility is magnificent, and that's part of it, but I think it's the community itself. We get so much support from the community and it shows them we are a good host site.

"The volunteers rally behind the event and it's something that the athletes, coaches and parents see. They cheer and they clap for the athletes and it's a pleasant place to come," Mr. Seeley said.

To sign up as a volunteer, call the Indian River County recreation department at (772) 226-1732, he said.

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — United Way of Indian River County invites volunteers and social service agencies to sign up for its annual Day of Caring on Sept. 24.

Volunteers head out in teams to help local health and human service agencies with much needed painting, fixing and yard work. Local health and human service agencies are urged to sign up for a project.

The national event is put on every year by more than 1,300 United Ways around the country.

"Matching volunteers with community service is what we do best," said Doris Butler, United Way Day of Caring co-coordinator.

"These volunteers will visit agencies, roll up their sleeves and make a real difference. It is a day of hard work and great reward."

Projects range from washing and waxing emergency vehicles to assembling hurricane preparedness kits with the children of Youth Guidance.

In the past five years, more than 1,000 volunteers, from more than 51 businesses, contributed their time to complete 60 projects at nonprofit agencies throughout the county.

For more information area agencies and businesses can visit www.unitedwayirc.org/DOC.html or call (772) 567-8900, Ext 17.

TD Bank named Best Bank on East Coast

For Hometown News
NewsFP@hometownnewsol.com

TD Bank, America's most convenient bank, was named Best Regional Bank/East in "Money's" Best Banks 2011 list. Available in the September issue, the list explored bank account options in national banks, credit unions, as well as regional banks, such as TD Bank, and provided consumers with a variety of national and regional banking options. TD Bank earned the title Best Regional Bank/East for several reasons, most notably convenient hours, including extended evening hours, Sundays and holidays, as well as a low bar for free checking, said Rebecca S. Acevedo, public relations manager-corporate and public affairs. "Money," the leading personal finance magazine, noted that monthly fees can be avoided at TD Bank with a $100 daily balance in checking accounts. The bank was also cited for its savings account rewards and opportunities for those 60 and older to have free money orders and bank checks. "We could not be more proud to be named 'Money's' Best Regional Bank in the East especially during these challenging economic times," said Bharat Masrani, president and CEO, TD Bank. "Convenience is at the heart of everything we do, from being open seven days, to our live, 24/7, 365-day contact center and extends to our simple, hassle-free product offerings." As the list noted, one of TD Bank's key offerings is a low bar to free checking.

While many banks reacted to recent government regulations by eliminating free checking or adding requirements to accounts, TD Bank launched the TD Convenient Choice Checking Suite. The product set offers six simple checking accounts with unique options and features, thus enabling customers to select the checking product that is just right for them: • TD convenience checking, for customers who can maintain a minimum balance of $100 and offers the first order of checks free of charge • TD 60 plus checking, an interest-bearing account for customers aged 60 and older that includes numerous discounts and fee waivers. • TD student checking for full-time students, requiring no minimum balance and offering one free overdraft per year, along with free overdraft protection transfers and the first order of checks free. • TD simple checking, for customers who don't want to worry about maintaining a particular balance amount and like the consistency of a low, fixed monthly fee. • TD premium checking for customers who maintain higher balances ($2,500) and want maximum interest. • TD relationship checking, for customers who want a deeper relationship with TD and can maintain higher balances ($20,000). For more information, call (856) 470-3201 or visit <https://mediaroom.tdbank.com>.

TREASURE COAST — The Small Business Development Center at Indian River State College was awarded a $10,000 donation from Bank of America. The funds will support the counseling services of a certified business analyst, who will provide free guidance and mentoring for business start-ups and entrepreneurs in Indian River County. The SBDC at IRSC is part of the Florida Small Business Development Center network, which is committed to helping local businesses start, grow and profit with the assistance of one-on-one counseling. "Economic recovery is a critical issue and small businesses, in particular, are the most vulnerable," said Beth Giannone, senior vice president, business banking for Bank of America. "We are pleased to collaborate with the Small Business Development Center at IRSC, which provides services enabling small businesses to not only recover, but grow in Indian River County." The SBDC at IRSC assists potential and existing business owners with advice, training and information to support business growth. "Stimulating small-business growth is an important aspect of the IRSC mission, said Edwin R. Massey, IRSC president. "With the support of Bank of America, the college's SBDC will be able to provide expanded business consulting services in Indian River County, helping to advance the county's economic vitality." The donation was accepted by the IRSC Foundation, a nonprofit organization which raises and manages funds in support of scholarships, programs and facilities at IRSC. For more information, call (888) 283.1177 or visit www.IRSCbiz.com.

Drama

"Born Yesterday," written by Garson Kanin, will be staged Jan. 12 through Jan. 22. The story follows a corrupt tycoon, in Washington, D.C., whose mistress learns of his illegal activity and sets plans in motion to stop him. Community theater members will take on a colossal production, "Titanic, The Musical," by Peter Stone and Maury Yeston, on March 15 through April 1. The musical examines the causes, conditions and characters involved in the events that transpired nearly 100 years ago on April 15, 1912. The final show presented will be "Bell, Book and Candle," a romantic comedy by John Van Druten. The story includes magic, witches and love spells gone awry. Season tickets and individual show tickets are still available and can be purchased online or at the box office. Matinee and evening performances of "All My Sons" are still available. Tickets range from $20 to $22, with students younger than 18 at half-price. The Vero Beach Theatre Guild is located at 2020 San Juan Ave., Vero Beach. For tickets or more information about the Vero Beach Theatre Guild, call (772) 562-8300 or visit www.verobeachtheatreguild.com.
