Some criminal cases are unusual, humorous or just outright odd.

And there's no shortage of them on the Treasure Coast.

This column will highlight cases that often leave observers shaking their heads.

Anti-smoking campaign reaches new level

These days, smokers find that just about everywhere they light up, someone expresses disapproval. And there are increasingly fewer places where they can legally smoke.

In Martin County, the campaign to snuff out smoking reached a new level recently when one man confronted another man about smoking while pumping gasoline.

When the man refused to put out his cigarette, the other man returned to his vehicle and got a gun. That worked.

Most would agree smoking while pumping gasoline is not smart, but threatening to shoot someone over it may be even less smart.

The man who threatened the smoker was the one who ended up being

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Some candidates will take office in Indian River County without ever appearing on the election ballot.

The final day to qualify to run for any political office was June 8 and several candidates, both incumbents and newcomers, who ran unopposed won their positions. Jeffery Smith, current chief deputy clerk of court, was supported by outgoing Clerk of Courts Jeff Barton and will automatically take office in January because no one ran against him.

Mr. Smith, a CPA, has worked in county government since 1992 in various capacities, including assistant utilities director,

Nonprofit helps needy stay on road

Grant helps fix vehicles

By Jessica Tuggle

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Retaining a job in this economy in Indian River County, or even gaining employment from a state of joblessness, is often dependent on one thing: reliable transportation.

The Salvation Army of Indian River County, with the help of a grant from the Indian River Community Foundation, is helping residents have safe, reliable modes of personal transportation.

The ride safe/vehicle safety and maintenance social service program by the Indian River County branch of the nonprofit is one of few car safety programs offered by the nonprofit in the state, said John Corapi, director of development.

The program was created in 2010 after staff members noticed clients driving in for other social services, such as food, in unsafe vehicles.

"We'd see people coming in with kids in the car, and the metal is showing in their wheels and their tires are about to blow. Or their brakes are shot and they are driving around using the emergency brake," Mr. Corapi said.

Sometimes a new battery is needed to start the car so people can get to work, or a car seat is needed to bring home an infant from the hospital, said Connye Brown, a social services worker.

This year, the Indian River Community Foundation awarded an $18,780 grant to the Salvation Army for the program.

In previous years, Mr. Corapi said they were able

Correction

In a June 15 Hometown News article that introduced readers to Tom Dehn, a candidate for Indian River County property appraiser, his opponent was incorrectly paraphrased.

In the 14th paragraph of the article, "Candidate cites experience as key for appraiser job," Mr. Dehn was paraphrased when speaking about ideas he has about good fiscal management at the property appraiser's office.

The paraphrase was erroneously attributed to David Nolte, the Indian River County property appraiser, who is running for re-election against Mr. Dehn.

Mr. Nolte was not contacted for comment in the article about Mr. Dehn, and his name was inadvertently used instead of Mr. Dehn's name.

Hometown News regrets the error and any confusion it may have caused.

Brian Smith, Colin MacKay and Zachary Maes, recent Vero Beach High School graduates, were recognized by county commissioners for their hard work to attain the rank of Eagle Scout. Since the Boy Scout organization was formed, there have been more than 100 million members, but only about 2 million have earned the penultimate rank of Eagle Scout.

Three Scouts earn highest honor

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Three newly fledged Eagle Scouts were recognized by the Indian River County board of commissioners in a recent meeting for their community service projects.

Brian Smith, Colin MacKay and Zachary Maes were honored in the public forum for their perseverance in the Boy Scout organization, academic excellence and community involvement with their Eagle Scout projects.

"Three Eagle Scouts at one time, it's like an eclipse, it's a very rare thing," said Commissioner Peter O'Bryan.

Commissioner O'Bryan said he was proud to know there are such exemplary young men in Indian River County.

Boys in the scouting program don't just learn how to tie knots or build campfires. The program grows them physically, emotionally and mentally, said Scoutmaster Edwin Rojas.

The three Eagle Scouts have proven themselves in every aspect of the program and he is proud of all their accomplishments and their character, Mr. Rojas said.

"Colin is extremely friendly. He goes out of his way to really make younger Scouts feel welcome," he said.

"Brian's organizational skills are very unusual for such a young man. As senior patrol leader he organized the troop and troop meetings," Mr. Rojas said.

"Zack is very mature for his age. He is reaching out to help others in the troop. No matter his position, he's done whatever was needed.

That's someone who is trustworthy," he said.

The three boys are close friends and graduated from Vero Beach High School together this spring.

In addition to working on their scouting workbook and earning merit badges, the boys needed to create and complete an Eagle Scout project before their 18th birthdays.

For his project, Brian partnered with the nonprofit organization formerly known as The SunUp Center, to build a greenhouse, while Colin painted a multi-purpose room and installed a fence for First Baptist Church of Vero Beach.

Zachary constructed a 40-foot walking bridge for hikers in the St. Sebastian River Preserve.

"I built it because when it rains, the trail floods up to waist deep, so it's pretty much impassable," Zachary said.

All three agreed the program was not for the faint of heart, and thanked their parents for helping them through the ranks and holding them accountable to finish their projects. They encouraged others to get involved with the scouting program because of the lasting life skills impact.

"Do it, it's totally worth it," Brian said.

"It's tough, but you will benefit from it your whole life," Zachary said.

The fun activities are priceless memories, Colin said.

"It's so much fun. I've been spelunking, white water rafting, camping and more," he said.

County's hospital grows with times

By Kim Leach-Wright
For Hometown News

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Indian River Medical Center has a long and interesting history dating back to 1932. It is difficult to imagine a time when Indian River County had no hospital at all, but during the Great Depression the nearest hospital was 70 miles away via two-lane roads that were not always paved.

Garnett Lunsford Radin, a 29-year-old registered nurse and resourceful woman from Nebraska, purchased a hotel on Old Dixie Highway with $22,000 of her own money and opened the hospital with 21 beds on May 12, 1932.

The hospital staff worked under primitive conditions including an artesian well-water system and one wood-burning stove providing the building's only heat. Meals were carried in from an outdoor kitchen.

With little money to keep the hospital afloat, the Vero Beach Chamber of Commerce stepped in, leading an effort to create a non-profit corporation and solicit contributions to keep the hospital open.

In need of more space for patients, construction began in 1951 on a new site in a residential area on 26th Street in Vero Beach. The new 35-bed facility opened in March 1952 as Indian River Memorial Hospital, dedicated to the memory of those from Indian River County who gave their lives for freedom. It became the nation's smallest accredited hospital.

In 1958, Gov. Leroy Collins approved creation of a public hospital district and two years later it took control of the hospital management.

By 1967 the hospital had expanded to 164 beds and a larger facility was needed. The current 128-acre site, located off 37th Street, between U.S. 1 and Indian River Boulevard, was chosen because of its size and central location.

After a 24-year absence, Mrs. Radin returned and immediately went to work as planning coordinator, responsible for the transition to the new facility. The current facility opened on March 29, 1978, with 216 beds.

The hospital continued to grow and become more complex to operate. A volunteer board could not provide the experienced business management needed to compete in the health-care market.

In response to the change-ing market, the Indian River County Hospital District Board of Trustees voted in 1984 to establish a community, not-for-profit corporation, Indian River Memorial Hospital, Inc., and lease the hospital to that corporation for control of day-to-day operations. The transfer took place on May 1, 1985.

Since then the hospital has grown to include 335 rooms. More than 50,000 people are seen each year in its state-of-the-art emergency department.

The Heart Center, affiliated with Duke University Health System, opened in 2006. Its outstanding surgical outcomes have earned it top recognition from the Society of Thoracic Surgeons, who named it one of the best cardiac surgery programs in America.

In late 2006, to reflect the transition from a good community hospital to a top-quality medical center, the hospital changed its name from Indian River Memorial Hospital to Indian River Medical Center.

Indian River Medical Center is focused on providing quality healthcare to Indian River, St. Lucie, Martin, Okeechobee, Orange, Osceola, Polk and Seminole counties.

To be eligible for assistance, applicants must have a job they need to keep, but are in danger of losing because of failing transportation, or acceptance of employment is contingent upon reliable transportation, Ms. Brown said.

"We'll try to help them get back on the road," she said.

The application process includes verification that the client has insurance and the vehicle is legally in their possession, Ms. Brown said.

The Salvation Army works with local mechanics at J and J Autoworks and Discount Tire in Vero Beach to fix the cars' issues.

"We try to use businesses owned by local residents," Mr. Corapi said.

John Licardi is co-owner of J and J Autoworks and is glad to be supporting the Salvation Army in this endeavor.

"Like anything else, in this economy, sometimes people need a hand up to get to the next step," Mr. Licardi said.

"A car is needed in Vero Beach, even though we have the GoLine. Especially with kids, you need that independence to go from point A to point B," he said.

The grant money will be a big help this year to meet the needs of people in Indian River County. Summertime can often be challenging for seasonal workers, Ms. Brown said.

If anyone is interested in getting involved with donations toward the program, just contact the Salvation Army offices, Mr. Corapi said.

"We want to stretch this out and help as many people as we can," he said.

For more information about the vehicle safety and maintenance program, call (772) 978-0265.

Principals

Storm Grove Middle School and Storm Grove Middle School Principal Shawn O'Keefe will go an older group of students at Vero Beach High School.

Vero Beach High School Principal Eric Seymour will be the new principal of Oslo Middle School, a position that was open with the exit of former principal, Sean Brown.

The changes are part of the superintendent's plan to have all staff members in a position to flourish and benefit the district.

According to the proposal, the Gifford Middle School principal position has not been chosen and will be advertised.

The Indian River County School Board was updated on various projects and potential changes to the district at a round table meeting earlier in the day.

Carter Morrison, assistant superintendent for finance and operations, said staff has been considering several options for the property where the former Osceola Magnet School building stands.

Selling the property outright because of low market value may not be the best option, but a land swap, or a land trade with Indian River County is a possibility, Mr. Morrison said.

He said the estimated value of the property, with demolition costs, is about $400,000.

The property is zoned as residential, said school board member Carol Johnson.

That limits uses for the land, but it doesn't mean the zoning couldn't be changed, so it could be sold to a hotel company, she said.

She said she would be interested in seeing if a long-term lease of the property would be financially beneficial.

Board member Karen Disney-Brombach said she would want to be a good neighbor and have the building taken down, even if a lease was put in place.

Personnel policies were also discussed during the round-table meeting.

Board members were concerned that by not giving exiting employees an evaluation, they were causing harm to the exiting employee's future employment.

Superintendent Fran Adams said the lack of exit evaluations is not detrimental, but Beth Weatherstone, a teacher's union representative, said it could hold a teacher back from receiving performance pay in certain situations. The school board will further address the issue in a future meeting.

For more information about upcoming school board meetings, visit www.indianriverschools.org.

arrested. He was charged with aggravated assault.

War against dog owners

When a woman was confronted by Martin County deputies as to why she poked another woman, while she was walking her dogs, with an umbrella, she replied that she "was in a fight against people who owned dogs."

She told the deputy she doesn't like dogs because they do their business on her front door step and "she does not like people who own dogs," a report said.

The dog owner reported that while walking her dogs, the other woman was following her. At one point, apparently she got behind the other woman and when they passed she greeted her, but the woman began to "yell and curse at her," and said she did not like her dogs.

Shortly afterward, the dog owner reported the woman hit her with the umbrella, although the other woman only admitting to tapping her with the umbrella.

Maybe the dogs, having witnessed all that, were thinking, "Thank God we're not humans."

Bizarre burglary

When a Vero Beach couple returned home, they discovered that someone had burglarized their residence.

Oddly enough, they found some keys that did not belong to them.

Later, Vero Beach police discovered that one of those keys opened the door of a residence of the suspect in the burglary.

Earlier that evening, police had come into a contact with a man wearing gray sweat pants and having in his hand a pair of pink lace underwear. When he took the man home, he saw the man dispose of the underwear in a garbage closet.

After the burglary in which it was reported that underwear may have been stolen, the police officer recalled the man with the underwear and returned to the residence. It was then that he tried the key, which worked.

And he retrieved the underwear, which the burglary victim identified as being her property. She also said the gray sweat pants belonged to her.

The man who had been disposing of the underwear was then charged with burglary.

Got something to say?

Call the Hometown Rants & Raves line at or e-mail news@hometownnewsol.com.

Callers are asked to refrain from making slanderous statements. Statements of fact will be checked for accuracy.

What about ditches?

Hurricane season is here and the drainage ditches have not been cleared and/or graded. Many have had standing water for months. Pray for another uneventful season. Also, when are we going to be brought into the 21st century by getting a sewer system? How many businesses and potential homeowner's have bypassed Sebastian because of this? Everybody's property value would be higher.

Maybe a study of costs should be made then put onto a ballot so the citizens can decide if the costs justify the need-upgrade.

Don't like it? Don't watch it

The verbatim ranting of Fox news spin can hardly be called plagiarism. I suppose that his favorite channel is MSNBC, where the speakers (not newscasters or journalists) daily spit out hate for anything Republican. And, by the way, if you hate Fox so much, why do you watch it?

You also seem to have trouble with religion, calling Romney, "a millionaire Mormon." My religion does not matter, just as no one else's should, when running for office. The voters will have to use their common sense and knowledge of the people running.

By the way, using any of the many fact-check vehicles, you would see that your Speaker of the House, Mr. Reid, is also a Mormon. Should that alone disqualify him, as well?

The next subject in that June 15 edition of Hometown News happened to be on the deficit. The writer seems to be writing in a very intelligent manner, but if he is that smart, he should not base his findings solely on the writing of one person. Going about it that way, one can make numbers do just about anything one wants.

Check and compare facts. Don't rely solely on one aspect, just because it is one that you agree with. You or Zfacts may be right, but before I would take anything as gospel I would try to read/research what other professional economists have to say on the subject.

My final offering is about President Obama's speaking on TV. He is a great reader; with the Teleprompter in front of him, he does not miss a step; adlibbing, he seems to stop and stutter often looking lost in trying to find words to answer the questions; just an observation.

You see, I watch other channels, NBC, CBS, ABC, Fox, CNN, but not MSNBC anymore. I don't need to listen to so much hatred instead of news.

Why now?

I'm just wondering why Gov. Scott did not raise the question about non-citizens and ineligible voters when he was running for governor.

Also, why wasn't that done when George W. Bush was running for president? Why now?

Is there anybody out there who has the answer or do we already know the answer?

Anniversary

News has been a part of with the community over the past 10 years.

Sports stagger, but stats show growth

The annual spring training visit from first the Brooklyn, then the Los Angeles Dodgers was a beloved tradition in Vero Beach for 60 years until the team left for a new home in Arizona in 2008.

The exodus of the major league team left the community with a giant loss of tourist tax revenue and a baseball-size hole in their hearts.

The county-owned property known internationally as Dodgertown was shuttered until Minor League Baseball struck a lease agreement in 2009 to handle day-to-day operations. The vision for the state-of-the-art sports complex was to attract sports teams year-round, not just focus on baseball teams and tournaments.

The facility was rebranded in 2010 as Vero Beach Sports Village and MiLB continued its pursuit of soccer, football, lacrosse, swimming, baseball and softball teams.

In 2011, it became clear that a larger investment was needed in order to make the venture successful, in addition to the construction of youth-size fields for girls' softball and youth baseball tournaments.

Many in Vero Beach cheered when it was announced that former Dodgers president and owner, Peter O'Malley, his sister, Terry Seidler, and former Dodger star pitchers Chan Ho Park and Hideo Nomo were joining with MiLB at Vero Beach Sports Village.

Economy crashes, struggles to recover

Indian River County was not exempt from a nationwide economic downturn in the mid-to-late 2000s.

The population grew from 112,000 to 145,000 in 2000 through 2010, and has a steady projected pace of 2,700 new residents per year.

In the early 2000s, the housing marketing was booming, construction and related industries were riding the population wave and people were taking advantage of funding opportunities for new houses.

Records show the unemployment rate early in the 2000s dropped below 5 percent, yo-yo'd between 6 and 10 percent for a while, but skyrocketed from below 5 percent to more than 15 percent in less than five years.

Home foreclosure signs have become a normal sight and local nonprofit agencies say the bad economy has led to more individuals and families asking for help with utility bills and food.

Agencies that reach out to homeless individuals and families, such as The Source in Vero Beach say the face of the homeless has changed to younger families struggling to survive without a job.

A recent report showed the unemployment rate might begin to trend back down. Indian River County's rate fell below 10 percent for the first time since December 2008.

Show me the money

One of the county's larger companies, Piper Aircraft, saw highs and lows within its business as well over the past 10 years.

In 2006, the company began considering moving its headquarters from Vero Beach, but a combined $32 million incentive package from the county and the state convinced the company to stay in early 2008. The incentive package had benchmarks the company needed to meet before the funds could be paid, and a little more than $6 million was paid.

As the months turned into years, however, it was clear the recession had badly damaged the aviation industry and employment benchmarks would not be met. The company and the incentive package negotiators from the state and the county have not reached a final agreement if the remaining promised funds will be available should Piper Aircraft meet the benchmarks in the future.

When it rains, it pours

Hurricanes are a part of every Floridian's summer break, but Indian River County was fortunate for many years to only have indirect hurricane activity.

In addition to the economic downturn, in 2004 and 2005, residents became intimately acquainted with hurricanes Jeanne and Frances, and Wilma, and to a lesser extent, Charley and Bonnie.

It was another element that changed the lives of many in Indian River County.

The aftermath of the unprecedented 2004 storms saw many residents go for two weeks without power. The Indian River County emergency management division estimated the cost of damage sustained in 2004 was close to $3 billion.

Seven of 11 fire stations in the county were destroyed or damaged in the hurricanes. Five of the stations had to be rebuilt, a project that wasn't completed until 2009. Station 9 in Roseland was the only station to be rebuilt on a different plot of land. The move was largely due to space constraints on the previous property in Sebastian.

The fire department aggressively pursued grants and requested funds from the county to upgrade and rebuild the station to meet the needs of the county residents and meet new code standards.

Also in 2009, the Gifford community received its own fire station bringing the total number of fire stations in Indian River County to 12, said emergency management staff.

In 2005, Indian River County was included in the presidential declaration of disaster for the second year in a row in 2005 because of hurricane damages.

Power outages were the biggest issue for residents. Residents did not recover from the 2004 hurricanes in time to fortify themselves for the 2005 bout of storms and as a result, residents needed assistance and assistance came from all over the country.

Product lines expand due to clients' requests

By Janice Johnston
For Hometown News

SEBASTIAN — Scooter's Barkery LLC opened for business December 19, 2003. When we opened, we thought the only thing that would sell was the dog treats that were baked on site.

By October 2004, shortly after our two hurricanes, by customer request we expanded our product line. At that point we started carrying the Solid Gold dog and cat food. Over the next eight years, again, by request of our customers the Evengers dog food line, dehydrated dog treats, shampoos, leads, leashes, rhinestone collars and rod iron beds were add to our inventory.

Our customers started asking us for advice when their dogs developed food problems, so by communicating with various local veterinarians and by researching the various problems, we now are able to assist customers with dogs that have health issues. If the problem is weight, our products can be created to help alleviate that condition.

If the problem is food allergies, we adjust our current recipes or develop a treat for that animal. As a guide, an allergy list is supplied by local veterinarians. No preservatives, coloring or other types of fillers are used in our products.

Over the years, we have found that we have a group of customers who rely on us because they want their pets to eat as well as they do.

These loyal customers are nutritious conscious for their own well being, as well as for their pet's health. It is our privilege to assist our loyal customers with their pet's health and to introduce new customers to our fine products.

Museum houses treasure of past

By Nancy Solook
For Hometown News

SEBASTIAN — In an effort to preserve the history of Sebastian, a group of residents formed a historical society. On May 31, 1985 the Sebastian River Area Historical Society was recognized by the Sebastian City Council. The purpose of the organization was to gather Sebastian and surrounding area's history and get it into a museum for safekeeping.

One of the founding members of the historical society is Doris Jorgensen, who first started vacationing here in 1979 and eventually relocated from Connecticut in 1984.

Since its inception, Mrs. Jorgensen has been instrumental in the establishment and operation of the museum.

Now 90 years old, she has retired from day-to-day operations. You can see her years of hard work throughout the museum.

The Sebastian Area Historical Museum has grown by leaps and bounds. It moved from its small one-room location next to the chamber of commerce to the multi-room museum of today. They are now located in the Historic Sebastian grammar school, circa 1927, at 1235 Main St.

The history of the area is reflected in the exhibits, most of which Mrs. Jorgensen designed.

There is the family room, showing a range of artifacts from kitchen utensils and metal toys from the turn of the century.

There is a room containing unique farming and fishing equipment from the Treasure Coast.

There is a transportation room devoted to train, boat and air transportation through the years.

The Pelican Island and Ais Indian displays show the importance of our area to the visitor.

The Mel Fisher Museum has also loaned a treasure display that changes through out the year.

The history of Sebastian, Roseland and Fellsmere is depicted in a photographic display, showing the changes over the last century.

The museum is said to attract 80 to 100 visitors a month, but would like to encourage all to come see the challenges faced by the early pioneers of this county.

The Sebastian Area Historical Society has published three books on the history of Sebastian, ranging from the earliest settlers, the Ais Indians, to the present time.

They also sell books relating to Indian River County History. On the third Wednesday of each month, from October to March, the SAHM sponsors a program at the North County Library on the history of the area. It is free to the public and refreshments are served.

The museum is open year round Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 11 am to 2 pm. Admission is free and donations are accepted.

The Sebastian Area Historical Museum is a non-profit organization run by volunteers. You can come by and explore old Sebastian or volunteer to help us preserve that history.

But newspapers are also a business. We have the right to a free press in this country, but somebody has to pay for it.

As a news organization, we worry about getting headlines right and writing fair and accurate stories. But as a business, we also worry about the fluctuating cost of goods (newsprint, gas for our delivery trucks) and availability of services (how do we publish without electricity after a hurricane?)

Over the last decade, I have gained a new appreciation for the small business owner, his struggles and challenges, as well as triumphs and successes. That's why we invited local businesses that have also made it in the last 10 years to celebrate with us, and share their stories with you in this edition.

Also in this edition, we've invited officials in the markets we serve along

Florida's East Coast to recap what's changed and shaped their communities in these 10 years in local history.

Practice thrives during hard times

By Deana L. Long
For Hometown News

SEBASTIAN — Steven A. Long, P.A., is a dedicated private practice attorney in Sebastian.

Mr. Long has been a member of our working community since 1988, and has been practicing law in Florida since 1980. Mr. Long opened his first office at Sebastian Center in 1988.

In 2004, hurricanes destroyed the building.

Although the building at Sebastian Center was condemned after damages were assessed, Mr. Long continued to serve the community's legal needs. He gratefully received help from other members within our community and was able to remain serving while he rebuilt his practice.

In 2005, Mr. Long established a permanent new office at Sebastian Oaks in Sebastian.

Mr. Long has tremendous pride that our community has pulled together to rebuild. He has seen new businesses in the area become established, and he has faith that despite economic hardships, our community is thriving.

Although many of the businesses formerly established at Sebastian Center were unable to rebuild, several were rebuilt successfully. This success provides strong hope and belief in Mr. Long's commitment and belief in our community.

With more than 20 years of service to his clients and community, Mr. Long has never wavered in his dedication to uphold the law and to serve his clients with the best legal representation available. Although his clients have changed through the years, one thing remains the same: our community is strong and resilient. Mr. Long's hard work and dedication is encouraging and serves as an example of what can be achieved if you work hard and persevere through hardships and natural disasters.

The law practice of Steven A. Long, P.A. is located at 1317 North Central Ave. in Sebastian.

part declaration of the brightness of the future, is the story of our newspaper company. I hope you find it as inspiring a piece as I do every time I read it:

"In September of 2001, longtime Fort Pierce resident and local businessman Vernon Smith contacted publisher Steve Erlanger about starting a newspaper company.

Vernon was not happy with the print media situation on the Treasure Coast. He thought one of the country's fastest-growing markets should have more than one voice and more than one option when it came to providing news and offering advertising opportunities.

"On June 14, 2002, Hometown News debuted with what has come to be known as the largest launch of a newspaper company in the history of the industry: three separate editions, including Port St. Lucie, Fort Pierce and Martin County with 65,000 circulation and 22 full-time employees, who were all about to embark on an amazing journey.

"In our very first year, Hometown News was selected by two leading national community newspaper associations as one of the top three community newspapers in the country. We were also honored as being the top award-winning community newspaper group in the country.

"Statewide, we have been honored as being the top award-winning community newspaper group by the Community Papers of Florida seven of the 10 years we have been in existence.

"With the changes we have made over the years, Hometown News is primed to move into the future as a lean, mean newspaper. Good, quality local community news will always be important to the residents of our cities and towns, and Hometown News will be here to provide that valuable information.

Dealership stands test of time

VERO BEACH — In 1953, a visionary moved his wife and children from New York City to Vero Beach.

Bernard Russo saw something on the Treasure Coast and ran with it. In 1963 he founded Dependable Dodge. He was in the center of the new car dealership row, at the north end of Vero Beach, competing with Buick, Ford, Chevrolet and Volkswagen.

Dependable Dodge was not only a dealership but a repair shop. With all the latest technology it was able to give honest and excellent service to the residents of the Treasure Coast.

In the early 70s, his son, Bill, came aboard and the company expanded, so much, they had to move to their current location at 1440 U.S. 1 in Vero Beach.

With the move the company was able to expand the sale of new Dodge cars and the repair shop to accommodate the growing number of people coming to town. Dependable sales and service was a pledge to customers coming in for help and service.

In the early 1990s daughter, Debbie, came on-board to help run the family business. With the whole family involved, the dealership and repair shop flourished. As time went on Dependable Dodge persevered, as all the other original dealerships closed.

With the revamping of the automobile industry in 2009 it was necessary to change. Dependable Dodge became Dependable Mitsubishi Dependable Sales and Service. Today they specialize in sales of new Mitsubishi products, as well as certified pre-owned vehicles.

The service department is open for repair of all makes and models of automobiles. The state-of-the-art paint shop is available to all who need a quick touch up or a full paint job.

Bernard Russo prided himself on honesty and reliable work. He treated his customers like family. Today his family follow in his footsteps and adhere to the strict standards Bernard expected.

Today Dependable Mitsubishi is the longest running dealership and service center in Indian River County.

The Russo family is still running the business and you will always get outstanding service and a friendly atmosphere when you work with them.

Dependable Mitsubishi Dependable Sales and Service is located at 1440 U.S. 1 in Vero Beach. Call (772) 569 1200.

Turtle walks reveal wonders

Creatures seen on area beaches

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — The sound of crashing ocean waves and the hum of mosquitos may not seem to be the most beautiful of lullabies, but for a nesting sea turtle, it's the perfect background music.

Between May 1 and Oct. 31, daytime beachgoers and swimmers often pass right by disturbed sand on the beach in an unusual pattern. Ranging in width, the patterns faintly resemble wide but oddly shaped tire tracks. Sometimes the tracks make a horseshoe shape, while other times there are four parallel tracks going straight up the dunes of the beach.

These tracks are the evidence of a nesting sea turtle making the beach a home for her clutch of eggs, said Lori Veber, Sebastian Inlet State park ranger.

During June and July, the rangers at Sebastian Inlet State Park offer free tours to see a nesting loggerhead sea turtle on the beaches near the Sebastian Inlet.

Reservations are needed as space is limited. Reservations for July tours are now open.

Tours begin at 9 p.m. with an educational presentation by the park ranger inside the onsite fishing museum. Around 10 p.m., the tour group goes out onto the beach to look for a sea turtle.

Tour groups see a turtle about 75 percent of the time, but this year they are at 100 percent, said Ranger Veber.

Twelve-year-old Ryan Rothenberg of Vero Beach took the tour last week and was astonished at the size of the air-breathing reptile.

"I thought it was going to be the size of a manhole cover. I'm in seventh grade and that was the size of me! It's big," Ryan said.

His friend, Mark Taylor, 11, of Port St. Lucie, said he thought the loggerhead turtle that was laying her nest was about the size of a small car's hood.

Nesting loggerhead sea turtles are the only turtles the rangers are permitted by the state to show tour groups, even though leatherback and green sea turtle occasionally come up to nest, Ranger Veber said.

Loggerheads are considered a threatened species, while the other two sea turtles known to nest in Florida are endangered species.

Neither boy was bothered by the occasional sprinkles of rain during the walk and while watching the sea turtle lay her eggs

While some people are revved up with energy, Leo, you will seem to be stuck in neutral this week. Don't fret too much about it unless you have deadlines you need to meet.

Everyone should practice water safety

For Hometown News
newsfp@hometownnewsol.com

TREASURE COAST — Florida loses more children under age 5 to drowning every year than any other state in the nation.

Hundreds more experience near-drowning tragedies that can cause permanent health problems and developmental delay.

The Department of Children and Families investigates accidental drownings to determine if neglect was a factor. In all cases, drowning is preventable. Children do not drown when someone is dedicated to watching them.

"Parents and caregivers should remember that nothing is more important than keeping your eyes on a child in the water," said David Wilkins, DCF secretary. "A child can drown in less than 5 minutes."

DCF and the Department of Health are partnering to prevent drownings and save children's lives. About 5,000 books that teach children how to be safe around water are being distributed to children at safety events this summer, and more than 20,000 brochures with tips on drowning prevention are being handed out to parents and other caregivers.

Unintentional drowning is the leading cause of death for children under age 4 in Florida. More than two-thirds of these deaths occurred in swimming pools. However, drownings also occur in canals, the ocean, bathtubs, toilets and buckets of water.

Young children can drown in less than 2 inches of water and in less than 5 minutes, the time it takes to use the restroom or answer a telephone. Many parents have only left their child alone for a few minutes before drowning.

"I urge Floridians and visitors to supervise children closely and keep toddlers within arms reach at swimming pools," said John Armstrong, Florida's surgeon general.

"Pool safety is everyone's responsibility across layers of protection, which include supervision, barriers (such as alarms on doors, pool fences and locking gates), and readiness to call 911 in case of emergency."

Follow the water safety tips below and never, ever leave a child unattended in or near any water.

- Install fencing and other barriers around pools and check regularly to make sure they are working properly.
- Make sure doors have alarms and child-proof locks.

- Adults should learn to swim and also teach their children how to swim. Children from non-swimming households are eight times more likely to be at risk of drowning.
- Remove toys, especially riding toys, away from the pool area. Children can fall off of riding tools like bicycles and into the water.
- Never allow a child to be around any water unsupervised. That includes bathtubs, buckets, ponds, ditches, canals, pools, rivers, oceans, hot tubs and more.

- If there are multiple adults watching children in the pool, designate one adult at a time as the official "water watcher," to keep a constant eye on the children.
- Never allow a child to supervise another child near or in water.
- Make sure children stay away from pool drains.
- Learn first aid and CPR for children to use in the case of an emergency.

For more information on water safety and to print free "water watcher" tags, visit www.waterproofll.com.

Boating, water safety a must

For Hometown News
newsfp@hometownnewsol.com

TREASURE COAST — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the nation's leading provider of outdoor recreation, encourages everyone to be safe around water this summer.

"We want visitors to be safe while they enjoy themselves at Corps-managed recreation areas and water bodies, such as Lake Okechobee and the Okeechobee Waterway," said Adam Tarplee, natural resource program manager.

Visitors to recreation areas should observe these safety practices:

- Learn to swim well and practice floating.
- Wear a life jacket.
- Watch children.
- Don't depend on air-filled toys such as water wings that can deflate in seconds.

- Use the buddy system and don't swim or boat alone.
- Inspect equipment regularly.
- Take a safe boating course.
- Check weather conditions and prepare for sudden weather changes.
- Don't drink and swim or drink and boat.
- Obey all signs and buoys.

Additional summer-fun safety tips are available from the Corps' national water safety program at: <http://watersafety.usace.army.mil>

Those who recreate around water should expect the unexpected and wear life jackets. Even excellent swimmers should wear life jackets while boating. If you are older than 16 and know how to swim, inflatable life jackets are a good option. They are cool and comfortable and available in collar and belt-pac styles.

For information on how to choose the right life jacket, visit www.uscgboating.org/assets/11/Publications/howtochoosetherightlifejacket_brochure.pdf.

Visitors can take advantage of a free life jacket loaner program at the Corps' W.P. Franklin and St. Lucie recreation areas. Swimmers and boaters can borrow life jackets at loaner stations and return them at the end of the day.

For more information, visit www.CorpsLakes.us.

Turtles

and then crawl back to the ocean.

Both said they would like to see the turtle emerge from the water.

Before the tour members came onto the beach, volunteer "turtle scouts" searched the beach to find a sea turtle beginning the nesting process, cutting down on the time the tour group is meandering on the beach, possibly discouraging other turtles from coming out of the water.

"I think the best part was probably finding the turtle in the dark. I didn't know how we were going to find it because it's so dark," Ryan said.

"It looked like a rock in the sand," Mark said.

Karen Nelson volunteers as a turtle scout for the state park and enjoys going out at night with the groups.

"It's so rewarding to see these magnificent creatures, these beautiful ladies come up out and nest," Ms. Nelson said.

Ranger Veber agreed the sea turtles are amazing and their nesting process, from searching for a good shoreline, to heaving their heavy bodies out of the water and onto the sand, to digging a nest with their flippers, dropping their eggs, covering the nest and then slowly making their way back to the deep, dark ocean, is something everyone should see.

Watching the faces of the tour group members as they see this wondrous process unfold is priceless.

"That's payday for me," Ranger Veber said.

Disney's Vero Beach Resort has turtle walks for registered guests only. The Archie Carr National Wildlife Refuge, another hotspot for turtle nests, straddles the Brevard and Indian River County lines. Guided tours are available at the refuge on the Brevard County side.

Nonprofit receives grant for homeless program

For Hometown News newsfp@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Children's Home Society of Florida, Treasure Coast division, received a $50,000 grant from the Indian River Community Foundation to establish "Homeless in High School," a new initiative to provide safety-net services for high-school students not already involved in the foster-care system.

In a recent report, Indian River County public school administrators identified 33 students in the 2011-12 school year who were homeless. The funding from the foundation will provide for at least 13 to 14 youth with much-needed housing, financial support and other services they need so to continue on a path that breaks the cycle of homelessness.

The average cost per client is $3,800 annually, presenting Children's Home Society of Florida with a challenge to raise an additional $100,000 to fully meet the community's need.

The Homeless in High School initiative, a component of the Transitional Living Program, is a multi-faceted program that provides a safety net of services for youth, ages 16-18, who are still enrolled in high school and homeless. The community education component of the program is designed to raise awareness about services among youth, high school teachers, counselors, donors and throughout the community, to encourage referrals into the program, identify signs of homeless youth and raise additional funding to support the program.

The $50,000 grant was awarded by the Indian River Community Foundation through a competitive grants program designed to address time-sensitive community needs intensified by the recent economic recession.

Kerry Bartlett, executive director of the Indian River Community Foundation, said her board of directors appreciated the opportunity to help Children's Home Society launch this new initiative.

"Children's Home Society has identified a disturbing, but very real trend in our community," said Ms.

Bartlett. "But if a homeless student is still attending school every day that is a tremendous sign that they hope to make a better life. This program can help make the difference for a person becoming chronically homeless or an independent, productive member of society."

Foundation presents scholarship

For Hometown News newsfp@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY

— Casey M. Gilliams of Sebastian received a Simon Youth Foundation community scholarship valued at $1,400. The scholarship is awarded in partnership between Indian River Mall and Simon Youth Foundation, a national, nonprofit organization dedicated to providing educational and career development opportunities to youth.

Ms. Gilliams is a recent graduate of Sebastian River High School and exemplified herself through academic excellence, leadership skills and participation in both school and community activities. She plans to study pre-med at University of Florida in the fall.

"We are very proud of the Simon youth scholarships program, because it has given us the opportunity to support the academic endeavors of promising youth right here in our community," said Ursula Gunter, director of marketing and business development at Indian River Mall.

With a combined value of more than $1 million, Simon youth scholarships have been awarded this spring to at least one student in every nationwide community that

USGA needs to let go of 'par,' let players' talents shine

As I pen this column, I am sitting in my cozy recliner. Next to me sits my father. We are awaiting the start of the United States Open Championship. This Fathers' Day weekend promises to be special.

In addition to my father visiting, I have my oldest daughter here, as well. While the last thing she or her younger sister want to do is watch golf with us, they still appreciate time spent with dad and pop pop.

I hope we get to see a great tournament. Of golf's three majors, the U.S. Open is my third favorite. I put the Masters atop my list, with the Open Championship a close second.

What drives me crazy with our national championship is the silliness of the United States Golf Association and its obsession with making "par" the yardstick by which we measure a golfer.

At this, their signature event, the USGA usually seems hell-bent on making a mockery of the course and the game.

I agree that any true championship should involve a stern test of mind, body and skill. It should require great ball striking, a little luck and mental toughness. The U.S. Open certainly provides all of these.

I'm all for challenging the best players in the world. But what is more entertaining? A Sunday filled with double bogeys, 5-foot putts that roll 20 yards off of cement-hard greens, rough a foot from the fairway that is so deep you can hardly see your feet much less find your golf ball? Or the final round of the Masters?

To the stodgy, must-have-their-necktie-too-tight men of the USGA, there is nothing quite like watching six or eight guys lose the tournament and one guy hang on.

Me? I prefer having three or five guys making great shots to win it.

Yes, the USGA rightfully wants to determine the best overall player in the field. The brass in Far Hills, N.J., feels, as do many of us, that hitting the ball where you are supposed to should be rewarded. Accuracy should be just as important as length. In fact, most players this week at the Olympic Club in San Francisco will hit their driver only three or four times during a round.

I will give them credit for finally going with what is called "graduated" rough. This means the guy who misses the fairway by a foot doesn't find himself in the same deep, thick stuff as the guy who missed by 20 yards.

Don't get me wrong, the rough is still brutal, but it is setup to hurt the truly wayward not just anyone who misses the fairway.

What I dislike the most about our national championship is the way the USGA and many recreational golfers seem to gloat at watching the suffering that the course's setup causes.

A few years back they were almost giddy that not a single golfer shot under par for the final round. Do you really think these guys are that untalented? Or is the course simply too tricked up and unplayable?

Last year's 16-under-par score from champion Rory McIlroy must have had their heads close to exploding.

The USGA needs to come to grips with "par" not being relevant. It needs to learn to accept that birdies are part of golf, and that setting up the golf course to prevent them is asinine.

It becomes silly when the best players in the world cannot chip a ball onto the green and have it stay there, cannot hold the green with a wedge from the fairway and are putting the ball off the green.

Set up a stern, but fair test of golf and let the elements and the players' skill determine what the winning score will be.

Instead, we have a group trying to have the same score win every year without regard to the talent or conditions.

I hope that as I sip my favorite cold beverage this weekend while watching the U.S. Open, I'm treated to some great golf shots and not a cataclysm of one train wreck after another.

In the end it won't really matter, as I'll be relaxing with my father, my kids, a cold beer in my hand and steaks on the grill. Here's to you, dads. Hope your weekend is as good as mine.

Better Understanding To Prepare Your Septic For A Hurricane

What underground trouble is brewing on your property?

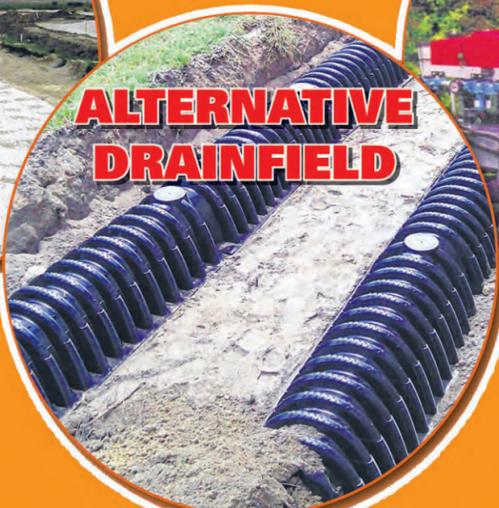

Pumping your septic tank is probably the single most important thing you can do to protect your system. If the buildup of solids in the tank becomes too high and the solids move to the drainfield, this could clog and strain the system to the point where a new drainfield will be needed.
