Two city council seats, four candidates

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

FELLSMERE — During the November general election, Fellsmere voters will have to choose two city council members from a field of four candidates.

The incumbent, Joel Tyson, is running for re-election. One other candidate, Michael Barone, has been on city council previously, while the other two, Fernando Herrera and Jessica Salgado, have not previously held office. The second seat opened up after current Councilman Daniel Naranjo decided against running for re-election.

Mr. Tyson and Ms. Salgado are featured in this article.

Jessica Salgado

Ms. Salgado has lived in Fellsmere for a little more than 10 years and has been interested in politics for some time. She received her associates in science degree in political science from Indian River State College. At 21, she is the

Three vying for control district seat

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Election time is drawing near and the race for mosquito control district representation is buzzing.

Incumbent David Foster is being challenged by businessman Thomas Lureau and familiar political figure Charles Sembler II.

This article will feature Mr. Sembler and Mr. Foster.

Charles Sembler II

Mr. Sembler has served in various elected positions, including Sebastian Inlet District commissioner, state legislator and most recently, county tax collector.

Mr. Sembler has served the public at various times in various ways with the same mentality: to get a job done. He doesn't describe himself as a usual politician, or even a politician at all. Instead, he is the person people choose when they want something done.

"I am different from anyone else," Mr. Sembler said.

He said he is the type of person who will load up a truck of adulticide and spray down a community if that's what it takes to get the job done and save money.

And saving money by cutting costs is an area Mr. Sembler would like to focus on.

Areas he would look to cut are in travel, overtime and maintenance, though he would like to see a thorough budget cutting exercise, Mr. Sembler said.

The health and safety of the public is very important and making sure the area is properly treated for mosquitos is priority No. 1.

It's not only humans who need to be careful of mosquitos carrying illnesses, but it affects horses, too, Mr. Sembler said.

"I'm plain and simple and to the point. Some people may say I'm too blunt, but at the end of the day, I get it done," Mr. Sembler said.

Sportsmanship is way of life at high school

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

SEBASTIAN — "Shark" sportsmanship was honored last month with accolades from the state's athletic association.

Sebastian River High School was notified earlier this year that is won the 2011-12 Florida High School Athletic Association Class 7A Fred E. Rozelle Sportsmanship Award.

The school finally received its award during a school event on Sept. 21.

The award was presented to the school by Peggy Jones, Florida High School Athletic Association executive director, at halftime during the Okeechobee High School versus Sebastian River High School football game at Shark Stadium in Sebastian.

The school also earned a $3,000 check from the FHSAA.

Ms. Jones is a former principal at Sebastian River High School.

Michael Stutzke, the athletic director for the high school, said he was very pleased with the award for the whole school.

The varsity teams were able to end the year with an overall average grade point average of 3.15, which demonstrates a commitment to excellence off the field, as well.

"This is what you try to instill in your kids. It is most important because they take life lessons with them from high school. You want to be gracious when you win and gracious when you fall short," Mr. Stutzke said in an interview.

The athletic department as a whole, tries to instill good values to the students they interact with so when they graduate, they are solid, productive members of society, and engaged in their community, he said.

About 600 students in the school are athletes in uniform and Mr. Stutzke is proud of their accomplishments.

"We now join a select group of high schools," Mr. Stutzke said.

He said much of the credit goes to the coaches who work with their students daily and teach them to play with integrity, respect and sportsmanship, and other valuable life lessons.

"Sportsmanship is the award we strive for in high school sports," Mr. Stutzke said.

That doesn't mean winning other awards, such as the girls high school 7A basketball championship is anything to be sneezed at, but high school sports is about much more than championships, he said.

In a press release, Superintendent Fran Adams, said she was proud of the school's accomplishment.

"We cannot place enough emphasis on the importance of good sportsmanship, both on and off the playing field," she said.

Sebastian River Middle School also received the award for the 2011-12 school year in its division.

Nonprofit honors summer volunteers

For Hometown News
NewsFP@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — In appreciation for sweating in the hot summer sun, Indian River Habitat for Humanity held a breakfast event Sept. 21 at Spring Hill Suites/Marriott for its summer volunteers.

After some 50 volunteers enjoyed the Marriott's bountiful breakfast buffet, Emily Wicht, volunteer coordinator, reviewed the summer's accomplishments, shared some volunteer trivia and awarded certificates and prizes.

Door prizes included a garden bag, a bracelet and a one-night stay at the Spring Hill Marriott.

Among the summer's tasks successfully completed by the volunteers: 220 trusses were raised in Grace Meadows, Fellsmere's Habitat neighborhood; 10 recycled homes were refurbished, four were rehabbed and in the Home Center ReStore, 15,123 transactions resulted in enough income to fund 3.5 homes.

Because many of Habitat's dedicated volunteers are snowbirds, the summer months could be a bit light on manpower, but the volunteers who remain in town and work through the often unrelenting heat are very much appreciated.

To express thanks, Habitat holds this September event, in addition to the volunteer appreciation banquet for all volunteers, which takes place in late January or early February.

David Foster

Mr. Foster has served as a district commissioner for a little more than seven years. He always had an interest in politics, and with his background in landscape management and experience with pesticides, mosquito control is a perfect match.

"The biggest challenge we face is matching the level of public safety with the threat of West Nile (virus) and encephalitis with the financial constraints," Mr. Foster said.

In comparing the 2005-06 and the 2012-13 district budgets, there is less than a 3 percent increase, which is noteworthy because in that time, the cost of fuel and insurance has doubled, and the cost of the chemicals has also increased, he said.

"I'm very proud of holding the line on spending," Mr. Foster said.

Since he was first elected, the district has moved from a larger treatment of the adult mosquito population to treating mosquitos in the larvae stage.

"It's a system that takes time to set up. It reduces the amount of chemicals needed and actually switches from a chemical to a bacteria," Mr. Foster said.

While the cost of the larvicide, which is frequently distributed by field agents by hand, is more than adulticide, which is usually spread by truck spraying, the cost basically balances out because it reduces overtime pay and fuel costs, he said.

One element Mr. Foster takes pride in for his terms is that there has been a 30 percent reduction in overall service calls.

He believes that is a direct result of the district doing an excellent job in serving the public.

Mr. Foster has lived in Indian River County for 18 years and is married with two children.

youngest candidate for Fellsmere City Council.

Ms. Salgado currently works in retail.

Though she is interested in politics, she is aware that not many people her age have such an inclination and don't participate in city affairs, and their perspective is rarely heard.

"I want to step up and represent the young people," Ms. Salgado said.

Being on council would be a learning experience for her, but could also turn into a learning experience for the other council members.

"I will learn from them and they could learn from me, from my generation. But I would be learning a lot from them," she said.

Increasing tourism to Fellsmere is something Ms. Salgado is interested in pursuing should she be elected to council.

"It's a good thing for the city so we are on the map and people know where we're at," Ms. Salgado said.

The scenic byway and park area and the National Elephant Center that are already in the works for the city are an excellent direction for the city to take, she said.

Joel Tyson

Mr. Tyson, who has lived in the city more than 50 years, has served on Fellsmere City Council off and on since 1998. He was selected as mayor from 2001-03.

His experience on city matters, and desire to make sure the future of Fellsmere moves into the future instead of backtracking to the past, are the reasons for his re-election campaign.

There are several exciting projects in the works that he is certain will contribute to the positive growth of Fellsmere including the construction of the National Elephant Center, the extension of a natural gas pipeline into the city, a shrimp farm, new retail businesses and a restored hotel.

"I want to make sure that everything keeps moving forward," Mr. Tyson said.

The elephant center expects to have elephants on the property as soon as the beginning of the New Year, he said.

Although the facility will not be open to the public, like zoos or safari parks are, it will be used as a training center for individuals working with elephants. Not only will this bring more attention but tourism dollars to Fellsmere, he said.

"They will bring people here to train and they will need a place to stay. That's a great thing for Fellsmere," Mr. Tyson said.

Rowing and swimming clubs from northern states are finding Indian River County, specifically the C-54 canal and the North County Aquatic Center, as excellent places to train during the winter months and are big contributors to the local economy, he said.

With events such as the Fellsmere Frog Leg Festival, the Sebastian Clambake and the law enforcement games, Fellsmere is in an excellent position to make an impression on a great number of people, and should population growth occur, it also has the infrastructure in place, Mr. Tyson said.

He is very pleased with the work of city manager Jason Nunemaker and is excited to continue working with him and helping the projects come to fruition should he be re-elected.

WHAT PIECE OF HIGHLY SOPHISTICATED TECHNOLOGY DID WE USE TO CREATE OUR NEW CHECKING ACCOUNTS?

When we set out to develop our new checking accounts, our first idea was to listen. Literally.

We sat down with people — thousands of them — and asked, "What would an ideal checking account look like to you?" They told us it should be simple and straightforward from the get-go, with no hidden fees or agendas. These answers inspired five new checking accounts that better fit the needs of people just like you.

If that sounds like something you're looking for from a bank, stop by 53.com/checking and use our simple new tools to find the checking solution that's just right.

It takes great thinking to come up with better ideas. A little listening doesn't hurt either.

VIEWPOINT

Why images might not load properly

COMPUTE THIS
SEAN MCCARTHY

If you have surfed the web for any length of time, then I'm sure you've run into the infamous "red X" where a picture or other graphic was supposed to appear.

What is that? Why is it that some pages load fine but some pages just show a red X where you know a picture should be?

The red X rarely means there is something wrong with your machine (or web browser). That red X means the picture or graphic the web page is trying to display is not where the web page is telling the browser where it's supposed to be.

You see, every time a web page loads into your web browser there are a ton of things that are going on in the background that you don't actually see. What you see are the results of all of this behind the scenes "markup" either working properly or not (as in the case of the red X).

When you go to a website that has pictures (or any other content that isn't raw text, for that matter) there is a line of code embedded behind the scenes on that page that points to the location of whatever the page is trying to display.

Most of the time, the images are right where the web page thinks it is and it displays fine, but sometimes the picture isn't where the page thinks it is and that's when your browser displays the little red X as a place holder where the image is supposed to be on the page.

But how can this be? Don't web designers check their work to make sure the pages display properly?

Well, not always. One thing to remember is that these days, just about anybody can throw together a website and that means some web designers just don't know how to check their work properly.

For instance, back when I was first learning how to design websites, I set up a page, uploaded it to the web and then checked it with my browser to make sure it looked OK. I was pleased, everything appeared just as I had designed it but then when I had a friend look at the page he told me there was a problem; none of the pictures would load, just a bunch of little red Xs.

I took a look at the page's source code (the behind-the-scenes code that tells the browser where to put everything) and found that for each of my pictures, the page was looking for them on the browser's local c: drive and not the images folder I had uploaded when I created the site. And since the images were indeed in my c: drive, where the page was looking for them, they displayed just fine when I looked at the page in my browser. Since no one else had the images on their c: drives they failed to load.

In that example, even though I checked the page and all seemed well, it took someone else to discover the problem.

Another reason images may fail to load is sometimes a page is pointing to an image on another website altogether and if that image gets taken down or moved there will be nothing there when the page goes looking for it.

Sometimes images may fail to load because of heavy traffic. If the site you are accessing is too busy or has a ton of graphics, the images may time out when loading and you may have to refresh the page to get all the pictures to display.

Now keep in mind that these are just a few of the most common reasons why an image may fail to load when surfing the web and you may even see the same symptoms in email.

With email however, the problem may be resulting from your security settings being set too high. If you are using Outlook Express or Windows Live Mail for instance and you find that you never see images load in your email messages but you are seeing a ton of red X place holders check your security settings. Click tools, options then security and make sure that the "block images and external content" checkbox is not checked. If it is, uncheck it and you should then be able to see your email the way it was composed.

Teachers should learn from refs

Maybe the teachers union should use the same negotiation skills as the NFL referees. They got the raises they wanted, while teachers across the country are fighting to keep their heads above water. Something just doesn't seem right about that.

Bad behavior

I was at a youth sporting event last week and was shocked by the appalling attitude of some of the kids. They were cursing the referees, their coaches and even some of the parents.

One kid got into a fistfight with a member of the other team. No wonder these kids are heading down the wrong path. Where were the parents to clip them around the ear and put them in line?

Pricey activities

I wish it didn't cost so much to get your children involved in after-school activities and sports. In my city, it costs more than $200 for them to play football or to cheer. Baseball is $100. Monthly fees at the community centers for basketball can be nearly $30.

It's hard for families to make ends meet, never mind try to get the youngsters involved in something. Even schools charge for their clubs and sports. What's a parent to do?

Stop bashing the president

This is a great paper and I read it every week. However, all of the rants bashing the president concern me. He's our commander-in-chief. If the people don't like it, then they should move to Canada. There should be respect for the leader of our country.

You may not agree with everything, but calling him names and saying what a lousy job he's doing isn't the way to make this nation what it once was.

Simply said…

It's simple: I don't trust Mitt Romney.

Pro-life view

There have been many letters in the paper about abortion, pro-choice and pro-life. There is just one simple statement to make: if a person truly believes in the one true God, then abortion is wrong.

Only God, the creator, has the ability to take a life and he says life begins at conception in Psalm 139 in the Bible. If you don't understand or read the Bible, you will make the wrong decisions. There is no excuse to take any life, whether it is because of an absentee father, a health issue, a financial problem or emotional incapability.

The bill was written years ago for the woman to stand in the gap for the baby. It is not a choice for the mother. It was introduced for the child's choice, if he or she would be able to speak.

Based on the way most abortions are done, why would a baby agree to be murdered in that way? Many wonderful people today have stories about how their mother almost aborted them. God promises to take care of his own, whether you are a baby, a grown up or a senior citizen.

Sincerely, belong to God and you will see this is true. He never breaks a promise. If you don't believe in God at all, then I can understand your thoughts on this matter, sad to say.

Not a fan of the presidential hug

I just read the comments in the Sept. 21 edition and am stunned that anybody who pays any attention at all to what is happening in this country and around the globe would support the man in the White House.

Let me respond to a few of the letters.

1. Count me as one of the Republicans who is offended by our president getting a bear hug at a pizza parlor. That seems more appropriate for a juvenile delinquent than for the president of the United States. Not only did it show a lack of respect for the office of the president, but how many 50-year-old men greet each other with a bear hug?

2. To the person who wrote the list of items bashing Gov. Romney, I would suggest that you do some research and not rely on the Obama talking points. If you look into Obama's past you will not be a worshipper. Why do you think he is concerned about you when he has allowed his half-brother to live in poverty in Kenya? If he doesn't take care of his own family, why do you believe he gets a hoot about you?

Do your research and you will find what you wrote is false. Take the blinders off. You will find that what the president says and what he does are two completely different things.

Lastly, look at the photo of our strong leader in the room observing the mission that killed Osama Bin Laden. The photo speaks volumes.

3. To the person who called Gov. Romney a buffoon for his comments on Libya, guess what, he was right. I know straight talk is a foreign concept, since all we have heard for the past three and a half years is gobbledygook. I think the real question is why the ambassador and Seals were not adequately protected and why they were ordered to be unarmed in a hostile area?

I think the president and Secretary Clinton have a lot of questions that need to be answered, and are ultimately responsible.

The president this week appeared on "The View," but didn't have time to meet with world leaders. He called the terrorist attack in Libya a "bump in the road." His policies have ruined the economy and have us on track to be a socialist country. He has tried to convince the public that success is a bad word.

This man does not have a clue on what it takes to run this country. World leaders see him as weak. His constant apologizing and bowing is a disgrace.

Unemployment has remained above 8 percent, the debt has topped 16 trillion, wages are stagnant and housing is in the tank.

At a tipping point

What kind of America do we want now and what kind of America do we want for our children and grandchildren?

We are at a tipping point. We could follow Europe.

Greece, for example, has demonstrated that big-spending government inevitably leads to mismanagement, chaos and ruin. Traditionally, Americans have disdained this path but President Obama embraced it with his American Recovery Act.

This multi-billion plan failed because the cost far exceeded the benefit, which amounted to very few jobs created. Our choice should be very obvious.

Business

College to expand job training

For Hometown News
NewsFP@hometownnewsol.com

TREASURE COAST — Indian River State College has been awarded a $589,401 national to develop and expand innovative training programs that lead to jobs in manufacturing, science, technology, engineering and math.

The four-year federal grant is part of the U.S. Department of Labor's Trade Adjustment Assistance Community College and Career Training Initiative.

IRSC will share in $15 million received by the Florida TRADE consortium of 11 Florida state and community colleges. Grant funds will be used to develop business and education partnerships and create training programs to prepare students for industry certifications, internships and high-skills, high-wage jobs.

The manufacturing industry remains one of the highest paying industries in the state, and is projected to generate about 4,000 additional jobs by 2015. More than 80 percent of 1,100 manufacturing firms surveyed by the Manufacturing Institute indicate a shortage of skilled production workers.

"Through this initiative, IRSC will establish partnerships with businesses throughout the Research Coast to implement new and enhanced training programs that respond directly to the increasing need for skilled employees," said Edwin R. Massey, IRSC president.

During the first year of the initiative, IRSC will organize an advisory council of local business leaders to assess community needs. Learning modules will be developed to target specific industries and increase online-learning opportunities.

Students will be able to proceed from OSHA safety programs to general operation of machinery to sophisticated new technologies, including programmable logic controllers, optics, lasers, robotics and biomedical electronics.

IRSC will also work closely with area high schools to prepare students for industry certifications.

Law firm offers grants to nonprofits

For Hometown News
NewsFP@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — In 1999, Rossway Moore Taylor & Swan, attorneys and counselors at law, established a diversified law firm to serve the ever-evolving needs of the Treasure Coast.

The founding partners have built a firm that combines a wide array of legal services with an emphasis on efficiency, cost effectiveness and compassion.

In an effort to maximize the firm's charitable impact and to deepen their bond with the community, the partners created the Rossway Moore Taylor & Swan Foundation as a branch of the firm devoted solely to giving. Funded with contributions from the firm's profits, the foundation becomes a partner in the firm's success, so as to benefit the interests of the local community.

Managed by partner Tom Tierney, the foundation annually solicits proposals for assistance in the technological development of Indian River County charitable organizations.

To be eligible for a grant, an application must be completed and submitted by qualifying nonprofits for consideration, through Dec. 1.

In January 2013, the foundation board will conduct a review of all submitted applications and make a determination of which entities will be awarded a grant for the current year.

To receive an application, call (772) 231-4440.

Works on display in Sebastian

SEBASTIAN — Inspiration strikes artists throughout the year, but art shows tend to be seasonal and season is here again.

Sebastian River Art Club artists are preparing to host their first art show of the year, with works inspired by the season, the Sebastian landscape and more.

The show will take place at the Sebastian River Art Club's meeting place at 1245 Main St., Sebastian from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The free "Festival of Fine Art" will include works by more than 25 artists in the club, including oil, acrylic and watercolor paintings, jewelry and pottery, said Alice Russell, publicity chairwoman.

The art club is known for its art shows in Riverview Park throughout the fall, winter and early spring, but for several years, the group has decided to bring the party indoors for the premiere show.

"When the weather outside is bad, we sometimes have to cancel shows, but this show will not be canceled, the artists will be there and the work will be there," Ms. Russell said.

Light refreshments, perhaps cookies and punch, will be available for guests who come to browse, she said.

Ms. Russell, an oil painter, will have several pieces in the show herself.

Several of her works are inspired by the natural world, and her paintings include a Florida panther, a lighthouse, a hot-air balloon, a wooden bridge and a seagull over water.

By bringing the show indoors, the public will be able to see the works, but also learn more about the club itself.

"I think it's a good way to start off the season and people can come and stay as long as they like and visit the gallery, which is always there, too," Ms. Russell said.

For more information about the Sebastian River Art Club, call (772) 388-2168 or visit www.sebastianriverartclub.org.

Dancing competition gearing up

For Hometown News
NewsFP@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — The Dancing with Vero's Stars event is moving to a new location and on a new date for the 2013 social season.

Healthy Start and Riverside Theatre have entered into a partnership where the theater becomes the new venue for the annual dance event which moves to May 11, 2013, becoming the highlight of Mother's Day weekend for area residents.

"We couldn't be more pleased about our new location and our relationship with the management and staff of Riverside Theatre," said Rebecca Russell-Gootee, executive director of Indian River County Healthy Start Coalition.

"It is a win-win for both of our nonprofit organizations and a perfect fit for their end-of-season calendar," she said.

"Moving the date to coincide with Mother's Day weekend is most fitting to our mission, which promotes a system of care that optimizes/maximizes healthy outcomes for all pregnant women, infants, young children and their families."

"One of the missions of our theater is to work with children through performance and education, thus working with the Healthy Start Coalition aligns directly with our mission," said Jon Moses, Riverside Theatre's managing director.

"Additionally, the community enthusiasm for Dancing with Vero's Star's is the ideal upbeat event to close a season that we expect will be extraordinary."

The event, chaired by Cheryl Gerstner and Laura Guttridge, both star dancers in previous competitions, will once again offer an evening of tempting tangos, sizzling salsas and jiving jitterbugs, along with some new or unexpected twists and surprises.

It will be performed by 10 local stars matched with professional dance instructors. The event will also showcase the dancers during a red carpet arrival, a hit when introduced at the 2012 event. Other components of the evening will include a cocktail party and silent auction.

Star dancers, paired with their instructors, will train for 20 hours over several months and gather community votes in advance of the evening on the website, www.Dancingwithverostars.com (now under construction) and then later at the dance competition itself.

Each $1 raised will equate to a vote for the dancer. All dancers will be judged 50 percent on money raised for Healthy Start Coalition and 50 percent based on their dancing skills.

The official announcement of the 2013 star dancers paired with their professional dance instructors will be made at the end of October.

INDIAN RVIER COUNTY — The Alzheimer & Parkinson Association of Indian River County announced at the ninth annual "Walk to Remember" team captain kick-off luncheon on Sept. 12. George E. Warren Corporation is the presenting sponsor for the 2012 event.

Other area businesses recognized for leadership-level sponsorships were the law office of Marie S. Conforti, Brookdale Senior Living/Clare Bridge & Sterling House of Vero Beach, The Lynmoore, The Place at Vero Beach, Roberta Rose and the Visiting Nurse Association.

The Arbors at Lakes at Pointe West was also recognized for sponsoring the luncheon.

Other sponsors for the walk include: Aloha Home Care/Champion Home Health Care, Florida Baptist Retirement Center, Harbor-Chase of Vero Beach, Home Instead Senior Care, Nurse On Call, Perkins Medical Supply, Sebastian River Medical Center, Senior Resource Association and William Frazier.

In-kind sponsors for the walk include: ACTS Indian River Estates, The Arbors at the Lakes at Pointe West, Florida Healthcare News, Ken Gregory Produce, Osceola Pharmacy and Waldo's Restaurant

"We are so very grateful for the generous support of all our sponsors and the over 600 walkers who annually help us to raise much-needed funding and awareness for programs that support those affected by disorders affecting memory and motion, such as essential tremors, stroke, autism, lewy ??? bodies and others, and that Alzheimer & Parkinson Association services are not for simply two diseases," said Linda Wells, committee chairwoman.

Slated for Saturday morning, Nov. 10 at Riverside Park, the 5K walk will feature a route along the Indian River.

Teams comprised of family, friends and business associates are invited to sign up and individual walkers are welcome, as well.

Additional sponsorships are also still available for interested businesses or individuals. This is the Alzheimer & Parkinson Association of Indian River County's largest annual fundraising event and all proceeds provide funding for programs and services provided in the local community.

The Walk to Remember planning committee, led by Linda Wells, is comprised of Bubs Baird, Cindy Bryant, Diane Butler, Peggy Cunningham, Cheryl Dowdell, Dee Ehrhard, Sue Jordan, Brittany Norair, Eileen O'Donnell, Carole Smalley, Cindy Vernal and Maria Zambigadis.

The Alzheimer & Parkinson Association of Indian River County, founded 30 years ago in Vero Beach, is not an affiliate of a national organization. It is an independent, nonprofit organization that is 100 percent supported through generous donations derived from grants, events, individuals and businesses to support its programs.

Local programs that are provided to area residents include support groups, a lending library resource center, monthly program meetings, caregiver training, Project Lifesaver tracking bracelets, respite program, an activity center, weekly exercise classes and memory screening.

Nearly 4,100 participated in the Alzheimer & Parkinson Association of Indian River County programs in 2011.
