County accepting applications for SHIP program

Starting Aug. 1, and continuing until all funds used, the Board of County Commissioners of Indian River County, will be accepting applications from households in the very low, low, and moderate income categories for down payment/closing cost loans and rehabilitation loans.

For Fiscal Year 2013-14, $350,000 funds will be available from the Florida State Housing Initiatives Partnership Program.

Priority will be given to applications from households having a member with Developmental Disabilities or a person with Special Needs as defined in Section 420.0004, Florida Statutes.

Funds may not be used to repair, rehabilitate, or purchase mobile homes.

Completed applications must be submitted in person to Indian River County Planning Division's housing office located at 1801 27th Street, Vero Beach.

Information and applications are available on the county's website at www.irccdd.com/Planning_Division/SHIP/Index.htm, as well as in the Community Development Department, 1801 27th Street, Vero Beach, or call (772) 226-1594.

School district welcomes new hires

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Two newcomers and one familiar face took their seats as new assistant superintendents for the Indian River County School District earlier this month.

Bruce Green, former executive director for instruction and information technology, put on his new hat as assistant superintendent for technology and assessment. Mr. Green has a long-standing relationship with the district, having served in various positions and even attended school in the district, said Fran Adams, superintendent of schools, in an email.

Bill Fritz, recently of Washington, will take on the role of assistant superintendent of human resources and risk management. The position has been unfilled for several months. Mr. Fritz has been spending time getting to know the area, people in the district and the current organizational structure.

"My first week here in Florida, it rained, so it reminded me of home, except it was much warmer," Mr.

Fritz said.

Mr. Fritz hopes to call on his previous experience as teacher, superintendent of schools, principal and human resources director in various districts in Washington to help him evaluate the district and decide what short-term and long-term goals to set.

Andrew Rynberg, formerly of Michigan, was hired to be the new

New county attorney takes dais at meeting

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Retiring county attorney Alan Polackwich was recognized last week for his contributions to the county on the same day his successor took his new seat on the dais in the Indian River County Commission Chambers.

Mr. Polackwich announced his decision to retire early this year to the surprise of many, giving the county commissioners through the summertime to find his replacement and provide some training.

Dylan Reingold, recently of Jacksonville, was chosen to be county attorney and has worked for the past several weeks with Mr. Polackwich, learning the ropes and familiarizing himself with the issues and cases facing Indian River County.

Commission approves lagoon oyster reef project

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Indian River County commissioners OK'd a pilot project for an oyster reef designed to help clean up the Indian River Lagoon.

During the July 9 meeting, commissioners voted to spend $28,500 to help construct and monitor an oyster reef north of Indian River Boulevard and U.S. 1. Commissioners directed staff to work out a contract with longtime county oyster and shellfish farmer Charlie Sembler and Chip Swindell, president of Ecotech Consultants.

The reef will follow the model of the oyster beds created in the Spoonbill Marsh, a wetlands area north of the Grand Harbor community, a program that has positive quantifiable results, Mr. Swindell said.

The oysters will help clean up the lagoon water, help grow food sources and be a habitat for juvenile fish and invertebrates and eventually attracting game fish.

"Oysters are nature's perfect septic tanks," Mr. Sembler said.

The gray, silver and white kitten hasn't had the easiest of life so far, dealing with various illnesses that have left him a little smaller than his peers, but he is growing up and catching up, said Barbara Eakins.

Silver is one of about 50 cats that will be available for adoption once The Cat's Meow Rescue and Adoption Center in Vero Beach opens, said Ms. Eakins, founder and operator of the nonprofit, no-kill cat shelter.

Bringing knowledge and treatment for urology issues

Having a urologic issue or disorder can be a sensitive subject for many on the Treasure Coast. However, there's a location right here in Vero Beach to handle this professionally and compassionately.

The Urologic Wellness Center of Vero Beach has been in the area for 25 years, and the office and its staff of certified personnel is the first and only center in the area to offer a well-established, full-pelvic floor rehabilitation program.

The medical practice is headed by Dr. David Lazan, a board-certified urologist, providing all the urology-related treatments. Also found there helping patients is Cindy Gale, the Pelvic Floor Rehabilitation Director and a urology nurse specialist for almost 30 years. Together, the duo has worked together for the past two decades bringing relief to hundreds of patients on the Treasure Coast.

The pelvic-floor rehabilitation center is equipped with the staff and the knowledge to treat many pelvic-floor issues, including female and male incontinence, erectile dysfunction, many voiding or defecation dysfunctions and chronic pelvic pain.

"What sets us apart is our conservative approach," says Ms. Gale. "We use hands-on therapy for many issues. We often get cards of gratitude for someone being able to enjoy life and sexual activity again."

As part of their many treatment plans, the medical center uses biofeedback, electrical stimulation for appropriate diagnosis and a complete program or personalized lifestyle education. They strive to combine patient care with patient knowledge, and currently run a support group out of the office for women with incontinence issues.

For example, the Urologic Wellness Center of Vero beach can treat vaginal vault prolapse with different modalities, including a pessary. They also offer complete penile rehabilitation services to any patients that have received a prostatectomy, and even begin treatment before the surgery to help prevent incontinence and erectile dysfunction.

The medical center has been well received in the medical community, and receives many referrals from the Cleveland and Mayo clinics. Patients travel from all over the state to Vero Beach to receive treatment from the center.

With proven results, this office uses their experience and knowledge to treat the patient as a whole individual and not just a person with a urology problem.

The Urologic Wellness Center of Vero Beach is located at 1600 36th St., Suite B, in Vero Beach. They can be reached by calling (772) 569-4464 or going online to www.uwcvb.com

A mission to save the lagoon

By Alisha McDarris
For Hometown News

TREASURE COAST — Dolphins are dying, oysters are disappearing and entire underwater ecosystems are disintegrating and Indian Riverkeeper Marty Baum just can't take it anymore.

He's dedicated himself to a mission of protecting, restoring and advocating for the waters of the Indian River Lagoon and it breaks his heart to see it deteriorating.

For 20 years, ever since the Environmental Protection Agency put standards in place dictating where the run off from Lake Okeechobee could be routed, the 156-mile Indian River Lagoon has been suffering.

Two billion gallons of discharges a day from the lake include pollutants like fertilizer, waste, and other chemicals and are being diverted from their natural southern flow directly into the Indian River Lagoon. Local marine life is suffering the consequences.

Black muck lines the riverbeds, detrimental algae is taking over, vital sea grasses are vanishing, and a delicate ecosystem that relies on the complete health of the waterways is fading, a significant problem for the most diverse ecosystem in North America.

ca. "The upper lagoon is dying. The entire ecosystem is collapsing," said Mr. Baum, a local historian and passionate lagoon advocate.

He blames the tragedy almost entirely on politicians and their propensity to put the desires of big business, like the sugar industry, above the health and needs of the people. Mr. Baum looks at campaign contributions and voting records and says the verdict is clear.

"They're not protecting people, they're protecting polluters," Mr. Baum said.

Florida's government has also taken away the people's ability to do anything about righting the situation, according to Mr. Baum. He cited several instances where elected officials put remedying projects like storm treatment areas on hold for decades in order to benefit large corporations and agriculture.

For Mr. Baum, whose family has lived in the area since the late 1800s, there's nothing more devastating than watching his beloved lagoon suffer while he is forced to stand by and watch because the government has made taking action nearly impossible.

"We are essentially stuck," Mr. Baum said. An idea made more saddening by the thought that there's sioners all praised Mr. Polackwich for what he was able to accomplish in the three and one-half years serving the county.

One of the major accomplishments they noted were the changes to how the county view contracts with employees, including the contract negotiated for Mr. Polackwich himself.

Commissioner Wesley

Davis said Mr. Polackwich led by example in developing contracts that were essentially, "work or be fired."

Severance packages are now a thing of the past except in special circumstances, thanks to work by Mr. Polackwich.

Mr. Polackwich was also credited with pruning the "dead wood" in county ordinances, and accomplishing a high volume of work with shrinking staff.

"I never worried about what was going on in the legal department," Commissioner Bob Solari said.

"When I came here, I had hair, and you guys have pretty much changed me forever, so thank you very much," said a now bald Mr. Polackwich.

"Poor Dylan has an extremely high bar he has to meet or exceed to fill your footsteps," Commissioner Peter O'Bryan said to Mr. Polackwich.

Mr. Reingold said he was grateful for Mr. Polack-wich's instruction and looked forward to working in the county.

Mr. Reingold was previously the head of the land use and environmental law department in the office of general council in Jacksonville.

His annual salary will be $140,000 with 15 days of vacation.

Cat

The shelter should be open any day now, and already the cat housing is already full, she said.

Back in March, Ms. Eakins began the process for opening her own no-kill shelter in the south part of the county. It took some time to get through the red tape, and a lot of greenbacks to get the project constructed, but the county permissions have finally been given to open the facility.

"I have always, even as a kid, brought in stray cats," Ms. Eakins said.

"I've always had a soft spot for cats. I've taken them in as young as one day old to full grown and kept them with me for years," she said.

Ms. Eakins has previously volunteered and fostered cats for HALO Rescue, a nonprofit, no-kill shelter in Sebastian, but recently, she thought she wanted to do more and provide a cat rescue in the southern portion of the county.

"I'm trying to do what I can in my own little way to rescue and make new homes for these cats, but my goal is to try to find a way to stop this madness of all these kittens showing up because people don't spay and neuter," Ms. Eakins said.

The cats available for adoption will all be spayed or neutered.

Some cats will receive higher priority to be accepted into the facility. Pregnant cats, then kittens, then adolescent cats and finally "senior" cats will be considered in that order, Ms. Eakins said.

"I am not set up to handle feral cats," she said.

Ms. Eakins hopes to be able to find homes for the cats that come into the shelter quickly, so more cats can come in, so older cats, which traditionally are more difficult to adopt out, will have a lower priority.

"It's not that they aren't perfectly good cats, but people unfortunately don't see that," Ms. Eakins said.

Ms. Eakins has spent a large portion of her retirement savings to pay to start the shelter, but that will need to change.

"I'm hoping to find some other types of funding to keep this place open, because my account is running out," she said.

Financial donations, as well as donations of cat food, cat litter, or other cat toys are welcomed and greatly appreciated.

Ms. Eakins said her loyal group of volunteers that are currently fostering the cats that will be brought into the shelter are lifesavers and all of them are eager to see the shelter open.

"We're all very excited," she said.

Cat shelter hours have not yet been set.

Nonprofit gets much needed support

Quail Valley Charities supports Boys & Girls Clubs of Indian River County's Project Learn program with $20,000 grant

For Hometown News
NewsFP@hometownnewsol.com

SEBASTIAN — The Sebastian Branch of the Boys & Girls Clubs of Indian River County has a lot to be excited about. As part of Quail Valley Charities $20,000 grant to the Clubs, fifteen brand new laptop computers were purchased, along with a rolling, locking, storage cart to store them. The remaining funding will go directly to supporting the Project Learn program.

The Project Learn program is the cornerstone from which all Boys & Girls Clubs programs are built. Research strongly suggests that positive learning opportunities during the non-school hours have a substantial effect on the learning pattern through a young person's life. Project Learn was designed to engage young people in learning, encourage them to succeed in school, and help them become lifelong learners. When children arrive at the Clubs after school, they immediately move into a component of Project Learn. The program focuses on homework help and tutoring, participation in high-yield learning and leisure activities, increased parent/guardian participation in school work, direct collaboration with the schools, and enhanced techniques for goal setting and recognizing achievements.

Attendance at the Sebastian Club averages 150 children each day. Prior to the addition of the laptop computers, the children shared twenty-one desk top computers. There were long waiting lists for their use after school and they were located in high traffic areas of the Club. The new laptop computers will allow more children to work simultaneously on school projects, homework, and academic enrichment activities. They will give the children the ability to find a quiet place to work with better focus, and will give Club staff members additional opportunities for teaching.

The Boys & Girls Clubs of Indian River County is incredibly grateful for the ongoing support of Quail Valley Charities.

"For more than 10 years, Quail Valley has supported the work of the clubs in our community with program grant donations totaling almost $200,000," said Elizabeth Thomason, executive director. "We simply couldn't do the vital work we do without the partnership of organizations such as Quail Valley Charities."

The mission of the Boys & Girls Clubs is to inspire and enable all young people, especially those who need it the most, to realize their full potential as productive, responsible and caring citizens. They operate three Clubs, one each in Vero Beach, Sebastian, and Fellsmere, all within a school-bus ride to every child in the county.

More than 1,500 children in our community are served by the Clubs annually, equipping them with the tools necessary to succeed in school and in life.

To build the approximately quarter-acre site into an oyster-friendly habitat, there will first need to be heavy wire mesh placed onto the bottom of the lagoon, topped with clean concrete rubble, Mr. Swindell said.

Oysters like to attach themselves onto hard surfaces, and the lagoon doesn't currently have the natural geophysical substrate they prefer, so it will have to be man-made, Mr. Sembler said.

The population of oysters in the marsh is estimated to be between 800,000 to 1.2 million, Mr. Swindell said.

In the Spoonbill Marsh, the oysters are protected from the large winds and waves that can be found in the lagoon, but the principle of the process is the same and shouldn't be affected, he said.

In the lagoon, the clean cement rubble would be laid down in a series of small islands, instead of a large landmass.

Mr. Sembler said nursing the lagoon back to health will not be a single, quick solution, but he said the oyster reef is a proven way to increase clean water and is a good step forward.

The Army Corps of Engineers and St. John's River Water Management District were both consulted on the project and neither organization had a problem with the project, simply specifying that it should be placed in a section of the lagoon bed where there isn't any seagrass, Mr. Swindell said.

The actual contract for the project was not completed and voted on at press time, subsequent stories will report on the project's progress.

Inmates disciplined for tampering with locks

On July 7, two inmates, Robert Smith and Norie Davis, in the Indian River County Jail, were placed in disciplinary confinement after they had tampered with the lock of an internal cell door.

Upon learning of the incident on June 29, Sheriff Deryl Loar immediately ordered that Smith and Davis be held in separate administrative holding cells pending the outcome of a disciplinary hearing.

As a result of the enhanced security measures taken by correctional staff including increased monitoring of recorded video surveillance, the two inmates were observed on internal security video leaving their cell area on June 28, and entered an unauthorized but secured hallway within the cell block area and were likely engaged in attempted communication with other inmates.

At least four locked doors and several correctional personnel remained between the inmates and a door which would actually lead outside of the jail.

In order to maintain the security of our correctional facility and provide the highest protection to the public, the details of the internal electronic cell lock being manipulated are not being released as doing so may endanger our jail staff.

However, steps have already been taken to ensure the 22 year old locks in that section of our facility have been reinforced.

Davis and Smith, both residents of Indian River County prior to their incarceration, were found guilty in disciplinary hearings held on July 7, and each was subsequently placed in disciplinary confinement for 20 days.

Additional incidents which have come to the attention of jail administration are under review but nothing indicates a compromise to public safety has occurred.

Sheriff Loar stated, "Institutional security is of paramount importance within our jail. The safety of the residents of Indian River County as well as that of our visitors is our core mission."

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — Indian River Mall invites area-residents to attend Red, White and Blue 'A Star Spangled' Salute on Saturday, July 27 from 11 a.m. – 2 p.m. in the Macy's Concourse.

In collaboration with the Navy Seal Museum and Veterans Council's Victory Center, this free community event offers area-residents the chance to thank the local men and women of the armed forces.

During the event, guests will enjoy live entertainment and refreshments from Einstein's Brothers Bagels; see soldiers' equipment that was used in past wars provided by the Navy Seal Museum; a patriotic fashion show presented by Talbot's, special discounts for Veterans and a kid's craft corner.

Dr. James and Helen Shafer will dedicate a painting by artist, Josh T. Herman, titled "Lt Murphy and His Platoon" to the Navy Seal Museum located in Fort Pierce. The painting will be displayed in the Victory Center at the Indian River Mall.

"It is our hope that by placing the painting on public display, our community will get a further understanding and appreciation for the great freedoms we all enjoy everyday because of the dedication and sacrifice the men and women of our armed forces give every day," said Dr. Shafer.

Seeing what is right in front of you

I've noticed this phenomenon while instructing new computer users: A lost look will come over many new users when asked to click an object because they can't find it. Usually, I will hear "I don't have that," a short pause, and then the inevitable "Oh! Here it is!"

So, what's going on here? Why are many new computer users unable to find objects, links, menus and shortcuts that are present on any given system, even when the items in question are right there on the screen?

The answer is where people's eyes tend to go when a window opens.

Most of the time, the users' eyes are hovering around a 4-inch circle in the center of the screen. If they don't see what they are looking for there, the response is usually "I don't have that."

Then (after realizing that maybe they should have whatever it is they can't find), they will broaden the search a bit, move their eyes around and locate what they were missing.

If you are having trouble finding things on your desktop, pay attention to where your eyes go when a window pops open. If you see that you tend to focus your view to a small area in the center of the window, try shifting your view to the top left of the screen and work your way to the lower right through the center of the window. This will usually allow you to see what's what in any given window in the order of importance.

By the time you get to the lower right portion of the window, you will typically have enough information to complete whatever it is you are trying to do.

Have I lost you? Let's look at it another way.

When someone hands you a piece of paper or you open a page in a book, where do your eyes go?

Well, they certainly don't hover around the center of the page (or at least they shouldn't).

In Western civilization, we begin reading from the top left and work our way to the lower right. If we were to

We need to develop the same habit when we are using the computer because the same rules tend to apply.

Starting in the middle of the screen and then wandering around with our eyes will leave us feeling lost and out of control, and we will most certainly miss something.

Instead, try this: Every time a window opens, start at the top left corner of the window and, moving from left to right and then slowly down the screen, you will find that most windows have been constructed in a logical order.

When we look at the top left corner of any given window, we will usually see an icon representing whatever program is running, followed by the title bar.

These are good things to know: the name (and icon) of the program running and its title.

The next line down that we may encounter is a line of pull-down menus. The pull-down menus are where we can find all the controls and commands that are available within that particular window grouped again, in logical sections.

All of the filing-related commands are grouped under file, all the editing commands are grouped under edit and so on, with the final pull-down menu usually being help.

They arranged it in this way so that if people don't find what they are looking for by going through each menu from left to right, they can look in the help menu as a last resort.

However, all programs are

Callers are asked to refrain from making slanderous statements. Statements of fact will be checked for accuracy.

Stop racial profiling

To the person who wrote the rant regarding "Check Alien Status," your bigotry is showing through loud and clear. I am familiar with the landscape company that does our community and many others in the area, and they have a strict requirement that all workers must show proof of U.S. citizenship or have a green card allowing them legal status to live and work in the U.S. Just because the workers look Hispanic does not mean they are illegal; only that you are assuming them to be illegal because of their appearance. We very much need these workers who do such a great job and work very hard in the harshest of conditions to earn a meager wage. I appreciate these workers and many of my neighbors feel the same way. So quit the racial profiling and check your facts before you make another dumb statement.

Please get out of the left hand lane

It is so disturbing, when trying to pass a slower vehicle that I encounter daily on all of our local roads that 60 percent of the vehicles here in the county drive in the left hand lane. Why? I've been trying to figure out why for three years. Could it be they all just moved here from England? No way.

On June 14, Gov. Rick Scott signed wide-ranging highway safety bills that includes a provision designed to force slower drivers out of the left-hand lane.

The bill also includes a provision that states that drivers cannot drive in the left-hand lane 10 miles or slower than the posted speed. A driver who violates the provision could get a $60 ticket.

Congratulations, welfare people

Hey welfare people or poverty people, congratulations on making Fort pierce the poverty capitol of Florida. You and all the young lives you produce have made the common tax payer very proud. Just hope you can keep them off the streets, and not make drug dealers out of them. Oh and remember to reinforce their schooling that they receive from the public schools. Oh, wait, let me redefine that word; I meant public baby-sitting agency. It's amazing how people want everything just handed to them. Hopefully your kids will stay in school and not be a burden to society. Oh, and while I'm at it, perhaps you might want to use your glorious food stamp money to buy healthy foods. Boy, that'd be a change.

What about Alaska's refuge?

With all the promising news about natural gas discoveries and exploration, discussion of Alaska's Arctic Natural Wildlife Refuge has been all but forgotten.

That's a mistake. A big mistake. The area (19 million acres, larger than Massachusetts, New Jersey, Hawaii, Connecticut and Delaware combined, offers almost endless possibilities. For political reasons to pander to environmentalists, President Obama is stonewalling development which would benefit us all.

Where is the money going?

Locally, there is a practice where the girls that work so hard cleaning the rooms and never received the tips that the costumers leave them. They go to another employer before the girls begin their job the next day. Who knows where is the final recipient of this money? Or if it is divided for both the recipient and the collector. It would be a good idea to know what is going on in favor of the employees that are working so hard to help their families.

Public education misconceptions

I am a public school teacher who is continuously amazed at the outrageous comments in the rants and raves. In the rant "A laughing matter," the writer believes teachers brag about student performance and how things are improving in the classroom. They are surely misinformed. All bragging to the news media is done by county office administrators when it comes to the FCAT standardized test results. Teachers must get administrative approval before they are permitted to make any press releases what so ever. That would include improvements in classroom education.

Teachers are not free to teach as they see fit. Most subject areas are given pacing guides in our local school district that dictate what and to what degree topics are to be covered and for how long. If the students do not master a concept there is no additional time given to re-teach the concepts, teachers must keep pace with the district pacing guidelines or risk poor evaluation scores. Teachers do not set the number of days in a school year nor do they determine the number of hours in a class period or school day. Teachers in effect have little to no say in the day to day operations of the school or district calendars.

Middle schools classes have been shortened by five minutes per class to allow for a 30 minute EPIC period at the end of each school day. During the EPIC period students either read for 30 minutes in their EPIC class or theoretically are able to receive remediation from one of their other teachers in another classroom while the that teacher is still with their EPIC class. This all came about by a District level administrative decision. A small group of teachers from each middle school were sent to a four day in-service training in Professional Learning Communities. This in-service training was much like an Infomercial on TV. All of the PLC shareholders were pitching the benefits of the program with the hopes of signing on another school district to reap their profits. Unfortunately our

Local women 'Lean In'

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY

On June 27, a group of women gathered to share their life experiences and how it affected their careers. The breakfast was hosted at the Employment Opportunities Council Center, in Vero Beach.

LaKisha Erwing, assistant executive director at the EOC, introduced board members of the UN Women to the crowd.

"The purpose was to mentor women and to show how we could do things that will bring better outcomes, professionally and personally, said Lalita Janke, president of the East Florida Chapter of the US National Committee for UN Women said. "Thirty years after women became 50 percent of the college graduates in the United States, men still hold the vast majority of leadership position in government and industry. I have met many women in Vero Beach who are not adequately paid or recognized for their strengths. We need to be supporting each other because when one of us makes it, all of us make it."

Catherine Lambert, Financial Advisor at Wealth Management Merrill Lynch explained that a few decades ago they were only two career options for women: teaching and nursing.

"Today women excel not just in arts but in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics," Ms. Lambert said. She went over the three salient points that Sheryl Sandberg, Facebook COO discussed in her book "Lean In." Stressing on the fact that women comprise their career goals and limit themselves to make room for partners and children (even though they may not exist as yet).

Robin Dapp, executive director of the Substance Awareness Center touched on the subject that women have a tendency to fall into the stereotype roles and don't "Lean In" to grasp projects that open doors to better opportunities.

"We should focus our energy into breaking this cycle," Ms. Dapp said. "Women have been trained to not stand out in a men's world or they will suffer the consequences professionally and jeopardize their relationships with their spouses."

Very early in life women learn that women people are intimidated by strong women.

Those present, passionately shared their experiences of how they held themselves back and the challenges that they had faced.

The group decided they wanted to continue the discussion, so other meetings are scheduled for July 25 and Aug. 22 from 8 - 9 a.m. at the Employment Opportunities Council of IRC, 2455 St Lucie Ave., Vero Beach. The public is invited. Event is free of charge.

Grants to help prevent domestic violence, abuse victims

For Hometown News

TREASURE COAST—

The Verizon Foundation has launched a new program to provide $100,000 in grants to Florida organizations in the effort to prevent domestic violence and to serve victims of abuse.

The 2013 Florida Domestic Violence Prevention Solutions Grant Program is open to nonprofit agencies and organizations all over the state.

Funding will be distributed in individual grants up to $10,000 each.

The focus this year will be on programs that do one or more of the following:

- Support health and wellness of families affected by domestic violence or provide training to first responders/health care professionals to safely screen for domestic violence.

- Engage men to act to prevent domestic violence in the office, at home, or in other social situations.

- Educate teens on using new choices to create safe digital dating and healthy relationships.

- Provide workforce development and entrepreneurship training for individuals participating domestic violence prevention programs.

The new request-for-proposal is the latest of a long-running effort by the Verizon Foundation, the company's HopeLine program and other initiatives in partnership with Florida organizations against domestic violence. The company has contributed millions of dollars of funding and other support to various groups across the state in recent years.

The deadline to apply for the new program is 5 p.m. on Aug. 30. Applicants will be notified of funding decisions by early October. To apply, go to www.verizon.com/foundation.

The Health Science Division of Indian River State College is recognizing the work of its Spring Capstone students who earned their Bachelor of Applied Science Degree in Organizational Management with a Health Care Management Specialization.

The students projects included: working with St. Lucie County School Board to develop a plan on emotional eating for school district employees; a team review of Interdisciplinary Communication Strategies in a Clinical Setting for Sebastian River Medical Center; working with Indian River Medical Center to review Quality Assurance Measures for Arterial Blood Gases and a project with St. Lucie County Communication Services to assess transportation needs of people with disabilities.

A capstone project is the final project IRSC Bachelor's Degree program students complete, requiring them to work as "consultants" with an assigned business or agency to address a specific issue or problem defined by the agency.

The scope of the project is agreed upon between the agency and the supervising IRSC faculty member. IRSC faculties provide guidance to the students throughout the project, and the business or agency provides a staff member as the capstone coordinator for the organization to work with the students.

is a lot of history for an eighth grader to take in within a 180 day school year. Patriotism is something that comes from the home and family not from a classroom teacher.

The reality is Public education is a reflection of our current society. Those children who come from homes that value and promote education have the opportunity to receive a solid education. Those children who come from homes that do not value and promote education miss out on their education unless they are self-driven to achieve. Teacher can only attempt to motivate their students to learn and must count on their parents or extended family to be motivational forces in their lives as well.

Those who have a problem with the current state of education need to volunteer in their local schools and be a part of the solution instead of hurling criticisms. When they do they will see what it's like being a public school teacher and then they can address the woes of public education with those who are truly in charge, school superintendents and their county office administrators and state and federal politicians.

their prayers because you are in their country. And in that other country, if you were to fight over this kind of thing, demanding to bring other faith and religions into the picture for prayer, you would go to jail for not abiding by their faith and/or religious ways. Here in America, everyone is welcomed; however we are still considered a Christian/Judeo nation, as is reminded by our laws, our money, the patriotic songs we sing, etc. and others should sit down and respect and tolerate that or, in some cases, go back to their own country.

End the stimulus

The Federal Reserve is doing us an enormous disservice by continuing its so-called stimulus spending.

Whatever it's called, it is a fraud. They are running their printing presses because they have no real money.

Smart money people have been warned and they are adjusting their portfolios. But millions of every-day Americans are going to be left holding the bag, a totally empty bag.

Washington insiders do not care a fig about us.

What's good for the goose...

Recently there have been a lot of comments that Christian and/or Judeo prayer should not be allowed at governmental meetings, etc. In case you don't know, if anyone visits a Muslim country, they would have to listen to a Muslim opening a prayer meeting. Or if you went to a Hindu Country, you would have to listen to

Garden admission lowered for summer

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

VERO BEACH — An audience with Queen Crepe Myrtle and the Woods Blue Goddess just became a little easier to obtain.

During the hot months of summer vacation, the beautiful and delicate water lilies of McKee Botanical Garden make their appearance in Vero Beach, and a special three-month pass can give guests unlimited visits to see the blooms all summer long.

During the month of July, McKee Botanical Garden is offering three-month summer memberships to the garden. The pass is $10 per individual or $15 per family and provides unlimited admission to the garden during open hours.

“For slightly more than the cost of daily admission, visitors can enjoy unlimited visits to the garden along with additional benefits for a three-month trial period,” said Christine Hobart, executive director of the garden, in a press release.

The summer membership includes a 10 percent discount at the garden gift shop and free or reduced admission to more than 200 gardens, museums and arboreta in the U.S. through the American Horticultural Society’s reciprocal admission program, 17 of which are in Florida.

There could be as many as 200 water lilies blooming all around the garden during one visit, in about 90 different varieties. Blossom colors range from pinks and purples to yellows and oranges and even multicolored specimens.

“Whether planning a staycation or simply seeking family-friendly activities close to home, a summer membership to McKee presents a great value,” Ms. Hobart said.

“The garden is able to provide smaller visitors with interactive programming to enhance their visit to the garden,” said Kelly Susino, marketing director for the garden.

The Garden Discovery Backpack program is available for no additional cost and includes an activity guide, journal and educational materials to engage children during their garden exploration.

The backpacks are age-appropriate, come in five different themes and allow for fun on multiple visits.

Themes include, “Garden Explorer,” “Things with Wings,” “It’s a Bug’s World,” “Plantastic” and “Survival:

Lost in the Jungle.”

The garden is closed on Mondays and major holiday. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

and on Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

McKee Botanical Garden is located at 350 U.S. 1, Vero Beach.

Efforts to clean waterways taking place July 27

By Jessica Tuggle
jtuggle@hometownnewsol.com

INDIAN RIVER COUNTY — The health of the lagoon is a hot topic and a talking point in the area, but on July 27, it will be a point of action.

The sixth annual Treasure Coast Waterway Cleanup will take place in Indian River, St. Lucie and Martin counties on July 27 from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and organizers hope to have even more participation than ever before on the 125-mile stretch of waterways in the tri-county area.

“More people equals more trash that we can collect,” said coordinator April Price of the Marine Industries Association of the Treasure Coast in a press release.

There will be six clean up locations in Indian River County: the Riverside Park boat ramp on Riverside Drive at the southeast end of the Merrill Barber Bridge; the Vero Beach Municipal Marina at 3611 Rio Vista Blvd., Vero Beach; the Loggerhead Club and Marina at Grand Harbor at 1221 Marina Village Circle, Vero Beach; the Wabasso Causeway boat ramp on County Road 510 in Wabasso; the Sebastian Main Street boat ramp at Main Street and North Indian River Drive in Sebastian; and the Sebastian Inlet Marina at 8685 U.S. 1, Micco.

Since 2008, more than 4,500 volunteers and 1,300 boats collected more than 46.5 tons of trash from the Treasure Coast waters, Ms. Price said in a press release.

Online volunteer registration is available, as is a data card to fill out and report the types of trash collected by the volunteers.

All volunteers will receive a T-shirt for participating.

The data card has space to write down if an entangled animal was found, dead or alive, how many trash bags were filled and the estimated weight of the bags and even instructs volunteers to separate the aluminum, glass and plastic from other trash.

The information collected is then used to determine what types of debris are most prolific in the waterways and how to educate people on waste disposal.

For more information about the Treasure Coast Waterway Cleanup, call Ms. Price at (772) 285-1646 or visit www.twaterway-cleanup.com.

Smart Xeriscape planting: less maintenance

With natural resources such as fresh water at a premium, conserving these natural resources as much as possible is an absolute necessity. With this in mind, it is imperative to choose plants that are resistant to draught and require less water in order to thrive.

In order to create a landscape that is easy to maintain in draught conditions it is important to group like plants together. This will help make the watering of your plants much easier because all the plants in a particular group will have the same needs.

For example, if you want to use annuals or other plants that require more water; place them all together in a grouping. On the other hand, if you have plants that require minimal watering such as Crown of Thorns, Bougainvillea and succulents, try to keep them in another grouping. By organizing your plants in this way, watering will not only be easier, it will be more enjoyable and require less time.

One factor that is often overlooked when purchasing your plants is the quality of the product. Where you buy your plants is almost as important as what choices you make in plant species. When choosing plants that will withstand extreme elements that Florida often offers, local Mom and Pop plant growers will often offer the best quality plants for the money.

In addition, the plants are grown right here in our local area and are well adapted to our local conditions. So the next time you are out and about and you pass by that small local nursery you never pay that attention to, stop by and look around and chances are you will find some great plants that will hold up very well in your local area.

GARDEN NOOK

In addition to designing your gardens for maximum water efficiency, you should also design your turf area for the same.

As I mentioned in earlier columns, you can increase the watering efficiency of your yard by using strategic methods of decreasing your lawn area. You can create islands that are filled in with decorative stone and decorated with interesting lawn ornaments.

Another tip for maximizing water efficiency is to install an irrigation system. A properly configured system will cover all the areas of your yard without wasting water. These systems can be configured to water on the days that are designated for your area without any interaction on your part. In addition, when properly installed, the system will turn off automatically when it rains so you do not waste any water.

When you are dealing with larger trees and shrubs, it is often difficult to get enough water on them to deeply penetrate down to the roots. This is where proper mulching will take effect. A heavy dose of mulch will go a long way in preserving the moisture around your trees and bushes so they will fare better between watering cycles. Although you may be tempted to run out to your favorite retailer and buy a truckload of cypress mulch, remember that there are natural choices that are both look great and also help preserve our natural resources.

If your plants are of the acid loving variety, you can use natural pine needles as a mulching material. You can also use plain hay to help preserve moisture around your plants. Hay is being used more and more by local communities in the landscaping effects of streets and parks. You can also create your own mulch by using the vacuum feature of your gas or electric powered blower. Simply rake the majority of the leaves in your yard to one location and use the vacuum of your blower to pick up and pulverize the leaves and grass. Use the contents of the vacuum bag around your plants. This is both conservative and much less expensive than buying commercially produced mulches from a store.

As you can see, there are many ways to help beat the draught and still keep your plants looking as good as possible.

Learning to sail, as a child, isn't complicated as long as you join the Youth Sailing Foundation of Indian River County. The not for profit organization offers sailing lessons for youth 8-years-old and up. Free lessons are available for youth 8-14. Recently YSF campers gathered in the cove behind the Moorings Club for a weeklong sailing camp. Campers learn the fundamentals of sailing in a safe sailing environment. There are only a few openings left. For more information call Chris Pope at (772) 567-900 or visit www.yfsirc.org.

each, and are conducted in June and July on Fridays through Wednesdays at 9 p.m. at the Sebastian Fishing Museum on the south side of the Sebastian Inlet Bridge. Each program begins with a PowerPoint presentation at 9 p.m.; please arrive a few minutes early. If authorized scouts find turtles, the group will go directly to that location after the presentation. If not, around 10 p.m., the whole group will go to the beach with guides and walk up to 3 miles to look for nesting sea turtles. Participants must be in fair physical condition. No flash photography is permitted. Flashlights are not to be used on the beach, but may be used while crossing dunes to begin and end the walk. No water or restrooms available during the walk. Wear comfortable walking shoes or sneakers and insect repellent; long sleeves and pants are suggested. Each program may end as late as 1 a.m. Seeing sea turtles is not guaranteed, but it's common. Contact the Sebastian Fishing Museum, (772) 388-2750.

It's time to invest in the most important club in your bag

Golfers love new things. We are always looking for the new driver or hybrid that can help us hit the ball farther and more accurately. While we attend demo days, beating balls until our arms ache looking to find that magical combination of shaft, loft, lie and more, we often overlook the most important club in the bag: the putter.

Many golfers will grab a putter off the rack, hit a few putts, and drop it in the bag. It's strange to think that we use our putter for far more strokes than any other club in the bag, yet it may be the one club in the bag that is the worst fit for our own stroke.

Most putters come too long. If your putter is too long you will be unable to get your eyes directly over the ball. The sole of the putter should rest flat on the ground, not with the toe or heel raised.

For some reason the same

golfer who will not bat an eye at spending $300 or $400 on a driver, balks at investing that on a good putter.

A custom putter that is made to fit your stroke, please your eye, match your height, your grip size, and more, is worthy of an investment. You may spend a few hundred dollars, but what you wind up with is a magical stick that can save you strokes and win you a few skins.

There are a few artisans that make putters this way. Their putters are truly beautiful examples of a craftsmanship and passion that is becoming difficult to find in today's world.

Most of these craftsmen customize the head with the colors and stampings of your choice. They offer numerous styles of heads in differing weights and finishes. They are so good, that they can fit you almost perfectly over the phone using measurements that you do yourself and provide to them.

In no particular order, here are a few. Some of these are long-time personal friends whose putters I have tried and fallen in love with. Perhaps you too will find one that you love.

Slighter Golf (360-668-8502 www.slightergolf.com) is based in Seattle. Tom Slighter's lineup features 16 different heads and 10 different finishes. My favorite look is the Kuro Kaminari, a deep, rich black finish. His Seattle Mud finish has a beautiful patina look that many wait years for their putter to become.

Byron Design (920-915-4320 www.byronputters.com) is located in Huntington Beach, Calif., Byron Morgan wants to help golfers obtain the putter of their dreams.

As a kid, he learned to use his father's machine shop to create mini-bikes and go-carts. From there he started his own custom surfboard business. Then he discovered golf and soon found his passion in designing and building putters to fit the dreams and desires of his customers.

Byron putters can take anywhere from an hour or so to nearly a week, depending on the amount of customization and finish requested. The final product will turn heads and drop putts.

Edel Golf (512-355-3415 www.edelgolf.com) is headquartered in Liberty Hill, Texas. Edel's studies have shown that a high percentage of players don't consistently aim their putters at their target. With that in mind, the company will have you go to a certified fitter before starting your process.

Everyone sees differently and head shape dramatically changes your ocular focus. Edel gives you six heads as well as five hosel designs to choose from. There are 35 different combinations of lines and their placement to optimize your aim. Lastly, they weigh and balance the putter to control your stroke and increase consistency.

Machine Putters from Dogleg Right Golf (877-835-9652 www.doglegright.com) is headquartered in Plano, Texas. These putters were conceived and developed with the goal of providing the ultimate in quality, precision, advanced state-of-the-art design and technologies, and the most creative and beneficial options for user adjustability, customization and personalization. The result is the most customizable line of putters anywhere.

Customers choose from a plethora of options with every putter in the lineup. From material choice of the head itself, to weight adjustability, to platings, coatings, custom grinds and finishes, options in modular hosels, to alignment indicator options, Machine Putters give you the options you need to make a truly customized putter.

Best of all, if you want to change things around a bit, you can change the hosel, or the alignment option, or perhaps the back of the putter adding depth to the head itself.

Isn't it time to invest in the most important club in your bag?

Getting ready for performing under the big top

Maddy Urselean snaps to a pose on the scaffolding during Aerial Antics Camp at Leisure Square Wednesday, July 10.

Cliff Partlow/staff photographer

More than 125 children and teens ages 3-years-old and up are practicing at Leisure Square for the 39th annual Aerial Antics Circus sponsored by the Vero Beach Recreation Department. This year's theme is 'Circus de Colores.' The production combines different types of dance, gymnastics with acrobatics and circus aerobics. All of the music for the aerobics and dance will include a color in the title such as 'Brown eyed Girl,' 'Blue Suede Shoes,' etc. The annual event will be held Aug. 8, 9, and 10 at 7:00 p.m. at St. Edward's School, 1895 St. Edward's Drive, Vero Beach, Fl 32963. For more information call (772) 567-2144 or visit www.covb.org
