The second round of the long-term sea water nutrient monitoring program for Bonaire was completed earlier this month. The previous monitoring in March showed that the waters around Bonaire are generally in good condition. However, there were clear signs of nutrient enrichment (from waste water). Nutrient enrichment can cause serious damage to coral reefs. Fortunately, the European Union recently approved the addition of a tertiary treatment step to the planned sewage treatment plant which should soon be installed in Bonaire. The study was done by a group of STINAPA/Bonaire National Marine Park (BNMP) volunteers.

The BNMP, departments of nature and environment protection from the Island Government and Central Government and the Harbor Branch Oceanographic Institute (Florida) are all participating.

The volunteers and BNMP interns collected water and algae samples, estimated fish population composition/abundance and made coral reef video transects. The survey was carried out at 10 sites along the west coast of Bonaire and Klein Bonaire. The samples were sent to Harbor Branch Oceanographic

Institution of Miami, and the results are expected at the end of this month.

Special thanks go to all the participating volunteers, interns, as well as Capt. Don's Habitat, Toucan Dive and Wannadive, who helped tremendously with the logistics and provided the necessary air supplies. K. v.Dijk, STINAPA

► A proposal to increase the wage tax for retirement by 1.5% and simultaneously raise the retirement pension by NAf100/month will be sent to Parliament next week. The wage limit will be increased from NAf48,000 to 72,000 per year. The maximum old age pension will rise to NAf654 a month. In total the employee pays 4.5% of his or her salary, the employer pays 5.5%. The bill was introduced by Senator Ramonsito Booij of Bonaire and two Curaçao senators. Recently, Bonaire lawmakers salaries were boosted 25% (Bonaire Reporter 16 June 2006)

► Majority (Green Party) leader Ramonsito Booij said in a press release that the Bonairean government has no intention of taking away long-lease land from the community.

However, if people do not have the means to build a house they will have to return the long-lease land to the Government. According to Booij, they will get another piece of land once they have the money to build a house. Booij says that there is plenty of land available, but people have to follow the rules. Recently, the government sent letters out to long-lease land holders of vacant land who have held the lease for years but did not build on it as required. Usually a person has to start building within one or two years. It has to do with the distribution of water and energy. It costs money to keep a lot of land undeveloped.

"It's not about the taking away of the land, but the complying with existing rules," said Booij. A person has to sign an agreement when he/she received the land, and in this agreement it is stated that construction should start within one or two years.

► The Bank of the Netherlands Antilles announced that counterfeit NAf100 bills are again in circulation.

The 2003 series bills have been copied. The bills are of reasonably good quality but can be well distinguished from the real ones in bright light. Some of the counterfeits also have the gold foil but do not have the gold colored shiny ink cartridge that can be clearly seen on the real bills once they are turned. A clear difference can be seen in the seal (see photo above) of the Central Bank that does not appear on the counterfeit bills.

► Coral rock (a dead starlet coral) washed up on shore can give us a view we can't get when the coral animals are alive. The living coral would have been on the top right of this piece of skeleton, where all the little circles are. Each circle was the cup which the individual polyp secreted and upon which it rested. What we see along the sides, where the rock has been broken or worn, is a record of the growth of each cup as the coral head as a whole grew. □

D id You Know...Conch Jump?

Queen Conch, Strombus gigas, are very large snails with gorgeous shells. They should be a common sight in the seagrass meadows of Lac Bay because that's where their favorite algae thrives, but they have been overfished and it's rare that I see one while guiding snorkelers in Lac. Strangely enough, I see them more often on the calm side of Bonaire while snorkeling over the reef. From above, conch resemble the substrate because sand and algae collect on their shells. If you pick one up and look underneath, you'll see the most beautiful swirl of shiny pink and two brown eyes staring at you from long eyestalks. You may even be swiped by the conch's strong and pointy operculum. The conch uses its operculum to jump along the bottom and can make considerable headway (for a snail). Conch are protected in Bonaire, so if you see someone collecting them, you should report it to the Bonaire Marine Park – 717-8444.

On the Island Since....

2005 and 1999

Nelson Croft and Naomi Slotema

"I was busy in Aruba setting up the Blokart® land-sailing, but the paperwork was going to take at least 13 to 17 months. Then a Bonairean politician invited me to come over and have a look because Bonaire urgently needed new tourist activities that would fit the non-polluting, ecological island's policy. So I came here for the first time in 2003. I thought this was a fantastic island, far more beautiful and greener than Aruba and the people were very friendly and sincerely helpful. The island's good-natured atmosphere attracted me immediately.

I come from the Information Technology business. I worked for 15 years as a sales manager and I traveled a lot for my work: Central America, the US, Asia – I worked one year in Taiwan – Japan, Singapore. I was in Beirut during the civil war. I went to Cuba, and before all that I finished the Higher Navigation School in Amsterdam, and I sailed one year with Greenpeace on the Sirius as a radio officer. I was part of the Dutch hang-gliding team for 12 years and also I did gliding.

Although I was making a lot of money in the IT business I was never a materialistic man, so after 15 years it was enough. I didn't like what I was doing anymore and I felt the urgent need to take off to a tropical island and to show people how to do things that are great fun. Land sailing comes originally from New Zealand, but it has become very popular in Holland, all over Europe and also in the States, Australia and Japan.

At one of the biggest sports fairs in the world in Munich, Germany, I met the people from Blokart who were looking for a distributor in the Caribbean. I was very enthusiastic about the product, and a survey I did showed that Aruba had the highest household income of all the Caribbean islands and more than a million tourists per year, so I thought it would be best to start there. But, as the paperwork was taking so long and I'd been invited to come to Bonaire in the meantime, I saw opportunities here. In consultation with several politicians we decided the track should be somewhere near Rincon to stimulate the social and economical activities in and around Rincon. Way too little is happening there as everything is centralized on the west coast. I applied for the permits and went back to Holland to prepare everything. In 2005 I met Naomi here on Bonaire at Little Havana and I thought she was very cute" he smiles "it might have been love at first sight..."

"I was living on Bonaire since August 1999. Before that, in April and May of that year I'd been working as an intern at Eric Hagens' dental practice," Naomi says. "After I graduated I decided to go back to Bonaire as I had fallen head over heels in love with the island, so I packed my suitcase and came here. I was 21 and the first certified dental hygienist on the island and it was a challenge! For six years I worked with Hagens, and the clients, especially, made it an unforgettable time for me. Even now, when I go out shopping, people still ask me, 'When are you going back to work again?' And for sure, I don't preclude the possibility.

I was going through a very difficult period in my life when I met Nelson. We became very good friends almost instantly, but for me that was all. I went to Holland, never with the intention of staying away for good, but I needed some time off. When Nelson came to Holland to bring me back to Bonaire I realized how much I cared for him and when he flew back I followed a month later.

"I thought this was a fantastic island, far more beautiful and greener than Aruba and the people were very friendly and sincerely helpful. The island's good-natured atmosphere attracted me immediately."

Then we started frantically with the land sailing. With the help of Cargill and the Damascus family we were able to build the track. Cargill donated the natural material for the track. It's environmentally neutral so we're not polluting the soil or the reefs. The Damascus Company did all the construction work. We had a lot of problems with the weather because when we were ready to open the wind dropped and then the rainy season lasted for a very long time last year. In mid December 2005 we got our first two clients, two American nurses who ended up completely covered with mud, but they had a great time! Then Clay Owens – 83 years old – who came with his whole family from California to Bonaire was not allowed by his children to participate. He was watching his family having a great time and then he said, 'I'd rather die in a Blokart than sit here on a bench!' and he got up and raced the whole afternoon with his children and grandchildren." "It's a real eco-sport," Nelson says. "Without polluting, without destroying anything, we're offering a fun activity.

The tourist bureau is also proud and happy with the fact that Bonaire is offering a complete package with top-side ecological activities - it's really unique. Also Bonaire is the first place in the Caribbean where you can go land sailing, and the track we have is the largest built-for-the-purpose land sailing track in the world. Already we've seen a lot of SGB students. The sport is exciting. It's about speed and it's competitive. It's not just for tourists; it's also for the people who live here. Land sailing has been around for over a hundred years, and Blokarting is now a recognized sport with competitions all over the world. So we're planning on putting a Bonairean team together to participate in the first world championships next year. I think Bonaire can finish very high because we have fantastic surfers and sailors and we have unique circumstances because we can practice almost all year around.

Monday, July 17th, marked the first land sailing competition between the various islands in the Caribbean. It was held on Bonaire as part of the UTS-Chippie Challenge. Competing were 'sailors' from St. Kitts, Aruba, Curaçao, St. Martin, Statia and Bonaire... and Bonaire was the overall winner, not only in land sailing, but also in mountain biking, kayaking and swimming." Nelson Croft (44) and Naomi Slotema (28) are both easy going; she's very sweet and considerate and he's a nice fellow who knows how to tell a story. They are two people who have a lot in common – they make a great couple.

"The way I see it," Nelson says, "it all went a bit slower than I thought it would go. As an entrepreneur you always want things to go faster, but we manage to live off it and both of us are still very happy that we did it." "Not only is it a beautiful place to be every day," Naomi says, "but for me this is something entirely new and I am someone who needs change. I am learning something new: advertising, promotion, negotiating with sponsors, suppliers and dealers, and I am also organizing all the events, like the business competition on Bonaire. Nelson is the sales person and I am the organizer and we're a good team. He gives me peace and adventure at the same time and he's full of stories and I love that.

I've always been very restless and in spite of all the stress that comes with starting a new business, Nelson gives me stability and that's very important to me. For me it's all about friendships and challenges and no problems. Nelson always says, 'There are no problems – there are only challenges!' And I think that is a beautiful way of putting it. I want to be happy and I want other people to be happy too, and if that's not the case it can make me very sad. That's something Nelson and I share."

"Naomi is a very sweet person and she's spontaneous and we laugh a lot. That's what I want to say for The Reporter, and all the rest I'd like to keep to myself!" Nelson smiles. "We're very good together and both of us love to travel but that has to wait for a while. I think it's very important to experience new things in life and to meet new people and to help people.

Plans for the future? As soon as possible I want to promote land sailing on the other Caribbean islands so that we can have competitions in the region. On Bonaire I'm thinking of developing other eco-sports, for instance in case there's no wind, but those plans are not ready to publish yet. My idea was to set up a showcase somewhere in the Caribbean to show that it was possible and that's how it went. Now I want to expand the activities on the other islands, but one thing is for sure; we'll stay here. Bonaire is just great; there are a lot of countries we still would like to see, but Bonaire will always be home..."

BILLBOARDS –WHAT OTHERS THINK

Dear Editor:

Billboards have three levels of appearance:

Ugly

Uglier

Ugliest

It is interesting that as many communities around the world have, years ago, even decades ago, banned these eyesores, that Bonaire in 2006 is just starting to allow them.

Nothing wrong with a sign in front of your own business, but when they get plastered everywhere... this just isn't Bonaire anymore.

The government, who should not allow these things at all, should at least charge a monthly fee of NAf100 for all these signs that are not in front of a business. Either Bonaire would make some money or the signs would disappear.

BILLBOARD LEGISLATION NEEDED

Editors:

It is not possible to stop development on Bonaire and billboards are part of it. Any profit or non profit organization on Bonaire needs to promote themselves in order to communicate their messages or their products. It necessary doesn't mean we must allow any kind or size of billboard and sacrifice our distinguishing trademark, this means the government, entrepreneurs, TCB, etc... must agree about the features a billboard must fill to be used on Bonaire (size, frame kind, etc...) and must do it soon.

Remember even the billboards companies on Bonaire generate work places and pay taxes that Bonaire needs. Luis Gorrin, Gaia Productions

Dear Editor:

Thanks for bringing up the billboards issue. This is just one of the many areas where legislation is needed. When are the politicians going to wake up? When will they realize how we are spoiling our assets, of which we do not have all that many of, in the first place? Keep up the good work!

Rene H.

Dear Editors:

I completely agree with the vision that Bonaire is being poisoned by billboards. A few months ago I wrote an article about it in the Amigoe. When I was working for the government I was involved in legislation on limiting billboards on the island, using the laws on Bermuda on this subject as an example.

In my opinion we should get as much pressure on the island government as possible to set clear limits for billboards.

DO CRITTERS CRY? A BONAIRE COMMENTARY

She plodded her way through the swells. She knew she was close; home. A long time gone now and many, many miles traveled.

Now, on this last leg of her journey, she was desperately tired and weak from hard days at sea, with nowhere to rest or eat, she'd pressed on, driven by instinct to deliver her precious burden to her secret place, Thelma pressed on east, from the sun, home.

Closer now, she could hear the faint sounds of the waves dancing along the shore line.

At the reef line, and desperate for food, Thelma munched on a variety of sponge, long her favorite. While not nearly as sweet as she remembered, the small meal gave her much needed energy to push on.

She scanned the shoreline, as best she could (she was quite near sighted), for familiar landmarks but found none.

Thelma couldn't see any of the bright, cheery, pastel colored places where the land people lived. In earlier times, how she had enjoyed floating along just off the shore as the sun, setting behind her, painted the little island in colors of gold and yellow.

Now and then, she'd been able to hear the happy, melodious, sounds of the land people as they went about doing whatever it was that land people do. This was a happy place, an easy place to be.

It was much different now, all the boxes on the shore were big and gray, crowded so close she couldn't tell where one stopped and the next one started, and where there wasn't a big ugly box there were huge boards with pictures of new boxes, yet to be built.

Some of the big boards had pictures of land people, others had pictures of the metal things the land people moved around the island in and many of the other ones didn't seem to show anything at all.

It was all so different now, yet nearly identical to most of the other islands she had passed on her journey home, so much so that for a moment she thought perhaps this was the wrong place.

Then, in the distance Thelma heard a lone donkey calling out into the fading afternoon light. This was home.

She had great difficulty searching the coastline for the place she'd been born, nothing looked right. The search took hours in fading light and by the time she located a familiar rock-covered hill behind the beach she became confused and frustrated with it all. Summoning her wanting strength she worked her way through the surf line and crawled, dazed, onto the beach.

No warm, caressing sand met Thelma as she left the sea and after many painful minutes, dragging herself along broken rubble and stone she stopped to survey the spot she knew now had once been her home. Yes, the small hill just beyond where the sand used to be was still there, but the trees, oh, the shade trees were all gone now and the fragrant flowers she loved so much weren't blooming anymore.

There, on a litter strewn rock, she saw an old iguana gazing back at her. He nodded up and down in recognition and understanding. He had seen it all, the brutality wrought upon his friends and relatives, victims of the unconcerned land people in their metal things rushing along the roads, not slowing, not caring, emerald green testimonials of loss. Or worse, captured, skinned and cooked for the pleasure of the land people. The iguana, from his vantage point, felt very sorry for Thelma, for he could see that she shared his fate yet he had no means to console her.

A bottomless, empty feeling engulfed her as she realized this was no longer her place. As she slowly turned back to the surf line behind her Thelma saw yet another huge board on sticks, broken by the wind, the torn and faded picture bore the image of yet another big ugly box.

As the big board rocked back and forth with every gust of wind, a single, crest-fallen Lora clung tightly to the swaying perch and braced himself against despair the night would surely bring.

He had no one now, his mate of more than 10 years and their two offspring had been stolen from their home by poachers while he was gathering food. He'd never found them and now to live out the remainder of his days in solitude to dream of what might have been. The Lora tried to muster a happy greeting for Thelma but couldn't find the spirit as she slowly worked her way back out to sea, alone, burdened with her eggs and now her sorrow.

Thelma turned back once more for a last look at what once was her home. Tears came to her eyes and fell into the Caribbean Sea as a string of pearls. Thelma moved further out through the calming swells. Somewhere in the distance, a lonely donkey hung his head low, donkey tears falling on the dust around him. □

It's been quite awhile since we have heard from Tonky Frans, Bonaire's very own professional windsurfer. Is he lost in space? Or is he out there ripping in the windsurfing world? We started an Internet search and found him in Fuerteventura. And this is what he told us.

I left Bonaire on April 25th 2006 to attend the Professional Windsurfer's Association (PWA) tour. It was my intention to attend both the PWA tour and EFPT tour whenever possible. After I'd made up my planned schedule I found the dates of the events had been changed. I do not know what happened between EFPT and PWA, but once I was in Austria, my first stop, I found out that all events had been rescheduled. All PWA events and EFPT events were on the same date. I got the impression that these two organizations were competing with each other and preventing the windsurfers from attending both tours – like I did successfully in 2005. Therefore I had to make a choice. It was either PWA or EFPT. I chose PWA."

Tonky's schedule changed, and for 2006 he would be attending events in the following countries: Austria, Costa Brava, Lanzarote, Gran Canaria and Fuerteventura.

"The first stop was in Austria and featured the Freestyle discipline (the discipline that I am really good at). We stayed there from April 26th until May 6th. It was the same situation as at the King of the Caribbean event in Bonaire in 2005: NO WIND. We sat and sat, waited, and sat again, and in the meantime the days were passing. On May 6th we had to conclude that this event was over with no competition having happened whatsoever. This was a great pity for me. Earlier this year a Freestyle qualifier event in Bonaire had already been cancelled. Now here I was in Austria, a nice place to visit indeed, to attend a Freestyle event, and it also did not take place. When such an event doesn't happen, the prize money is divided between all the windsurfers who would have been competing. But the money you get is nothing compared to all the expenses you had during your stay - like accommodations, excess baggage and - not to forget - FOOD. It was very disappointing to me that this event did not happen because I was sure that I could have achieved a lot.

Windsurfing Reports

Where is Tonky Frans?

Heeerss Tonky .....

The time gap between Austria and Costa Brava was big: six weeks. My brother Taty and I went to Holland where we stayed with a very loveable Dutch family (Gert, Fiona, Robin and Micky - thank you). They are also crazy about windsurfing. We would go windsurfing in the Dutch waters. While I was in the Netherlands I was invited to host a windsurfing event, 'Lago di Amstel Freestyle Battle,' in Amstelveen. It was an event organized by a friend of mine, Niek van der Linden. Niek has been helping me a lot, as an intermediary when it comes to Dutch windsurfing magazines. So when I had the choice of either going to Italy or staying in the Netherlands and giving something of myself to Niek's event the choice was easily made. I stayed in the Netherlands while Taty left for Italy.

The Amstelveen event was a great success with many young windsurfers from Belgium and Germany. On the professional level it was me and Remco de Weerd who assisted during the event, and the windsurfers were clearly delighted to get tips and tricks from us.

After The Lago di Amstel Freestyle Battle I had to assist at a photo shoot in Lanzarote for my clothing sponsor, ION. It would not be an exhausting photo shoot like it was in Australia (I still owe The Bonaire Reporter some pictures on this ☺) since I did not have to windsurf and do the same move like 20 times in an hour! Everything was nicely arranged, and after four days of having photos taken of the new collection of ION clothing for 2007, I went back to Holland.

Meanwhile the FIFA World Cup fever was in full spirit. I also noticed that the events in Costa Brava and Lanzarote were being overshadowed by the FIFA World Cup. Both windsurfing events were for the Super-X discipline. Although I trained hard for this class, it seems that it was not hard enough because it did not go too well for me. In Gran Canaria it was another story in Wave. I was never an excellent Wave rider at the professional level. I decided to participate anyway, and I was astonished by my performance. Even my sponsor was pleasantly surprised and they emailed me about my performance in Gran Canaria, telling me that maybe I should opt for Freestyle and Wave instead of Freestyle and Super-X. I've got to make a decision now....

Now I am in Fuerteventura, the last PWA event in Freestyle. I truly hope that Bonaire will get the title. Of course the ideal scenario for me would be if I, Tonky Frans, get the title (Ha ha ha). But if one of the other Bonairean riders gets it, I will also be very happy.

People ask whether I'll be attending the Pro Kids Freestyle event (see next story) in Bonaire in August. It is a pity, but I cannot be there to show my support to all the windsurfing kids, especially the Bonairean kids. I have an assignment from my sponsor, an event that I have to host for them and therefore cannot come home yet.

I wish Ann Phelan and Elvis and the rest of the team who are organizing this competition lots of strength and all the best for the event. In spite of the fact that I cannot be there personally I will be with you and especially with all the participating kids in spirit. As for the remainder of the tour I'll be keeping you informed. Stay tuned." □

Get Ready For Freestyle

There's lots of windsurf news to report. July has been a stellar month for wind. The trades have been blowing since May, providing the best conditions for freestyle training. The Bonaire team has been globetrotting to Aruba, Spain, Italy and Germany, to name just a few locations. Soon many return for what is expected to be the hottest freestyle event in the Caribbean.

Currently Jibe City is hosting two summer ABK Windsurf Clinic run by Andy Brandt, the owner of the US-based schools. Jibe City is now an official ABK Site since January which attracts US visitors who want to feel the breeze and perfect their moves. Local pro and instructor Ronald Mayer is teaching the clinics along with Andy's US team.

On the other side of the fence The Bonaire Windsurf Place is hosting Kids Camps. Last week a slew of local and visiting tourist kids took to the water to learn to windsurf. It was awe inspiring to watch these windsurf fledglings hit the water and eventually windsurf. Local teacher Elvis Martinus along with Rene Van De Zande were the watchful eyes and instructors to these young newbies. Each day they met on land to have breakfast and their land instruction. Then off to the water to learn technique and strategy. Somehow the magic waters of Bonaire allow the beginner to advance at record reaches, and this past week was nothing short of wow. Elvis and Rene had their kids tacking and jibing like it was second nature. By week's end another breed of windsurfers left the water, proudly displaying their certificates. One proud parent told me her son was signed up for a second week. "He is completely addicted". What better addiction for a kid?

It was a family fest while the moms and visiting tourists also had their chance to learn to sail. The second annual Diva Women's Week was held at Bonaire Windsurf Place. Organized by Ann Phelan, two guest instructors, Beth Powell and Petra Kanz, volunteered their time to teach over 10 local and tourist women.

And on to more windsurf news. Bonaire was proud to host the first Pro Kids Event in 2005 and now prepares for the finals to be held in Lac Bay. The Pro Kids World's website's registration page is up and running. Go to <http://www.prokidsfreestyle.com/> for more information.

At press time we have riders arriving from Germany, France, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Canada. Team Curaçao is sending over 15 competitors. Word is film producer Dasher will be on site covering this exciting event.

Local kids are training with visiting Pro Kids who have arrived early to train for the Freestyle Championship being hosted by Bonaire August 3 to 6. Fourteen-year-old Dieter Van de Ey-cken arrived last week with his family in tow. Dieter was greeted at the airport Bonairean style: Coach Elvis Martinus brought a van-load of sandy and salty kids right off the water to meet their new friend Dieter. The team was scrambling all over Dieter's gear, excited to see the Belgian winner's "toys." His family took their savings and flew to Bonaire for three weeks of training and competition. Good luck, Dieter. More young pros head to our windy waters in the week to come.

There are several exciting parties planned. August 3 is registration day for press and competitors at Lac Bay from 2-5. A grand opening ceremony will be held at Bonaire Windsurf Place from 7 to 9 pm. See the tentative schedule below for additional details.

► The Vierdaagse (Four Days Walk) in Holland was cancelled because the heat caused health problems for many walkers, but not our Bonaire team. Approximately 300 participants fainted and two died after temperatures rose to more than 30 degrees Celsius (86 degrees Fahrenheit). The website: www.4daage.nl has more info in Dutch and English. The organizers cancelled the walk, which dates back to 1909 and attracts some 44,000 participants from around the world. The "Bonaire Roadrunner," Nazario Alberto, had a great first day. He started at 6 am and arrived at 11:45am. The other Bonaire walkers - the Martines twins and Customs Officer Nolly Wilsoe - also made it. Most participants were very disappointed (including Nazario) and thought that the organizers should have taken other measures like changing routes. -N.W.

► Last Wednesday Marlon Bermudez, representing the Bonaire Lions Club, and Marisela Croes, President of the Rotary Club of Bonaire, made a joint donation to FKPD, the Foundation that helps Bonaire's handicapped.

The funds were raised during the celebration of Littman Jeweler's 25th anniversary party at Wilhelmina Park on July 2nd. A group of visitors, leaders and Mrs. Lupe Uranie of the FKPD received this donation which will be used for their vacation activities during July. The Lions Club and Rotary Club were happy to be able to contribute to this vacation of FKPD.

► On Saturday, July 8th, a group of divers and non-divers met at Bonaire Yellow Submarine for the third Clean-up Dive of the year. After a comprehensive briefing by Susan Davis the group headed out to an area of coastline between Yellow Submarine and Town Pier. Although this area was cleaned in the July 2005 cleanup, there were new signs of dumping, as the cleanup crew brought up the following trash and removed it all for proper disposal: 6 plastic beverage bottles, 64 other bottles, 30 caps or lids, 18 pieces of clothing, 32 pieces of monofilament fishing line, 30 pieces of food service items, 9 wrappers or containers, 1 pull tab, 1 toy, 3 light bulbs, 6 pieces of plastic sheeting, 18 pieces of rope, 1 strapping band, 18 pieces of building materials, 5 automotive parts, and 7 tires.

The next quarterly underwater cleanup will be conducted on Saturday, September 16. All are welcome, divers and non-divers alike. Meet at Yellow Submarine at 1 pm.

► Curaçao opposition leader Anthony Godett finally went to prison last week to serve the remaining nine months of his 15-month sentence for accepting a bribe and forging an IOU. His imprisonment was a media event because he was accompanied by family and party members, all proclaiming Godett's innocence. He made the request so he can be out in time to campaign for the May 2007 elections. He did not go to prison when he was first convicted two years ago because of appeals and because of the waiting list for non-violent offenders' jail sentences due to a shortage of cell space in Curaçao.

The Antillean Constitution does not block a person convicted of a crime from being elected to Parliament, even while in prison, although oddly enough it does for begging, vagrancy or being drunk in public, which were once considered major issues for elected officials.

► This week the British newspaper, The Independent, revealed the truth behind Japanese vote buying at the International Whaling Commission. All it took was a query to the Japanese foreign affairs office to reveal that the Japanese last year donated 617 million yen ($2.9m) to St. Kitts and Nevis, the Caribbean nation that hosted the IWC conference. Japan also gave $5.6m to Nicaragua, while the Pacific island nation of Palau got $2.7m. All three countries voted with Japan, Iceland and Norway at the IWC conference in favor of the "St Kitts and Nevis Declaration," calling for the 20-year ban on commercial whaling to be eventually scrapped. The pro-whaling camp won the ballot by just one vote.

► The multi-purpose frigate Van Amstel (in foreground) will be deployed in area waters for counter drug operations in cooperation with the Coast Guard of the Netherlands Antilles and Aruba. The ship left the Dutch port of Den Helder in the Netherlands on July 3. En route it took part in a disaster exercise near Great Britain. During the Atlantic crossing the crew was trained in nuclear, biological and chemical protection, damage control, as well as in counter-drug operation. It will stay in the Caribbean region until December 8.

This fighting ship is 122 meters long and 14.4 meters wide, and draws six meters. Propulsion is provided by two gas turbines and two diesel engines, giving the ship a maximum speed of 29 knots. The Van Amstel is equipped with NATO Sea Sparrow air missiles, Harpoon anti-ship launchers, systems to mislead radar, torpedoes to fight submarines, a Goalkeeper 30mm cannon and an Oto Melara 76mm cannon. The frigate also has a Lynx helicopter on board. The 135-member crew is under the leadership of Commander Pim Croiset van Uchelen.

► Bonaire's fixed-line phone company, Telbo, has begun laying fiber optic cables on the island. Fiber optic cable is made of hair-thin strands of glass. Light carrying signals are sent through the glass fiber which get converted back to electrical signals. The cable is being laid first in Antriol, Belnem, Hato and Sabadeco, while the other barrios are to follow in a second phase. The cable is intended to carry digital cable television service via Internet, called IPTV, which the company hopes to introduce by the end of the year. It can offer video on demand to the home along with normal telephone services.

► Be careful to secure your belongings at the Indian inscriptions at Onima. Several visitors to the site found their belongings had mysteriously disappeared. Last week one group returned, realizing they had forgotten one of their bags, and discovered in a nearby cave two mattresses, some bags, their own towel and more. It's speculated that someone is hiding there waiting for people to stop. The visitors feel very safe at the inscriptions, "because there is no one around." So they leave their car open, have a look at the inscriptions and return to their car. In the meantime it is robbed! This has been going on at least since last March. This time the police were informed. So if you visit the inscriptions lock-up... at least until the police nab the thief. -R

► For years STINAPA, the Bonaire Parks' NGO, has organized activities for children between four and 19 to teach them about Bonaire's environment. Last year, 1,643 children participated in those activities. Eighty-two children passed a snorkeling course and received a certificate. STINAPA has been working with schools since 1996 and has many class materials available. There are many more activities this year due to the education innovations. Together with the LVV (Agricultural Extension Service), the students did re-forestation on Klein Bonaire and in Washington Slagbaai Park.

► On Wednesday, August 9, the police will begin impounding cars that do not have up-to-date license plate tags. If you haven't gotten your 6-month update, go to the Ontvanger's office at J.A. Abraham Boulevard 27. The fees are: Diesel cars and trucks pay NAf754; gasoline powered cars pay NAf174; motorcycles and scooters pay NAf125; taxis and buses pay NAf126,50 and heavy vehicles (Z-plates) must pay NAf1127,50.

► Put it on your calendar: Dia di Bonaire this year will be celebrated in the bario of Amboina on Wednesday, September 6. □ G/L. D.

Picture Yourself with The Reporter

One of The Bonaire Reporter's most popular features is "Picture Yourself With The Bonaire Reporter." Over the years hundreds of people have sent us photos from every continent except Antarctica. But perhaps the most spectacular photo is the cover shot this week. Here's the story behind it:

Mt. Everest

Bonaire resident Jane Madden sent us a photo for the Picture Yourself section of The Reporter. She wrote, "To make a long story short in November of 2005, friends of ours, Tamara Brown and Dennis Kellner, a married couple from the Florida Keys, came to visit for a week. They fell in love with Bonaire, as we did, and before they left bought a piece of property and are in the process of building a home here where, once finished, they will permanently live. Dennis is a mountain climber and in March, 2006, he began the three-month round trip trek to climb Mount Everest, the highest point on planet Earth (29,028 ft- 8,847 m.). On May 23, 2006, Dennis summited Mount Everest. Attached is a photo of him on the summit of Mount Everest... with The Bonaire Reporter!"

Most of the climbers who summit Everest take their country's flag and take a photo with it. Dennis took two flags—the Conch Republic flag (the Keys own banner, where he lives now) and the Bonaire flag (soon to be his home)! So Bonaire now has connections on the ends of the Earth! He was lucky to get The Reporter photo as his camera froze up several times on the way up (it was about -15° F, that's -26° C!). Before he left on his trip, his wife, Tamara, laminated The Reporter so it would withstand the wind on the summit when he took it out for the photo!"

Dennis Kellner at home in the Keys

It's just one of many experiences Kellner will take with him as he strives to do what only 168 people in the world have ever done—climb to the highest peaks on all seven continents. "It's called the Seven Summits, and not many people have done it," Kellner said while relaxing at zero elevation in his present Marathon, Florida Keys home. "I knew that if I had any chance,

I had to do Everest next."

Kellner had already successfully climbed the 20,320-foot Denali (also known as Mount McKinley) in Alaska, the 22,841-foot Aconcagua in Argentina, and the 16,067-foot Mount Vinson in Antarctica. Now all he needs to climb are the three "easy ones," he says, which include Kilimanjaro in Tanzania, Elbrus in Russia and Kosciuszko in Australia (however, Kellner said some still argue the Carstensz Pyramid in Indonesia is the highest peak of the Australian continent).

Some may consider Kellner's life unique, as they ask the question: why would a retired 55-year-old home builder risk life and limb to climb a mountain, just to turn around and come back down? Kellner is the first to admit that climbing is truly selfish, where climbers don't do it for world peace, to cure cancer or bring awareness to any cause. They do it to challenge themselves and to push the limits of what humans think is possible.

By the way, Jane Madden reports he intends to climb Bonaire's Mount Brandaris once they are moved in! G.D.

Tibet

Unusual as it is, it's not the first time that Mount Everest (although not at the summit) has been featured in The Reporter. In January, 2002, Bonaire residents Beverly Jimenez and Linda Baker took a recent edition of The Bonaire Reporter along with them on a trip to Tibet. Mt. Everest was in the background in their photo at the 5,800-meter-high Everest base camp.

Turkey

Many people who live on Bonaire send photos of themselves holding The

Reporter at the high spots of their vacation. Roger Burnham sent us these from his recent holiday. The first was shot in Troy (yes, that one, Helen) Turkey, with Marcia and Roger. The second from that same world-

Opheusden, The Netherlands

And the opposite is true as well. People who vacation in Bonaire send us photos of themselves when they return home. Sascha van Eldik sent us this picture of herself standing next to a windmill in Opheusden, The Netherlands. The reason why she wants to be pictured in The Reporter is, in her own words: "I've done a traineeship for five months. From February until last Saturday! I lived with my aunt and uncle (Agnes and Ap van Eldik-Green Label) and I will thank them this way. It means a lot to me. Masha danki!"

Don't forget to picture YOURSELF with The Bonaire Reporter wherever you go. Each year prizes are given for the best and most unusual photos. Of course, this year it will be hard to top the Everest photo, but we just saw a press release that said the world's first tourist space flights are planned for 2008. The commercial space line, called Virgin Galactic, said in a news conference at the Farnborough International Air Show near London, that it had collected $15.6 million (£8.6 million) in deposits for the flights which cost $200,000 per ticket. Among the 78 people who have reservations are former actress Victoria Principal, designer Philippe Starck and a senior member of an unidentified royal family who have all bought tickets for the world's first tourist space flights. □ G.D.

Ask the Dietitian

Not Only Love to Cook, But Put Love Into Your Cooking

When we cook we usually forget or overlook one important factor: the consciousness of the person cooking and the effect that this will have upon the food, and thus also on those who eat it. When food is being prepared, not only should the place be hygienic, clean and in order, but so should the state of mind of the cook.

A simple and familiar example of this concept at work can be seen in the way that home cooking, especially that of one's mother, holds a special place in our hearts. The love and care with which it is prepared more than makes up for the greater technical skills that may perhaps be found in a restaurant setting where stress, arrogance and greed may flavor the dish of the day.

Food cooked by a person who is angry, depressed or full of arrogance or hatred will have a different effect than food cooked with feelings of love, peace and the pure desire to serve.

So, before undertaking any food preparation, remind yourself that the project at hand can and should be an enjoyable, creative activity, rather than an unpleasant, time-consuming chore.

Below are two recipes for those wondering what to do with couscous. Both the Couscous Salad and the Pasta Salad are very light meals.

Couscous Salad

250 ml water      185g couscous

Angélique Salsbach, a dietitian with Bonaire's Department of Health and Hygiene, has a radio program every other Tuesday 9 to 9:30 on Bon FM. Her patients have successfully won the "Battle of the Bulge" and become healthier. Write her at dietitian@bonairenews.com or call her at the Dept. of Health Care 717-3737. Angelique is an owner of Top Health Fitness and Health Center, Kaya Nikiboko Noord 44, Tel. 717-5662; email tophealthbonaire@yahoo.com

1 carrot, 1 red pepper, 1 tomato, 1 small cucumber, all finely diced
3-4 lettuce leaves, finely chopped
60 ml (2 fl. oz.) fat free or light dressing to taste
Handful of fresh basil, chopped

Boil the water. Put the couscous in a bowl and pour the water over. Set aside to stand for 10 minutes, then drain. Combine couscous with all the salad ingredients and toss together. Pour the salad dressing over the top and toss again. Garnish with basil.

Pasta Salad

375 g pasta twist or shells
Boiling water
30 g olives, coarsely chopped
salt and pepper, to taste
1 carrot, grated
60 g broccoli
1 pepper, thin strips
2-3 fresh tomatoes, finely cubed
3 tbs lemon juice

Boil the pasta in a large pan of boiling water until just tender. Drain. Rinse with cold water and drain thoroughly. Mix all the other ingredients and add them to the pasta.

Serve with a salad dressing of your choice.
And always remember to add the loving ingredient. □ Angélique Salsbach

The Snack Bar Detectives

Their Mission: To seek out the mysteries that lie behind the doors of Bonaire's snacks

This week: E Teras Nikiboko Zuid

As the days get hotter, our tastes have changed a little. OK, the beer has to be ice cold; that goes without saying, but our appetites have jaded a little. We are starting to find that some of the more indigenous snack bars are a little easier on our stomachs. Big D had been given the wink that E Teras was back in business. It has been closed for some months due to a fire and the word was that it had been nicely refurbished.

As we walked into the bright and airy bar, we could see the work that had gone into the rebuild. As you sit at the tiled bar with everything looking like a new pin, you feel immediately welcome. As always, a round of Polar was ordered. My teeth tingled as the ice cold beer rushed into my mouth. Big D's didn't even touch the sides and he was already ordering the second! After several rounds, we decided to eat. No menus here, just ask the bar staff what is available and they have all the information in their heads. We were attended to by a friendly señorita with a big smile. Spanish was going to be helpful so we enlisted the help of JJ, an old tar with much traveling under his belt.

We ordered our fare: Beef Steaks in garlic with fries/rice and salad and Kabritu Stoba (goat stew) with rice. In no time at all our hostess presented the food, cooked to perfection and not too overbearing. We normally leave after eating but were somewhat enticed by this hostelry. We drank some more, chatted with the locals and heard tales from JJ about the one that got away. We picked up our cheque with some trepidation. We needn't have worried; just NAf66 for two meals and more Polar than I care to remember.

I journeyed home thinking, "It's a tough job, but someone has to do it." We'll be back next week to do it all again! □ Story & Photo by SBD

Pet of the Week

"Here's looking at you," says "Dorothy," as she peers out from her very special sleeping nook at the Bonaire Animal Shelter. How is it that cats seem to be the most relaxed of species? The world may be coming to an end, but if a cat is taking a snooze, nothing can make him or her respond.

It's nice to see Dorothy like this because previously she had a life on the streets – the tennis courts at Harbour Village, actually – where she and her brother, "Donald," had to live the life of destitute vagrants. Lucky for them someone found them and took them to the Shelter where they are "Livin' the Life," turning into social and beautiful animals. They're about seven months old, healthy and happy and ready to go to appreciative homes. The adoption fee for cats, NAf75, includes all the medical exams and testing, shots and sterilization when they're old enough. See Dorothy and Donald at the Shelter on the Lagoen Road, open Monday through Saturday, 8 am to 1 pm. Tel. 717-4989.

The Shelter has a new dog catcher, Ventje, who's doing a fabulous job of educating people in the neighborhoods about sterilizing their animals. When people call him to pick up their unwanted puppies or kittens he explains to them why the mother should be sterilized.

Take a peek at the Shelter's own website, hosted and kept up to date by terrific volunteer, Bea Jones of Colorado: www.BonaireAnimalShelter.org. Among other interesting information you'll see current Pets of the Week. Thanks a million, Bea!

Snorkeler's Notebook: Politics on the Reef

As I snorkel Ol' Blue, enraptured by clarity and color, I can't let go of a nagging thought recently put in my mind by former US Vice President Al Gore: "We have only 10 years to 'fix' global warming." Without concerted human intervention to halt climate change, diverse reef ecosystems like this one will disintegrate into a heap of rubble. At Ol' Blue today, however, all the reef's residents seem unconcerned with my pangs of conscience. Yet, it's hard to escape environmental politics while floating in the midst of teeming life that may no longer exist in the near future.

And then it begins: an interrogation by the citizens of the reef. First, a plate-sized Queen Angelfish beckons me to follow her while inquiring, "Who did you vote for in the last presidential election? Was it a candidate who would support serious action on global warming?" Just as I am about to answer, a duo of Rock Beauties butt in, "Yeah, what kind of car do you drive? A gas guzzler or a hybrid?" No sooner are the bubbles out of my mouth to reply when one morose tarpon rolls into view and puts it quite bluntly: "Are you living an environmentally accountable and sustainable life?"

I start wondering if too many spicy wings from Wil's Grill are causing me to hallucinate my own personal version of Walt Disney's Finding Nemo at Ol' Blue. Just as I am about to leave, I bump into a large barracuda in the shallows. You know the kind, the one with the menacing jaw and sharp teeth. She doesn't mince words, "Listen lady, 70% of the world's reefs could be gone in the next 50 years. So don't just float in here looking for us to provide you with a few moments of rapture. Think about what you have done for us lately!" Surprisingly, it was the flounder--who articulates most succinctly while eying me most suspiciously: "If every snorkeler and diver who visited the underwater world was compelled to act on our behalf after he/she removed those fins, well, that would be a force to be reckoned with." The final word, though, comes from a school of silversides chattering in unison, "Bonairean people can't do it alone. Remember to pay your Nature Fee!" As I remove my fins, a pooping parrotfish swims by yelling, "Tell George W. Bush, this is what we think of him!"

I silently promise to do everything they have asked. Does anyone want to help me send President Bush a message? □ Pauline Kayes

Lora Project Update

Exciting Times for the Loras

The Lora chicks are almost done growing and they are getting ready to go! Even inside their rock nests the chicks are stretching their wings and flapping like crazy to get their flight muscles ready for the big day! Some of the older chicks now look almost like grown up parrots, but for a bit of filling out, and they all have real characters. There are a few who are placid, but many of them are kicking, screaming and biting when it's time to get weighed and measured. I think in the next week there will be some chicks leaving their nests.

Almost ready to fly in the wild... unless he gets poached!

can also become weakened by inbreeding.

We can all do our bit to help this year's baby parrots fledge into the wild. Do not buy a Lora chick! If you are offered a Lora chick please get as many of the person's details as possible and report it to STINAPA or the police. You could even take a trip out into the mondi and if you see any suspicious activity report it! Future generations may not have the opportunity to see Loras on Bonaire if poaching continues. □ Story & photo by Sam Williams

Sam Williams and his colleague, Rowan Martin, are on the island for six months as part of their doctoral research, studying the Bonaire Lora. Both of them hope that their research, which will extend over a three-year period, will benefit the Loras' conservation.

Antique Living Houses of Bonaire

Kas di Porchi
Leon Thelmo Paula

by Wilna Groenenboom

Preserving Bonaire's Architectural Heritage

This house belongs to Leon Thelmo Paula (81) and his wife Adelaida Paula-Janga (78) still living here together. They had three daughters, one of whom has passed away.

Leon's first job was on a ship going from Curaçao, then later from Aruba, to Maracaibo for oil. At first he was a servant to the ship's officers; later he worked in the engine room, first as a fireman, then as an oilman. His responsibility was to make sure the engines performed smoothly.

In 1953 he moved with his family to Bonaire and needed a house. So Juan Lorenzo and Julio were assigned to design and build one. Leon then worked for the Bonaire government until he retired.

In my research for Cas di Porchi houses, I found that there are basically two types of this style house. I will call them the low and the high model. This one is a real low one.

In the low model the way the tin roof is placed (middle photo) makes the walls look lower. You can clearly see the beams under the tin roof. The low version of this type house has nearly no gutters to catch rain water. But there are exceptions. For instance the neighbors on the right side have gutters and a cistern, but this is not usual.

This extra extension of the roof gives extra shade at noon. And because there is less sun coming directly through the windows they can have clear rather than colored glass.

This house still has its original wooden shutters for wind protection in combination with glass for the light. This shutter-window combination we can also see in the tiny bathroom window (photo middle right below).

A Cas di Porchi can have from one to four porches around the house: in a corner, in the middle, or more or less around the house. Furthermore, there are "inside" models and "half in- and outside models." With this house we can see that the porch is built inside the house, in the front. (Next time we shall see a "half in- and outside model!")

The original building had a cement floor, but the family changed it a few years ago to tiles.

Thonet chair. The first Thonet chair ever made was in 1830 by the Austrian chair maker, Michael Thonet. He discovered a method to make many chairs easily. He first wet the wood, then it was steamed, making it easy to bend it into the form he wanted. When it dries it keeps its shape. The model we see in the photo was one of 50 million pieces made between 1859 and 1910. He made 60 different styles of chairs, benches, tables etc. On Bonaire we often see this chair, in different forms, in a number of houses. This one is a simple model with a perfect seat, with an open "structure," so fitting in this climate still after nearly 150 years. □

BONAIRE SKY PARK*

*to find it... just look up

Use the Moon to Find the Largest Planet and
A Super Large Star

August will begin with a cosmic bang because during the first week of August a waxing Moon will pay a visit to both the king of the planets and a giant star, which means you'll be able to use the Moon as a finder to locate two wonderful celestial objects. On Tuesday, the first night of August 2006, face southwest an hour after sunset while there's still a bit of twilight. And the brightest thing you'll see will be a lovely first quarter Moon. And directly above it, the second brightest thing in the sky, looking very much like a bright star, will be the king of the planets, Jupiter.

So right off the bat on the first night of August you can use the Moon to find the largest of our solar system's planets. Now we all know that when the Moon is waxing it is growing because that is what waxing means in astronomical terms. And it always moves from west to east. In 24 hours time it moves approximately 13 degrees or 26 times its own width toward the east. So 24 hours later, on Wednesday, August 2nd, we can expect the Moon to be well past Jupiter and a little bit fatter. So on Tuesday night look up to the left of the Moon to find Jupiter. On Wednesday look up to its right. On Thursday night, August 3rd, 24 hours later, an even fatter Moon will be parked next to the j-shaped pattern of stars we call Scorpius the scorpion and to the right of the bright star which marks the scorpion's heart. It is called Antares and it is one of the biggest stars we can see with the naked eye.

So you can use the Moon to find Antares on Thursday night. And 24 hours later you can use it again as a finder when it will be just past Antares. Once again: the Moon below and to Jupiter's right on Tuesday the 1st; the Moon below and to Jupiter's left on Wednesday the 2nd. Thursday, the 3rd, the Moon is parked to the right of Antares, and on Friday it's to the left of Antares.

But now comes the fun part: comparing the Moon, Jupiter and Antares. You see, our 2,000-mile-wide Moon will be less than a quarter million miles away on the first four nights of August whereas 88,000-mile-wide Jupiter, which is so huge we could line up 44 Moons across its middle, will be 490 million miles away. But the mind blower is Antares, which is 700 times as wide as our almost one-million-mile-wide Sun and is so far away that it takes 604 years for its light to reach us. Isn't it easy to find planets and stars if you use the Moon as a finder? □ Jack Horkheimer
