

What Budget Changes Mean To You

By Chief of Naval Operations Public Affairs

Chief of Naval Operations (CNO) Adm. Jonathan Greenert released a video message to the fleet recently about the passage of yet another continuing resolution (CR) and what that means for the fleet.

In the video, the Navy's top admiral discussed the CR extension that the President signed last week putting legislation into effect that will restore Defense Department funds through September.

What was projected to be a $9 billion shortfall in the Navy's operations accounts will be halved according to Greenert. He explained in the video that the Bill will take care of four and a half billion dollar shortfall in operations and that the Navy will have to adjust. He also stated, that sequestration, the reduction of spending in all accounts, remains in place.

"We're going to move ahead in a very deliberate fashion and decide what's important and fund those most important things," said Greenert. "Money will be distributed to the fleet and important operations can get underway."

Among those priorities Greenert said that the Navy's bills will be paid, deployed operations will remain funded and some restoration and modernization projects will return.

"So what does this mean to you? For our Sailors, this means your pay will be stable as it has been, our manpower accounts have been stable throughout this turmoil," said Greenert. "We're going to get our family readiness programs and MWR programs back on track where they need to be. PCS will remain stable throughout all this, so moves should continue apace."

Despite other branches reducing access to tuition assistance, Greenert stated that he will fight to keep education benefits for Sailors intact.

"Tuition assistance is still at 100 percent, and I'm working to keep it at that level," said Greenert. "That's where I think we need to be."

Greenert thanked the Navy civilian workforce for their patience during the turmoil of the last couple of months.

Less Days Of Furlough

By Nick Simeone

American Forces Press Service

The Defense Department has revised from 22 to 14 the number of days hundreds of thousands of civilian employees could be furloughed this year because of the budget sequester, Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel announced March 28.

In addition, a senior Defense Department official speaking on background told reporters the start of the furloughs will be delayed until mid-to-late June, after more than 700,000 department employees receive furlough notices now set to go out in early May. Furloughs would happen over seven two-week pay periods until the end of September, when the current fiscal year ends, the senior official said, with employees likely to be told not to come to work for two days during each of those pay periods.

Department officials say they are still working to determine which employees might be exempted.

Hagel characterized the reduced furloughs as well as a revised estimate of sequestration's impact on the defense budget as good news. The changes follow Congressional approval last week of a defense appropriations bill that prevented an additional six billion dollars in cuts, ordered under sequestration, from taking effect.

"It reduces a shortfall at least in the operations budget," the secretary told reporters at a Pentagon news conference. "We came out better than we went in under the sequester, where it looks like our number is $41 billion [in cuts] now versus the $46 billion."

But despite a Congressional reprieve, Hagel said the Pentagon is still going to be short at least $22 billion for operations and maintenance, "and that means we are going to have to prioritize and make some cuts and do what we've got to do," including making sharp reductions in base operating support and training for nondeployed units.

More critical in the long run, he said, is how budget cuts will affect readiness and the department's overall mission. Because of that concern, he said he has directed Deputy Defense Secretary Ash Carter and Army Gen. Martin E. Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to conduct an intensive department-wide review of U.S. strategic interests including how to protect the nation with fewer resources.

"How do we prioritize the threats and then the capabilities required to deal with threats?" he said. "There will be some significant changes, there's no way around it."

Dempsey said the department has already exhausted 80 percent of its operating funds halfway through the fiscal year and characterized the current budget situation as "not the deepest, but the steepest decline in our budget ever," and warned it will affect military readiness into the future.

"We will have to trade at some level and to some degree our future readiness for current operations," the chairman said. He called on elected leaders to give the Pentagon the budget flexibility it needs to carry out institutional reforms.

From Master Chief Petty Officer of the Navy

A message from the Master Chief Petty Officer of the Navy: Fellow Chief Petty Officers, On April 1st, the U.S. Navy Chief's mess will celebrate 120 years of the United States Chief Petty Officer. We are not only celebrating another year of chiefs serving the Navy; we are celebrating everything it means to be the Chief. Our anchors are the symbol of a culture and a way of life. Since 1893, chiefs have been charged with the responsibility of leading sailors to be the best in the world, ready to carry out our navy's mission when the nation calls. We welcome that responsibility and lead with honor, courage, and commitment. As chiefs, it's important to remember that we must be "all in," "all the time" because being a chief petty officer is not for the weak of heart or lazy of mind and body. Happy birthday shipmates! I truly appreciate your leadership and the hard work you do every day. Very Respectfully, MCPON (AW/NAC) Mike D. Stevens

What You Need To Know About Navy's SRBs

NAVADMIN 077/13 announced updates to Selective Reenlistment Bonus (SRB). Here are five frequent questions with answers on the Navy's SRB program.

1. What is the Selective Reenlistment Bonus?

SRB is a re-enlistment incentive for Sailors with critical skills and experience to stay Navy. SRB rewards Sailors who attain special training in skills most needed in the fleet, and helps meet

Rear Adm. Tony Kurta
Director, Military Personnel Plans and Policy critical skill reenlistment benchmarks and enhance Navy's ability to size, shape and stabilize manning. Award levels are adjusted as reenlistment requirements for specific ratings and skill sets are met.

2. When was the SRB update announced and where can I get information on the changes?

The update was announced Mar. 26 in NAVADMIN 077/13. The NAVADMIN contains the skill/zone combinations that qualify for a bonus. Sailors should work with their Career Counselor counselors, command master chiefs, and chain of command to discuss timing of reenlistment and procedures well before their EAOS. You can read the complete list of SRB award levels and policy at <http://www.public.navy.mil/bupers-npc/career/enlistedcareeradmin/pages/srb.aspx>

3. Will sequestration impact Navy's ability to pay SRB to Sailors?

Military pay, including bonuses, is exempt from the effects of sequestration. We do adjust our SRB to remain within budget.

4. With so many Sailors staying in the Navy why does there need to be SRBs?

We must manage the force at the rating and NEC level rather than looking at just the overall end strength number. We use SRBs to provide incentive to Sailors with high demand skills to reenlist in ratings that have critical manning needs.

5. When do SRB changes take place?

The increased award levels are effective immediately and decreased levels are effective 30 days from the release of the NAVADMIN.

Florida Sponsors New Military Family Services Web site

Judy Cromartie
School Liaison Officer

A great, new website for military families has been created by the Florida Department of Education. The site can be found at <http://www.fldoe.org/military>. The website focuses on The Interstate Compact on Educational Opportunity for Military Children which is, in essence, an agreement among member states that they will address school transition issues for military children in a consistent manner. The Compact provisions specifically provide for flexibility and local discretion in course and program placement and on-time graduation within the criteria established by the state. Florida has not only adopted the Compact but adopted it into Florida School Law.

The mobile military lifestyle creates tough challenges for children who attend, on average, six to nine different school systems from kindergarten to twelfth grade. In addition, these children often endure the anxiety of parental separation during deployments. The Compact was designed to replace the widely varying treatment of transitioning military students with a comprehensive uniform procedure and policy to be followed in every school district of every state which joins.

Knowing THE ROPES

Eligibility for Enrollment: During deployments, it is often necessary for students to stay with a non-custodial parent or someone serving "in loco parentis." If the non-custodial parent or person serving "in loco parentis" lives outside of the student's current attendance area and is willing to transport the student back to the current school, the child may continue to attend his or her current school which will help provide much needed consistency for the child.

The Compact also stipulates that the power of attorney for guardianship given during deployment is sufficient for enrollment and all other actions requiring parental participation or consent.

Educational Records: When a family leaves a school district in a member state, they may request a copy of a complete set of unofficial academic records to carry to the new school. The receiving school of a member state agrees to accept the unofficial student records to enroll and place the student, pending receipt of official records. Once a student is enrolled, the new school will request official records. A school district in a member state must send these records within 10 days of receiving a request.

Kindergarten and First Grade Entrance Age: A student who moves to a member state may continue in the same grade in the receiving state regardless of the entrance age requirements in that state if he or she has already started kindergarten or first grade in a state accredited school in the sending state.

Immunizations: A child transferring to a member state who needs additional immunizations is allowed to immediately enroll then is given 30 days to obtain the needed immunizations. If a series of immunizations is required, it must be started within 30 days of enrollment.

Special Education Services: The Compact requires that students covered by the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) receive the same services (although not necessarily identical programs) identified in the student's Individual Education Plan (IEP) from the sending state. The receiving state may subsequently perform an evaluation to ensure the appropriate placement of the student.

Academic Placement: A receiving school district in a member state agrees to initially honor placement of a student based on the student's enrollment in the sending state as long as that school has a similar or equivalent program. However, the Compact allows the school to subsequently perform an evaluation to ensure the child is placed appropriately according to the new school's requirements. This provision ensures students will not be put in a "holding" class while they are awaiting assessment, thus missing out on valuable instruction, but does not take away the new school's right to set their own criteria for placement in programs or courses. In addition, the Compact does not require the receiving school district to create a course or program that is not currently offered, but does require that the district demonstrate reasonable accommodation.

Absences Related to Deployment Activities: The Compact allows students to request additional, excused absences to visit with their parent/legal guardian during deployment, defined as one month before the Service member's departure from the home station through six months after return. As with other provisions, school districts are given leeway in determining whether to grant these additional absences. If a child already has excessive absences, a district may correctly feel additional time out of school would be educationally unsound. One state wrote in their Compact legislation that students could not take additional absences during state testing.

Extracurricular Participation: Member states agree to be creative in providing transferring students the opportunity for inclusion in extracurricular activities regardless of the deadlines for application as long as the child is otherwise qualified. The receiving school must demonstrate they are making reasonable accommodation for military students. However, some state student athletic associations are private organizations, not run by the state, and consequently do not fall under the umbrella of the Compact.

Graduation Requirements: The Compact encourages school districts to take extra steps to determine if they can waive course or program prerequisites where similar coursework has been completed in the sending school district. This will allow students to take more advanced courses rather than repeating similar basic courses and allow for on-time graduation. Mandatory waiver of state exit exams or acceptance of alternative results is not required under the Compact and each state may determine what they are willing to accept or require.

These rules apply to dependents of 1) active duty service members, 2) service members or veterans who are severely injured and medically discharged or returned for a period of one year after medical discharge or retirement, and 3) service members who die on active duty or as a result of injuries sustained in active duty for a period of one year after death.

The website contains additional information to that briefly outlined above. Please check out this evolving internet tool and provide your feedback on how it could better serve your family.

Divorce: What You Should Know Before You Uncommit

Chap Justin Top
Surface Force Ministry Center

Occasionally, I am approached by a person who says, "Chaplain, things are not working in my marriage. I am unhappy and would like to get a divorce. What do you think about that?"

They are generally looking for me to tell them if it is okay or not. Divorce is an extremely complicated issue, influenced by religion, upbringing, and individual circumstances. I am not qualified to make that decision for another person, but what I can do is offer information and resources so they can make an informed decision. In writing this, my goal is not to pass judgment and I certainly don't want to offend, but I would like to help those who are considering divorce to really think things through. If you are contemplating divorce, you need to study and understand what the ramifications are. You need to become an expert in divorce.

I believe there are situations in which divorce cannot be avoided and may even be a good choice. I am convinced, however, that a large portion of people who get divorced are making a mistake. In one study, 40 percent admitted that divorce was the wrong decision. Lawyers and therapists generally estimate that about 70 percent of divorces could be avoided. When you are hurting it is easy to get angry, or to convince yourself that the grass is greener on the other side of the fence. It is easy to blame your problems on your spouse and be convinced that you would be better with somebody else or with nobody at all. But the way it "seems" is not always reality. It is important that you look at the research and evidence with an open mind.

In her book Thinking Divorce? Think Again, divorce attorney Lorie Fowlke offers seven realities about divorce. Any person contemplating divorce needs to understand these things.

Divorce costs lots of money. Be prepared for serious financial problems. Your spouse may empty your account and savings. Some of the assets may be temporarily frozen, but the bills will keep coming in. Your attorney will want money and there will be court costs, filing fees and many other legal fees. You may also lose income due to time away from work seeing to legal matters. Divorce has a tendency to damage your credit rating, and heap up huge debt. The average total cost of divorce is $18,000.

Divorce reduces your lifestyle. One household cannot divide into two households with the same income. You may have to pay child support, or your spouse may not pay child support like he/she is supposed to. Since your property will likely be divided up, you will

CNRSE SAAM, Military Child Proclamations

By MC1(SW)
Greg Johnson

Commander Navy Region Southeast Public Affairs

Commander, Navy Region Southeast (CNRSE), signed proclamations March 29 in support of child abuse prevention, sexual assault awareness and the Month of the Military Child.

The proclamations coincide with National Child Abuse Prevention Month, National Sexual Assault Prevention Month and the Month of the Military Child, which are all recognized during the month of April.

"These proclamations are in support of some very important issues that leaders at all levels in the chain of command should be aware of," Rear Adm. John C. Scorby Jr., CNSRE, said. "Sexual assault is something that should never happen and cannot be tolerated in our Navy, and child abuse is in the same category, as well. While April is a month that we look to raise awareness of these issues, we need to remain constantly vigilant to ensure the safety of our children and family members."

According to Commander, Navy Installations Command, the Navy recorded more than 15,000 substantiated reports of child abuse during the last ten years. While those numbers have been steadily decreasing, many incidents go unreported, said Jeanette Werby, CNRSE counseling and advocacy coordinator.

"There are many reasons that abuse goes unreported," Werby said. "Many people who know about abuse don't report it because they think it's none of their business, or are concerned about the stigma a report creates and the damage it may cause to one's career. Also, many children do not report abuse because they worry they will not be believed, have been threatened with further physical harm or simply feel responsible themselves for the abuse." According to Werby, the best way to combat child abuse is to raise awareness.

"Raising awareness about child abuse underscores that the problem is still here and so are the people who care about its resolution. Affirming at the highest levels that child abuse has serious, long-term outcomes for children and their families adds a compelling dimension to the message that child abuse is unacceptable. Those in leadership roles set the tone and course for awareness, response and intervention," Werby said.

To find out more about how you can help prevent child abuse or to report an incident of child abuse, contact your installation's Fleet and Family Support Center (FFSC). Like the child abuse prevention and military child proclamation, the Sexual Assault Awareness Month proclamation is intended to raise awareness about sexual assault. "Leadership input is of the utmost importance with sexual assault awareness and prevention efforts," said Julie Mooney, regional sexual assault response coordinator.

"The Secretary of the Navy established the Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Office (SAPRO) in 2009, and it has significantly raised awareness. In 2011, SAPRO hosted a SAPR summit with the primary focus of raising leadership's awareness of sexual assaults that occur within the ranks and the need for increased prevention efforts. I am optimistic that support from leadership in regards to those prevention efforts will have a significant impact on the effectiveness of the Navy's overall efforts."

While raising awareness is one of the primary tools in preventing sexual assault, the Navy SAPR program also focuses on supporting victims. The Navy offers a variety of support services, including clinical counseling and legal services. Each installation has a 24-hour SAPR victim advocate line. These numbers are advertised throughout the installations and may be dialed to ask questions, inquire about resources or report a sexual assault. In addition, each installation has a Sexual Assault Response Coordinator (SARC) located at the FFSC to ensure victims receive the support services they need, Mooney said. People may also contact the DoD Safe Helpline at 1-877-995-5247 or via <http://www.safehelpline.org>.

have to either do without many things, or buy new stuff...another expense. You also now have half the help to maintain your household and possibly to teach and discipline the children.

Divorce causes emotional devastation, now and/or later. There is usually already some emotional pain that has caused a person to seek divorce. The divorce process, however, can seriously escalate the pain and conflict in a relationship. It may involve loss, grief, a feeling of "failure," and much anger. After the divorce, loneliness and regret are common. Studies show that 60% of divorces have medium to high levels of conflict.

Divorce negatively impacts your employment. The complications cause a loss of focus and productivity. You may have to miss work often for court appearances or meetings with your lawyer. You may lose your health insurance, or have to discontinue your schooling. Your schedule may be affected by the need to pick up your children, etc.

Divorce traumatizes your children. Children tend to internalize the conflict and blame themselves. Studies show that divorce negatively affects children's self-esteem and behavior. Unfortunately, children are often used as a weapon against the other spouse, which is extremely traumatic for the children. Remember that children will often mirror attitudes they see in their parents. They also learn to exploit the situation to get what they want. The negative effects of divorce continue long after the divorce is settled.

Divorce complicates your life. Divorce rarely removes your spouse from your life. If you have children, you will be connected to your spouse forever, and that may mean that conflict will continue. It can get even more complicated with remarriage, second families, step families, deciding who gets who for the holidays, etc. In addition, dating again after divorce carries its own type of baggage and can be tricky.

Divorce damages society. Each divorce costs the government an average of $30,000. In addition, children from divorced families are at a higher risk for delinquent behavior, and far more likely to divorce. The effects tend to pass on and increase from generation to generation.

Not a pretty picture is it? Unfortunately, there are times when remaining together will have consequences worse than the ones listed above. In such cases it may be wise to continue to pursue the divorce. However, you should plan for the above consequences and try to mitigate them as much as possible. For many others, however, divorce may not be the best answer. Let me offer another alternative. If you will take a fraction of the time and money that you would spend on a divorce and use it to improve your marriage you will likely solve the problems making you consider it in the first place. Before you consider divorce you should exhaust all other options. Get counseling, read marriage books, go on retreats, etc.

Marriage is hard. It is supposed to be that way. I don't believe it is possible to "fall" out of love. If you don't feel love for your spouse it is likely because you let it happen. You can get that love back. If your happiness problem really lies within you, then it doesn't matter who you are with, you will eventually be unhappy again. You may think that finding somebody else will make you happy, but research suggests otherwise. While 50 percent of marriages end in divorce, 60 percent of remarriages end in divorce. Only 19 percent of unhappily married couples that divorced and then remarried some one else reported they were happy five years later. On the contrary, 86 percent of unhappily married couples who stayed married reported that they were happier five years later.

Occasionally you have no choice, or for your own safety or sanity divorce cannot be avoided. In such cases, I hope that you will seek support as you work through the difficult process. However, if you can make it work, staying married is usually your best chance at happiness.

Mayport Families Enjoy Easter Fun

From Staff

Naval Station Mayport families spent Saturday playing games, arts and crafts and hunting Easter eggs thanks to the Base Chapel, its staff and congregation.

The Chapel sponsors an Easter egg hunt each year, but this year was expanded after MWR had to cut funding for its Easter Eggstravaganza due to budget constraints with sequestration.

The Chapel's grounds were filled with inflatable bounce houses and slides and carnival games.

The Chapel also offered arts and crafts, along with face painting and free hot dogs and snacks for the hundreds of children and their families in attendance.

"This is really great," said spouse Laura Strader. "It was great that the kids could enjoy a day of fun on the base and be reminded why we celebrate Easter to begin with."

Commander Army South visits 4th Fleet

By MC1 Sean Allen
4th Fleet Public Affairs
 Maj. Gen. Frederick S. Rudesheim, Commander Army South (ARSOUTH) visited Rear Admiral Sinclair Harris, Commander U.S. Naval Forces Southern Command/Commander U.S. 4th Fleet (COMUSNAVSOC) Tuesday March 26th at 4th Fleet Headquarters.

COMUSNAVSOC and ARSOUTH are the Navy and Army Service Component Commands for U.S. Southern Command

(USSOUTHCOM). The purpose of the visit was to give the component commanders an opportunity to discuss the mission in the USSOUTHCOM Area of Responsibility (AOR), and continue to work together as one team.

"This is what it is about, interacting, having a two-way conversation about ideas in the region. This visit has been everything I expected and more, it has given me the opportunity to not only talk with Adm. Harris, but meet the rest of his team as well."

Rudesheim said. Rudesheim also visited the Ticonderoga Class guided missile cruiser USS Gettysburg. (CG-69) and Helicopter Maritime Strike Squadron 46.

"The Navy is about platforms, and the Sailors make the platforms, as an Army Infantryman I could not appreciate these platforms until I had the opportunity to see them up close. After visiting Gettysburg I am very impressed."

Harris discussed the importance of the Navy-Army team continuing to work together. "It is essential for 4th Fleet and Army South to continue to work together and with our regional partners because we all have common interests both afloat and ashore. Hosting General Rudesheim here at the fleet headquarters gives us the opportunity to discuss and align our missions as well as maximize our efforts in the region," Harris said.

ARSOUTH advises USSOUTHCOM on the proper employment and support of Army and land component forces; conducts deployment/redeployment training planning and execution of assigned/attached non-Special Operations Forces (SOF) Army Force to and accomplishes other operational missions and engagements as assigned to ultimately to promote partner nation cooperation, improve partner nation capacity, and foster friendships to provide for security within the hemisphere and mitigate transnational threats.

COMUSNAVSOC/C4F supports USSOUTHCOM

joint and combined full-spectrum military operations by providing principally sea-based, forward presence to ensure freedom of maneuver in the maritime domain, to foster and sustain cooperative relationships with international partners and to fully exploit the sea as maneuver space in order to enhance regional security and promote peace, stability, and prosperity in the Caribbean, Central and South American regions.

ties management, operations, administration, and finances," said Ada Ferran, Mayport's NGIS general manager. "This award is a direct reflection of all the hard work of our staff, how much they love those who serve and how much they love our mission."

The inspection, conducted by Commander Naval Installations Command inspection team, was a complete surprise to the 30-person staff.

"We would have liked to know when they were coming, but we had no idea," Ferran said. "Again, this shows how dedicated our staff is to our mission and keeping the standard around the clock. It is our goal that those who serve or who have served will make us their preferred lodging choice."

The NGIS Employee of the Year Awards for associate, housekeeper, supervisor and manager were also awarded at the ceremony.

Budget

"Remember we're a team here and we can't function without your dedication," said Greenert.

"As you may know our furloughs are being reduced from 22 to 14 days," said Greenert. "The Secretary of the Navy and I are working with the Department of Defense staff to keep that as low as possible."

Greenert stressed that with a balanced approach to spending, careful planning and the dedication of all hands, the Navy will be able to successfully navigate these tumultuous fiscal times.

"I want you to remember to focus on Warfighting First, Operate Forward and Be Ready," said Greenert. "Thank you for your patience, thank you for your professionalism, thank you for your service."

The guided-missile destroyer USS Farragut (DDG 99) operates in heavy seas. Farragut is on a scheduled deployment supporting maritime security operations, theater security cooperation efforts in the U.S. 2nd Fleet area of responsibility.

Mayport Cruiser, Destroyer Get Battle 'E'

From Staff

USS Farragut (DDG 99) Sailors painted four "E"s on the ship's bridge while moored in Funchal, Portugal, March 20, in recognition of the command recently being awarded the Battle "E" for 2012.

The award recognizes the crew for displaying excellence in maritime warfare, engineering, survivability; and command, control, communication and information warfare.

It also represents a year's worth of dedication and hard work from the entire crew. The crewmembers are also entitled to wear the Battle "E" ribbon on their uniform.

"Earning the Battle 'E' is a win for every Farragut crew member," said Cmdr. Glen B. Quast, USS Farragut commanding officer. "It's more than just a one year accomplishment. I'm very proud of the crew."

Farragut successfully completed certification in the basic, integrated and sustainment phases of her 2012 patrol, while assigned to the Navy's 5th and 6th Fleet areas of responsibility. She flawlessly executed her duties while representing the Navy during nine port visits and several multinational exercises.

Farragut also served as the Combined Task Force 151 flagship for counter-piracy, providing maritime security and strengthening relations with African and European partner nations.

Farragut, homeported out of Mayport, Fla., is on a scheduled deployment supporting maritime security operations and theater security cooperation efforts in the U.S. 6th Fleet area of responsibility.

Pierside at NS Mayport, USS Vicksburg (CG 69) was presented a plaque signifying its own Battle 'E' award by Commander, Naval Surface Forces Atlantic, Rear Adm. David Thomas, Jr., on March 25 during an all hands call.

Thomas told the crew how proud he was of their efforts, especially during the past year after the ship future was uncertain. Vicksburg decommissioning was announced early in 2012, but has since been put on hold.

Thomas praised the ship for being able to maintain excellence during stressful times.

"This is a squared away ship that does it right all the time, not just when you have inspections," Thomas added.

Hué City Chiefs Celebrating 120 Years

By MC2 Matthew R. Cole

USS Hué City Public Affairs

The Chiefs Mess of USS Hué City (CG 66) celebrated the 120th birthday of Navy chief petty officers April 1.

The Chiefs Mess mustered on the flight deck in the morning to sing Anchors Aweigh before conducting morning colors on the ship's fantail. Later, the chiefs served lunch to the crew, organized a run and ended the day with a cake-cutting ceremony.

Naval traditions are the foundation upon which many of its core values are built on. Navy chiefs take pride in understanding where they came from so that they can teach the next generation of Sailors these traditions.

Chief petty officers and first class petty officers conduct physical training on the forecastle of the guided-missile cruiser USS Hué City (CG 66) as part of the CPO 365 program. Hué City is deployed to the U.S. 5th Fleet area of responsibility promoting maritime security operations, theater security cooperation efforts and support missions as part of Operation Enduring Freedom.

"Chiefs have long been a crucial factor in leadership and training Sailors," said Hué City's Command Master Chief Raymond F. Charest. "We have a responsibility to the Sailors entrusted to us that takes precedence above all else."

The rank of chief petty officer was created April 1, 1893 to distinguish senior enlisted leaders. The U.S. Navy is the only branch of the military in which advancing to the pay-grade of E-7 holds such a high distinction.

"Every other branch of service, they go home one day an E-6 and wake up the next morning and come to work an E-7," said Chief Fire Controlman Terrence Jones. "In the Navy, it is a huge honor to be selected, and the induction is a right of passage for us, passing on the tradition of the Chiefs Mess."

In addition to being the keepers of Naval traditions, the chiefs mess is a support network and only the best, hardest-working enlisted can join.

"What we as a mess hope our Sailors take away from our birthday celebration is the visual of pride itself," said Charest. "We hope that they notice how we come together as a mess and support one another as we celebrate 120 years. We can only hope our Sailors come away from this celebration with hopes of one day taking our place in the Mess. It is our job and responsibility to forge new Chief Petty Officers to carry on our traditions."

RGB Volunteers At Mondragone Orphanage

By Ensign Matthew P. Roberts

USS Robert G. Bradley Public Affairs Officer

Sailors stationed aboard the guided-missile frigate USS Robert G. Bradley (FFG 49) participated in a community service project at a Naples-area orphanage during their port visit from March 22nd to March 27th.

The Sailors took time out of their liberty to give back to the community by visiting the Centro Laila Center in Mondragone, an orphanage housing over 40 disadvantaged children.

The Sailors spent the day cleaning and repairing furniture, and organized an Easter egg hunt.

Robert G. Bradley (RGB) Sailors have taken multiple opportunities to lend a hand in foreign ports.

"This was another great opportunity for our Sailors," said (Chaplain) Lt. Stephen Cloer, RGB's community relations program coordinator. "Our Sailors are always eager to help out those in need while we are overseas."

The Centro Laila Orphanage is a safe haven for children and families who immigrate to Italy from Northern Africa. Housing and childcare is provided for single parents who work during the day.

Hull Maintenance Technician 1st Class Cade Brock, one of the volunteers, said the event was fun and worthwhile.

"I had a blast helping the children and getting involved with the Easter egg hunt," said Brock.

Gunner's Mate 3rd Class Sean Gallagher agreed that working with the children was a great reward.

"I remember my first Easter egg hunt as a kid," Gallagher said, "I'm glad I was able to share this experience with these children."

USS Robert G. Bradley, homeported out of Mayport, Fla., is currently on a scheduled deployment in support of maritime security operations and theater security cooperation efforts in the U.S. 6th Fleet Area of Responsibility.

Learn To Market Yourself For Next Career

From FFSC

The Fleet and Family Support Center is sponsoring a once-a-year lecture regarding transition here at Naval Station Mayport.

It will be presented by The Military Officers Association of America (MOAA), and is entitled "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career". The event will be held today (April 4) at 9 a.m. in the Ocean Breeze Conference Center.

This top-shelf presentation is a great professional development opportunity.

Transition is of course ultimately a part of all military careers. Therefore, the lecture is perfect for those who are contemplating retirement in one to five years. However, it doesn't stop there.

Regardless of whether any particular officer or senior enlisted member has reached the point of being in their own transition, they should be educated about the process in order to mentor and counsel those who work for them and are contemplating or going through their transitions.

This "executive summary" presentation can prepare them for that role as well as many multi-day programs. Simply stated, it's a great fit for any commander, officer, or senior enlisted supervisor -- from the most senior, to the most junior.

The lecture will be given by retired Capt. Jim O'Keefe, deputy director of transition services on MOAA's national staff. The presentation, given annually at over 150 military installations of all Services worldwide, is universally praised by audiences as, "up-to-date, hard-hitting, and sharply focused-- a must see".

It includes comprehensive information on the retirement decision itself, employer perceptions, your competition, resumes, cover letters, job search, networking, career fairs, interview techniques, salary negotiation, benefits packages, the current job market, and other relevant and important transition topics.

The presentation is geared toward officers and senior enlisted, but those of all ranks are warmly welcomed. Spouses are highly encouraged to attend as well!

All who attend will receive a free copy of the lecture's companion book, also titled "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career".

It is an in-depth, all-in-one resource for the transition process.

For further information, contact Stephanie Hoppe at stephanie.hoppe.ctr@navy.mil for call 904-270-6600 ext. 1604.
